Story of a young Irish-American lad and his life in Providence, at sea, and in Germany during the inter-war years. A sequel to Our Own Kind (Book Review Digest 1946).

"The volume is rather a notebook than a novel. On the whole, despite the author's ability to describe characters and scenes realistically, unrelieved sordidness and distorted proportions cancel out his claim to artistry."
— Cath World 170:160 N '49 200w

"The most obvious defect of this novel is the result of poor selectivity. In addition the characters are not made to come alive. Nevertheless, an understanding of a group temperament can be felt from the total picture. Happily, the Irish of this book are not the pasty, toora-loora paddies of recent movie and radio productions. The Irish are not without unholy qualities. And McSorley being an Irishman, knows it, and tells." George Miles
— + Commonweal 51:73 O 28 '49 650w

"It has the same warmth, the same feeling for the high-pitched Irish emotionalism, the same understanding humor and is a worthwhile sequel to the previous book."
+ Kirkus 17:335 Jl 1 '49 150w

" 'The Young McDermott' has the immediacy and pressure of life that animated Mr. McSorley's 'Our Own Kind.' It is, by turns, shocking, tender, tough, fantastic, outrageous, quietly humorous. It is not a book to be read aloud in the family circle. . . Some people will like this novel very much; others not at all, but even these latter will find it hard to ignore." Mary Ross
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 S 11 '49 600w

"Readers who enjoy a longish glimpse into the lives of the Irish of Providence (complete with anecdotes) and a style that is as thick as clam chowder will find that 'The Young McDermott' is their dish. Others will find the name-part—and his supporting company—a bleak and dreary lot, despite the loving care of the author." Leon Dorais
N Y Times p53 O 30 '49 140w

"If the story Mr. McSorley tells is commonplace, his characters are quite unaware of it. They talk and fight and love each other with as much life and vigor as though no one had ever seen them through these troubles before. And the numerous minor figures have as much go in them as the principals. There isn't a wooden face in the bunch. If poor Willie McDermott would take himself a little less seriously, and if Mr. McSorley wouldn't let his prose get so overripe, things would be perfectly fine."
New Yorker 25:107 S 10 '49 180w

Reviewed by A. F. Wolfe
Sat R of Lit 32:25 O 1 '49 650w

Springf'd Republican p8B D 18 '49 250w

MCSWIGAN, MARIE. Our town has a circus; il. by Peter Burchard. 176p $2.50 Dutton 49-6164

Patsy Halligan was resented by his schoolmates, because his father was planning to build a railroad station on the baseball field. A circus to raise funds for the ball club's grounds appeared to be the solution to his problem. He found the man to advise him when he rescued a recluse from an ice-bound island. It was Ticky the famous clown who had retired from the circus after a crippling fall. In helping the town and Ticky, Patsy discovered a welcome for himself—that of press agent. For grades 5-8.

Booklist 46:104 N 15 '49

"Miss McSwigan has said all her stories come from real incidents. Whether a 'greatest clown on earth' ever mysteriously disappeared is beside the point—there is a lot of good circus lore tucked into this exciting story for 8 to 11 year olds. It has the same quality that made the author's 'Snow Treasure' such a satisfactory and popular book." Lucile Pannell
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 N 13 '49 170w

"A thoroughly likeable story, well-written and original, set in a small town in Westchester County, New York. . . Pictures in line by Peter Burchard add humor and sense of action."
+ Kirkus 17:552 O 1 '49 130w

"Recommended for fifth-grade and slow sixth-grade readers." K. H. McAlarney
+ Library J 74:1761 N 15 '49 80w

"The idea behind Miss McSwigan's book is a good one, and her handling of it is both gay and absorbing. Too, the tried and always true situation of the tribulations which beset a new boy in a school will win her main characters many a sympathizer."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 13 '49 150w

"A gay, amusing story of life in a small American town. Attractive end-papers and sketches of the people, the circus, and the poodle." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:26 N 12 '49 50w

School & Society 70:192 S 17 '49 20w

MCWILLIAMS, CAREY. California; the great exception. 377p $4 Wyn

917.94 California 49-49472

A study of political, social and economic conditions, presenting historical backgrounds of some present-day problems and featuring the greatest problem—water supply. By the author of Southern California Country (Book Review Digest 1946). Index.

Booklist 46:171 Ja 15 '50

"One of the most interesting of state studies."
+ Kirkus 17:594 O 15 '49 360w

"All in all, a wonderfully clear and understanding picture of our fastest growing state. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 74:1673 N 1 '49 100w

"The book is so thought-provoking, as well as informative, that I wish it were longer. I should have liked a fuller treatment of the oil industry, with the present battle for the control of the tidelands." Albert Guerard
+ Nation 170:43 Ja 14 '50 900w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 18 '49 1200w

Reviewed by Gladwin Hill
+ N Y Times p20 D 4 '49 450w

New Yorker 25:81 Ja 7 '50 200w

MCWILLIAMS, CAREY. North from Mexico; the Spanish-speaking people of the United States. (Peoples of America ser) 324p $4 Lippincott

976 Latin Americans in the U.S. Southwest
49-7084

A discussion of the minority-racial problem constituted by the Mexican-Americans of the Southwest. Going back into history, the author traces the origins of the discrimination, explodes the fantasy of the "Spanish way of life," and analyses present day race tensions and antagonisms. Index.

Booklist 45:175 Ja 15 '49

Reviewed by T. H. Wright
Chicago Sun Ja 24 '49 470w

Current Hist 16:168 Mr '49 80w

Reviewed by Joseph Borome
Library J 74:56 Ja 1 '49 130w

"An excellent book on the Spanish-speaking people of the United States."
+ Nation 168:164 F 5 '49 200w

"Mr. McWilliams brings together the story of the scattered Spanish colonization of [our] southwestern area. . . The effort to build any authentic understanding between the Mexican communities and their Anglo-Saxon neighbors is still halting. There is still effective segregation in the schools, although this lessens with the years. There have been riots and violence, though increasingly public opinion moves toward moderation. But the gap still remains. Mr. McWilliams has done a useful job in analyzing and describing it." Hubert Herring
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ja 30 '49 800w

"His book gives us by far the most thorough coverage of 'the Mexican problem' which this reviewer has ever seen between covers." Duncan Aikman
+ N Y Times p3 Ja 9 '49 1050w

New Yorker 24:82 Ja 15 '49 160w

Reviewed by Macalister Jones
San Francisco Chronicle p12 F 6 '49 900w

"A vitally important and superbly documented history of the Spanish-speaking people in America. . . In view of the vast amount of research and the scholarly ardor that went into the making of 'North from Mexico,' it is to be hoped that the book will find readers among that segment of the American populace whose a priori assumptions about the Spanish-speaking people of the United States are woefully wanting and often criminally inaccurate." Beatrice Griffith
+ Sat R of Lit 32:26 F 26 '49 550w

"The author, an attorney, is counsel rather than judge. Much research went into the preparation of the volume, but the zealot rather than the dispassionate researcher shows up on every page. Flaming indignation is the tone of the book." R. H. Fitzgibbon
Survey 85:401 Jl '49 550w

"A happy combination of American historical scholarship and the sociology of a minority."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:215 Je '49 260w

Wis Lib Bul 45:63 Ap '49

MADARIAGA, SALVADOR DE. Fall of the Spanish American empire. 443p il $5 Macmillan

980 Latin America—History. Spain—Colonies
48-10527

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

Reviewed by W. S. Robertson
Am Hist R 54:646 Ap '49 650w

"Señor de Madariaga's work has much to recommend it, not only to historians but also the general reader. . . But it also suffers from the same shortcomings which could be found in the first volume—glorification of a culture dominated by the wealthy and by priests, undue emphasis on such elusive concepts as national character, and a tendency to write history under the aspect of 'what would have happened if. . .' " E. S. P.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 3 '49 600w

Current Hist 16:100 F '49 70w

"Salvador de Madariaga's study of The Fall of the Spanish American Empire, together with his earlier volume on its rise, is a condensed English version of a work published in Spanish under the title Cuadro histórico de las Indias. Highly readable as it is, the English text is at many points less clear-cut than the Spanish." C. C. Griffin
+ Pol Sci Q 64:153 Mr '49 650w

Reviewed by Mildred Adams
Survey 85:181 Mr '49 850w

MAGIDOFF, ROBERT. In anger and pity; a report on Russia. 278p $2.95 Doubleday

914.7 Russia—Description and travel
49-7886

The author, a Russian-born American journalist, spent twelve years in Russia as a correspondent, until last fall when he was suddenly accused of being a spy and given three days' notice to leave. This book is partly autobiography, partly his observations on life in Russia as he knew it.

Atlantic 183:91 My '49 230w

Booklist 45:169; 240 Ja 15 '49; Mr 15 '49

Reviewed by Irving Pflaum
Chicago Sun Mr 23 '49 450w

Reviewed by Ernest Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 21 '49 700w

Foreign Affairs 28:167 O '49 70w

"A warm, human, reasonable and readable book." M. C. Scoggin
+ Horn Bk 25:239 My '49 150w

Kirkus 17:19 Ja 1 '49 190w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 74:307 F 15 '49 80w

"A remarkably dispassionate and informative book in which the pity is all for the Russian people and the anger all for their rulers and exploiters. Of especial interest is the section on the strangling of the arts by the heavy hand of the Kremlin."
+ Nation 168:368 Mr 26 '49 60w

"All this is set down in solid English, with rare dashes of humor—not all deliberate. The most valuable chapters are those on the cultural life of Moscow. Magidoff, with his love of good literature, music and theatre, with his exquisite understanding of the Russian language, has few peers among foreigners in writing on this topic." R. E. Lauterbach
+ New Repub 120:20 Ap 11 '49 800w

"It's a readable book of personal experience which might have been more informative if it had been written with less 'anger' and 'pity.' " Walter Kerr
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Mr 6 '49 800w

MAGIDOFF, ROBERT—Continued
Reviewed by Max Beloff
N Y Times p1 Mr 20 '49 1000w

"Hardly a profound work, but one that is readable and often amusing."
+ New Yorker 25:106 Mr 12 '49 100w

"Robert Magidoff belongs to the small and most uncomfortable category of commentators who in a period of intense controversy, of judgments in terms of black and white, insist on the right to see more than one side of every question. It is this very quality which makes his book important reading." V. M. Dean
+ Sat R of Lit 32:15 F 26 '49 800w
Wis Lib Bul 45:86 My '49

Reviewed by P. E. Mosely
Yale R n s 38:755 summer '49 120w

MAGINLEY, C. J. Make it and ride it; diagrams by Elizabeth D. McKee. 120p $2 Harcourt
680 Toys. Handicraft 49-11081

"The author tells how to build practical things like bike trailers, wagons, scooters, jeeps, racers, toys for younger children. . . There are general instructions for procedure and for each article, specific lists of materials, construction instructions step by step, a diagram. A substantial amount of space is given to the nation-wide Soap Box Derby, with plans for a racer, rules of contest, and so on." (Kirkus) Most of the projects can be made with hand tools and scrap materials.

Booklist 46:69 O 15 '49
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 12 '50 60w

"The book would be a big help to a boy who had access to a range of tools and materials. Otherwise, while it would be a useful reference volume, the matter comes down to what it has always been down to: amazing improvisation."
+ — Commonweal 51:193 N 18 '49 70w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:545 N '49 40w

"A how-to-do-it book which would be more useful in a community where the Junior High School has a good shop than in home use."
Kirkus 17:557 O 1 '49 110w

"Recommended for boys of twelve and up." Alice McQuaid
+ Library J 74:1545 O 15 '49 80w

"Recommended for ages 9-15." J. S. Watts
+ Library J 74:1830 D 1 '49 70w

"Excellent book for a school workshop." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:50 N 12 '49 40w
Springf'd Republican p7C O 16 '49 150w

MAGUIRE, FRANCIS THOMAS. Journey with music; poems. 95p $2.50 Monastine 811 49-11334

"The poems of Maguire—now first collected from leading periodicals—introduce a strong, individual voice singing of man's place in nature, his relationship to the elements and to the animals." N Y Times

"These poems are carefully wrought. There is great beauty of rhythm and image here, and it is good to know we have a new voice in American poetry whose freshness can help to blow away the pseudo-learned cobwebs obscuring so much of modern verse. Maguire, moreover, is anything but archaic." M. S. Curtler
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 1 '50 200w

"Francis Maguire exhibits little concern with the modernists but there is often a modern note in his lyrics, which are musical, tight spun, and original. In his poem of snow falling at night, he lets the syllables fall almost as quietly as the snow covering the ugliness of the alley he describes." A. M. Sullivan
+ Sat R of Lit 32:15 D 24 '49 140w

MAIER, WILLIAM. Pleasure island; il. by Carl Rose. 250p $3 Messner
49-8912

The United States marines landed on Pleasure Island sometime during the recent World war. They were supposed to protect the island from the Japanese attack, but when the Japanese did not come the Marines decided to see what excitement they could find. This is a story of the Marines, the three beautiful daughters of the English proprietor of a large part of the island, their very intelligent but unworldly father, and the natives.

Booklist 45:289; 314 My 1 '49; My 15 '49
Kirkus 17:157 Mr 15 '49 130w

"A diverting tale happily recommended for an evening's entertainment." E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 74:662 Ap 15 '49 100w

"'Pleasure Island' is sheer make-believe, light and summery."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 My 29 '49 200w

"Unless you are committed to a schedule of masterworks for this summer's reading, you will find 'Pleasure Island' satisfactory on all accounts. Mr. Maier's novel might be classified as a pleasant romance, but that term does not accurately define either its charm or its attributes. The love affair is both plausible and attractive, and the counterpoint to this theme—the awakening of an English Victorian pater-familias to the realities of twentieth-century war and the men who wage it—makes a point that cuts far deeper into our righteousness than a cursory telling of the plot would indicate." Thomas Lask
+ N Y Times p22 Je 5 '49 340w

"Nothing in this novel will cause you any lack of sleep, and at times it is frankly enjoyable. The somewhat situational humor is ably aided and abetted by Mr. Carl Rose's even funnier illustrations." M. R.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 31 '49 150w
Sat R of Lit 32:33 Jl 30 '49 170w

"A novel of romance plus adventure warranted to drive dull care away." S. M. Neal
+ Springf'd Republican p6D My 22 '49 150w

MAINE, BASIL STEPHEN. Chopin. (Great musicans ser) 128p $1.50 Wyn
B or 92 Chopin, Frédéric François 49-8158

A brief biography of Chopin which stresses his love of country and describes his association with George Sand in sympathetic terms. Chronology. List of Chopin's works. Bibliography. No index.

Reviewed by C. K. Miller
Library J 74:664 Ap 15 '49 40w

"Frankly old-fashioned in approach, it is marred by very numerous misstatements of fact, errors in the reading of documents, and uncritical acceptance of the opinions and claims of earlier writers. Like too many highly romantic and emotional books, this one is more interested in a kind of fictional recreation than it is in accuracy." Herbert Weinstock
— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ag 28 '49 150w

"Chopin comes to life through the author's imagination, with the aid of fascinating quotations from the composer's letters, and the writings of Berlioz, Mendelssohn, Liszt, Sand, Delacroix and others of his contemporaries. The affair between Sand and Chopin has never been analyzed with more discernment." H. G. Lawrence
+ N Y Times p34 My 8 '49 120w

"Few musical biographies so colorfully depict the era and environment of their subjects. While circumscribed as to physical size, Basil Maine's study of Chopin suffers no other limitation of much consequence. Here is scholarship imbued and enlivened with an active imagination. . . Chopin certainly suffers not a single derogatory remark or implication in the hands of his sympathetic chronicler, and herein may lie the book's main inadequacy. A figure shown to be as saintly as the hero of 'Chopin' can scarcely be believed to have breathed this mortal air." Roland Gelatt

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:60 Mr 26 '49 270w

MAIS, STUART PETRE BRODIE. English scene today. 287p pl $3 Macmillan
914.2 England—Description and travel [49-17705]

A guidebook to postwar England, showing rural England and English resorts as they are after the bombings of World war II. Contains twenty-three plates. Index.

Booklist 46:122 D 1 '49

"Interesting, if superficial, survey." Frances Russell
+ — Christian Science Monitor p13 D 15 '49 420w

"It has taken a year of actual travel to make this not only a guide on which the inexperienced may depend but a reassurance—fortified by photographs—for those who may have trembled for the effect of war on the countryside. . . Above all, making clear that while it is hard to forget 'what we are called upon to bear at the present, one can afford to be optimistic about the future'; it tells why one can, in accurate, reliable detail. This is the best feature of one of the best post-war travel books."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p55 D 4 '49 290w

"Mr. Mais is not concerned principally with war damage, but he does not ignore the destruction and havoc wrought by German bombs. Nevertheless his book is a pleasant reminder that much that was and is beautiful in England, was not touched during the war, and his description of the reconstruction under way, notably in Plymouth, is heartening." C. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 1 '50 210w

Sat R of Lit 32:30 D 24 '49 130w

MAJOR, HENRY DEWSBURY ALVES. Civilisation and religious values. 140p $2 Macmillan (for Allen, G.)
204 Civilization. Religion [49-2666]

"The Hibbert Lectureship was founded in 1878 to encourage the study of religion in its historical, comparative and philosophical aspects, 'with the object of directing the attention of the British educated classes to the results of these studies and their significance for the reorganisation of religious life and thought.' Dr. Major, who was for many years Principal of Ripon Hall, delivered the Hibbert Lectures in 1946, and they are now published in this book. Dr. Major weaves together some thoughts of Matthew Arnold and St. Augustine to reach a definition of civilisation as 'the development of the divine nature of man in a society which is both divine and human.' " Spec

"This is a small, important book which discusses a subject of pressing relevance to the critical issues of today. . . This book is highly commended for popular reading, close study and discussion." R. C. Knox
+ Christian Century 66:430 Ap 6 '49 1050w

"If many will feel that something vital is missing from Dr Major's conception of basic Christianity, yet all will be thankful to have so many fundamentals so simply and so lucidly presented. The dullest mind will be stimulated by the thought-provoking quotations which preface each lecture. But if the book owes something of its appeal to a judicious choice of quotations, its main value lies in the courage, the hopefulness, and the wisdom of Dr Major's own judgements." H. G. Wood
+ — Hibbert J 47:299 Ap '49 1100w

Reviewed by Marcus Knight
Spec 181:848 D 24 '48 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p300 My 6 '49 360w

MALE, EMILE. Religious art; from the twelfth to the eighteenth century. 208p 48pl $4.50 Pantheon bks.
709.9482 Christian art and symbolism. Art —France 49-10882

"The four volumes on the religious art of the medieval era, written by the great French scholar, Emile Mâle, and published from 1924 to 1932, have long been basic for the student of the Middle Ages. We now have a translation of passages from these four volumes that Mr. Mâle considers most significant and interesting for the general reader." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 46:93 N 15 '49

"Habitual wariness about the use of superlatives in this department cannot prevent recognition of this as probably the best brief account of the substance and meaning of religious art in the later medieval and early modern periods. . . It is to be regarded as one of those works which, though simple and compact, rest upon an immense amount of erudition which is not exhibited. When the author of such a book makes a generalization or a judgment, it means something." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 66:1169 O 5 '49 1150w

"This is a delightful book as well as an instructive and scholarly one." Otto Von Simson
+ Commonweal 51:325 D 23 '49 490w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 75:45 Ja 1 '50 100w

"It is ill-designed and the plates are poor, but the text is more than recompense." Lincoln Kirstein
+ — New Repub 121:25 D 12 '49 70w

"Those who are familiar with the original work may find that the continuity is somewhat broken in this abridged collection." M. L.
N Y Times p27 N 6 '49 200w

"The work is rich in fascinating facts and suggestive insight." W. C. Smith
+ Springf'd Republican p8C N 20 '49 210w

MALINA, FRED. Some like 'em shot. 246p $2.50 Mill
49-8064

Detective story.

"This gambit suggests a seriousness of purpose nowhere evident in the tale which is made up of familiar stuffs capably cut and fashioned. The murderer turns out to be more sensational than convincing." James Sandoe
— + Chicago Sun Mr 25 '49 70w

"Embattled entertainment which is not without lighter touches."
Kirkus 17:41 Ja 15 '49 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ap 24 '49 110w

" 'Stumble,' unfortunately, is a verb that fits his brand of sleuthing all too accurately. The pace is hypoed with many a wry jab at the Golden Littoral and its denizens—but most armchair addicts will be two jumps ahead at the finish." James MacBride
N Y Times p19 Ap 10 '49 160w

"Mr. Malina's book has its virtues, rapid tempo being the best of these and characterization a close second. The writing, however, leaves much to be desired." E. D. Doyle
— + San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 20 '49 90w

Sat R of Lit 32:36 Ap 30 '49 40w

Springf'd Republican p5D Ap 24 '49 150w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANTHONY GILBERT, pseud). Innocent bottle. 209p $2 Barnes, A.S.
49-7513

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun F 25 '49 90w
Kirkus 17:70 F 1 '49 70w

MALLESON, L. B.—Continued
Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p27 Mr 20 '49 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p21 F 20 '49 90w

"Unorthodox investigator's unusual methods lend zest to plot that mixes familiar ingredients into unholy and occasionally turgid muddle."
Sat R of Lit 32:33 Mr 5 '49 40w

"Written in a leisurely vein and in the British school of the whodunit, the book may not appeal to every taste, though it is moderately entertaining." D. F. M.
Springf'd Republican p7B Jl 17 '49 110w

MALLESON, LUCY BEATRICE (ANNE MEREDITH, pseud). The sisters. 282p $3 Random house 49-1192

Character studies of two sisters, daughters of an English minister. Janet, the older, was plain and practical, and combined the duties of nurse to the dying mother and housekeeper to her unappreciative father. Cassie, who was beautiful and amoral, lived on the Continent and indulged in many conquests. In time Janet married a lawyer, and devoted all the passion of her starved nature in worship of her husband. Ten years after the marriage, Cassie met her sister's husband and the staid John was lost. The tragic outcome of that meeting did not end until forty years later with the death of Cassie.

Booklist 45:234; 262 Mr 15 '49; Ap 1 '49
Kirkus 17:39 Ja 15 '49 170w

"Good novel recommended for small library purchase." F. A. Boyle
+ Library J 74:312 F 15 '49 70w

"Miss Meredith tells this strongly motivated tale simply and with considerable pace. In doing so, however, she reduces it almost to the status of a case history, expertly told but lacking in essential human drama."
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 Mr 27 '49 230w

"The story is vigorously—even breathlessly—written, and has a full articulate cast. The sisters themselves are clearly drawn." Elizabeth Fenwick
N Y Times p12 Mr 27 '49 400w

"One more tidily plotted, stylistically precise drama of Victorian England... The people and the setting are both comparatively standard, but Miss Meredith, like many other British lady novelists, keeps herself primly clear of the obvious in wording and construction."
+ New Yorker 25:103 Ap 2 '49 160w
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 7 '49 440w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 32:38 My 7 '49 180w

MALLETTE, GERTRUDE ETHEL. Unexpected summer. 212p $2.25 Doubleday
49-10409

A novel for high school girls. When it appeared that Selden Meredith would have to earn her way if she was to return to college in the fall, she embarked on two careers—journalism and candy making. How she fumbled, tried again, and finally attained a modest success in both—and solved a mystery as well—is here told in the story of her "unexpected summer."

Booklist 46:49 O 1 '49

Reviewed by Agatha Shea
Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 D 4 '49 30w

"There's plenty of level-headed business thinking procedure in the story, and some very good writing."
+ Kirkus 17:361 Jl 15 '49 160w

"The value of the story lies in showing the caution and experience needed in both careers and the heroine's modestly reasonable success. In spite of the addition of a mystery and a love affair, story seems to move slowly and to be solider reading than many of this type." Eleanor Kidder
+ Library J 74:1466 O 1 '49 70w

Reviewed by Esther Gorey
Library J 74:1551 O 15 '49 40w
San Francisco Chronicle p21 N 13 '49 80w

MALLY, EMMA LOUISE. Tides of dawn. 370p $3.50 Sloane
49-7761

The Netherlands in the sixteenth century forms the background for this historical novel. Jacqueline Crois de Chatrois, daughter of a nobleman, and Gerrit van Wagenen, of merchant stock, are the central characters. The liberation of Leyden in 1574 is the scene of part of the action.

Booklist 45:262 Ap 1 '49

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg
Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 3 '49 210w

"Not top flight, perhaps, but better than average historical novel in that the historical conflict supplies the central core with the rest of the struggle within the characters themselves."
+ Kirkus 17:10 Ja 1 '49 130w

"Recommended." Ruth Tubby
+ Library J 74:198 F 1 '49 100w

"Students of the period, fortified by previous acquaintance with its intricacies, will no doubt welcome it. Others perhaps will be most impressed by the fact it took four years of research and writing." George Conrad
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Mr 13 '49 380w

"This is a good historical novel. . . There is a whole gallery of fine line drawings of the nobles and rulers of the beleaguered country. The turmoil of the heart-breaking wars; the burning of heretics; the struggle for recognition of religious freedom in the country—all are done with a strength of purpose that makes the period come alive and seem vital." Mark Rivete
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 20 '49 270w

"The plot is pretty thin, and certainly not original; still it might have developed into a fairly intriguing adventure story had not the author smothered it under a veritable avalanche of historical dissertation, apparently intended to show up the knavery of the adherents of the 'old faith' as compared to the honesty and the spirit of sacrifice of the Protestants. As it stands, 'The Tides of Dawn' is closer akin to a tract than to a novel; moreover, it has the tract's lamentable characteristic of being blatantly one-sided. . . Yet, this is not an undistinguished book. Though seldom brilliant, Miss Mally's style is always fluent and clear. Indeed, some of the scenes she describes have all the local color and intimate charm of a painting by Breughel. Also, she unquestionably knows her history." Carlo Beuf
— + Sat R of Lit 32:30 Mr 5 '49 500w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 20 '49 300w

MALRAUX, ANDRE. Psychology of art; v 1, Museum without walls; v2, The Creative act; tr. by Stuart Gilbert. 2v il col pl $25 Pantheon bks.

701.15 Art—Psychology. Art—Philosophy
49-48802

"This incursion into aesthetics is in two parts. The first, 'Museum Without Walls' makes the point that museums are a creation of the latter centuries in a very few countries, that painting and sculpture was not done in former days for the benefit of passing hordes, that the artist cared less for a gallery than for self-expression. . . Second volume, 'The Creative Act' deals with the humanism of art, with the artist as alchemist, as competitor and interpreter of the existing order. Again the range of interest is wide; photography is discussed and the fact that the most startling work of today really rests on the past's firm foundation is accented." Library J

"On the basis of general importance and sheer beauty this year's outstanding art book is Andre Malraux's 'Psychology of Art.' Superbly printed in Switzerland, this two volume work by the distinguished French writer reveals in word and picture the variety and abundance of the world's art treasures available to art lovers today." P. L. Nothstein

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p43 D 4 '49 170w

"It was Voltaire who said that translations augment the faults of a work and spoil its beauties. Unhappily this is a mild description of the translation of this great book because it would be difficult to imagine, if it were not a fact, a rendering more careless, more inexact, more indifferent to the original text than this. . . Malraux's style is exact and at the same time eloquent; it is precise and it is also wonderfully embellished by allusion and rhetoric. In disregarding its expansive dignity the translator and the publishers are not only disrespectful to the author and his achievement but also to the English language. . . This book soars like a phoenix across today's horizon, reasserting the lucidity, the imagination, the will to order a human universe." Florence Codman

+ — Commonweal 51:368 Ja 6 '50 1250w

"Fine illustrations; expensive but probably worth placing in the larger art book collection." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 75:45 Ja 1 '50 180w

"Our generation's most revealing criticism of world art, produced with great luxury and care in Switzerland." Lincoln Kirstein

+ New Repub 121:25 D 12 '49 160w

"This book will probably turn out to be the most permanently valuable of his writings. What impresses me about the book . . . is its tone of voice. It rings in one's ears like an incantation. And though, doubtless, some of its incantatory power has evaporated in translation, the insistent rhythm of a psalmist and the inspired rhetoric of a prophet make themselves heard throughout its considerable length. . . This is a book into which, I foresee, I shall often dip as a corrective whenever I suspect myself of shallow thinking or of narrow thinking." Eric Newton

+ N Y Times p1 D 11 '49 1300w

"Filled with 220 painstakingly chosen and magnificently reproduced examples of our artistic heritage, as well as some of the most provocative and thoughtful writing on art to appear in this or any other year." R. H. Hagan

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 27 '49 1050w

MALTZ, ALBERT. Journey of Simon McKeever. 250p $2.75 Little

49-2576

Story of Simon McKeever's journey from an old people's home to Los Angeles in search of a cure for his arthritis. On the road he encounters both good and evil. "And then the doctor, hardly won, destroys his dream; at his age, the arthritis he suffers from is incurable. But McKeever has gained something of permanent value from his journey. . . He returns to the Home, courage high, he wins some rights for himself—and others. . . And he determines that one dream is to be realized, he is going to bring into form the book he has envisioned, a book that will help others on the road of life." (Kirkus)

Booklist 45:218;314 Mr 1 '49; My 15 '49

Reviewed by Feike Feikema

Chicago Sun My 19 '49 400w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 16 '49 150w

"A tender little book, with an odd charm."

+ Kirkus 17:68 F 1 '49 220w

"This psychological study of one problem in geriatrics hangs on a rather tenuous plot unequal to talent and craftsmanship of Mr. Maltz." E. P. Nichols

— Library J 74:735 My 1 '49 80w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

— New Repub 120:19 Je 27 '49 700w

Reviewed by J. D. Scott

New Statesman & Nation 38:364 O 1 '49 120w

"Albert Maltz has once again attempted to fuse a fine talent for storytelling with an urgent sense of our social problems. It is an attempt illuminated from time to time by vivid characterization and by the author's faith in the underlying kindness of the average man, but as a story it strains credibility and as a message is forced." Milton Rugoff

— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 15 '49 700w

"In this tightly plotted short novel, Mr. Maltz achieves an effect all too rare in current fiction—an affirmation of faith in man's courage, in man's will to put things right in a badly off-center world." William Du Bois

+ N Y Times p5 My 8 '49 600w

"A few appealing moments, but the story unrolls with celluloid smoothness and expectedness."

— + New Yorker 25:113 My 14 '49 120w

"The book is interesting, mildly moving, and in McKeever's final tragi-comic triumph, satisfactory. A film of it could be much more effective, more real and alive. Maltz has done much better." M. S.

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 10 '49 210w

Reviewed by Josephine Lawrence

Sat R of Lit 32:17 My 7 '49 550w

Springf'd Republican p6D Je 26 '49 280w

Times [London] Lit Sup p645 O 7 '49 210w

Wis Lib Bul 45:106 Je '49

MALVERN, GLADYS. Eric's girls; il. by Corinne Malvern. 244p $2.50 Messner

49-8088

A novel for young people about New Amsterdam in the days just before the change to New York. Eric Sparrow was an Englishman, a refugee from his native land, who after years in Connecticut came to New Amsterdam to give his two young daughters a better chance for love and happiness than they had had on his isolated Connecticut farm.

Booklist 45:299 My 1 '49

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 28 '49 170w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '49

"Rooted in sound knowledge of the period, and a good story as well."

+ Kirkus 17:112 Mr 1 '49 180w

"Plenty of thrills, romance, and real history." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 74:897 Je 1 '49 100w

"Corinne Malvern's charming drawings adorn a lively story that will not disappoint the author's ever-loyal young public." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p14 My 29 '49 130

Sat R of Lit 32:39 Jl 9 '49 100w

Wis Lib Bul 45:91 My '49

MANGRUM, LLOYD. Golf, a new approach. (Whittlesey house publication) 127p il $3 McGraw

796.352 Golf 49-3031

"The 1946 National Open winner, recognizing the confusion that often results from an overloading of dont's in teaching proper stroking, has attempted a simplification of the usual instruction procedure. His book consists for the most part of photos of himself demonstrating correct form in shot-making." N Y Times

Booklist 45:371 Jl 1 '49

MANGRUM, LLOYD—Continued

"Well worth studying to help overcome your basic golfing troubles, the book also includes the usual sections on sand shots, the explosion shot, and uphill, downhill, and sidehill lies." Harry Molter

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 My 14 '49 240w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 74:1032 Jl '49 20w

"The captions are brief and cogent. As Mr. Mangrum recommends, however, it might be just as well for the beginning player to supplement the pictorial lessons given here with some from his club professional." Rex Lardner

+ N Y Times p23 Je 12 '49 90w

MANHATTAN, AVRO. Vatican in world politics. 444p $3.75 Gaer

282 Roman Catholic church—Relations (diplomatic) 49-9987

"Searching examination of the Catholic Church's influence and action in nonreligious matters during the last 50 years. General policy and specific policy in various countries are discussed. Concludes with a denunciation of the Vatican's support of fascist forces in Europe and its intrusion in political affairs." Booklist

Booklist 46:77 N 1 '49

"The book represents the collection of a huge mass of information, most of it previously uncorrelated but constituting important threads of the history of more than a dozen countries, including Spain, Italy, Germany, Austria, Poland, France, Russia, Japan, and the United States. . . The book is to be read for generalized, impressions and broad description rather than accuracy of minor historical details. If this weakens the main thesis, the liability must be accepted and discounted. Nevertheless, allowing for some oversimplification and for an apparent tendency to be thrown from the Scylla of clericalism to the Charybdis of socialism, there are many who will consider the work a needed and wholesome one, throwing light on influences that affect their lives and the future of their civilization." Tully Nettleton

+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 S 7 '49 550w

Reviewed by G. L. Archer
Churchman 163:17 D 15 '49 390w

Reviewed by Russell Rhodes
New Repub 121:19 O 10 '49 1400w

"Mr. Manhattan's book would be more convincing if it were better documented. . . I should think American Protestants would be made suspicious of the reliability of this book by the misleading statement, several times repeated, that they have made no serious objection to the Myron Taylor mission. The book contains too many sweeping but unsupported assertions to make it possible to regard it as a dependable source." Paul Hutchinson

— N Y Times p28 D 11 '49 500w

"Mr. Manhattan has done considerable research on the policies and influence of the Vatican and of the Catholic Church in many parts of the world. But anyone who has been looking for a thoroughly objective book on the subject, for a critical but fair evaluation, will be disappointed. The author has not broken away from the prevailing pattern. On the contrary, he has drawn its outlines more sharply. . . All this does not mean that the author has not assembled an impressive quantity of data. He has done a great amount of work, and, in a way, it is good to have his book on the small shelf of volumes that even attempt to deal with world Catholicism. But he has failed to give an account of the enormous variety of Catholic life, the various shades of social, political, and economic views to be found among world-conscious Catholics; he has selected his material largely from ultra-right sources, and so his book is weighted heavily on the side of the least enlightened and least attractive expressions of Catholic opinion and action." Martin Ebon

Sat R of Lit 32:11 S 24 '49 650w

MANLY, HAROLD PHILLIPS, ed. Drake's householders' cyclopedia; a how-to-do-it book; construction, installation, maintenance and repair; home buildings, their equipment, furnishings and accessories. 646p il $5 Drake, F.J.

640.2 Home economics. Dwellings. Repairing 48-11024

"A handy miscellany of practical information pertaining to maintenance and repairing of dwellings and household articles. Selected, small construction projects also are covered. No book of this type can be complete, but this one compares well with others recently published. Most of the articles are brief but some of them run to twenty pages. As the table of contents indicates, the range of topics is wide. The main arrangement is alphabetical but there is also an index that greatly facilitates the use of the book." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 45:237 Mr 15 '49
Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '49
N Y New Tech Bks 33:93 N '48

MANNING-SANDERS, MRS RUTH. West of England. (Face of Britain) 152p pl $3.75 Batsford

914.23 Cornwall, England—Description and travel. Devonshire, England—Description and travel. Somerset, England—Description and travel [49-9919]

Guidebook to three English counties: Cornwall, Devon, and Somerset, which sections the author considers ideal for vacation trips, because they are non-industrial. Copiously illustrated. Index.

Booklist 45:390 Jl 15 '49

"Delightful and beautiful book." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 24 '49 220w

"An author, condemned to fit three counties into 150 pages or so, is bound to be at once selective and sketchy, and the method can hardly please everyone. . . Mrs. Manning-Sanders is safe at least in her illustrations. . . She likes legends. She is sound on church architecture. . . So far, excellent. But the book has some debatable judgments and omissions. . . Still, it has been admitted that selection and sketchiness are inevitable in so condensed a work. Mrs. Manning-Sanders does impress the reader with her love for the western counties."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p284 Ap 30 '49 750w

MANONE, WINGY, and VANDERVOORT, PAUL. Trumpet on the wing; foreword by Bing Crosby. 256p il $2.95 Doubleday

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-9021

Reminiscences of a jazz player, born in New Orleans. When just a boy he lost his right arm in an accident and had to learn over again how to play the horn with his left hand. The story of jazz music is covered from about 1920. Discography of Manone's recordings.

Booklist 45:177 Ja 15 '49
Kirkus 16:427 Ag 15 '48 120w

"He tells stories with gusto, writes glowingly of his friends and when he talks about his art—as Bing Crosby says in a foreword—he knows whereof he speaks."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 N 21 '48 150w

MAN'S disorder and God's design. (Amsterdam assembly ser) 4v in 1 $5 Harper

280 Church. Church and social problems 49-7873

The several parts of this volume were "written in preparation for the First Assembly of the World Council of Churches in Amsterdam, Holland, August 22nd-September 4th, 1948." (General pref) Contents: The universal church in God's design; The church's witness to God's design; The church and the disorder of society; The church and the international disorder. Indexes.

Booklist 45:219 Mr 1 '49

"For ministers or laymen planning serious post-Amsterdam studies, either individually or in groups, this is the one indispensable book." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 66:111 Ja 26 '49 650w

"This more than 1850-page volume will go on the shelves of all who are vitally interested in the future of the Church Universal, beside the reports from other historic conferences such as Oxford, Edinburgh, Jerusalem, and Madras. It will call for immediate and careful reading, owing both to its importance and to the fact that in many cases it is being badly misquoted. In addition, it will be invaluable for reference in the years to come, especially as the churches find their place in this world in which they are being so seriously challenged. It could be wished that more of the papers could have been written in a terminology more easily understood by laymen." A. C. Swain

+ — Crozer Q 26:264 Jl '49 900w

"This is an epoch-making report issuing from a great historical event. As the authorities in each denomination will be urging its wide reading, a prominent place should be given to this book in all book-stores and libraries."

+ Kirkus 17:139 Mr 15 '49 300w

"The papers of John Foster Dulles and Professor J. L. Hromadka, of Prague, and the report on capitalism and Communism are particularly timely." K. D. M.

+ Sat R of Lit 32:28 F 19 '49 200w

Wis Lib Bul p6 D '49

MANSERGH, NICHOLAS. Commonwealth and the nations; studies in British Commonwealth relations. 228p $2.50 Royal inst. of int. affairs

354.42 Great Britain—Colonies, dominions, etc. Great Britain—Foreign relations. Imperial federation 49-1707

"In this volume of studies Dr Mansergh examines the principal problems confronting both the [British] Commonwealth and its individual member-nations today. The earlier essays consider critically the central machinery of the Commonwealth and its effectiveness in the war and post-war years; the later essays examine the outlook of the member-nations, the geographical and internal political factors which so profoundly influence them, and their varied conceptions of the Commonwealth and the part it should play in world affairs." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by E. D. Graper
Am Pol Sci R 43:620 Je '49 330w

Reviewed by D. J. McDougall
Canadian Hist R 30:345 D '49 650w

Foreign Affairs 27:690 Jl '49 20w

"Dr. Mansergh's collection of essays becomes more rewarding the farther one reads. The first essay, on the nomenclature of the Commonwealth-Empire, is useful and thorough. So are the analyses of Dominion attitudes towards problems of international security and Commonwealth unity. But when Dr. Mansergh discusses the First Asian Relations Conference and the new members of the Commonwealth—India, Pakistan and Ceylon—he shows a depth of feeling and insight into a delicate, evolving situation which makes him one of the best reporters of our time, and augurs well for his Survey of British Commonwealth Affairs, of which this is only a foretaste." G. M. Carter

+ Pacific Affairs 22:214 Je '49 440w

"The volume before us is a collection of eight essays, in which he aims to raise some questions, examine some developments, and emphasize some underlying trends in recent Commonwealth history. These essays are not equally important, but they all contain suggestive comments and observations." R. L. Schuyler

Pol Sci Q 64:619 D '49 1750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p228 Ap 9 '49 550w

MANSON, THOMAS WALTER. Church's ministry; with a pref. by Henry Sloane Coffin. 114p $2 Presbyterian bd.

262.1 Clergy. Church. Apostolic succession 49-10600

"Pertinent to differences of conviction between two groups of Protestant denomination who otherwise find much in common, this is a series of lectures in reply to the Bishop of Oxford's Apostolic Ministry written in 1946. Author speaks for those who hold the 'evangelical' rather than the 'catholic' view of apostolic succession, particularly with reference to the giving and receiving of communion at such world conferences as Amsterdam." Library J

"This book is based on a study of theology and church history, and is quite definitely a book for scholars and others who are seeking to find a sound theological basis for church union which will have some chance of being accepted."

+ Kirkus 17:548 O 1 '49 120w

"Of special interest to those keenly aware of recent developments in the ecumenical movement, it will otherwise have only limited appeal. A preface by Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin and a summary in outline form help in the clarification of abstruse profundities." L. R. Miller

Library J 74:1196 S 1 '49 130w

"Dr. Manson's little book is an important contribution to the discussion on Church Order which has recently revived in connexion with various proposals for Christian union. It is valuable, as it is both critical and constructive. It is critical of the school of thought represented so ably in the group of essays on The Apostolic Ministry, edited by the Bishop of Oxford; at the same time it contains a constructive statement of the Church and its ministry."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p29 Ja 8 '49 1800w

MANTELL, CHARLES LETNAM. Tin: its mining, production, technology and applications. (Am. chemical soc. Monograph ser) 2d ed 573p il $10 Reinhold

669.6 Tin 49-4923

"Reviews the history of tin, its properties, ores, mining, metallurgy, reduction, refining, plating, alloys, coatings and tubes, compounds, corrosion, scrap recovery and analytical methods. This second edition has been thoroughly revised to show the many changes in the treatment of tin during the last ten years." (Library J) Indexes. First edition was published in 1928.

Booklist 46:174 Ja 15 '50

Reviewed by Julian Sohon
Library J 74:1102 Ag '49 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:62 Jl '49

MANUEL, FRANK EDWARD. Realities of American-Palestine relations. 378p $5 Public affairs press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Palestine. Palestine—Foreign relations—U.S. 49-4767

A study of American interest in Palestine from the appointment of the first Jewish consular agent in Palestine in 1832 to the present. List of sources. Index.

"Scholars wishing to analyze the evidence for some of the statements will bemoan the lack of footnotes. But the odd-shaped pieces of the jig-saw puzzle are described here better than in any foregoing volume." W. W. White

Am Pol Sci R 43:1071 O '49 280w

"The story of American participation in establishing the new Jewish state of Israel in Palestine—for that is what the book is—is one that is well worth telling, and, so far as I can see, this author has assembled the relevant facts in a reasonably objective and unbiased way. That he is an ardent political Zionist is obvious in the beginning, but generally he shows fairness and restraint in presenting his evidence; so that by discounting this pre-

MANUEL, F. E.—Continued
supposition with which the book has been written, the reader is able without difficulty to form a clear picture of what has happened." S. V. McCasland
+ Crozer Q 27:68 Ja '50 2000w

"A reader may find bias in Dr. Manuel's account of American-Jewish relations, but the facts, over and above any interpretations or asides, tell a story of vacillation between real concern and indifference as to the fate of the Jews." E. P. Hoyt
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 7 '49 850w

MARCEL, GABRIEL. The philosophy of existence; tr. by Manya Harari. 96p $2.75 Philosophical lib.
111 Existentialism 49-8815

"This book treats of the Ontological Mystery and is written for the 'man in whom the sense of the ontological—the sense of being—is lacking or the man who has lost awareness of this sense.'" (School & Society) The author is a Roman Catholic existentialist, and is a critic of Sartre.

"I would say that he writes very muddily, but with not infrequent flashes of lucidity." W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 66:592 My 11 '49 420w

Reviewed by Arthur Child
Ethics 60:76 O '49 80w

"He offers a rare thing: serious modern philosophy in unpretentious and readable form." N. G. H.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 11 '49 220w

School & Society 69:326 Ap 30 '49 40w

"In the introductory note M. Marcel rightly calls attention to the fact that his thought on these questions was formulated before Heidegger, Jaspers or Sartre had published their main works. This is not simply an immaterial claim to have made a 'discovery'; it should dispose the reader to open this little book, not as a fashionable manual of 'existentialism,' but as an instance of the meaning of tradition in thought, its capacity to change and to develop, for the marvellous can never be expressed in outworn forms."
Times [London] Lit Sup p670 N 27 '48 1100w

MARCUS, ABRAHAM. Radio servicing; theory and practice. 775p il $5.95 Prentice-Hall 621.384 Radio receivers 48-9401

"A sequel to Elements of Radio, written for the radio serviceman. It deals with more advanced problems of radio servicing and types of radio repair and also explains radio theory in general." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 45:188 F 1 '49

"Well illustrated." L. A. Eales
+ Library J 73:1598 N 1 '48 30w

Reviewed by Julian Sohon
Library J 74:823 My 15 '49 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:103 N '49

MAREK, GEORGE RICHARD. Good housekeeping guide to musical enjoyment. 342p il $3.50 Rinehart
780.1 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation 49-6786

Contents: The enjoyment of music; Music at home; Children and music; The lighter vein; Composers—in general; The business side of music; Profiles of composers; A baker's dozen of orchestral compositions; Postscript. Index.

Kirkus 17:381 Jl 15 '49 120w

"Marek excels in advising timid novices how to listen to music, and maintains his skill through problems of music education. Interest wanes during summary biographies and symphonic program notes (which he earlier deprecates)." George Hanson
Library J 74:1604 O 15 '49 110w

"One opens another layman's music guide with misgivings, but this one turns out to be a literate and unpretentious effort. Mr. Marek, whose monthly magazine articles are here reprinted and amplified, is an example of a layman who is better at explaining the external mysteries of music than most musicians." Carter Harman
+ N Y Times p24 O 9 '49 320w

MARGOLD, MRS STELLA KAPLAN. Let's do business with Russia; why we should and how we can. 244p $3.50 Harper
382 U.S.—Commerce—Russia. Russia—Commerce—U.S. 48-9377

A study of the commercial relations of the United States and Russia. The author was for years an official of the Bureau of foreign and domestic commerce of the United States department of commerce. Her book which is intended for American businessmen, explains the importance of trade with Russia both for the present and for the future. List of commodities Russia has exported to the United States. Index.

Reviewed by Alexander Gerschenkron
Ann Am Acad 262:199 Mr '49 550w

Booklist 45:172 Ja 15 '49

Foreign Affairs 27:687 Jl '49 40w

Kirkus 16:548 O 1 '48 260w

"The author's experience and research have enabled her to write a practical and detailed account of the problems involved—from making the initial contact to getting the final signature after protracted negotiations—and how to solve them. . . Such optimism may be cheering in these troubled times. But it contributes nothing to the solution of the very real and very difficult political and economic differences between the key antagonists of our times." Harry Schwartz
N Y Times p6 N 28 '48 250w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ja 9 '49 120w

Wis Lib Bul 45:44 Mr '49

MARIANA, pseud. See Foster, M. C.

MARIS STELLA, SISTER. Frost for Saint Brigid, and other poems. 94p $1.75 Sheed
811 49-8552

A volume of poems by an American poet, many of them reprinted from America, Spirit and other magazines. The author after study at St Catherine's college in St Paul, and at Oxford, is now chairman of the English department at St Catherine's.

"If her poetry is not of the first order, it has qualities that touch the heart and give the pleasure one feels in seeing simple things done well." Marya Zaturenska
+ N Y Times p35 Je 19 '49 270w

"More important, of course, than actual reporting is Sister Maris Stella's power to recreate the excitement of the vision she describes. She is successful because she achieves that very difficult thing in poetry, a personal and varied pace—maintained particularly well in that most pace-setting of all forms, the sonnet. . . Least effective of Sister Maris Stella's poems are those where (perhaps anxious for a more profound insight) her glance pauses, wanders about the subject, becomes increasingly passive—relaxes into a gaze." Sighle Kennedy
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:37 Jl 16 '49 550w

MARITAIN, JACQUES. Existence and the existent; English version by Lewis Galantière and Gerald B. Phelan. 149p $3 Pantheon bks.
111 Existentialism 49-7062

"The word 'existentialism,' M. Sartre remarked recently, 'no longer signifies anything at all.' This is not because it means nothing but because it means too much. There is no existentialism, there are only existentialisms. Here now is a Christian version of existentialism from the point of view of the 'existentialist intellectualism' of Thomas Aquinas. The author, Jacques Maritain, universally recognized as the leading Roman Catholic philosopher of our time, recently relinquished his position as French Ambassador to the Vatican in order to teach philosophy at Princeton University. The reader will not find here Thomist doctrine dissected like a corpse by a professor of anatomy. Rather it is vividly presented by a philosopher unusually sensitive to the main currents of his time." N Y Times

Reviewed by M. W. Hess
Cath World 169:75 Ap '49 250w
Christian Science Monitor p15 My 12 '49 70w

"The translation is commendable throughout, preserving much of the flavor and all of the logical precision of the original in the much less pliable linguistic pattern of the English tongue." K. F. Reinhardt
+ Commonweal 49:545 Mr 11 '49 1400w

"Many non-Catholics have learned to admire Maritain's understanding of the crisis of our civilization, his defense of democracy, just law and human rights, yet they have been unable to follow him into the more obscure realms of logic and metaphysics. They will find the present volume a masterly combination of penetration and pertinence in these matters." Paul Ramsey
+ N Y Times p16 Ja 23 '49 800w

MARKEL, LESTER, and others. Public opinion and foreign policy. 227p il $3.50 Harper (pub. for the Council on foreign relations)

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations. Public opinion—U.S. 49-1714

"Orderly clarification of the need for telling people at home and abroad about American policy; presented by journalists and others concerned with informing the public. The President, Congress, the military agencies, and the State Department are evaluated as sources of information, and for the methods they use and the effectiveness of their techniques; the State Department is charged with greatest responsibility in making people understand and support foreign policy. The foreign policy itself is not discussed. No index." Booklist

"Neither Mr. Markel nor his collaborators, with the exception of Mr. Baldwin, seem to appreciate the full implications of their argument. They have not thought the problem through carefully enough to see clearly where the line should be drawn between what the Government should and should not do in the matter of information and propaganda. They have allowed their enthusiasm for certain aspects of foreign policy to obscure the basic issue to which government propaganda gives rise. On the descriptive and factual side, this volume presents much information of value and interest. What it lacks is a carefully thought-through theory of propaganda as an instrument of foreign policy under democratic conditions." H. L. Childs
+ — Ann Am Acad 264:129 Jl '49 750w
Booklist 45:275 Ap 15 '49
Chicago Sun p8X My 1 '49 50w

"The present book is a good introduction to the subject, and a good examination of the workings of the American Government as they concern public relations. . . It stands as a useful contribution to a tremendous subject." DeWitt John
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 My 31 '49 800w
Current Hist 16:289 My '49 30w
Foreign Affairs 27:506 Ap '49 110w

"Here is that rare bird—a symposium that is both useful and interesting."
+ Nation 168:424 Ap 9 '49 60w

"Details apart, this study leaves a certain uneasiness concerning its interpretation of the function of public opinion in a democracy. Almost nowhere is there a hint of the active and creative role which the public has traditionally been expected to play in the shaping of foreign policy." August Heckscher
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr 27 '49 600w

"The Council on Foreign Relations and the large group of collaborators who have gathered and written this book have made a contribution to the winning of the war for men's minds which is worth more than a dozen divisions. It may almost be worth more than an atomic bomb." E. D. Canham
+ N Y Times p5 Mr 20 '49 1100w

"By the time he has finished this admirably presented study, the reader will conclude that this is not a matter that can be safely neglected. If he does think that way, then that's exactly what Mr. Markel and his contributors want. For if there is one thing they believe it is that the people of the U.S. must know about their country's foreign policy, the reasons for it, the long-range aims involved, and the implementation of it as this proceeds. It is to be hoped that Americans in large numbers will read this expert study. When they do, they will know better than ever before both why and how we must plan to tell our story, and why, both at home and abroad, we must keep everlastingly—and efficiently—at it." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 28 '49 950w

"This brief book is an authoritative, highly factual, and trenchant critique of the failure of the State Department to develop and use the power of public opinion as an effective instrument of foreign policy either at home or abroad." F. R. Dulles
+ Sat R of Lit 32:15 My 7 '49 600w

Reviewed by Blair Bolles
Survey 85:622 N '49 650w
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:231 Je '49 280w

MARKHAM, REUBEN HENRY. Rumania under the Soviet yoke. 601p $4 Meador

949.8 Russia—Foreign relations—Rumania. Communism—Rumania. Rumania 49-8255

"There is no better informed or more responsible writer on Balkan affairs than Mr. Markham. He was a European correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor for 20 years, and for The Christian Century for a shorter period, and during the war he served as deputy director of the Office of War Information. He knows the people, the languages, the history and (so far as anyone can) the present conditions in the Balkan states. In the 600 pages of this volume he surveys Rumania before and during the Hitler regime and recites in detail the course of events since the beginning of Soviet domination." (Christian Century) No index.

"It is an ugly and ominous picture but, there is every reason to believe, a true one." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 66:467 Ap 13 '49 210w

"Mr. Markham's book is one of the strongest and best documented indictments of the system of political communism flourishing under the ever-lengthening shadow of Moscow. It is the most comprehensive study of Romania since Seton Watson's classic monograph, published in 1934. Incidentally, it points out all those actions and failures to act through which the western powers became coresponsible for Balkan developments since 1939. But it does not show how a change to the better could come about without war." E. S. P.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 26 '49 600w

"Condensed to a third of its volume, this would be a valuable account of Rumania's fate under a Soviet-inspired dictatorship. Unfortunately, the author is loquacious and repetitious. Despite this fault, the book is useful in furnishing the insight into the method with which a small minority was able to take over the country. Small episodes give valuable bits of genuine Balkan atmosphere, which mostly get lost in the reports of our newspapers and magazines." Max Fischer
— + Commonweal 50:153 My 20 '49 490w

MARKHAM, R. H.—Continued

"In spite of a horrific dust-jacket . . . this book deserves attention. Mr. Markham is a veteran among Anglo-Saxon correspondents in the Balkans. He has lived in the Balkan countries, spoken their languages, and made friends among their peoples for more decades than most Western writers on Balkan affairs have spent months. This does not make him infallible, but it entitles him to serious consideration." H. S. Watson

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 16 '49 750w

"The byline of R. H. Markham in The Christian Science Monitor has for decades preceded dispatches distinguished by three-dimensional reporting, compassion for human suffering, and engaging simplicity of style. Mr. Markham, for many years Balkan correspondent of one of the world's finest newspapers, has retained as a journalist his affection for the peasants of southeastern Europe that earlier moved him as a missionary educator. In this book he traces Soviet policy in Rumania and Communist tactical maneuvers step by step. . . Mr. Markham is at his best in recalling visits to peasant communities, where the conflict between the simple dignity of village life and Communist intrusion is shown in down-to-earth examples." Martin Ebon

+ N Y Times p3 My 1 '49 450w

MARKS, PERCY. Blair Marriman. 282p $3 Doubleday

49-7514

Character study of Blair Marriman, daughter of an Ohio schoolmaster and his pretty, selfish wife. Because of her mother's neurotic horror of sex, which she attempted to communicate to Blair, the girl grew up without the capacity for love. After she had driven her husband to suicide, she became a famous New York hostess, which ultimately brought her no hope, only the devastating knowledge that she was "condemned to pleasure."

Kirkus 16:645 D 15 '48 140w

"The author's penetration into his characters is shallow, and their motivation adolescent. Suggest caution." Scott Adams

Library J 74:60 Ja 1 '49 50w

Reviewed by Philip Hewitt-Myring

N Y Times p22 Mr 13 '49 70w

"I fear this tale of Blair's slow progress toward the crowning realization of her diamond-studded desolation, slickly constructed though it is, is an outworn theme and unprofitable. The cut-and-dried method deprives the book of the only thing it might have offered—a really live, complex study of a woman, psychically crippled, starving herself in the midst of plenty. This is not achieved in the present account of Blair Marriman's loveless, golden life." Edmund Fuller

— Sat R of Lit 32:28 Mr 19 '49 550w

MARKUS, JOHN, and ZELUFF, VIN. Handbook of industrial electronic circuits. 272p $6.50 McGraw

621.384132 Electric circuits. Electronics

48-11082

"Manual on 433 industrial electronic circuits for practical use, giving a diagram for each circuit and description of how it works, performance, characteristics and applications." (Library J) Indexes.

Booklist 45:189 F 1 '49

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:1824 D 15 '48 30w

MAROGER, JACQUES. Secret formulas and techniques of the masters; tr. from the French by Eleanor Beckham. 200p pl $4.50 Studio

751 Painting 48-11821

"Ever since the knowledge of the great painting techniques of the Renaissance was so mysteriously lost, about the end of the seventeenth century, artists have been trying vainly to rediscover the methods of such masters as Titian, Rubens, Rembrandt and Velasquez, as well as of their predecessors—Jan Van Eyck, Memling, Giovanni Bellini and others. . . This book is written for those artists today who are still haunted by the apparently unattainable perfection of the great masters, and it is hoped that many of them may find the clue that will lead them to a realization of their aims." (Introd) The author was former technical director of the Louvre laboratory. Bibliography. Index.

"Here is a book which will intrigue the layman and be of real help to the present-day artist as he tries to capture the know-how of the past. Recommended. Of possible use to technical departments as well as art collections." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 74:1029 Jl '49 140w

"Maroger has affected a number of living artists who use his patented paints, but neither he nor they can evoke much enthusiasm for his 'discoveries' of lost 'secrets.'" Lincoln Kirstein

— New Repub 120:28 Ap 18 '49 70w

"This is not a handbook; rather, it is a lucidly expounded history of methods and formulas heavily buttressed by evidence. Mr. Maroger postulates (and here a good many readers will be unwilling to follow him) that no good painting was done after Rubens's formulas were lost upon the death of his last surviving pupil. There are many excellent reproductions." L. R. Sander

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:33 My 7 '49 110w

MAROTTA, GIUSEPPE. Treasure of Naples; tr. from the Italian by Frances Frenaye [sketches by James Alexander]. 254p $3 Dutton

914.57 Naples—Social life and customs

49-10438

"The treasure of Naples, according to its author, is the endurance of its people in the face of poverty and disaster. To illustrate this, the author looks back to his childhood in the miserable but colorful alleys of Naples. From his memories he draws a series of vignettes of the inhabitants of the city, showing their little weaknesses, their goodness, shrewdness and courage." Library J

"In effectiveness the sketches vary. At their best, they are poignant testimony to the appealing human qualities sometimes hidden in—or by—individual eccentricity. At their far-fetched, 'mythological' poorest they convey only an overwhelming parochialism. These latter pieces, however, are few, and appear near the end of the book, as though the author were himself, aware of their inferior quality."

+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 S 22 '49 420w

"Personal in its interest and affection, one questions whether it will carry on this side."

Kirkus 17:348 Jl 1 '49 120w

"These little sketches, some of which are hilarious and some pathetic, are skillfully drawn, and the restraint with which they are presented makes them highly effective. Recommended." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 74:1089 Ag '49 130w

"Mr. Marotta's sketches of Naples, its phosphorescent inhabitants, its immemorial odors, and its magnificent seascape, are as good, in their fleeting and anecdotal way, as anything done in that particular genre. They are modest, intimate, warm, and written with that Neapolitan (and possibly Second Avenue) fondness for the intermingled tear and laugh." Alfred Hayes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S 4 '49 550w

"Frances Frenaye achieves a triumph of the translator's art—in a less mercurial tongue she catches the luster of the original Italian. Indeed, the only regrettable note in 'The Treasure of Naples' is its title, which hints at a night course in adult education, like a Baedeker or a museum brochure. This book is nothing of the sort. . . 'The Treasure of Naples' has a depth that more pretentious writers vainly strive for. Effortlessly, it seems, Mr. Marotta attains the goal of the story teller. His readers become marionettes as willingly manipulated as his characters. He delights us and he moves us in the amiable tradition of Chaucer and Boccaccio. And he captures the enormous sadness and madness that are Naples." J. H. Burns

+ N Y Times p3 S 4 '49 800w

San Francisco Chonicle p28 O 23 '49 300w

MARQUAND, JOHN PHILLIPS. Point of no return. 559p $3.50 Little

49-7556

Novel describing some decisive days in the life of Charles Gray. At the end of the week he expects to learn if he is to be promoted to the vice-presidency of his New York bank; but in the meantime business takes him to his home town in Massachusetts where he reviews his past life.

"I admire the writing, and have been regaled by its satire of New York bankers. In Charles Gray, the hero, Mr Marquand has given us a most sympathetic delineation of what a middle aged man feels like a year after his return from war." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 183:82 Mr '49 500w

Booklist 45:186; 210 F 1 '49; F 15 '49

"This is a thoughtful, well written, if somewhat slow-paced novel, shrewdly critical of modern life. . . But despite the technical excellence of this story, something is missing. Perhaps the keen observations are insufficiently synthesized. Perhaps the book itself grows from a negative view, and so the satire, though convincing in detail, somehow falls short of the mark." M. R. Grennan

+ — Cath World 169:71 Ap '49 390w

"John P. Marquand's new novel is the shrewdest picture of American middleclass life that has appeared since Sinclair Lewis' 'Main Street.'" Emmett Dedmon

+ Chicago Sun p8X Mr 13 '49 800w

"Some of Mr. Marquand's characters and situations are more slick than solid. What is it, then, that differentiates his book from the prefabricated fables assembled in the celluloid factories of Southern California? It is the biting accuracy of what we might call his 'peripheral' vision, an uncanny aptitude for catching talk, attitudes, people, and events on the move, out of the corner of his eye. Like the lava-flow over Pompeii that petrified a whole city's activities to the future delight of archaeologists, Mr. Marquand, with his camera eye, and dictaphonic ear, has caught all of us flexing our cliches, and mouthing the tell-tale jargon of our respective castes and crafts." Theodore Kalem

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 10 '49 1250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '49

"The aftertaste that remains is that of melancholic depression, at least to this reader. If life would be nothing but a fight for social success, it would not be worth living. As no other ideas and ideals exist among the persons of this novel than the desire for money and social position, the loss of them is an irreparable disaster. . . I am sure this desolate picture of American life of the recent past is very one-sided, but taken with this reservation, Mr. Marquand's presentation gives a dense and well-documented picture of a completely materialistic world. The author is a great craftsman, not a poet. . . This book ends a chapter in literary history: it is the realization of Zola's program for the social novel, manufactured to its last consequences with the most expert and minute skill." Max Fischer

+ — Commonweal 49:568 Mr 18 '49 700w

"I like this better than anything Marquand has done for sometime, yes, better than So Little Time in many ways."

+ Kirkus 16:642 D 15 '48 260w

"The style is that of a skilled master of the craft of writing. Recommended." C. W. Roth

+ Library J 74:312 F 15 '49 100w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p4 N 25 '49 240w

Reviewed by Margaret Marshall

Nation 168:363 Mr 26 '49 1000w

"For well over 300 pages, Charles muses on his early life in a small town near Boston. While the hero dreams the reader can sleep; his reverie is loaded with detail that might prove invaluable to the future historian, but for the contemporary novel reader its familiarity will obscure its possible significance. . . The novel is compromised because Marquand never presents his subject; more precisely, he avoids focusing his subject by formulating attitudes toward it. One has the uncomfortable impression that the reader is supposed to assume them—that is, make good the author's omission." John Farrelly

New Repub 120:24 Ap 11 '49 1150w

"'Point of No Return' shows no new development in Mr. Marquand's art, but it does reinforce his reputation as a first-class satirist—probably the best of our generation. No writer can extract a wryer humor from the irritants of daily existence, or can play a wintrier sunlight over the destinies of his characters. Even love, in his books, is warmer to recollect than to experience. . . Are the notes of irony, of tranquil pessimism, of mild compassion sometimes too austerely sustained? And the Marquand hero—kindly, ruminative, unaggressive, frustrated, loyal, so poorly equipped for battle against the modern world's implacable insecurity—is he not also just a shade low spirited? . . But the banking episodes are magnificent." James Hilton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Mr 6 '49 1250w

"'Point of No Return' is marvelously clever in design and execution, and it is a pleasure to read, if in some respects it is painful to think about." Maxwell Geismar

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 6 '49 1000w

Reviewed by Brendan Gill

New Yorker 25:96 Mr 19 '49 1200w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Mr 6 '49 1800w

"This is, it seems to me, the best of John Marquand's books since 'The Late George Apley' and, for me, he has done in John Gray, Charles's father, a portrait as good in every way as he did of Apley. Here is the delicate dissection, the evocation of aura, the alert, unfailing eye for the idiosyncrasy which has become an integral part of the individual, which has marked his best work, and which has made it often an uncomfortably clear mirror of our time. His quiet irony plays over this novel constantly, clarifying the quiet, occasionally melancholy passages of the sections which re-create Charles Gray's youth, and sharpening, pointing delicately and clearly the tensions and the desperately-followed formulae of the man he has become." John Woodburn

+ Sat R of Lit 32:11 Mr 5 '49 1150w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p8B Mr 13 '49 650w

Time 53:104 Mr 7 '49 4400w

"Mr. Marquand has never been so beguilingly entertaining as in Point of No Return; yet it has more depth than some of his work."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p805 D 9 '49 300w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:164 Je '49 300w

Wis Lib Bul 45:66 Ap '49

"Since so much has been written about this excellent book, little need be said about it here. I am on record here and elsewhere as an ardent admirer of Mr. Marquand as a brilliant social reporter of the American scene, an unfailingly skilful literary craftsman, a true novelist who does not neglect to tell a good story in his anxiety to express his satiric discontent with modern American life." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 38:766 summer '49 230w

MARRIOTT, ALICE LEE. Valley below; with drawings by Margaret Lefranc. 243p $3 Univ. of Okla. press

917.89 New Mexico—Social life and customs 49-7779

The author of Maria, The Potter of San Ildefonso (Book Review Digest 1948) here tells how she and her friend Martha, first rented, then bought a three-room adobe home in Round Valley near Santa Fe. The story of their experiences with wild life (bees, mice, and skunks), with a well and its pump, with native workmen and neighbors, is told with candor and good humor.

Booklist 45:240 Mr 15 '49

"Casual and friendly, witty and frank, it is wholly delightful and full of intriguing glimpses of a fascinating land." Kimmis Hendrick

+ Christian Science Monitor p24 Mr 18 '49 270w

"Presented as human anecdote rather than sociological study, the 'problems' of the area lie quietly implicit in the conversations and the peoples. The Indian reserve of Maria of San Ildefonso, the bouts with quicksand in the well, the temperamental Siamese cats, the attentions of Maclovio the handyman, are typical of the entertainment which this will provide for women readers. Recommended." M. E. Monroe

+ Library J 74:375 Mr 1 '49 130w

"Miss Marriott has an observing eye, a sense of understanding for the pattern of life, a workmanlike if occasionally too cute style, and knows how to convey her growing affection for people and ways and places. Miss Lefranc's drawings reveal her as no less exact an observer, able with a free-flowing and expressive line to delineate the essentials of a unique and lovely landscape. Having myself on more than one occasion wandered in and around Santa Fe and the valleys of its Sangre de Cristo Mountains, I was able to experience afresh the clear outlines, the bright hazeless sky, the long vistas and even to recognize the exact spot where the artist did her drawings." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ap 3 '49 550w

"There are really two halves to 'The Valley Below.' The first is . . . simply the old, innocents-in-the country story with a New Mexican background. . . The latter half of the book treats of the natives, their personalities and customs. It is a warm, discerning account, full of color and understanding, for Miss Marriott is no longer straining to laugh at herself." Hal Borland

+ — N Y Times p20 Je 12 '49 320w

"Pleasantly thoughtful, amusingly told story. . . When you're done with the book you realize that you've read not just the story of two women and their house but the story of the whole Valley and the people who live in it and of their way of life—which is, in little, the story of the whole culture of the Southwest. To accomplish this without seeming to thrust it down the reader's throat takes some doing, but Miss Marriott is equal to the task." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 1 '49 800w

"I know of no book on the Southwest which reveals so warmly or so understandingly how the Spaniard or 'native' lives, as does Miss Marriott's. . . With the skill and warmth of a brilliant novelist, Miss Marriott brings to intimate life an unknown part of the American world." J. A. Brandt

+ Sat R of Lit 32:51 My 14 '49 750w

Wis Lib Bul 45:65 Ap '49

MARSH, IRVING T., and EHRE, EDWARD, eds. Best sports stories, 1949 edition. 352p il $3 Dutton

796 Sports (45-35124)

"Newspaper and magazine sports articles and pictures for the year 1948. Lists the year's champions in all major sports, the 1948 Olympic champions, and gives brief sketches of the sports writers whose work is included." Booklist

Booklist 45:309 My 15 '49

"Excellent collection, almost ranking with the 1947 edition, which still tops them all."

+ Kirkus 17:131 Mr 1 '49 100w

"An excellent collection of news, features, short stories and pictures, with 1948 records of all sports. But not as complete as The World Almanac." R. W. Henderson

Library J 74:737 My 1 '49 30w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 My 8 '49 320w

Reviewed by Rex Lardner

N Y Times p10 My 15 '49 250w

MARSH, JOHN THOMPSON. Introduction to textile bleaching. 512p il $6.50 Wiley

677.1 Textile fibers. Bleaching 49-7995

"The present work is concerned with the occurrence and properties of the various textile fibres and the methods adopted for their purification. . . The chief aim is to help the younger technologists, particularly those just entering the textile industry. It is assumed that the reader will have a fair knowledge of chemistry; nevertheless, every effort has been made to present the subject-matter as simply as possible so that anyone connected with the bleaching, dyeing and finishing sections of the textile industry will find it helpful and informative." (Pref) Bibliography. Indexes.

Booklist 45:308 My 15 '49

"An excellent treatise on auxiliaries used in preprocessing is included. The best discussion of the hypochlorite bleach ever published is the main topic of the book. . . This is a book which should be on the shelves of all textile firms regardless of their major interest." J. J. McDonald

+ Chem & Eng N 27:2224 Ag 1 '49 170w

MARSH, NGAIO. Wreath for Rivera. 294p $2.75 Little 49-3021

Detective story.

Booklist 45:337 Je 1 '49

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun My 13 '49 140w

"Slow starter but a honey when on its way."

+ Kirkus 17:97 F 15 '49 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 My 1 '49 180w

"This problem is played against a background of London high society, viewed a trifle more critically than has been Miss Marsh's wont. Even an old square like me might object that her handling of jazz musicians is not nearly so knowledgeable as her earlier treatments of painters and actors. But this is a slight flaw in a succulent novel." A. B.

+ — N Y Times p31 My 8 '49 200w

"Superior item. . . The really alert reader may guess the identity of the murderer and his method of operation a little before the hero gets around to disclosing them, but Miss Marsh's book is still a most agreeable mixture of comedy and homicide, and it is highly recommended."

+ New Yorker 25:115 My 7 '49 110w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 15 '49 170w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 32:56 My 14 '49 40w

Springf'd Republican p7C Je 12 '49 80w

MARSH, RONALD JAMES. Irene. 314p $2.75 Houghton

49-8594

"First novel by a young British writer. . . George, a conventional young bank clerk with a respectable middle class background, impulsively marries Irene, the seductive but rather common daughter of a local fisherman. The growth of physical attraction into love is vitiated by the discovery of Irene's former liaison with a disreputable spiv by the name of Marks. George's self-righteousness prevents him from helping Irene to overcome her sense of inferiority and she finally returns to the man who neither loves nor disapproves of her. George rescues Irene from Marks, but not until she has becomed involved in theft and murder." Canadian Forum

"The reader's emotions remain uninvolved in spite of Irene's seductiveness, and the final impression of the narrative is undoubtedly one of thinness." M. E. McFarlane
— Canadian Forum 29:24 Ap '49 180w

— Kirkus 17:118 Mr 1 '49 160w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor
Library J 74:663 Ap 15 '49 80w

Reviewed by Simon Harcourt-Smith
New Statesman & Nation 36:309 O 9 '48 90w

"Mr. Marsh is a young English novelist who does not perhaps entirely plumb the emotional strains between his young people but who does succeed in giving a realistic picture of the semi-underworld background which Irene can't escape."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Je 5 '49 230w

"Novels with an all-for-love theme have usually fared better in a Romance language (preferably French) than in English, and this first effort is a case in point." C. V. Terry
— N Y Times p24 My 8 '49 190w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 32:38 Jl 2 '49 180w

"The story has suspense, but the characters and their backgrounds, though never entirely unconvincing, lack vividness and originality."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p537 S 25 '48 150w

MARSHAK, IL'IA IAKOVLEVICH (M. ILIN, pseud), and SEGAL, E. A. Giant at the crossroads; the story of ancient civilization [tr. by Beatrice Kinkead]. 224p $2.50 Int. pubs.

901 Civilization, Ancient 48-9656

A philosophical study of the emergence of man from the mists of pre-history, his slow development of civilized ways of living, and his course thru history to the fall of the Roman empire. Index.

"Man's struggle to emerge from the mass and walk in the clear sunlight of individualism comes thrillingly alive in this book of ideas. . . Anyone from 9 to 90 who is ready for this book will enjoy it." Helen Swartz
+ Library J 74:315 F 15 '49 80w

"An ingenious exercise in dialectics."
New Yorker 24:95 F 5 '49 80w

"It would be read with interest by many adults and is, in places at least, beautifully written, or translated. It seems to this reviewer that it may be too philosophical and, sometimes, too vague to be of interest to the average adolescent reader." R. A. B.
+ Sat R of Lit 32:44 F 12 '49 110w

MARSHALL, BRUCE. To every man a penny. 345p $3 Houghton

49-11479

Story of a gentle French priest from before the First World war to 1948.

Booklist 46:98 N 15 '49

"Dante realistically put some priests in hell, some in purgatory, some in heaven. Marshall embeds them here in a gooey fudge confection. That doesn't mean they have his complete approbation; but even his irony is cloyingly coy." Mary Sandrock
— Cath World 170:233 D '49 290w

"Like most of Marshall's recent novels, this chronicle of the life of a French priest is a rich, if not too tidy, package of humor, pathos, 'atmosphere,' memorable character and shrewd social comment." Jex Martin
Chicago Sun p27 N 22 '49 370w

"You will have an exhilarating and purifying experience, in a calm sort of way, when you read Bruce Marshall's latest book, 'To Every Man a Penny.' It's refreshing." Betty Swords
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p45 D 4 '49 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '49

"Bruce Marshall writes only one book about one man. This is the best orchestration he has yet done of his theme. . . The book is tremendously sentimental, but it carries a charity and integrity that make it a book that is worth reading. Marshall is no great novelist, but he is often a good writer, often a moving one, and he knows what it can mean to be a Christian." William Pfaff
+ — Commonweal 51:163 N 11 '49 450w

Kirkus 17:482 S 1 '49 290w

"Mr. Marshall's ecclesiastical, satirical vein, so often worked, seems to be wearing a bit thin. The humor is sometimes mercilessly repetitious and (as in the case of an incredible American Cardinal) hackneyed; the satire seems tired. The Abbé, though an appealing figure, is no Father Malachy. The book has quality however and is recommended for purchase." E. F. Walbridge
+ — Library J 74:1602 O 15 '49 100w

"It must be said that Bruce Marshall, who writes good books, will write his best book only after he sets aside his clerical jokes—the bishops in the swimming-pool—together with the splendor of the Church's texts, and follows some abbé Gaston without distraction, holding himself close to the heart he creates." Gouverneur Paulding
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 O 23 '49 850w

"There are fragments here of what could have been an amusing book, and at least sufficient knowledge of the priestly life to provide an interesting one. But a few chapters of pure whimsey . . . are overwhelmed by the chapters of crackerbox or bistro indignation and the chapters of mere coyness. . . Mr. Marshall has lived for a long time in France, and he knows the names of the Métro stations. But his France—for all his shadowy reminders of St. Sulpice and St. Clotilde—is no more authoritative than the France of Elliot Paul, or that of Gertrude Stein." Albert Guerard, Jr.
— N Y Times p50 O 30 '49 550w

"Tracing the progress of a gentle and individualistic Parisian priest through the years since 1914, Mr. Marshall succeeds in producing a neat fusion of quiet wit and uncomplicated morality. . . Mr. Marshall's attitude toward the Catholic Church is described by his publisher as 'sympathetic but unconciliatory,' which seems accurate."
+ New Yorker 25:110 O 29 '49 100w

"Bruce Marshall mellows but never becomes bland. You'll still savor the dash of tabasco that flavored his early books. On one page he is writing about time and eternity with the grace of a Cavalier poet; on the next, he is describing the allure of mannequins in the manner of a wisecracking columnist. . . It is writing that delights, first and always, and one hesitates to weigh it with moral implications, yet, often, it is writing of this kind that 'ploughs the spirit to fruitfulness' more than edifying volumes written with that end in view." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p30 N 20 '49 800w

"It is a touching, whimsical portrait, a little over-rich in its prefabricated prose style, a little naive in its plot maneuvers, but convincing and miserably correct in the impression it conveys of life among all of us from Sarajevo to the Berlin Blockade. There are some who will think the side excursions injure the story's unity and impact, but history itself is the book's only unity, and the trips into the thoughts of the Cardinal, the statesman, and other stock characters help rather than hinder the effect Mr. Marshall is attempting to produce." Thomas Sugrue
+ Sat R of Lit 32:17 D 24 '49 550w

"Mr. Marshall is much preoccupied with goodness, with priests and with churchly satire, and

MARSHALL, BRUCE—Continued
he uses all his writing skills with amazing deftness to preach a lesson of his own." L. S. Munn
+ Springf'd Republican p8C N 20 '49 300w

"Abbé Gaston is so clearly on the side of the angels that his worst enemy is none of those that Novelist Marshall set up, but Novelist Marshall himself. In To Every Man a Penny, goodness becomes a cloying surfeit, and sentiment runs over into Parisian bathos."
— Time 54:81 O 31 '49 280w

"Slow paced and with less humor than his previous books, but with considerable understanding of human nature and more religion."
+ Wis Lib Bul p9 N '49

MARSHALL, CHARLES EDMUND. Colloid chemistry of the silicate minerals. 195p il $5.80 Academic press
549.6 Silicates. Colloids 49-4991

"A monographic survey of what is known at the present time about the colloid chemistry of clays and other minerals containing a major proportion of silicon. Although it is the first volume published in a series which will contain chiefly monographs on topics in agriculture, it is of interest in the ceramic industry and other industries which use clays, as well as in agriculture. The presentation stresses the basic knowledge and experimental results and offers practically nothing on applications. The chapters are accompanied by extensive reference lists, to which statements in the text are keyed. The author is Professor of Soils in the University of Missouri, and is well known for his contributions to the knowledge of the clays." N Y New Tech Bks

"All the pertinent references, some 300, are brought together and the whole should serve as a source book for future students of clays. The only danger is that by being clear, simple, and laconic the author might lull his reader into a false sense of understanding. It is probable, however, that the reader in his enthusiasm will be inspired to go back into the literature." S. B. Hendricks
+ Chem & Eng N 27:2954 O 10 '49 320w
N Y New Tech Bks 34:76 S '49

MARSHALL, DEAN. Dig for a treasure; il. by Christine Price. 188p $2.50 Dutton 49-11007

Continues the story begun in The Invisible Island (Book Review Digest 1948). The Lennox family, searching for a home, discover it in the same town where the Guthries live. There is a mystery about buried treasure and a queen's necklace, lost for three hundred years. For grades four to six.

Booklist 46:69 O 15 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun N 19 '49 40w

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 13 '49 210w

"The line drawings by Christine Price are unappealing, but the story is a good one."
+ — Kirkus 17:552 O 1 '49 110w

"Lively incident, a zestful spirit, and true-to-life characters make this a story boys and girls will thoroughly enjoy."
+ Library J 74:1538 O 15 '49 20w

"Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson
+ Library J 74:1918 D 15 '49 70w

"It's hard to imagine any reader from 8 to 12 who wouldn't get a lot of excitement and fun from reading this book." R. A. G.
+ N Y Times p24 N 13 '49 150w
+ New Yorker 25:178 D 3 '49 60w
San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 27 '49 80w

"While the plot bears a resemblance to other children's treasure hunting tales, there is enough originality in incident and characterization to make this an unusually good book of its kind." R. H. V.
+ Sat R of Lit 32:26 N 12 '49 140w

"Fourth to sixth graders who enjoyed the first story will enjoy this sequel, although it is a delightful imaginative story in its own right."
+ Wis Lib Bul p11 N '49

MARSHALL, EDISON. Gypsy sixpence. 371p $3 Farrar, Straus
49-11082

"Story of hate, love, revenge and compassion, laid in India and Zanzibar of the 1830's. . . A half-gypsy illegitimate son of an English gentleman, expert in oriental languages, attached to his brother's regiment in India, is betrayed by his brother when both love the colonel's daughter, and supposedly is killed. His search to identify his betrayer takes him through amazing adventures, slavery, rise to influence and to a unique revenge." Library J

"A multi-patterned story, sufficiently strenuous to satisfy his audience."
Kirkus 17:406 Ag 1 '49 160w

"A top-notch, lusty novel, told with unflagging interest." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:1202 S 1 '49 130w

" 'Gypsy Sixpence' is redolent of musk, baksheesh, kismet and kisses."
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 O 16 '49 110w

"Somehow the suspense bogs down in a slough of conversation about pukka sahibs and Gypsy revenge." Richard Match
N Y Times p28 N 6 '49 180w

"The story is intelligently conceived and superbly told."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:34 N 26 '49 250w
Springf'd Republican p9D D 4 '49 190w

MARSHALL, MARGUERITE MOOERS (MRS S. W. DEAN). Wilderness nurse. 269p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.
49-9967

An unsuccessful case made Denise Burke decide to abandon her profession of nursing. During a vacation at a Quebec fishing camp she nursed a sick guide and went with him to the understaffed district hospital. There she realized she could not give up her profession and was easily persuaded by young Doctor Ned to stay on as a wilderness nurse. Her love life was more difficult to settle, for timid Dr Ned adored her and Denise still worshipped Dr Curt back in New York. An infected ankle proved to be the force that settled her problem.

Booklist 46:141 D 15 '49
Kirkus 17:256 My 15 '49 110w

"Incidents are swift-moving, interesting, possible. Characters rather stereotyped, and every man falls in love with Denise at first sight. Girls eager for romance and who are rather poor readers would enjoy it. Second string as to writing and for many libraries not up to standard." J. F. Carter
— + Library J 74:1107 Ag '49 90w

MARSHALL, ROBERT K. Little Squire Jim. 255p $2.75 Duell
49-8183

A story of North Carolinian mountain folks and particularly the story of the boy, James Braxton Boyden, son of Big Jim Boyden and a Catholic mother. Left an orphan Little Jim lives a lonely, secluded life, emerges only to run into trouble, and finally dies, "killed" as his neighbors believe, in the family tradition.

Booklist 45:242 Mr 15 '49

"Marshall has flashes of brilliance in his writing, in his perception, but the book is difficult, elusive reading. In it lies promise of fulfillment, which later work may achieve."
+ Kirkus 17:37 Ja 15 '49 230w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 74:312 F 15 '49 100w

"An altogether delightful book. It has about it the timeless charm and the humor and the vigor of one of the old ballads which are still sung in the mountains of Virginia and North Carolina. Its distinctive quality is peculiarly Southern; but having said that it is necessary to add that the quality is at once more universal and more localized than is suggested by the abused adjective 'Southern.'" Coleman Rosenberger

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Mr 27 '49 460w

"Mr. Marshall portrays deftly the life and feelings of his shy, mountain people. He includes in his narrative many aspects of their life and lore, and his rendering of mountain speech is effective and authentic. Only occasionally does his obvious affection for his characters lead him into sentimentality." N. K. Burger

+ — N Y Times p22 Ap 10 '49 250w

"A tale like this can't be described. (Try restating the story of 'Barb'ry Allan' in prose some time.) To get the feel of this novel, you have to read it, and become part of the spell that the author spins. Because Mr. Marshall can do that to you if you give him the chance. It's going to be interesting to see what he does next. He's an able and poetic writer and whatever he writes should be worth while." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 24 '49 700w

"Folktales of surpassing merit are seldom come by in these days when the sex and sadism novels predominate. But here is a folktale that revives one's faith in contemporary American fiction. It is the story of extraordinary vitality and of depth sufficient to invite the attention of the most discerning of fiction readers. . . A striking first novel." V. P. Hass

+ Sat R of Lit 32:22 Ap 16 '49 650w

Wis Lib Bul 45:88 My '49

MARSHALL, MRS ROSAMOND VAN DER ZEE. Celeste. 242p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

49-2445

"A story of California in the early 1900's. . . An ex-Barbary Coast queen running an honest (?) gambling house has a beautiful daughter who knows nothing of her mother's life and history. The mother's hopes for a happy marriage for her innocent daughter go glimmering as intrigues over oil lands and a gambling fanatic tangle up the story and the old lady gives faked oil leases on her property in return for cash with which to gamble." Springf'd Republican

"It is difficult to understand why anyone should want to read this one, but there appears to be some difference of opinion on that point as indicated by the figures quoted in the jacket blurb which asserts that Kitty, an earlier novel by Miss Marshall, has sold over 2,000,000 copies. . . It is unhappily probable that another million readers are awaiting Celeste with anticipation."

— Cath World 169:319 Jl '49 110w

Chicago Sun p8X Je 12 '49 110w

Kirkus 17:95 F 15 '49 170w

"Rosamond Marshall writes of those booming California days with zest and infectious appreciation for the contrasts between their crudities and luxuries. Avoiding subtleties, she resolves everybody's problems in handsome style. Marshall fans will find 'Celeste' robust entertainment." Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p30 Ap 24 '49 260w

"Many local characters lend color to the excitement and opulence the author creates in writing about Southern California of almost half a century ago." S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p5D Je 5 '49 180w

MARTIENSSEN, ANTHONY K. Hitler and his admirals. 275p il maps $4 Dutton

940.545943 Hitler, Adolf. Germany. Navy. World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations

49-7044

"Martienssen was responsible for the publication of the captured minutes of the so-called 'Führer Conferences' (issued in limited form but later printed in the current issue of Brassey's Naval Annual). In this book he has related the evidence of these documents to that of the texts and evidence given in the Nuremberg trials." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

Reviewed by H. A. DeWeerd

Am Hist R 54:878 Jl '49 900w

"As a capably written, authoritative chronicle of Germany's second failure to comprehend and use sea power, drawn from the Germans' own records, it is a valuable addition to the layman's library on war strategy. And it is at the same time an eloquent chapter in the history of dictators who thought they could overrule the wisdom of advisers and bend the laws of logistics to their own willful designs." DeWitt John

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 6 '49 850w

Kirkus 16:635 D 1 '48 110w

"With an index, photographs and maps, it is a generally useful history for all libraries." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 74:56 Ja 1 '49 130w

"Mr. Martienssen does not seem quite able to decide whether he is writing naval history or just publishing documents. There is, however, rich material here, especially for the study of Hitler's qualities as a war leader and of the character of the leaders of the German Services, notably of Raeder and Dönitz."

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 N 9 '48 180w

Reviewed by A. J. P. Taylor

New Statesman & Nation 36:424 N 13 '48 800w

"Martienssen tells the tortuous tale of German maritime frustration with ample incident if with little polish. He is better on handling documents than he is on interpreting them. But the documents are highly revealing—and so are the photographs that go with the text, some of which, significantly, show the stiffly-posed German naval chiefs wearing service caps that are distinctly too large for them." W. H. Hale

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Ja 2 '49 1900w

"Martienssen has done in the naval field what Liddell Hart did for the Army in 'The German Generals Talk.' The result is a more 'official' book than Hart's, since it depends upon documents for its validity. It is a book of broader scope, since it presents a panorama of the war at sea as seen by the top command of the German Navy; yet it is a somewhat less varied volume, since its chief characters are only three." H. W. Baldwin

N Y Times p6 Ja 2 '49 1050w

New Yorker 24:70 Ja 29 '49 100w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 32:18 Ja 22 '49 550w

"Mr. Martienssen's book lacks the background against which to see the immediate events, and gives the impression that the Nazi leaders planned their campaigns without reference to any settled strategic aims. It is doubtful if this is true, although they may well have misconceived the principles that govern command of the sea. In short, as a popular and readable summary of the documents, the book is excellently done; but the material is too limited to provide anything like a broad and reasoned survey of German naval policy." G. P. Griggs

+ — Spec 181:638 N 12 '48 800w

"A compact and interesting book. It is particularly valuable for its underlining of German attitudes quite apart from the naval war: Hitler's fury at Italy's untimely invasion of Greece, his fear of U.S. opinion, the lack of understanding in Germany of what was happening in other countries."

+ Time 53:86 Ja 10 '49 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p675 D 4 '48 240w

MARTIN, CHARLES JAMES, and D'AMICO, VICTOR EDMOND. How to make modern jewelry [pub. for] the Museum of modern art. (Art for beginners ser) 96p il $2.50; pa $1.50 Simon & Schuster

739.27 Jewelry 49-9677

"Opening section deals with purchasing supplies and equipment and there are tables of

MARTIN, C. J.—Continued
gauges and lists of sources for purchases. Projects of varying complications are excellently described. Words, diagrams, and illustrations instruct the reader in soldering, annealing, wire drawing, chain making, and the like." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:394 Jl 15 '49

"On a high level as craft books go; the series should be exceedingly useful. Recommended." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 74:1822 D 1 '49 130w

MARTIN, DAHRIS BUTTERWORTH (MRS HARRY SHOKLER). Adventure in Ireland; il. by Flora Nash Demuth. 178p $2.50 Messner
49-8103

Katherine Scott's parents were dead, and she was sick and tired of boarding school. So from Belfast she went to live with her grandparents in a thatched cottage in county Kerry. This story for girls of ten to fourteen describes her adventures while learning to love the country.

Booklist 45:321 My 15 '49

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p4 Je 30 '49 330w

"Not very much happens but enough to carry the local color, and the people are real and alive. . . Readers will find this picture of life in County Kerry and the Blaskets enchanting, and the brogue of some of the dialogue adds—rather than detracts—from the charm."
+ Kirkus 17:61 F 1 '49 160w

"A little typed in character but good reading, nevertheless, and a book to be welcomed wherever there is a love of Eire." Mary Strang
+ Library J 74:669 Ap 15 '49 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Je 26 '49 180w

"The story lacks the informative detail and fresh spontaneity of earlier 'Adventure in—' books, but it provides plenty of action and some mildly amusing incidents." N. B. B.
+ — N Y Times p26 Ap 10 '49 140w

Wis Lib Bul 45:91 My '49

MARTIN, EDWIN M. Allied occupation of Japan; pub. under the auspices of the Am. inst. of Pacific relations, incorporated. 155p $3 Stanford univ. press

940.5352 Japan—History—Allied occupation, 1945-
48-9639

A compilation of international declarations and official directives, regarding the occupation of Japan, with analysis of each, and description of their workings. Index.

Reviewed by E. P. Reubens
Am Econ R 39:1309 D '49 700w

"The author has rendered a great service to students who wish to have a very readable and compact book for understanding the basic facts on the occupation of Japan. It is only hoped that when all the tumult and shouting are over, the author will give us the benefit of his wisdom and experience in 'an appraisal of the successes and failures of the Allied occupation of Japan' which he tantalizingly tells us in his preface was not the aim of the present book." W. B. Ballis
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:1073 O '49 300w

Reviewed by P. H. Taylor
Ann Am Acad 262:195 Mr '49 400w

Booklist 45:176 Ja 15 '49

Current Hist 16:101 F '49 50w

Foreign Affairs 27:693 Jl '49 20w

"Mr. Martin makes a good, concise, well-balanced statement of the problems of Japanese reconstruction, particularly the economic problems, but in confining himself to exposition he leaves the reader with the belief that the problems are being dealt with in consonance with the original purposes of the occupation, which is demonstrably not so. Mr. Martin has produced a good book of record, for reference purposes, but something more is needed." Nathaniel Peffer
+ — Nation 167:701 D 18 '48 700w

"Its value largely is that of a reference file. It is one of the many valuable studies of the Pacific Basin made under the auspices of the American Institute of Pacific Relations." Foster Hailey
+ N Y Times p40 D 5 '48 90w

Reviewed by Harold Wakefield
Pacific Affairs 22:201 Je '49 390w

"An appropriate first publication in this series, furnishing a comprehensive commentary on the occupation from which more detailed analysis of selected aspects of the program in Japan can proceed. . . [Mr Martin] carefully avoids an evaluation of the achievements of the occupation, pointing out that fundamental emotional drives and patterns of thought of the individual Japanese and the structure and working processes of social institutions must undergo revolutionary change if the goals of the occupation are to be accomplished. Unfortunately the book was completed before the end of 1947, too soon to take account of the shift of American policy during the last year and a half away from the former emphasis upon reform toward the present emphasis upon economic stabilization and reconstruction." J. W. Masland
Pol Sci Q 64:312 Je '49 600w

School & Society 69:32 Ja 8 '49 40w

Times [London] Lit Sup p660 O 14 '49 360w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:232 Je '49 200w

MARTIN, ETHEL BOWYER. Judy-come-lately; il. by Sari. 218p $2.25 Harcourt 49-5591

A mystery story for grades 4-7. The setting is a county fair.

Booklist 46:52 O 1 '49

"It would take more than the lively Iowa background of the county fair grounds to redeem this story from triteness and sentimentality. . . The ingredients are here for a popular story but the dialogue is uneven (and not true to the ages of the children), the narrative is poorly written."
— Kirkus 17:467 S 1 '49 110w

"Recommended for 11-14-year-olds." Juanita Walker
+ Library J 74:1466 O 1 '49 50w

Reviewed by Irene Smith
+ N Y Times p24 N 6 '49 170w

"Because of its convincing background this story is a good companion to the books about a circus. There are many animated illustrations, some that carry a sense of adventure and mystery." B. W. Shaffer
+ Sat R of Lit 32:25 N 12 '49 180w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 9 '49 60w

MARTIN, MONICA. Out in the mid-day sun. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 242p map $3 Little

915.4 India—Social life and customs 49-11641

Describes the author's life in India in the years before the beginning of World war II. Mrs Martin was only twenty when she left England with her husband and baby daughter, to live in the mica fields and jungle outposts of northern India. Her tremendous energy helped her thru the difficult years, until the climate got too much for her and she returned to England to regain her health. The book closes with the death of her husband early in the war. Glossary.

Booklist 46:157 Ja 1 '50

Reviewed by Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p11 D 8 '49 240w

"All in all a fascinating picture of a very different kind of life in a very different kind of country."

+ Kirkus 17:504 S 1 '49 130w

"Readable, with a light touch."

+ Library J 74:1560 O 15 '49 40w

"She writes out of rich experience and feeling for the country which is in her very bones. . . Only some one who loved this life could have re-created it with the sincerity Mrs. Martin has put into her high adventures which were, still, 'all in the day's work.'" Margaret Hubbard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 20 '49 600w

"This was a challenging, uncomfortable life and few brides in pre-war India could have been more resourceful or proficient. If the episodes sometimes lack freshness, it is perhaps that the author has relived them too often. It is also unfortunate that she has pieced out the story with irrelevancies such as the governing system of Nepal. But certainly the Americans who take wives like Monica Martin to today's 'undeveloped areas' will be fortunate—and, unfortunately, probably few." M. J. Tweedy

+ — N Y Times p37 N 20 '49 450w

"Related with a pleasantly restrained vivacity and with due regard for the scenic merits of the region."

+ New Yorker 25:124 D 17 '49 170w

"She leaves a great deal unsaid and dangling. Nevertheless, Mrs. Martin gives a good kaleidoscopic picture of the mysterious East, and it is regrettable that she did not try to add more to it." A. B. S.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 27 '49 480w

Wis Lib Bul p9 D '49

MARTIN DU GARD, ROGER. Jean Barois; tr. by Stuart Gilbert. 365p $3.50 Viking

49-8550

First appearance in this country of a novel published in Paris in 1913. It deals with the times of the anti-clerical movement and the Dreyfus affair, and is the life story of one Jean Barois, a free thinker, who returned to the church.

Booklist 45:314 My 15 '49

"As in his great series Les Thibauts, Martin du Gard accentuates the tragedy and sadness of life. There are few extenuations. For this reason and because of the apparent validity of the rationalistic argument, the book is recommended only to those whose faith is as unassailable as Marie's, or, to those who can recognize and appreciate great literature for its own sake." M. P. Corcoran

Cath World 169:316 Jl '49 550w

"In its austerely thrilling beauty of movement this novel suggests the controlled flow of great painting. One of the most disturbing (and rewarding) pictures of this century, Paul Klee's 'Grey Man and the Coast,' might almost be a drawing of Jean Barois and his plight; the sharp, profoundly challenging dailyness of the coast of life absorbs man's attention in Klee's work just as it does in du Gard's. And in neither is the answer shirked. . . Roger Martin du Gard's story will have only passing value for most of us—unless, finishing it, we look a little differently on the man in the apartment adjoining ours, the family in the house next door, the people we shall work with tomorrow morning and afternoon. The test, as always, is in the testing." M. H. Ley

+ Commonweal 50:180 My 27 '49 550w

"A brilliant translation of a novel published earlier in France, but not hitherto available in English. . . A novel of ideas, and the market in this country will find sharp limitations."

Kirkus 17:70 F 1 '49 290w

"Translation by Stuart Gilbert does full justice to memorable novel which is strongly recommended for general purchase." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 74:495 Mr 15 '49 100w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 120:26 My 9 '49 750w

"I remember with what passionate interest I read 'Jean Barois' some thirty-five years ago. I opened Stuart Gilbert's excellent version with misgivings, and above all with self-diffidence. So much is now dust, that was vital in those days. It has not evoked any nostalgic yearning for my ardent youth. But it has confirmed my conviction that 'Jean Barois'—now published for the first time in this country—is a great book, not a mere campaign pamphlet. . . . 'Jean Barois' is a challenge. In this country, we are apt to confuse freedom of thought in religious matters and freedom from thought. Thinking is uncomfortable: many would call it an un-American activity. Roger Martin du Gard thinks, and compels us to think. He does not offer a ready-made solution; he is neither an iconoclast nor an apologist. Truth is complex and finely shaded. The way out of the maze cannot be imposed; it must be sought within. In the terms of St. Ignatius, this is a 'spiritual exercise.'" Albert Guerard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ap 24 '49 800w

Reviewed by R. G. Davis

N Y Times p3 Ap 24 '49 1000w

New Yorker 25:106 Ap 30 '49 120w

Reviewed by Vance Bourjaily

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 5 '49 850w

"Despite its conclusion, the book is not to be recommended for the edification of the faithful. Martin du Gard is painfully fair. The arguments of the rationalists, as arguments, are still valid; they may well trouble tender pietists. Jean Barois' final conversion is determined mostly by fear and lassitude. . . The translation, by Stuart Gilbert, is thoroughly excellent. Let us be grateful to the competent translator, the forgotten man of literature." Morris Bishop

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:33 Ap 23 '49 650w

"The style of Jean Barois is only the skeleton of the method Martin du Gard fleshed out in The Thibaults, but it is made of good solid bones."

Time 53:114 My 9 '49 800w

"This intellectually brilliant and highly absorbing book is a novel of ideas written almost entirely in direct dialogue, like a play. . . This [is a] fine book." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 38:767 summer '49 250w

MARTINSON, HELEN, and MARTINSON, MELVIN. Grandpa's farm; il. by Chauncey Maltman. [41p] $1.50; reinforced ed $2.13 Childrens press

49-6163

A picture book of farm life. On three visits to grandpa's farm, Mary makes friends with the horses, cows, pigs, sheep and ducks. She watches shearing, plowing, corn planting and cultivating, threshing, and milking. For grades 2-4.

Booklist 46:69 O 15 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun O 15 '49 40w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p9 Ja 10 '50 120w

"Accurate but uninspired presentation of farm life for nine- and ten-year-olds, told with very little story interest. Characters are completely colorless. However, many beautiful and detailed illustrations by Chauncey Maltman done in soft brown gravure convey a real feeling for the farm. . . Should prove a useful if undistinguished addition to the public library shelves, especially in the reinforced edition." M. E. Martignoni

+ — Library J 74:1208 S 1 '49 80w

"The text is brief and well enough written. What is best about the book, aside from its including adult work, is its superb pictures. The beautiful end-papers show oats, timothy, alfalfa, corn, wheat, soybeans, barley and clover. The two-page title spread shows a detailed view of farmhouse, barn and barnyard, with silo, weathervane, and fields beyond." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 25 '49 190w

MASANI, SHAKUNTALA. Nehru's story; pictures by [the author]. 81p $2.50 Oxford

B or 92 Nehru, Jawaharlal—Juvenile literature 49-10314

First written for the boys and girls of India and now adapted for children of this country. The author has told the story of Nehru from the time he was a small boy to the present.

"Mrs. Masani is the wife of the present Ambassador of India in Brazil. Her simply written sketch of the great Indian leader has been popular with children in India and now, with slight changes, is introduced to English-speaking boys and girls. Mrs. Masani's account of Jawaharlal's childhood and education, his family and friends will show young people how he gradually gave up a life of luxury and comfort to join the Indian people in their struggle for independence. She handles the complications in relation to Britain with skill and without bitterness. Her illustrations are charming." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 25:539 N '49 90w

Kirkus 17:429 Ag 15 '49 130w

Reviewed by Alice McQuaid

+ Library J 74:1544 O 15 '49 100w

"Interesting, simply written biography, rich with inspiration for children in their enthusiasm for brave men and heroic deeds." H. M. Brogan

+ Library J 74:1609 O 15 '49 70w

"All the details could only be so vividly put down by an Indian. The treatment of the English has no rancor, but the whole is too brief for any special pleading; it is rather a report on a ten to twelve year old level. The little decorations in brown and green add much charm and a true Indian atmosphere." L. S Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 N 6 '49 230w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R of Lit 32:40 N 12 '49 30w

MASEREEL, FRANS. Passionate journey; a novel in 165 wood cuts; introd. by Thomas Mann [tr. by Joseph M. Bernstein]. $3 Lear 48-11181

"Composed of 165 woodcuts, one to a page. . . The book opens with a self-portrait of the author sitting over his tools in his studio. Two pages later you join the hero as he waves farewell to youth from a train which hurls him away, through smoke and darkness, into Life. . . [The] hero is a hatless, classless, strangely free adventurer whose life appears to follow no particular plan. Above all, he is a man of good-will. He stands on his head to amuse himself and children. . . He skates, throws snowballs, cooks. He gets roaring drunk, boxes, dances, plays an accordion; he lies in the fields, climbs trees, travels to distant lands; he makes friends with Chinese, with African natives, even with monkeys in the jungle. . . But in the penultimate picture he is shown against the raging of a great storm and with clenched fists, trampling on his own human heart." N Y Times

"Published earlier as 'My Book of Hours' with a brief foreword by Romain Rolland, the suite of pictures is bowdlerized by a few omissions in the present edition and accompanied by a long preface by Thomas Mann. . . In neither old nor new edition is there any particular appreciation of the work of Masereel, of his astounding technique or of other qualities—the paucity of facial expression in his figures—that make him a notable but not quite a first-rate artist." Iris Barry

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 D 26 '48 450w

"Unlike many books, both of words and pictures, first published in the Twenties, 'Passionate Journey' does not date. The problems it presents are more crucial, its philosophy more needed than ever." James Stern

N Y Times p6 D 12 '48 700w

MASON, GEORGE FREDERICK. Animal weapons [il. by the author]. 94p il $2 Morrow

591.57 Animals, Habits and behavior of 49-10007

A discussion of the types of animal weapons and their influence on the animals that possess them. Partial contents: Horns and antlers; Hoofs, nails, claws, and talons; Teeth and tusks; Poison; Odor; Shocks and stings; Quills. For grades 5-8. Index.

Booklist 46:17 S 1 '49

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 15 '49 180w

'Good scout and camp material."

+ Kirkus 17:476 S 1 '49 130w

"George F. Mason, with his gift of illuminating the unique in nature, adds to his series of books a fascinating new one." Alice McQuaid

+ Library J 74:1543 O 15 '49 80w

"Recommended for school and club libraries and beginners in the study of natural history." J. F. Kennedy

+ Library J 74:1918 D 15 '49 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 O 16 '49 200w

"Indispensable little volume for the nature-lover's bookshelf. It does not matter at all whether the nature-lover is 10 years old or 60. The youngest will have no difficulty with this author's clear, terse prose and practical line drawings, while the mature reader will be humbled to realize how little he has understood the mechanism of animal weapons." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p50 O 23 '49 150w

New Yorker 25:183 D 3 '49 50w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R of Lit 32:34 N 12 '49 50w

MASON, MIRIAM EVANGELINE. Herman, the brave pig; il. by George and Doris Hauman. 120p $1.50 Macmillan 49-10635

Humorous story for ages 6-10. Herman, scheduled to be a ham dinner for the governor, was hidden away on rattlesnake infested Sunshine island. There he had a delightful time killing the snakes which were eventually used as a soothing oil for the governor's tired feet. Herman's life was saved and his owners were now able to live safely on the farm they had bought on the island.

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun O 15 '49 130w

"The gay and contented spirit of Danny's family will please every reader." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 25:526 N '49 70w

Kirkus 17:465 S 1 '49 110w

"The chief value of this is that it is the kind of book that second-to-fourth-grade boys can read and enjoy. . . Recommended." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 74:1609 O 15 '49 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 N 13 '49 170w

Reviewed by M. R. Brown

N Y Times p26 O 9 '49 140w

"This book is designed for the ages from 6 to 10, but if they're not bored with all the patronizing in it, then they're slipping."

— San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 13 '49 170w

MASON, MIRIAM EVANGELINE. Mary Mapes Dodge; jolly girl; il. by Sandra James. 199p $1.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Dodge, Mrs Mary (Mapes)—Juvenile literature 49-8117

A biography of Mary Mapes Dodge for ages 7-10. It describes a year of her childhood in New York in 1835; her first writing attempt, an article on growing sweet potatoes; her brief married life; and the success of her book, Hans Brinker.

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Ap 9 '49 20w

"Recommended." D. M. Blasco
+ Library J 74:666 Ap 15 '49 80w

"An excellent picture of childhood in old New York. . . The stirrings of originality and writing power in little Mary Mapes are cleverly traced. . . The simple style is pleasant in spite of such lapses as 'chirrupped the four little girls'; the silhouette pictures and large type are attractive for readers of about ten." L. S. Bechtel
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 7 '49 230w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
N Y Times p22 Jl 17 '49 80w

MASON, VAN WYCK. Cutlass empire [il. by John Alan Maxwell]. 396p $3 Doubleday

Morgan, Sir Henry—Fiction 49-1719

Novel describing eighteen years of the tempestuous career of Henry Morgan, buccaneer.

Booklist 45:170; 262 Ja 15 '49; Ap 1 '49

— Cath World 169:158 My '49 100w

"Writing that thrills and earns the reader's respect is in this book. . . The final chapters dealing with the buccaneer's return to London and his accolade from the hand of a dissolute monarch, seem out of key with the hardy, virile episodes flowing through the earlier pages. However, this makes for authenticity, thus could not fairly be omitted. . . With every book Van Wyck Mason gains stature, and 'Cutlass Empire' is his best." F. N. Litten
+ Chicago Sun Ap 5 '49 350w

Kirkus 17:8 Ja 1 '49 160w

"Still another of author's highly colored, staccato historical romances, tingling with incident, showing careful research, and studded with rather perfunctory seductions and bedroom scenes which he can probably dictate in his sleep by now. . . The book has the advantage of Mr. Mason's thorough knowledge of the West Indies. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ — Library J 74:377 Mr 1 '49 80w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 Mr 27 '49 500w

"Written, as the author assures us, after 'prolonged research,' it brings so much new material to light that one almost wishes it were presented as straight history. As it is, the reader will have to sort out the facts for himself and, for the rest, be grateful for Mr. Mason's story-telling gifts." Henry Martin
+ N Y Times p20 Mr 20 '49 180w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 27 '49 450w

"A good tale, an interesting tale, a nice rescue from limbo of a fascinating character who, if he is not presented with much emotional depth, is probably given as much as he had." Fletcher Pratt
+ Sat R of Lit 32:32 Ap 2 '49 460w

MASON, VAN WYCK. Dardanelles derelict. 275p $2.75 Doubleday

49-11679

A Major North spy story, the scene of which is Turkey. The major and a beautiful American stake everything on discovery of a small piece of microfilm, which is expected to be the most important thing in the making or breaking of World war III.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun N 18 '49 220w

Kirkus 17:488 S 1 '49 90w

"A routine Major North story, interesting chiefly because of Van Wyck Mason's extensive knowledge of O. S. S. spy methods."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 20 '49 130w

"The style is corny, the adventure is riproaring, the death rate high, and victory for our side sure in the finish, let the bodies fall where they may." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p49 N 20 '49 180w

"The descriptions of life in Turkey, social and military, seem valid, but beyond that there's very little to recommend the book."
New Yorker 25:135 N 26 '49 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p36 N 20 '49 120w

Springf'd Republican p7D D 11 '49 100w

MASON, WARREN PERRY. Electromechanical transducers and wave filters. 2d ed 419p il $6 Van Nostrand

621.3 Electroacoustics. Electric filters 48-11233

"Applies basic network theory to the solutions of practical problems in acoustics, mechanical systems and in electromechanics. Methods outlined simplify the solution of a variety of important problems in the entire field of communication for the acoustical, radio and telephone engineer. The separate results on electrical, mechanical and electromechanical systems are combined in the design of composite electromechanical transducers. Book summarized the most recent work of the Bell telephone laboratories and other organizations including wartime results." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 74:130 Ja 15 '49 100w

"The scholarly and thorough treatment of the relationships between electric circuits, electromechanical transducers, and acoustic systems makes the work valuable as a reference book and as a text for graduate engineering and science courses. . . The first edition of the book has now become well established in its field; this second edition adds to its utility."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:128 Mr '49 320w

MASSEY, VINCENT. On being Canadian. 198p $3 J. M. Dent & Sons, ltd, Aldine house, 224 Bloor st, W, Toronto 5

917.1 Canada—Nationality. National characteristics, Canadian 49-706

"Young people in Canada are prone to wonder how they ought to feel because they are Canadian. To this Mr. Vincent Massey, now Chancellor of Toronto University, addresses himself. He looks for the sources of the Canadian's characteristics in history and geography, in political and economic entanglements. His is an appeal for self-respect and tolerance and, as might be expected of him, he stresses the rôle of the arts in nationhood." Manchester Guardian

Booklist 45:208 F 15 '49

"Throughout this thoughtful volume Mr. Massey's chief concern is for Canada's separate existence as a nation different from other nations. He does not discuss the economic welfare of Canadians nor the cost of steering an independent course. He is less concerned with Canada's membership in the United Nations than with her membership in Commonwealth. His emphasis is on making Canada Canadian." Andrew Hebb
Canadian Forum 28:237 Ja '49 420w

"This is an interesting and useful book rather than an exciting or controversial one." N. A. M. MacKenzie
+ Canadian Hist R 30:77 Mr '49 650w

Foreign Affairs 27:516 Ap '49 20w

Manchester Guardian p3 F 1 '49 230w

New Statesman & Nation 32:338 Ap 2 '49 70w

"Although Vincent Massey's book was undoubtedly intended primarily for Canadian reading, it developed, in the writing, a much wider interest. The author, one of the most knowledgeable of his countrymen in literature, painting and drama, as well as in public affairs, served three years as the first Canadian Minister to the United States. . . Out of his experience and observation at home and abroad

MASSEY, VINCENT—Continued
has come an exceptionally penetrating study of Canadian character, political growth and relations with kinsmen in Europe, neighbors in North America and the world at large." P. J. Philip
+ N Y Times p17 D 12 '48 750w

Reviewed by Graham Spry
Spec 183:116 Jl 22 '49 420w

"Unfortunately, Mr. Massey does no more than skim the surface. Instead of examining the question whether Goldwin Smith was right in asserting that Canada was a geographic and economic mistake, and discussing whether Canada to-day is destined to become the Scotland of North America, he confines himself to a number of unexceptionable and accurate but not very helpful assertions on the need for unity, for better education, and for greater realism in Canadian foreign policy."
Times [London] Lit Sup p294 My 6 '49 480w

MASSINGHAM, HUGH. Fear no evil [Eng title: Best days]. 372p $3 Random house 49-10602

Story, partly allegory, of an English parson who, seeking a wayward son, is himself dragged down into the underworld of blackmailers and prostitutes.

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p11 O 6 '49 450w

"An astute, decadent study of the effect of sin upon a stalwart member of the church, and also a cleverly handled glimpse into a group of small towners. But not for all tastes."
Kirkus 17:103 Ag 1 '49 150w

"Good descriptive writing, but characters are unreal, plot ridiculous, and philosophy illogical and trite." R. W. Henderson
— + Library J 74:1203 S 1 '49 100w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 22 '49 240w

"After a spate of patly written summer fiction, Mr. Massingham's careful and unpretentious prose is refreshing. Yet for all the sharpness of individual vignettes—a luncheon for the bishop, a parish festival, a frightening seduction—this is an imperfect novel, annoyingly so since it is very good in parts." Ernest Jones
+ — Nation 169:331 O 1 '49 440w

"There are a number of minor characters involved and all of these are most competently drawn. . . It is in presenting the Rev. 'Bobs,' the mean-spirited church warden and the foolish, greedy girl, May, that the author, despite all the abundance of detail which he gives, fails to be entirely convincing. His evil souls have too few attributes, save malice or greed, his hero too palpably lacks a grain of sense to be really very interesting." Iris Barry
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p38 S 25 '49 600w

"Despite the clichés of plot Mr. Massingham has that most important quality of all in a novelist, a really solid talent for characterization. The growth in stature of Bobs throughout the book is something of a tour de force, and his portrait of May is definitive and devastating." M. S. Hurst
+ — N Y Times p6 O 2 '49 360w

"Mr. Massingham's writing is good and he has a fine grip on his characters, but he doesn't seem to realize that enough is enough. Poor Mr. Dewson is laid in his spiritual coffin in the first chapter; after that, it's just a matter of nailing down the lid, a repetitious procedure that takes much too long."
— + New Yorker 25:112 S 24 '49 100w

"Mr. Massingham's characterization is brilliant—the man whose gradual soul's growth in the empty shell of virtue is drawn in full dimensions of reality—and tawdry little May, so cold, so calculating is equally vivid. Eric Parker, the blackmailer, particularly when drunk is a priceless sketch, and the Bishop, who reads Westerns, seen all too briefly, is endearing and unforgettable. Add to this a rare ability to create atmosphere and you have a novelist of real importance." Pamela Taylor
+ Sat R of Lit 32:26 D 17 '49 320w

Time 54:78 O 3 '49 600w

"The rather hackneyed plot comes to life through Mr. Massingham's insight into his characters—not only the uneasy, pathetic Dewson and the burrowing Wopple, but the collection of seedy minor figures, drawn with a pleasure in watching their curious habits that is reminiscent at times of Mr. Graham Greene. The Best Days is not an altogether satisfactory novel, but it contains some remarkably well-observed specimens of English urban life."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p261 Ap 23 '49 390w

MASSON, MADELEINE. Lady Anne Barnard; the court and colonial service under George III and the Regency. 354p pl $5 Macmillan (for Allen, G.)

B or 92 Barnard, Lady Anne (Lindsay)
[49-3093]

Biography of Lady Anne Lindsay, oldest daughter of the Scottish Earl of Balcarres. Lady Anne, born in 1750, is best known as the author of the poem Auld Robin Gray. After a strict upbringing in Scotland, she was prominent in London and South African society for many years. She became a close friend of George IV, and during the French Revolution and the Napoleonic wars, she played an active part. Bibliography. Index.

"The life is well written and gives a valuable picture of English society towards the close of the eighteenth century. . . It is a little serious—always a mistake except in the greatest of the biographies." A. J. P. Taylor
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 4 '49 110w

"Mrs. Masson has read widely in the period and sketches a pleasant background against which Lady Anne's Cape experiences are given their proper proportions. Although all her judgments—particularly perhaps her sketch of Windham—will not always carry conviction, Mrs. Masson brings to the familiar scene of the late eighteenth century something of the freshness of her native South Africa."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p21 Ja 8 '49 420w

MASTERS, ROBERT V. Child's garden of flowers. 32p il $1 Greenberg

635.9 Floriculture—Juvenile literature
49-8079

A small book giving brief, simple directions for choosing a site, preparing the soil, planting, and caring for five kinds of garden flowers—petunias, cornflowers, candytufts, forget-me-nots, and zinnias. Packages of seeds of each are pasted into the book.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 26 '49 70w

"This is a good merchandise item, for bookshop distribution rather than library use, though tie up with garden display might well make one copy worth having."
Kirkus 17:59 F 1 '49 330w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr 13 '49 60w

Reviewed by Lois Palmer
N Y Times p30 My 8 '49 30w

Sat R of Lit 32:36 Ag 13 '49 40w

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 20 '49 60w

MASTERS, ROBERT V. Child's garden of vegetables. 32p $1 Greenberg

635 Vegetable gardening—Juvenile literature
49-8078

Similar to the Child's Garden of Flowers above. The vegetables included are tomatoes, broccoli, lettuce, carrots, and squash.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 26 '49 180w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr 13 '49 60w

Reviewed by Lois Palmer
N Y Times p30 My 8 '49 30w

Sat R of Lit 32:36 Ag 13 '49 40w

Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 20 '49 60w

MASUR, GERHARD. Simon Bolivar. 737p il maps $6.50 Univ. of N. Mex. press

B or 92 Bolivar, Simón 49-7154

"A thoughtful study of the life and character of the South American liberator by a German writer and teacher who spent ten years in Bogotá." New Yorker

"Dr Masur's biography is easily the best in the English language, and one of the best in any language. Minor flaws may be easily corrected in a later edition." C. H. Haring
+ Am Hist R 55:175 O '49 1150w

"Presents Bolivar's life with a thoroughness . . . that will very likely make it stand as authoritative, for North Americans at least, for some time to come." William Barrett
+ Atlantic 183:91 Mr '49 600w

Booklist 45:280 Ap 15 '49

Reviewed by Mildred Adams
Nation 168:667 Je 11 '49 500w

"The author, a refugee from Hitler who settled in Colombia for three years, spent that time and more in digging for material on the Liberator. No other writer has done so sound a job on his sources or worked to better effect in reproducing the moral climate in which Bolivar lived and fought. Mr. Masur's book is too long. His writing (he had to work through a translator) is not so satisfying as his material. But it is a sound, objective and absorbing volume." Hubert Herring
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Je 5 '49 800w

"Mr. Masur's biography of Simon Bolivar is, in the judgment of this reviewer, the best which has yet appeared in any language. As a result of his careful research in Europe and the United States, supplemented by a long residence in Bogotá, the author has been able to look at the many controversial problems in the career of Bolivar with authority and detachment." R. G. Caldwell
+ N Y Times p12 Ja 30 '49 600w

"Mr. Masur has tried to balance Bolivar's contradictions and has succeeded in at least making him a believable human being. His book, which is more thoroughgoing than other biographies of Bolivar in English, is also, without doubt, the most understandable."
+ New Yorker 24:83 Ja 15 '49 140w

"A thoroughly readable and exciting job. But why . . . why does a publisher ever put out a 700-page history of military operations, geography and geopolitics which includes not a single clear, complete map?" Larry Laughlin
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p13 F 6 '49 600w

"This is a significant book, perhaps the best ever published on Bolivar. The facts are generally accurate, the interpretation is sound, and the style is excellent. . . The reader should be warned, however, that Professor Masur is not an expert in United States history—otherwise he would not have said, for example, that the United States sent only one delegate to the Panama Congress of 1826 or that the United States had not abolished the slave trade with Africa before that date—and that, like many other Europeans, he often employs the term 'South America' when he really means Latin America." J. F. Rippy
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:40 My 14 '49 850w

"Dr. Masur interprets Bolivar's life as a tragedy in terms of his duality, and it is to the advantage of the book that he illustrates Bolivar's struggle with himself by well-chosen and significant passages from the Liberator's own writings."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p587 S 9 '49 900w

"Despite some textual errors, this balanced and relatively objective biography is a much-needed and important addition to the literature in its field."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 5:183 Je '49 360w

MASUR, HAROLD Q. Suddenly a corpse. 247p $2 Simon & Schuster
49-9609

Detective story.

Kirkus 17:284 Je 1 '49 60w

"Action is the word for this easy-to-read item." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ag 21 '49 140w

"The basic ingredients of 'Suddenly a Corpse' might have come from any routine toughie; the chief difference is that the author can write. He's sage enough to blend his ingredients into an admirably constructed and puzzling plot, with a deducible but still surprising ending, and to tell his sensational story within the confines of quietly intelligent prose. He rings attractive variations on the missing-heir motif; he keeps his story fast-paced and yet at all times rationally clear; and he leaves you with the feeling that his lawyer-detective Scott Jordan is perfectly capable of carrying on a successful law practice even when bodies are not popping out at him." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p16 Ag 21 '49 180w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 4 '49 100w

+ Sat R of Lit 32:36 Ag 20 '49 40w

MATERI, IRMA TENNANT. Irma and the Hermit; my life in Korea. 256p $2.95 Norton

915.19 Korea—Social life and customs
49-7706

Humorous story about the difficulties of keeping house in Korea, where the author, wife of a U. S. army major, spent a year and a half.

Booklist 45:224 Mr 1 '49

"19 months of life in Korea make a sometimes gay, generally entertaining book, for Irma writes with a sparkle and an eye for the ludicrous in foreign living."
+ Kirkus 17:43 Ja 15 '49 190w

"Mrs. Materi is a free-spoken, life-of-any-party young woman, a giddy kibitzer with the stamina of a pioneer. . . She has basic humor, which is better than basic English, as historians hereinafter who want to get at the nuances and nuisances of the record will doubtless find. The anthropologists may catch her out, but her very mistakes throw more light on culture vs. cultures than three-quarters of their findings in the true lingo. Into a situation that needs more air Mrs. Materi lets a lot of breeze." Ernestine Evans
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr 13 '49 800w

Reviewed by Rex Lardner
N Y Times p18 Mr 20 '49 350w

"Mrs. Materi's story is most enjoyable and most valuable when it is most personal, she has little to say about geography, history, politics, and the future, and that's fine." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 32:33 Je 25 '49 90w

MATHEWS, BASIL JOSEPH. Booker T. Washington, educator and interracial interpreter. 350p il $4.75 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Washington, Booker Taliaferro
48-8652

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"A sound and important volume of biography, history, and education." M. S. MacLean
+ Am Hist R 54:630 Ap '49 600w

MATHEWS, B. J.—Continued

"The author of this excellent biography spent years reading the large collection of Washington's papers at Tuskegee before this significant collection found its way to the Library of Congress; he lived at the school and became familiar with its multiple activities and problems; his book bears the mark of scholarship and judicious selection. This reviewer wishes that Mr. Mathews had quoted more frequently from the sources, though not necessarily longer quotations, and had dwelt more at length on Washington's political activities in the Republican Party, especially during the Theodore Roosevelt era." G. C. Osborn

+ Ann Am Acad 262:237 Mr '49 360w

Reviewed by Daniel James

Nation 168:134 Ja 29 '49 1100w

"The author has composed a well-written biography and has evidently immersed himself in the relevant source materials. His approach is somewhat anecdotal and his style is suited to popular reading. The specialist would undoubtedly have wished many more footnotes citing unpublished and printed sources; nevertheless, even for him, the book will yield satisfactory returns." W. W. Brickman

+ School & Society 69:179 Mr 5 '49 190w

MATHIESON, ELIZABETH LAIRD. Needlework library. 270p il col pl $2.95 World pub.

746 Needlework 49-9002

"A modern manual offering full instructions in embroidery, knitting, tatting, afghans, quilts, crochet, rugs, and pineapples." (Subtitle) Index.

Booklist 45:331 Je 1 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '49

"Not completely comprehensive, but covering a wide range of ideas and procedure."

Kirkus 17:266 My 15 '49 110w

"As far as it goes, the volume is adequate, but calling it a needlework library is stretching the truth a bit. Embroidery, quilting, knitting, tatting, crocheting are graphically illustrated. But if you are toying with the idea of knitting a rug or an afghan, the book won't help you—Miss Mathieson is of the crochet-school and judging from 'The Needlework Library' never picks up a knitting needle when a crochet hook is at hand." E. J.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 8 '49 110w

MATSUMOTO, TORU. Seven Stars; decorations by Miné Okubo. 213p $2.50; pa $1 Friendship press

49-8142

"In fictionized biography, Dr. Matsumoto reproduces the characters and personal concerns of himself and six classmates of a Christian school in Tokyo before, during and immediately after the war. For the benefit of Occidental readers, he also endows each of the other six with certain of his own personal attitudes and reactions as typical among the youth of Japan in restiveness prevalent there as military restrictions tightened, as war befell, as defeat came, and then as the new, postwar Japan began to come into being." Christian Century

---

"It is an excellent pacemaker. If those to follow match it in quality and significance, we are due for a finer understanding of Japan and of our Christian responsibilities there than ever before. . . One wonders whether his observations will be in similar vein ten years from now. God grant that he may always be able to say, as he concludes this magnificent book, 'Tomorrow is Easter.' " T. T. Brumbaugh

+ Christian Century 66:432 Ap 6 '49 550w

"The prose style is simple and naïve, and at times there is a tendency to oversentimentalize; but on every page the note of passionate sincerity is unmistakable." Takashi Oka

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 21 '49 1100w

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton

Crozer Q 26:286 Jl '49 100w

" 'The Seven Stars' should be useful for young people's race relations groups, and for church and school libraries." E. B.

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 24 '49 270w

MAUGHAM, ROBERT CECIL ROMER. North African notebook. 146p il $3 Harcourt

916.1 Africa, North—Description and travel. Arabs. Africa, North—Politics 49-48740

In 1947 the author visited the countries of North Africa, primarily to observe the growth of Arab nationalism. This volume is an informally written record of his experiences and observations.

Booklist 46:157 Ja 1 '50

"This new travel book is well written, competent, but undistinguished." Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 51:373 Ja 6 '50 600w

Kirkus 17:643 N 15 '49 170w

Reviewed by James Stern

New Repub 121:20 D 26 '49 460w

"It would be too much to say that his hit-and-run account ever evokes the real feel of North Africa or that it is entitled to a place among the better books on that area. Even as reportage it is somewhat too capricious. But it has some lively pages and should be welcomed as one more report on an important region." Gerald Sykes

+ — N Y Times p54 D 4 '49 240w

New Yorker 25:132 N 26 '49 200w

Sat R of Lit 32:30 D 24 '49 140w

"This is not an important political work; it is more like a well-informed and very pleasant travel book, economical and to the point."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p149 Mr 5 '49 480w

MAUGHAM, ROBERT CECIL ROMER. The servant. 62p $1.50 Harcourt

49-1452

Short novel describing how an evil servant destroyed his master by pandering to his weakness for comfort.

Booklist 45:243 Mr 15 '49

"A short novel which . . . in its economy, its concentration, succeeds as a horror story of considerable brightness and sharpness. . . Not without decadence, but also with considerable fascination, this may find a special audience."

+ — Kirkus 17:34 Ja 15 '49 130w

"The writing is skillful, the melodramatic tale unfolds logically and interestingly. For lovers of the sensational but definitely not for young people." Anne Whitmore

Library J 74:198 F 1 '49 70w

"The author has constructed the piece so well that it would have needed brilliance in the French convention to add delight to its firmness. Constant, however, to the ungracious idiom of his Tony, Richard, and Sally, taken from the life, he has used a kind of slap-you-on-the-back dialogue which is fatal to brilliance; and the nasty servant, Barrett, after promising for a moment to turn into a new Peter Quint, becomes only too much like one of those true reprobates who are stranger than fiction." Paul Bloomfield

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 S 24 '48 210w

" 'The Servant' carries no overtones, though its theme might have been used in a way to suggest many. But it maintains the tension of the best thrillers." Diana Trilling

+ Nation 168:192 F 12 '49 250w

Reviewed by Walter Allen

New Statesman & Nation 36:357 O 23 '48 100w

"At the close of the book it becomes apparent that while the suspense and the atmosphere are reminiscent of Stevenson, the theme is not. Stevenson achieved credibility while completely ignoring the realistic, setting his stories on so high a romantic plane that the reader followed him into another world.

Mr. Maugham attempts to give human motives to Tony and his salaried Svengali. But set on a realistic plane, these motives become too slight to be credible." Anne Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 F 13 '49 360w

"A minor work of art." James Stern

+ N Y Times p22 F 20 '49 500w

New Yorker 24:90 F 12 '49 100w

"What Mr. Maugham has tried to convey is the tragic decay and degradation of a man, but he succeeds only in outlining his sordid story without raising it to a level where it evokes any feeling stronger than mild interest. . . The most believable character is Vera, the girl whom Barrett uses to ensnare Tony, and she is a lineal literary descendant of the vitriolic Mildred in 'Of Human Bondage.'" Robert Halsband

— + Sat R of Lit 32:28 Mr 12 '49 450w

"Mr. Maugham is brisk in his description of sin, but not so happy with virtue. Sally is off the stocks, and the charwoman is vintage Punch of a very bad year." Stevie Smith

+ — Spec 181:408 S 24 '48 180w

Reviewed by W. R. Manchester

Springf'd Republican p5D Ap 24 '49 180w

"The Servant is a short novel which, in the simplicity of its style, the skill of its construction and the unpleasantness of its theme, at moments resembles a story by the more famous Mr. Maugham. Its merit lies in the economy with which it is told; there is little in it that does not directly affect the plot and little that could be spared; lack of affectation, however, is in this case almost ostentatious. . . The story itself lacks the clarity of the style in which it is written."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p553 O 2 '48 260w

MAUGHAM, WILLIAM SOMERSET. Quartet. 189p $2.50 Doubleday

Moving picture plays 49-3922

Four short stories by the English novelist; with their screen-plays by R. C. Sherriff. They are: The facts of life; The alien corn; The kite; The colonel's lady.

Booklist 45:355 Je 15 '49

Chicago Sun p6X My 29 '49 50w

Kirkus 17:215 Ap 15 '49 260w

"As the film 'Quartet' is a tribute to Mr. Maugham, so is it an interesting experiment in escape from the tyranny of feature pictures."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Je 19 '49 800w

"Since many people never have read screen plays, this book affords an experience in a new form. It is interesting to compare story to screen play, and also to accustom one's self to seeing in print such terms as 'Dissolve to,' 'Fade In,' 'Interior, Night.' . . From the book, it would certainly seem that the experiment of grouping four stories together to make one feature movie should work admirably." Betty Comden

N Y Times p4 My 29 '49 900w

"Those who haven't read the stories in previous publications will find them in the best Maugham tradition; clever, lucid, urbane and more than a little cynical. Maugham seems always to write with a slight leer, and—since 'Of Human Bondage'—without fully taking off his coat. Those who have already read them may still enjoy seeing how a skilled surgeon performs a series of operations to make them sterile enough for the cinema. That Maugham's stories survive this surgery with enough dramatic strength to make a highly praised movie is a sufficient tribute to their basic soundness and to Sheriff's expertness with a scriptural scalpel." Luther Nichols

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 1 '49 850w

Reviewed by Russell Rhodes

Sat R of Lit 32:11 Je 18 '49 750w

MAUGHAM, WILLIAM SOMERSET. Writer's notebook. 367p $4 Doubleday

828 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 49-10939

"Somerset Maugham has been a professional writer for fifty years, and kept a notebook (off and on) since 1892, when he was eighteen. Few people have been more consistently and exclusively professional writers, working diligently at their craft and unconcerned with propaganda, with 'causes,' or even public appearances which so delighted Dickens. It is, Mr. Maugham says, because he would always have welcomed a chance to see another writer's notebook that he has now issued his own—condensed by the elimination of portions previously used and by the omission of much trial dialogue jotted down when he was busy as a dramatist." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"It is a big book in which to seek and find, and for me a rich one." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 184:86 N '49 800w

Booklist 46:120 D 1 '49

"At 75 Maugham is pretty cool about the rewards of fame; he can afford to be, of course. Sometimes it sounds nice and modest, and at other times sour and liverish. On the whole his comment is sensible and salutary. There may not be a lot of the milk of human kindness in Mr. Maugham, but there is a remarkable understanding of the human animal and a positively clinical understanding of the scribbling race. As a member of both groups, I have read his conclusions with furious dissent and besotted agreement." Vincent Starrett

+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 20 '49 600w

"The portrait that emerges from this Notebook is the close complement to Maugham's own candid literary and philosophical autobiography, published 10 years ago as 'The Summing Up.' It is of a man who is, first of all, devoted to his concept of art. Everything which will contribute to his development as a storyteller draws his attention; little else does. . . To the student of the technique of writing, rather than of Maugham as a man, the middle section of the Notebook may seem to promise the most." Ruth Chapin

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 27 '49 900w

"These are eleventh-hour thoughts. We can afford to regard with charity many of the early entries, when the author, like any other ambitious young man, tried to follow the spirit of his time. . . Mr. Maugham had his period of sowing his literary wild oats, and is honest enough to confess it forthrightly. In these pages, [he] is not only quite modest about his own position in literature—never once does he claim to be a major writer—but he is honest enough to retract any unfair criticism he has made in the past about other writers. But above all, his book is absorbing for what he reveals about himself." John Cournos

+ Commonweal 51:49 O 21 '49 800w

Kirkus 17:459 Ag 15 '49 140w

"Recommended for literature and theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 74:1605 O 15 '49 70w

"With none of D. H. Lawrence's hysteria, he extols living and adds to the prestige there is in writing about it. Could it be that he has been some kind of escapist? Look at the notebook. The extracts show how wide an experience Mr. Maugham has courted without ever, it seems (and this is remarkable), losing a powerful sense of his identity. . . This discursive book is as readable as the novels." Paul Bloomfield

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 7 '49 490w

"It is hardly necessary to say that these notes are readable and often genuinely interesting; it is hardly more necessary to add that they are never profound or really original." J. W. Krutch

Nation 169:549 D 3 '49 400w

"His notebooks . . . are as agreeable to read as any of his set pieces. Uncertain and sententious in his early years, at the time of moral crisis, they quickly grow into the familiar manner, so suave and yet with the fine cutting edge, when the success he confidently expected arrives. What is lacking is the transforming passion which is the impulse of creative writing." V. S. Pritchett

MAUGHAM, W. S.—Continued
+ New Statesman & Nation 38:401 O 8 '49 1900w

"It may be doubted if interest in this volume will be confined to other, or would-be craftsmen, or even if the chief interest lies in that direction. It lies rather in the revelation of the man Maugham. This is, of course, a scrappy and indirect method of autobiography, but singularly revealing." W. P. Eaton
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 O 23 '49 1100w

Reviewed by W. H. Auden
N Y Times p1 O 23 '49 1200w

Reviewed by S. N. Behrman
New Yorker 25:102 O 29 '49 2700w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 21 '49 1050w

"This book is a rich fruit-cake of good reading, tart and mellow, not to be assessed from a bit nibbled here or there!" W. R. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 32:16 O 22 '49 950w

"Since he was eighteen Mr. Maugham has kept notebooks in which he has recorded emotions, ideas and observations of men and things which might afterwards be useful to him as a writer. Some of this material, already used in his books and plays, has been excluded from this volume; the rest appears in it. The result is fascinating in its variety, its candour and, sometimes, its self-repression." Charles Morgan
+ Spec 183:468 O 7 '49 1300w

Time 54:80 O 31 '49 650w

"It is clear that a varied standard of criticism is required for a book composed in this uncommon manner; for the result is not precisely a notebook in the workaday sense . . . while at the same time the author cannot, as it were, be held answerable for the material in the same way as if he had deliberately written for publication. In general, however, the picture presented is a remarkably coherent one. The comments of the boy of eighteen, mature in spite of their sometimes obvious air of youth, differ surprisingly little, when all is said and done, from the considered opinions of the distinguished man of letters; so that by the end of the book it is possible to recognize certain well-defined forces that have gone to make up the writer's personality."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p659 O 14 '49 2000w

Wis Lib Bul p8 D '49

MAULDIN, WILLIAM HENRY. Sort of a saga; il. by [the author]. 301p $3.50 Sloane

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 49-11455

Account of the author's boyhood spent in New Mexico and Arizona, with a year's interlude in Mexico. Illustrated by the author.

Booklist 46:96 N 15 '49

Bookmark 9:53 D '49 40w

Chicago Sun p10X N 27 '49 30w

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 6 '49 600w

"Mr. Mauldin spends little time on his internal development. This is an action story, written in simple, unobtrusive prose. The drawings show a real feeling for human attitude and expression. In brief, here is a bit of pleasant reminiscing by a man who looks at people with affectionate regard, sometimes failing to censure even what many persons feel to be serious human weaknesses." Rod Nordell
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 1 '49 450w

"Pop Mauldin is something of an eccentric, but Bill's book is far removed from the slickly contrived hilarity of the Life with Father, Cheaper by the Dozen school. For the grown-up Bill, Pop is still more hero than ham. . . The publishers speak of Mauldin's 'unorthodox' childhood. But it is the very normality of it that gives the book its special charm. There isn't a complex in a carload of Mauldin memoirs. Nowadays that is high recommendation for any book dealing with childhood." John Cogley
+ Commonweal 51:132 N 4 '49 650w

Kirkus 17:494 S 1 '49 190w

"It is an unaffected and highly humorous account. . . Recommended." J. E. Brown
+ Library J 74:1676 N 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by M. D. Read
Library J 74:1921 D 15 '49 40w

"The best writing, it seemed to me, concerned the Arizona period—a good picture of the hardships of desert life with what few compensations the family could salvage out of it, with never a hint of the Steinbeck pattern of depression. If 'A Sort of a Saga' lacks the depth of some of Mauldin's wartime cartoons, it is certainly a diverting book, often very funny, and will be welcomed by the large following who would like to know more about Bill Mauldin." T. H. Ferril
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 13 '49 850w

"The smooth-cheeked young man who created Joe and Willie for Stars and Stripes in World War II has done a good book on his own early childhood, different from anything he has turned out previously. Its great virtue is its Mauldinian simplicity and unstinging bluntness." Meyer Berger
+ N Y Times p6 O 30 '49 650w

"An able, informal handling of material that has probably been only slightly overemphasized in the interest of a few extra laughs."
+ New Yorker 25:155 D 10 '49 120w

Reviewed by William Hogan
San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 30 '49 950w

"If Tom Sawyer had been born in 1921 instead of around 1835, and if he had spent his boyhood in New Mexico and Arizona instead of in Missouri, he would have lived this life and written this book. . . This is a true Western for all tastes, for both sexes, and for almost all ages, written with a deftness and suppleness that makes the reader wish all autobiographers could get in their licks before their prose atrophied. The book isn't a sort of a saga—it's the real thing." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 32:24 O 22 '49 700w

"A book which is entertaining from cover to cover." J. F. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p8C N 20 '49 150w

Wis Lib Bul p7 N '49

MAVES, PAUL B., and CEDARLEAF, J. LENNART. Older people and the church. 272p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

259 Old age. Pastoral work 49-8642

"This book is an attempt to study the relationship of the Protestant churches to people over sixty years of age. In nontechnical language it summarizes the findings of many professional groups about older people and the aging process, pointing up those of significance for the pastor and other church leaders. In addition, it reports on two firsthand studies, one on pastoral care of older people and the other on group work with older people. Its purpose is to serve as an inclusive book of background material and concrete action suggestions for church leaders concerned with the ministry of the church to those in later maturity." (Foreword) Bibliographical notes. Index.

Booklist 45:384 Jl 15 '49

"Out of a rich and arresting experience, new shafts of light are thrown upon the questions of retirement, social security and welfare services. But the most important contribution of the authors to the reader is to bring him to a new awareness of one of the church's most immediate and most important responsibilities. It stirs within him a deep and moving desire to enter helpfully into the loneliness and emptiness and sometimes the physical need of many aged persons." H. W. Carpenter

+ Christian Century 66:822 Jl 6 '49 550w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie
Churchman 163:17 O 1 '49 150w

"This is a highly satisfactory book, and will doubtless be widely read and widely practiced by church workers." R. J. Havighurst
+ Crozer Q 26:270 Jl '49 900w

Survey 85:408 Jl '49 20w

MAXEY, CHESTER COLLINS. Political philosophies. rev ed 712p $4.65 Macmillan

320.9 Political science—History 48-8912

Revised edition of a textbook on political philosophies which first appeared in 1938 (Book Review Digest 1939). The chapters dealing with twentieth century ideologies have been rewritten, and contemporary political thought re-evaluated. Chapter references. Index.

"As a whole, the text appears to be very adequate for its expressed purpose. It is readable, understandable, and consistent in analysis of the major ideologies. With respect to emphasis, however, two criticisms may be offered. First, the brief chapter on medieval contributions appears insufficient. Secondly, treatment of twentieth-century socialism and communism would not seem to provide the basis of political understanding required by the undergraduate." T. P. Jenkin
+ — Am Pol Sci R 43:181 F '49 260w

"Some of the emendations are rather amusing. In the chapter on the Fascist state, for instance, the 'versatile Benito' of 1938 has become the 'voluble Benito.' . . In the chapter on democracy, the arguments have been pointed up, but remain virtually the same. This chapter is one of the best in the book; the criticisms of democracy have been fairly and objectively weighed, and the arguments in favor of the democratic way of life are measured and well stated." W. T. Jones
Ann Am Acad 262:206 Mr '49 400w

Booklist 45:213 F 15 '49

"Every student of political thought must have felt at times a sense of disillusionment, so frequently is it partisan and Jesuitical. In many cases it is deficient in knowledge yet long on theory. Nonetheless, political philosophies have always been among the great moving forces of human behavior. The purpose of this book is to serve as a textbook for students, telling the story of the most illustrious political thinkers and their works."
School & Society 68:375 N 27 '48 80w

MAXWELL, GILBERT. Sleeping trees. 285p $3 Little

49-11756

On the day of Elizabeth Shepherd's second wedding several people in the little southern town of Mallby took stock of themselves. Elizabeth herself, daughter of the town's most respected family, mentally reviewed her disastrous first marriage, and came to grips with the problem of her second marriage to a returned soldier, not yet quite readjusted. Elizabeth's father finally gave up the love of his youth; and her mother made an important decision about her own marriage.

Booklist 46:76; 125 N 1 '49; D 1 '49

"Readers of Gilbert Maxwell's novel, 'The Sleeping Trees,' may not be surprised to learn he has been associated with the theatre. For his book has all the qualities of a 'well made play.' It is a tightly constructed, romantic novel which describes the effect of a wedding on the people in a small Southern town." Florence Medow
+ Chicago Sun N 15 '49 190w

Kirkus 17:485 S 1 '49 170w

"Offers an interesting plot which will be popular rental fare." E. P. Nichols
Library J 74:1675 N 1 '49 100w

Reviewed by Barbara Anderson
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 20 '49 600w

"Mr. Maxwell has spared no horses that might give his story dramatic impact. There is even the beautiful child substituted for the deformed one; and the unwed mother who watches unselfishly from the sidelines. This reviewer admits to morbid fascination with the whole unhappy situation and recommends 'The Sleeping Trees' to travelers by land, sea, and air who wish to be diverted from the elements." Charlotte Capers
N Y Times p45 N 13 '49 320w

"The novel concerning a wedding in a small Southern town is becoming almost a genre, with such worthy representatives as Eudora Welty's 'Delta Wedding' and Carson McCuller's 'Member of the Wedding' setting a hard pace for the late comers. Gilbert Maxwell's contribution, 'The Sleeping Trees,' doesn't stand up to these, but it's an admirable first novel for all that. . . And even if the people talk like few South Georgians you're likely to encounter, for all their startling eccentricities, they do think and act and achieve their various ends in a startlingly lifelike way." F. R. Smith
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:28 D 24 '49 320w

Reviewed by M. A. Russell
Springf'd Republican p17A Ja 8 '50 300w

MAY, HENRY FARNHAM. Protestant churches and industrial America. 297p $3.50 Harper

261 Protestantism. Church and labor. Church and social problems 49-8159

"A study of the stand of five major denominations—Presbyterian, Congregationalist, Baptist, Methodist, and Episcopalian—on social problems in the nineteenth century; it shows the gradual development from a firm backing of the status quo to the more challenging stand of social Christianity in the late 1870's." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. I. Abell
Am Hist R 55:226 O '49 320w

Am Soc R 14:825 D '49 250w

Booklist 45:328 Je 1 '49

Churchman 163:6 O 1 '49 750w

"This is an interesting and important review of the development of Protestant thought and action during the Nineteenth Century and especially its impact upon the social and industrial life of America. It is valuable as a background to the problems which the church faces today, and for those interested in American church history it is a notable contribution."
+ Kirkus 17:140 Mr 15 '49 150w

"In the objectivity and inclusiveness of May's account the student of America, past and present, will find a comprehensive chapter, without a knowledge of which he can hardly begin to understand his subject." Perry Miller
+ Nation 168:688 Je 18 '49 1050w

"There have been many studies of American history in the late nineteenth century, but none so adequate as this in dealing with the religious factor. There have been a number of studies of the 'outbreak of reform' in the so-called 'social gospel' during this period, but none so closely allied with a comprehensive understanding of American social history. . . The author deals cautiously with theological issues. Against some of his own evidence, he clings to the notion that liberalism in theology naturally leads to liberal social views, conservative theology to conservative social views. In range of interest, however, and abundance of material held together under a single perspective, this book is a 'must' for the serious reader, historian and student of religion." Paul Ramsey
+ — N Y Times p3 Ap 10 '49 550w

MAY, JACQUES MEYER. See Meyer May, J.

MAY, STELLA (BURKE) (MRS EARL CHAPIN MAY). Let's read about Brazil; il. by Kreigh Collins. 120p $2.95 Fideler

918.1 Brazil—Juvenile literature 48-11661

A study of the history, industries, and present-day life of Brazil for older boys and girls. Illustrated with photographs and drawings. Glossary. No index.

MAY, STELLA—Continued

Booklist 45:229 Mr 1 '49

"Recommended for ages 9-12." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 74:382 Mr 1 '49 80w

"There is a good deal of valuable information about Brazil as it is today in this book, and the photographs are very well selected and reproduced. . . It is very much like a guide-book —simple, objective and revealing." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 32:35 Ja 8 '49 80w

Springf'd Republican p14A Ja 23 '49 120w

MAYALL, ROBERT NEWTON, and MAYALL, MARGARET L. (WALTON). Skyshooting; hunting the stars with your camera. 174p il $3.75 Ronald

522.63 Astronomical photography 49-10863

A volume of information designed to help amateur astronomers and camera enthusiasts to photograph aurorae, meteors, stars, planets. In addition to instruction in the use of cameras there is also background material on astronomy, telescopes, and other equipment. The aim has been "to write a book that will enable anyone to get properly started as a skyshooter, know where he is going, and be reasonably sure of success." (Pref) Index.

"The Mayalls begin a most instructive book on photographing night skies by giving those with only a Brownie box camera something to do. But for skyscanners who are more ambitious and willing to work at a most intriguing hobby the book contains a wealth of material on telescopes, mountings, cameras, lenses, shutters, observatories and other projects to interest the amateur." H. B. Nichols

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 17 '49 420w

"A very pleasant pastime of scientific interest, made easy by explicit instructions."

+ Library J 74:1680 N 1 '49 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:82 N '49

MAYBERRY, GEORGE, ed. Little treasury of American prose; the major writers from colonial times to the present day; with an introduction. 954p il $5 Scribner

810.8 American literature—Collections 49-4575

An anthology of American prose from colonial times to the present. It includes fiction, essays, literary criticism, political, religious and philosophical writings. It is selected to give examples of the work of the more important writers and is arranged chronologically. Includes some portraits. Index of authors and titles.

Canadian Forum 29:139 S '49 650w

"Students of the history of American literature may well use this as collateral reading, but probably its greatest use will be by those readers who will enjoy it because it contains a large amount and variety of good stuff in sections short enough for convenience but long enough to be substantial. . . Thin paper and a compact format make the volume as easy to the hand as it is to the eye." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 66:1328 N 9 '49 210w

Kirkus 17:321 Je 15 '49 240w

"Two sections are particularly weak—that of literary criticism, which is full of inexplicable gaps and even odder choices, and that covering the novelists of the past decade. Nevertheless, most of Mr. Mayberry's selections were wisely made, and a few of them, like Austin Regier's statement to the court on his refusal to register for the draft this year, are major discoveries."

+ — New Yorker 25:63 D 24 '49 200w

Reviewed by Robert Halsband

Sat R of Lit 32:44 D 3 '49 220w

MAYER, EDWIN L. No man alone. 280p $3 Boni & Gaer

48-11713

"A binge, a jail sentence, and an enforced stay in Mexico involve an ideologically confused American truck driver with a big beer baron, a native girl out for security, and a dumb half-caste out for the workers of the world. The right way is made clear at violent cost." Sat R of Lit

---

Booklist 45:178 Ja 15 '49

Reviewed by Feike Feikema

Chicago Sun p9X Ja 16 '49 270w

"A pretty barren work of fiction."

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ja 16 '49 130w

"Mexico, the minor characters, trucking (which, incidentally, Mr. Mayer makes interesting), everything in the book except Snuffy is authentic, and this first novel, written with humor, warmth and boyish enthusiasm for gore, touches with uncommon freshness many of the problems of our time." James Munves

+ N Y Times p21 Ja 30 '49 200w

"Mr. Mayer's book has the distinction of being the first novel to describe a romance in terms of truck driving. But that is about all it has." W. R. W.

San Francisco Chronicle p26 Mr 20 '49 120w

"Mr. Mayer has essayed a novel in the manner of Steinbeck. Whether wittingly or not, the mark of imitation, of derivation is on it. Rough fibered, coarse, heavy with brawn, drunken brawls, easy sex, and brutal loyalties, the fundamental brotherhood of man actually sets the key. . . A mechanical precision, a pulsing sense of the machine controlled by man, and one unforgettable night ride contribute what excitement there is to this tale of toughness without tenderness." C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 32:20 Ja 15 '49 140w

MAYER, RALPH. Painter's craft; an introduction to artists' materials. 218p il $5 Van Nostrand

751 Artists' materials 48-9216

"This book is both designed as a text for class or workshop instruction and as a guide for the practicing painter who wishes to acquire by independent study a systematic knowledge of the standard data relating to the craft on which his art is based. It presents the basic background knowledge that any artist must have in order to succeed as a competent professional or amateur." (Pref) Books for additional reading. Index.

Booklist 45:174 Ja 15 '49

"This is most certainly not a book for amateurs, unless they have had a year or two of experience. It is designed primarily for students and practicing painters, who are unable or unwilling to use the bigger standard work, Max Doerner's 'The Materials of the Artist and Their Use in Painting.' For everyday use Mayer's book is a splendid help for all but the most difficult problems, and it is accompanied by lucid illustrations." W. G. Dooley

+ N Y Times p10 D 19 '48 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p9 D 26 '48 100w

Reviewed by L. R. Sander

Sat R of Lit 32:33 My 7 '49 90w

MAYFIELD, FRANK MCCONNELL. Department store story. 260p $5 Fairchild

658.871 Department stores 49-9151

In three parts the author gives the history of the origin and development of the American department store, and a discussion of its organization and operation. The author has been, since 1925, president of Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney, in St Louis. Bibliography.

Booklist 45:387 Jl 15 '49

"Highly entertaining and informative book."

+ Management R 38:589 O '49 60w

MAYNARD, HAROLD BRIGHT, and others. Methods-time measurement. 292p il $3.75 McGraw

658.542 Time study. Motion study 48-7173

"A methods-time measurement procedure which supplements time and motion study in establishing production standards. This is an outgrowth of methods improvement study in setting standards, and eliminates, to a large extent, the factor of personal judgment. Use limited to technicians concerned with production methods or time and motion study, and plant engineers." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 45:132 D 15 '48

"It is an important book and the first authoritative treatment of the development and application of predetermined motion study standards." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 73:45 Ja 1 '48 80w

Reviewed by W. L. Ganong

Management R 38:57 Ja '49 1050w

MAYNARD, THEODORE. Henry the Eighth. (Science and culture ser) 431p $3.75 Bruce pub.

B or 92 Henry VIII, king of England 49-9424

"The story [is] of Henry VIII by a Catholic writer. . . To a large extent, Mr. Maynard's book is a rescue. He denies the common image of Henry VIII as a lusty, sensual old bluebeard and is inclined to think him rather under than over-sexed. He is even prone to believe that Henry was perfectly honest in his claim that his conscience was disturbed about his marriage to Katherine of Aragon, being contrary to the law of God (because she had been his brother's wife)." San Francisco Chronicle

"Here is the story of Henry Eighth's reign brought into biographical focus and presented in that pleasant style characteristic of the author's work. If history is biography writ large this is how to write it. At a time of intense specialization in historical as in other fields, it is refreshing to find a book which gathers together the threads of recent scholarship into so readable a narrative." Robert Wilberforce

+ Cath World 169:473 S '49 450w

"Mr. Maynard is well known as a writer of sound and popular biography. But in 'Henry the Eighth' he has missed the intensity of the man in untangling the history of the reign. . . But the surprising thing about the book is . . . that Mr. Maynard has been able to organize a record so full of perjury and forgery, torture, suppression and official malfeasance into so coherent and readable an account. Throughout the narrative he is conscientiously fair. . . The reader who is approaching for the first time the Henrician period . . . will find this book as complete and useful a compilation of all the standing scholarship as he could wish. The reader who has already had some experience with the discrepancies and paradoxes of the Tudor epoch will find that Mr. Maynard has contributed a good many new and balancing insights." M. M. Ahern

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 14 '49 650w

"Regardless of Mr. Maynard's personal position, he has turned out a fair and well-told account of events that were to change the course of history. As a scholar, his narrative is sound. As a writer, he has placed living characters upon his pages and created an eminently readable book." E. M. Tainton

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Je 26 '49 850w

MAYORGA, MRS MARGARET (GARDNER), ed. Best one-act plays, 1948-1949. 277p $3 Dodd

812.08 Dramas—Collections (38-8006)

Contents: For each man kills, by Gerty Agoston; Fortunata writes a letter, by Theodore Apstein; A bed with the others, by S. G. Williamson and Joseph Shore; Whistle, daughter, whistle, by Ernest Kinoy; A wake for me and thee, by Ward Costello; Patrick Brontë and the saint, by Barbara Packer; Mind in the shadow, by Arnold Perl; O distant land, by Stanley Richards; Wantin' fever (a play with music), by E. W. Hughes; Impasse, by F. A. Woodress. Bibliographies. Selected plays of the year available for production in America and New collections of one-act plays available for production in America.

Booklist 45:351 Je 15 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '49

"Miss Mayorga proposes 'to acquaint the reader with dramas that illumine or excite or compel or charm.' Many of these qualities shine through the various pages. This collection should be valuable to all school groups that use the one-act play production and to the new outlet of television. Certainly this is a proving ground for writers to come." Margo Jones

+ N Y Times p21 Je 12 '49 450w

Reviewed by Rochelle Gibson

Sat R of Lit 32:31 D 31 '49 150w

MAYRANT, DRAYTON, pseud. See Simons, K. D. M.

MAYSE, ARTHUR. Perilous passage. 247p $3 Morrow

49-4737

"A novel of love, intrigue and violence in British Columbia and Oregon wherein an 18-year-old girl runs a farm like a man would and hopes to find the murderer of her father. Devvy Calahan is the girl and Clint Farrell is the man she hires and several times almost fires. Certain evil-minded people are eager to eliminate Clint and get the girl and her farm, and the way the villains hang themselves provides sufficient suspense." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 45:383; 46:14 Jl 15 '49; S 1 '49

"Good reading."

+ Kirkus 17:258 My 15 '49 150w

"The novel of amnesia and suspense now enters the $3 price class, but if they are all as good as this one, libraries can afford them—occasionally." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 74:1024 Jl '49 70w

"Excellently written, by one who is thoroughly at home in the Canadian-American tidewater country." S. M. N.

Springf'd Republican p7C O 9 '49 90w

MEAD, EDWARD SHEPHERD. Magnificent MacInnes. 255p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

49-9709

A satire on the opinion-tester angles in the advertising game. The hero of the tale is an elderly gentleman, a retired bank clerk, who is absolutely accurate in his sensitivity to public taste—knowing at once what color of shaving cream, what novel, what radio program will be most popular thruout the nation.

Booklist 45:366; 393 Jl 1 '49; Jl 15 '49

"Breezy and pleasant time-passing."

+ Kirkus 17:257 My 15 '49 170w

"A spoof with a twist. It's fun." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 74:1024 Jl '49 100w

"With all its spoofing, 'The Magnificent MacInnes' has a flinty core of philosophy." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Jl 24 '49 360w

"To use a few poll-tested phrases, 'The Magnificent MacInnes' is a witty, fast-moving, frequently trenchant satire, although inevitably the thread of Mr. Mead's invention sometimes runs a little thin." J. C.

+ — N Y Times p14 Jl 24 '49 400w

"The author's gimmick is a good one, if you like gimmicks; his story is neatly constructed up to a point, and for all I know these poll-taking people may talk with the weird glibness that he assigns to them. If they do, their conversations were better not recorded. But once the basic joke has been stated and restated and played upon, the story settles down more and more to the old one about the ad man who hurts inside." John Brooks

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:16 Ag 13 '49 750w

MEAD, MARGARET (MRS GREGORY BATESON). Male and female; a study of the sexes in a changing world. 477p $5 Morrow

392 Sex. Anthropology 49-10784

"An extensive study of males and females as children and as adults, this draws heavily upon information the author gained from her first hand study of people of seven Pacific islands. With this as a background the reader is shown more clearly some of the basic relationships between men and women that are obscured by our modern ways of life in America. Sex differences and similarities, traits and problems are discussed vividly and humanly. Book should be of interest to any inquiring mind as well as to the anthropologist." (Library J) Bibliographies. Index.

Atlantic 185:88 Ja '50 150w

Booklist 46:59 O 15 '49

Reviewed by L. J. Trese
Commonweal 51:242 D 2 '49 1250w

Kirkus 17:420 Ag 1 '49 250w

"Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 74:1196 S 1 '49 100w

"Any book that attempts so much runs into difficulties. As Dr. Mead is aware, her readers will find it hard to keep straight the threads of seven South Sea cultures, or the seven times seven threads in the American pattern, even though this is limited to the middle class in the East and Midwest. In my opinion there is not sufficient accent on a limited number of themes, but instead a too-great receptivity to concepts from the whole panorama of the human sciences." David Reisman
Nation 169:376 O 15 '49 1950w

"This is a vast, turbulent book, stuffed with facts, which will be called incoherent by those who do not want the trouble of reading it, but which is actually too completely coherent for the incoherence of the average modern mind, since it consists of a number of interwoven arguments which are closely related and will none of them remain comprehensible if all are not followed. It is turbulent because Margaret Mead is a genius of the prophetic sort, and she occasionally froths at the mouth like an oracle in trance, and because it evokes what turbulence may be in the reader's mind by its attacks on the culture of which he is a part." Rebecca West
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 O 16 '49 2450w

"The majority of readers will not be shocked by the novelty of the author's revaluations. They may, on the other hand, be aghast at the breadth of her generalizations and the neatness of her correlations. Some will strike the general reader as far-fetched. As for Dr. Mead's professional colleagues, this restatement of her position is not likely to remove the doubt of its scientific validity. It may be that the author's views ought not to be judged scientifically but should be taken for what they are—brilliant insights, momentary illuminations of what may lie behind a culture. . . Dr. Mead's book has done her own culture an important service. It has come to grips with the cold war between the sexes and has shown the basis of a lasting sexual peace." Bernard Mishkin
+ — N Y Times p7 O 16 '49 850w

"Dr. Mead hasn't produced a jeremiad on this subject, as have commentators from other fields, mostly because of her admiration for the realistic outlook of the younger generation. Her attitude of vigorous omniscience, however, may well give rise to more skepticism than her arguments do, since by her own admission anthropology is still a 'science of clues,' the interpretation of which is a tricky affair."
+ — New Yorker 25:133 N 5 '49 220w

"Here it is refreshing to find the emphasis focused on male maladjustment in contrast to female attitudes and needs. It is even more relevant to find in Dr. Mead's book a treatment of sex in human and social context. Here are no 'catalogues of caresses arranged in frequency tables' to further bewilder the youth trying to come to terms with his own stresses and those of a rigorously idealistic society. By enlarging the framework in which sex relationships operate and indicating how they may be made to operate more creatively, Dr. Mead has charted out some very promising clearings in the jungle of our own sex folk-lore." G. G. S.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p30 O 16 '49 550w

"This book poses many new problems and offers many new solutions for old ones. It will enrich the working library of the psychoanalyst as well as of the anthropologist. Since it conveys with sincerity and warmth that 'observation and analysis can be carried on with affection constructive both for those who study and who are studied,' it will spread tolerance and understanding, and this is, beyond the scientific, the ethical purpose of this work." Therese Benedek
+ Sat R of Lit 32:10 O 15 '49 850w

"A book of great importance to thoughtful Americans. . . It is the work of a sound anthropologist who uses her knowledge of human beings and her observations of seven separate Pacific island cultures existing today to examine the basic human relationships that every human society has had to invent." H. S.
+ Sat R of Lit 32:22 O 15 '49 650w

+ School & Society 70:224 O 1 '49 60w

Springf'd Republican p8C N 13 '49 650w

"Miss Mead's mind is infinitely perceptive and flexible. It is not to the same degree disciplined and coherent. As in many of her past works and like an increasing number of her fellow scientists, Miss Mead does not try to avoid socially responsible conclusions. From research and personal experience she properly attempts to formulate and to plead a value judgment. . . The reader will be well advised to begin his exploration of Margaret Mead's four hundred pages by first reading Chapter XVIII. He will be helped not only to understand the book but, as importantly, to share in the ethically phrased distillate of an intelligent woman's experiences in this and many foreign countries." Cora Du Bois
+ Survey 85:554 O '49 1650w

MEADER, STEPHEN WARREN. Cedar's Boy; il. by Lee Townsend. 234p $2.50 Harcourt

49-10523

Story of harness racing at the County Fair for grades seven to nine. Several of the characters from the author's earlier book Red Horse Hill (Book Review Digest 1930) appear in this book.

Booklist 46:53 O 1 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King
+ Chicago Sun S 17 '49 220w

Reviewed by Agatha Shea
Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 D 4 '49 50w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p6 O 27 '49 240w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:532 N '49 90w

Kirkus 17:467 S 1 '49 100w

"A good tale. Recommended." M. A. Webb
+ Library J 74:1762 N 15 '49 40w

"The illustrator knows both fairs and horses as intimately as does the author. Grown-ups who never miss the Hambletonian would enjoy this story as much as boys." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 13 '49 230w

"Mr. Meader has a knack of making his minor characters vivid—sometimes almost more so than his main characters—and this book is rich with them. A pleasant, well-knit story, it is rich also in realistic background of a favorite American institution, the county fair, as it still exists where harness racing has not been supplanted by midget autos." F. C. Smith
+ N Y Times p28 O 2 '49 150w

"This is not only a good story. It is a slice of New England, as spicy and tasty as the apple pie that it tells about." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:32 N 12 '49 110w

Springf'd Republican p8C O 30 '49 120w

MEANS, MRS FLORENCE (CRANNELL). House under the hill; il. by Helen Blair. 184p $2.50 Houghton
49-11585

"A story of the Spanish-speaking people of New Mexico. The heroine, Elena Trujillo, longs to get away from the little mountain village, but finds that her work and her happiness are there, after all." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 46:143 D 15 '49

"There is a love story and a wedding and all the things girls want in a story, treated with the right kind of emphasis." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 170:211 D '49 100w

"This is a vivid portrayal of life in the village of Mirador in New Mexico. . . Readers will close the book feeling they have found a new friend. As colorful as a winter in Santa Fe, the story is an introduction to the people which no winter visitor could have."

+ Chicago Sun p6X N 13 '49 300w

"Her story is as gay, as moody, as eager by turns as Elena herself. The author writes out of first hand knowledge of the idiom and viewpoint of the people."

+ Kirkus 17:511 S 15 '49 160w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 29 '50 90w

N Y Times p11 D 25 '49 180w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:31 N 12 '49 50w

Wis Lib Bul p15 D '49

MEANY, TOM. Baseball's greatest teams. 276p il $3 Barnes, A.S.
796.357 Baseball 49-8449

Anecdotes, character sketches, and statistical records of sixteen teams. Those chosen for review are: 1909 Pirates, 1927 Yankees, 1942 Cardinals, 1929 Athletics, 1915 Red Sox, 1917 White Sox, 1941 Dodgers, 1908 Cubs, 1909 Tigers, 1920 Indians, 1919 Reds, 1914 Braves, 1921 Giants, 1922 Browns, 1924 Senators, 1915 Phillies. Index.

Booklist 45:318 My 15 '49

Reviewed by Ed Rumill
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 My 14 '49 250w

"Personalities live long in baseball memories; and good baseball makes good reading. This is good baseball."

+ Kirkus 17:195 Ap 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 74:737 My 1 '49 20w

"An absolutely essential item in any respectable baseball library." J. K. Hutchens

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 My 29 '49 90w

MEDARY, MARJORIE. Prairie printer; decorations by Manning DeV. Lee. 288p $2.75 Longmans 49-9720

This sequel to Buckeye Boy (Book Review Digest 1944) follows "the further adventures of Tom Kenyon, Ohio printer of 1856, as he heads westward to the Iowa frontier, still seeking to know himself and to find his true vocation in life." (Foreword) Bibliography.

Booklist 45:400 Jl 15 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun O 22 '49 120w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 N 13 '49 190w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 S 8 '49 240w

"Her characterizations are excellent and a considerable bibliography is evidence of her extensive research." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 25:419 S '49 120w

Kirkus 17:270 Je 1 '49 170w

"Schools will want it for history classes; good political as well as social background of the 1850 period. More appealing to boys, but girls will enjoy the slight romance." M. J. Meade

+ Library J 74:1105 Ag '49 70w

"An excellent piece of historical fiction, unusually well written." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 14 '49 270w

"This story and 'Buckeye Boy' combine to give a fine portrait of an old-time printer-editor in the making, that versatile figure so influential in his day. It gives also a vivid picture of a critical period in our country's history. For 'teen-aged readers." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p24 Ag 28 '49 180w

"This is a thoroughly American story of struggle and final success, lightened by Tom's romance with pretty, redheaded Molly, and told against an excellent historical background." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 32:30 N 12 '49 50w

School & Society 69:456 Je 25 '49 20w

Springf'd Republican p7C O 9 '49 170w

MEEK, STERNER ST PAUL. Midnight: a cow pony. 217p $2.50 Knopf
Horses—Legends and stories 49-7596

"Midnight, beautiful black creature that he is, has things pretty much his own [way] on the great Texas cattle ranch that is his home. He owes love and allegiance to none; will not even allow most of the cowboys on his back. This is the story of his surrender and the story too of Bill, the mysterious cowboy he comes to love." Kirkus

Booklist 45:248 Mr 15 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Ap 23 '49 60w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 25 '49 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:212 My '49 90w

"If the mystery of Bill's identity is transparent from almost the beginning, it doesn't matter and only adds to the fun by placing the reader in friendly conspiracy with the hero and the loyal Midnight."

+ Kirkus 17:60 F 1 '49 100w

"Highly recommended for older boys and girls and all young adult collections." M. D. Read

+ Library J 74:500 Mr 15 '49 60w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 F 20 '49 150w

"Midnight is a worthy addition to the long line of animal heroes previously introduced by the author. The details of Texas ranch life ring true, and Bill Stephens and the other cowboys stand out as individuals. Readers of junior-high age and up will find this an exciting and satisfying story." Howard Boston

+ N Y Times p24 F 20 '49 170w

"Boys and girls will probably speak of this book as a Western. It is a good one."

+ Sat R of Lit 32:38 Mr 12 '49 180w

Wis Lib Bul 45:69 Ap '49

MEEK, STERNER ST PAUL. Ranger, a dog of the forest service. 232p $2.50 Knopf 49-10348

The exploits of Buzz, a Forest service officer, and his dog, Ranger. Together they rescue a drowning man, fight fires, battle a marauding bear, solve burglary and arson cases, and face death in a blizzard. In the end Buzz is promoted and becomes the youngest district ranger in the region. For boys 12 and up.

"A career book, with vocational values, and the author puts over the demands entailed by the service competently through an averagely good tale."

+ Kirkus 17:430 Ag 15 '49 70w

MEEK, S. S.—Continued

"A boy of 12 will enjoy this as a dog story, absorbing at the same time information about the Service. . . Recommended." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 74:1209 S 1 '49 70w

"The story is written in the colonel's usual brisk, journalistic informative style. The book is of obvious appeal to all who might have dreams of a job with this thrilling government service, or in commercial forestry work, and only secondarily as a good dog story." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 23 '49 190w

"The episodes are linked only by Buzz's rapid upward career, but they provide action to hold the interest of a teen-aged boy." F. C. Smith

N Y Times p13 S 4 '49 110w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R of Lit 32:33 N 12 '49 30w

MEEKER, ARTHUR. Prairie Avenue. 325p $3 Knopf

49-1455

A novel picturing the life of a well-to-do Chicago family at various periods between the 1880s and 1918. Much of the story of the Stack family is told as it was revealed to the eyes of Harvey Stack's nephew, Ned Ramsey, a twelve-year-old when he first went to live with his relatives and came under the spell of Aunt Lydia.

"Ned is a likeable narrator, sensitive and a natural confidant for his elders and contemporaries. The protagonist of the book, his Aunt Lydia Stack, as she grows in his understanding, reminds me of Miss Cather's Lost Lady. This picture of Chicago wealth in a small society was waiting for the right man: Mr. Meeker has made of it an evocative story less burly than the real thing but entertaining all the way through." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 184:83 Jl '49 210w

Booklist 45:234; 262 Mr 15 '49; Ap 1 '49

"It's fun to come across a book like this at a time when so much of our literature is brain-cudgeling or depressing; fun to follow a group of Croesuses as they strut their Aubusson-covered boards and to gaze in wide-eyed wonder from our well-taxed planks at an era that seems like a vision out of Harun-al-Rashid. . . Though the book has nostalgic and specific historical rather than literary value, it nevertheless makes good reading." M. P. Corcoran

+ Cath World 169:236 Je '49 300w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun p8X Ap 24 '49 700w

"Entertaining story of a colorful era, told with decency and restraint, humor and insight, and a sturdy but compassionate sense of values. It is unusually good Americana." O. D. Hormal

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 5 '49 800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '49

"There's nostalgia here for an older generation; there's a march of time, American-wise, for those who would explore the not so distant past of bedizened splendor and easy wealth; and there are the stories of the loves and deaths that made up life on Prairie Avenue."

Kirkus 17:89 F 15 '49 240w

"We haven't had such a good flesh-and-bones book in a long time. You'll need several copies." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 74:663 Ap 15 '49 70w

"Mr. Meeker tells the story of 'Prairie Avenue' skillfully, with much nostalgic charm and vivid detail on Chicago's mushroom growth during decades that were both grim and gay according to your power of view." David Tilden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 My 1 '49 470w

"Cultural analysis never seriously gets in the way of light and colorful entertainment." Ruth Page

N Y Times p16 My 1 '49 360w

New Yorker 25:107 Ap 30 '49 110w

"Polished craftmanship and a meticulous attention to detail characterize Arthur Meeker's new novel, 'Prairie Avenue.' It has a muted quality, is oblique and generally understated. A certain portion of the Chicago scene between 1885 and 1896, the most important of the years the book spans, is recreated with intense life and authenticity." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R of Lit 32:13 Ap 30 '49 800w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p5D Je 5 '49 360w

"'Prairie Avenue' revives, with a delicate and pleasant period sense, the prosperity and collapse of a street on Chicago's North Side in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. . . The first story, in which Ned as a precocious young boy gains a confused idea of the scandalous happenings around him, is the best of the three; but the other tales, though shorter and slighter, are told with equal freshness."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p805 D 9 '49 300w

MEEKS, MRS ESTHER K. Fireman Casey and fireboat 999; il. by Ernie King. [25p] $1 Wilcox & Follett

49-48409

"Fireman Casey was proud of his fine fast fireboat and proved himself a hero and won a medal when he saved the lives of Guiseppe, the fruit vendor, and his horse Mike. Details of fireboat life and equipment explained through the story." Library J

"Younger boys and girls who like to watch the dashing fire patrol and hook and ladder trucks go by, will find in this picture book another kind of fire fighter, the fire boat. . . An easy picture book with colorful pictures and eye catching board covers." A. L. Shea

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 D 11 '49 120w

"A really very satisfactory story book for small boys, which could be read aloud to the four and five year olds, and which second year readers could probably read to themselves."

+ Kirkus 17:625 N 15 '49 110w

Reviewed by M. A. Herr

Library J 74:1918 D 15 '49 50w

MEIER, NORMAN CHARLES, ed. Polls and public opinion. See Iowa conference on attitude and opinion research

MEIGS, CORNELIA LYNDE. Two arrows. 249p $2.50 Macmillan

49-11863

A historical-adventure story relating the experiences of two English boys in Maryland in the year 1745. For ages 10-14.

Booklist 46:162 Ja 1 '50

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 8 '49 230w

"While not the top level of Cornelia Meigs' performance, this has real quality and should provide a steady sale to school and public libraries."

+ Kirkus 17:471 S 1 '49 130w

"It wouldn't be a Cornelia Meigs book were there not an idea along with all the excitement. Here it is the earliest thinking toward a land with no king. It is a fine book for boys and girls of around twelve." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 18 '49 240w

"'The Two Arrows' is not one of Cornelia Meigs' best books. On the whole, the period becomes more real than some of the characters." A. N. F.

N Y Times p34 N 13 '49 110w

"Young readers (10-15) will find adventure here, along with a bit of romance and a great deal of American history."

San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 13 '49 70w

"It is a story that leaves one with a warm admiration for a writer who can create such varied and convincing characters, who can make a dramatic plot without melodrama, who can paint so vivid a background. This is a book of enduring value."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:37 D 10 '49 270w
Wis Lib Bul p11 N '49

MEIGS, CORNELIA LYNDE. Violent men; a study of human relations in the first American congress. 278p $4 Macmillan
973.312 U.S. Continental congress. U.S.—Politics and government—Revolution 49-9124

A history of the first Continental Congress, from the meeting in September, 1774, to July 4, 1776. Includes much biographical material on the leading men of the Congress, among them John Dickinson, Richard Henry Lee, Franklin, Jefferson, John and Samuel Adams. The author is professor of English at Bryn Mawr. Chronological table. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:352 Je 15 '49
+ Christian Century 66:1014 Ag 31 '49 250w

"Here and there in the book may be a scant item or an interpretation that some student of history will question. This is inevitable in a work that deals with scores of persons and detail that often has to be based on statements in sometimes biased letters. It indicates the writing ability of Cornelia Meigs . . . that she is able to give so much momentum to this account of opinions, debates, stubborn deadlocks, and gradual acceptance of the aims of the men who were at the beginning held to be violent." W. K. Rugg
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 8 '49 600w

Reviewed by Leander Danley
Churchman 163:18 S 1 '49 180w

"In a book so clear and simple as to be read eagerly by a young student, Cornelia Meigs presents a penetrating study of the Continental Congress from its inception in May, 1774, until July 4, 1776." Helen Fay
+ Horn Bk 25:297 Jl '49 240w

"Interesting reading, and historically sound, this should take a permanent place among students and followers of history and biography more substantial than most."
+ Kirkus 17:78 F 1 '49 190w

"The authorities who administer Philadelphia's Independence Hall could do much worse than keep this book permanently on sale in the entrance lobby. It admirably and vividly brings to life the men who once filled the 'white-paneled room of no very great proportions but of singular beauty' where the Declaration of Independence was signed. . . For all libraries." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 74:816 My 15 '49 130w

"Miss Meigs is a political reporter with wit, understanding of the motives that animate human beings convening together, and mastery of graceful prose. . . Analogies are dangerous, and it may be that we can learn little from our early history, but just the same it is a heartening experience to follow, through the eyes of a gifted writer, the trials and ultimate triumphs of as great-hearted a group of gallant under-dog fighters as ever met under the American sun." McAlister Coleman
+ Nation 168:665 Je 11 '49 1050w

"The present author has steered a skillful course between the shoals of hero-worship on the one hand and disillusionment on the other. Her Continental Congressmen are understandable, fallible, likable, walking the streets of a Philadelphia that also comes alive." E. H. Smith
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 Je 12 '49 700w

"There are few volumes on the American Revolution, or any phase of it, written with the insight, freshness and color of this book. Furthermore, with two general exceptions, the work stands up well in scholarship. . . The story, vividly and, on the whole, reliably told by Miss Meigs, is marred by two general defects in scholarship. The first is an inordinate number of minor errors. The other, and more serious is the use of reminiscences, unsupported by contemporaneous documents, as evidence." Bernhard Knollenberg
+ — N Y Times p6 Je 12 '49 1000w

"This is a particularly well done historical essay in which the first Continental Congress is studied with enthusiasm, with justifiable literary license, and with high ability. . . This is easy, painless and thoroughly pleasant history, solidly based on great scholarship and enlivened by literary skill, enthusiastic sympathy and admiration." C. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 11 '49 350w

"The value of this book lies in its excursions into the byways of history, its portraits of men and women, its accounts of the social life of Philadelphia. It does not lie in its interpretation of the basic issues between 1774-76 and of the men who debated them." Merrill Jensen
+ Sat R of Lit 32:15 Ag 27 '49 800w

MEIGS, ELIZABETH BLEECKER. Silver quest; drawings by Frederick T. Chapman. 173p $2.50 Bobbs
Horses—Legends and stories 49-8207

A story of Mexico in 1823 and a little girl's love of a wild silver stallion. In giving the horse its freedom Chela sees the beginning of the fulfillment of a dream.

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Ag 20 '49 200w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p7 Jl 28 '49 300w

"Characters are all tenderly drawn. Mexican ranch background is colorful. Young Chela's fight with herself to give the stallion his freedom shows understanding and courage that other youngsters may take to heart. Recommended for readers, especially girls, of from ten to fourteen years." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 74:670 Ap 15 '49 70w

"When Miss Meigs writes about the horse, and the horse and the girl, her story is true and moving and will certainly appeal to teenagers. But I think this book would have been far better if the horse as a symbol of freedom had not been so heavily accented and explained." Marjorie Fischer
+ — N Y Times p10 Jl 3 '49 190w

"Chela is an appealing character and there are some dramatic moments in her story. In both text and pictures the stallion is a memorable figure." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:38 Je 11 '49 140w

MEISEL, MARIANNE STEIFF (FINTON) (MARIANNE ROANE, pseud). Face of love. 268p $3 Scribner
49-10108

"At fifty-two Dan Fugate decided he was tired of being bossed by his wife and adoring daughter. With divorce in mind he became an easy prey to the blandishment of Ghislaine Turo falling so deeply in love with her that neither her amoral actions nor his family's efforts could separate him from her." Library J

"The style of the book is smooth and in Martin Turo there is an arresting portrait of a modern refugee striving to fit into middle-class, Mid-Western America. This is not enough, however, to redeem a book that is pagan and sordid."
— + Cath World 170:79 O '49 100w
Kirkus 17:367 Jl 15 '49 160w

"This trivial story is overburdened with sex in its least attractive aspects. Not recommended." H. R. Forbes
— Library J 74:1095 Ag '49 70w

"Marianne Roane's second novel is a curiously uneven book, combining areas of solid, luminous, rewarding narrative with stretches of writing that are slickly superficial. At her best Miss Roane's characters emerge as subtle, profoundly realized human beings. At her worst the characterization is wooden, the dialogue is glib. On the whole good outweighs bad." Blythe Morley

MEISEL, M. S.—Continued
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ag 28 '49 410w

"Miss Roane has chosen a theme that calls for a profound treatment of emotion and human relationships. Because she has not yet developed a technique adequate to the theme, she suffers the fate that comes to so many young writers with their second book. She flounders between attempts at a literary style and an easy surrender to the slick. The result is a hybrid novel. It does not satisfy the reader artistically, and it does not entertain. . . Yet for all its faults of style 'The Face of Love' does contain some pertinent thoughts. Miss Roane's theme, that of emotional self-sufficiency, is an important one." Hilda Osterhout
— + N Y Times p20 Ag 7 '49 360w

"Miss Roane displays a great deal of understanding of her people and their predicaments, but she fails to make any of them seem worth her trouble or her talent."
— + New Yorker 25:108 S 10 '49 160w

Reviewed by Marc Rivette
San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 23 '49 220w

"Miss Roane is an extremely able writer, and she presents these people and the various minor characters who help create their dramatic situation, with insight and sympathy. But one feels that the face of Love here shown is only one of Love's many faces. . . It is engrossing as a study of a singular and complex group of people for whom one feels, as the author feels, great sympathy. But it left this reviewer, at any rate, unsatisfied as to its true profundity." S. H. Hay
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:13 Ag 20 '49 410w

MELAND, BERNARD EUGENE. America's spiritual culture. 216p $2.50 Harper
277.3 U.S.—Religion 48-7613

"In a discussion divided into three parts, Part I first describes Christianity as an 'island enterprise,' in retreat, uprooted by modern culture and confused in its relation to nationalism. Part II adventures into the thickly ambiguous tanglewood of the relation between church and state; Part III fashions glowing vistas of regional renascence on New Spiritual Frontiers. The book may be considered as having a 'concern' about the traditional American doctrine of the separation of church and state." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

Reviewed by R. E. Gilmore
Christian Century 66:679 Je 1 '49 350w

"The timeliness of this book cannot be over-estimated; it is the voice of prophecy speaking to us; read it!" C. L. Willard
+ Churchman 163:16 My 1 '49 240w

"This is a book for the scholar-theologian or sociologist."
+ Kirkus 16:508 O 1 '48 130w
School & Society 68:192 S 18 '48 20w
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:39 Mr '49 260w

MELAND, BERNARD EUGENE. Reawakening of Christian faith. 125p $2 Macmillan
201 Christianity 49-7691

"These are recent Clark Lectures, given at Pomona College, Claremont, California. [Dr Meland is] a theologian, dealing with 'The Nature of the Human Problem,' 'The Meaning of the Christian faith' and 'Understanding Our Existence.' . . Every page bears witness to the necessity of freeing the human spirit from two major threats: a cold and despairing intellectualism and an equally frustrating sentimental ambiguity." Churchman

---

"Students in the fields of theology and philosophy of religion will eagerly await Prof. Meland's more systematic production. He has made a good start toward a systematic expression of a theology which embraces and amplifies the philosophical insights of Whitehead (principally) and others. . . In the meantime, his practical statements of modern-day problems in religion are interesting and penetrating, and the literary qualities of his writings are refreshing." R.E. Gilmore
+ Christian Century 66:679 Je 1 '49 350w

"Dr. Meland discusses his subject with a convinced and compelling earnestness." M. L. Eglinton
+ Churchman 163:15 D 1 '49 120w

"This is a book which will be of especial interest to theologians, philosophers and educators."
+ Kirkus 17:57 F 1 '49 130w

MELCHER, DANIEL, and LARRICK, NANCY. Printing and promotion handbook. 386p il $6 McGraw 655.03 Advertising. Printing, Practical—Dictionaries 49-8863

"How to plan, produce, and use printing, advertising, and direct mail." (Subtitle) The arrangement is alphabetical, and the book contains information that is often difficult to obtain. "For people—including beginners—who have to buy printing and direct mail services; for people who have to plan or prepare advertising, publicity, or information material of any kind, from covering letters to bound books; for anyone, in fact, who attempts to influence others by the printed or duplicated word. It also discusses films, recordings, and radio as intrinsic parts of a complete publicity or information program." (How to use this book) Bibliography. List of graphic arts films.

Booklist 45:370 Jl 1 '49

"A must for librarians who find occasion to issue some piece of promotional literature from time to time is this new 386 page volume. . . This [is a] comprehensive, practical, easy-to-use handbook which easily classifies with that small and select group of indispensables known as ready reference manuals. . . If they can get it away from the librarian long enough this handbook should prove immensely useful to business men, writers, public relations practitioners, advertising workers, and other builders of good will." Kate Coplan
+ Library J 74:819 My 15 '49 280w
Wis Lib Bul p8 D '49

MELVILLE, HERMAN. Complete stories; ed. with an introd. and notes, by Jay Leyda. 472p $4 Random house 49-8911

Fifteen short stories written between the years 1853 and 1856. Six of the stories were published in Piazza Tales (1856), eight in magazines of the 1850's, and one was never published in Melville's lifetime. Contents: Bartleby; The Encantadas or Enchanted isles; Cock-a-doodle-doo! or The crowing of the noble cock Beneventano; Poor man's pudding and rich man's crumbs; The happy failure: a story of the River Hudson; The fiddler; Jimmy Rose; Benito Cereno; The bell-tower; I and my chimney; The apple-tree table or Original spiritual manifestations.

Booklist 46:125 D 1 '49
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 18 '49 800w

"Most of the pieces in this book, the complete collection of stories assembled for the first time between covers, are typical Melville and should be read by anyone wishing to understand one of our greatest writers. Such a reader will find the stories their own reward." Donald Demarest
+ Commonweal 50:229 Je 10 '49 390w
Kirkus 17:159 Mr 15 '49 30w

"A valuable collection, useful in restoring to circulation the neglected work of a major figure now the object of a revival of interest." H. W. Hart
+ Library J 74:546 Ap 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by David Daiches
New Repub 121:18 Ag 22 '49 700w
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Je 19 '49 260w

Reviewed by Harvey Breit
N Y Times p4 My 8 '49 850w

"Mr. Leyda has assembled all fifteen of Melville's known stories and near-stories in a careful edition graced with notes and an intelligent and useful introduction. The book's principal flaw is Mr. Leyda's frequently expressed conviction, perhaps pardonable in an editor, that all the stories are extraordinarily subtle masterworks."
+ — New Yorker 25:102 My 28 '49 130w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 32:37 Je 4 '49 200w

MELVILLE, HERMAN. Pierre; or, The ambiguities; ed. by Henry A. Murray. (Hendricks house publication) 504p $5 Farrar, Straus
49-1434

"The third volume in the Hendricks House-Farrar Straus edition of 'The Complete Works of Herman Melville' is the strange novel, semi-autobiographical, which Melville wrote immediately after 'Moby Dick' (and published a year later, in 1852). It bears little resemblance to the great demonic story of Ahab and his whale. . . [In his introduction] Mr. Murray chooses to ignore many of the esthetic questions the book inevitably raises, and to concentrate on psychological analysis." N Y Times

---

Reviewed by J. C. Levenson
New Eng Q 22:419 S '49 900w

Reviewed by David Daiches
New Repub 121:18 Ag 22 '49 700w

"Dr. Murray's Introduction is almost a fourth as long as 'Pierre,' and the accumulated notes at the end of the volume about a sixth as long. If this seems a burdensome equipment, as it does, at any rate the introduction is a valuable study, by far the best I have seen, of this dark and tormented novel. . . It took a trained psychologist to show how far Melville in this book moved on the level of reason, and how far he was affected by the levels of passion and instinct out of which the book came, not merely out of the reason."
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 F 27 '49 330w

Reviewed by Harvey Breit
N Y Times p22 Mr 20 '49 400w

" 'Pierre' is one of the monumental fiascoes of American literature, its first two-thirds being a ludicrous and embarrassing imitation of Cooper and Poe; only in the last third does Melville's sardonic and almost Surrealist genius come through. Professor Murray's strongly Jung-flavored introduction and notes are remarkably helpful, but he need not have added to the book's full measure of ambiguity by referring to the residents of Albany as Albanians, no matter what they may call themselves."
New Yorker 25:103 Ap 23 '49 120w

"A tragedy of moral conflict is not necessarily easy reading, but it is strengthening to the mind and soul nevertheless, and those who are willing to undertake the task of reading 'Pierre'—for it is a task—are likely to find the wrestling bout both stimulating and instructive. Here, Dr. Murray's brilliant introduction is not merely a guide but an admirable provocation to thinking." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 22 '49 700w

MENCKEN, HENRY LOUIS. Chrestomathy; ed. and annot. by the author. 627p $5 Knopf 818 49-3894

"A selection from H.L.M.'s out-of-print writings. They come mostly from books—the six of the Prejudices series, A Book of Burlesques, In Defense of Women, Notes on Democracy, Making a President, A Book of Calumny, Treatise on Right and Wrong—but there are also magazine and newspaper pieces that never got between covers (from the American Mercury, the Smart Set, and the Baltimore Evening Sun) and some notes that have never previously been published at all." Publisher's note

---

Booklist 45:373 Jl 1 '49
Bookmark 9:4 O '49 30w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun Je 30 '49 320w

"Here's a chance to read him for yourself. He will endear himself to few, for he debunks pretensions, and shows the clay feet of idols. Even his obituaries make no concessions. Urbane and witty, he is frequently a healthy irritant."
+ Kirkus 17:224 Ap 15 '49 240w

"Useful as an introduction for readers making their first acquaintance with Mencken as iconoclast and satirist (and occasional buffoon), and a reminder to others of his gusto and skill as writer." H. W. Hart
Library J 74:891 Je 1 '49 110w
Nation 169:206 Ag 27 '49 1300w

"Exhumed now in this volume is neither the Thinker nor the Critic; it is the perhaps lesser but enduring figure of a first-rate American humorist." John Farrelly
+ New Repub 121:20 S 5 '49 1000w

"It is by no means certain that the 'Chrestomathy' will be understood at all by the modern generation. It is quite certain that it will not be appreciated to the full; only those who felt its impact can do that and they, alas, are for the most part bald or gray, more inclined to the inglenook than to high adventuring. But they will enjoy it with the sort of enjoyment an old warhorse might be expected to have when, spavined, sway-backed and purblind, he is reminded that nevertheless once he stood among the trumpets and said ha-ha." G. W. Johnson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Je 26 '49 2750w

"There is less sweetness and light in this volume than in his autobiographical ones, which, not being out of print, are not drawn upon, but there is some. . . He is at his worst when he skates out on the field, or possibly rink, of politics and international affairs." G. T. Hellman
N Y Times p3 Je 12 '49 1500w

Reviewed by John Lardner
New Yorker 25:58 Jl 9 '49 1900w

Reviewed by Templeton Peak
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 17 '49 800w

Time 54:98 Jl 11 '49 1050w

MENDE, ROBERT. Spit and the stars. 378p $3.50 Rinehart
49-8053

"Aptly titled story of Gregg Haber growing up in Brooklyn and New York in the spit of the wholesale garment trade and a Betty Smith environment and under the stars of his own growth—physically, mentally and in social awareness. Told against a CIO effort to organize the trade." Library J

Booklist 45:262 Ap 1 '49

"Not for the squeamish nor the light-minded, this comes closer to Farrell's case histories in magnifying every detail of life among the have-nots, in closely following Gregg and his contacts with the world around him. For those interested in social themes, in Union influence. Should be checked by public libraries."
Kirkus 16:629 D 1 '48 180w

"Quite a book in what it says and how it says it, but careful handling indicated in sensitive collections. Enthusiastically recommended for adult collections." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 74:127 Ja 15 '49 80w

"A promising start and a not altogether unpromising middle give way to a final section in which Gregg goes out on strike with his union and falls for a little eyeful of a picket called Dynamite, who tickles him under the arms and licks cream off his mustache. It is just possible that there is more pleasure in firsthand sampling of such stimuli than in reading about them in cold print. . . At least

MENDE, ROBERT—Continued
'Spit and the Stars' has some vitality; some humanity and some humor." Budd Schulberg
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Ap 10 '49 600w

"Mr. Mende is an acute observer, but this reviewer feels the editors could have done better by him if they had edited out some spit and pointed up the stars." Herbert Mitgang
N Y Times p22 Mr 13 '49 230w

"Mr. Mende can write better than he has done in his first novel. It seems that he needs to submerge himself more deeply in the material he uses and to work through it to the point where he acquires greater disinterestedness. This reviewer regrets that his judgment here is so unflattering, and hopes that Mr. Mende's next book will realize a promise that only flashes in some of the earier portions of this novel." J. T. Farrell
— + Sat R of Lit 32:13 Mr 26 '49 750w

MENEN, AUBREY. Stumbling stone. 253p $3 Scribner
49-9745

Satirical novel about a group of English men and women, all attempting to do good according to their several ideas. Colley Burton, who had lived in India for twenty-five years, helping the helpless, found himself back in England after the British left India. He was out of a job but he was also, to his great amazement, known as a saint in his native land. His attempts to help a misguided youth who had been too thoroly exploited as a menace, is the theme of the novel.

Booklist 45:393 Jl 15 '49

"The Stumbling Stone has its moments of rare humor, its moments of pathos, but in spite of this, the analyzers of repressions and other mysterious subconscious urges still hold the field. At the end of page 253, we still don't know what makes Mr. Coley Burton tick." M. G. Cohen
Canadian Forum 29:240 Ja '50 150w

"The author of 'The Prevalence of Witches,' who so delighted critics by his satire, wit and wisdom, now presents a second novel no less penetrating. Witty, urbane, sardonic and philosophical by turns, he makes merry hay of the ostensible motives on which human action is based, and still merrier hay of the absurdities, cruelties and crimes too often committed with the shield of psychiatric correction as a defense. Some lusty blows are also struck against the most alarming trend of the present century —the movement toward suppression of individual thought." Dorothy Langley
+ Chicago Sun Jl 14 '49 400w

"If Mr. Menen were as logical as he is witty, or as profound as he is facile, his book would be a challenging commentary on some of the foibles of humanity. . . The weakness in almost all of Mr. Menen's arguments is that he is too quick to exaggerate, too prone to generalize from particulars. By means of caricature, he portrays some unprepossessing individual representatives of various groups, and from this proceeds to blast the group." M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 4 '49 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '49

"It does not take much time to understand that Menen stands on the right side of the fence. But the characters who give expression to his views are an obvious crew who speak a stilted, uncomfortable language, the plot is a stuttering, heavy-handed piece of work, and the tone of the writing is without sly wit or merriment or originality or profundity, and without even maliciousness which, in the absence of all the other attributes, might have saved this from becoming the stodgy story that it is." George Miles
Commonweal 50:419 Ag 5 '49 400w

Kirkus 17:305 Je 15 '49 230w

"For all readers of satire." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 74:1025 Jl '49 140w

Reviewed by Norman Schrapnel
Manchester Guardian p4 D 2 '49 120w

Reviewed by J. D. Scott
New Statesman & Nation 38:736 D 17 '49 240w

"'The Stumbling Stone' is delightful reading for any one, but it should be on the required list for the tumultuous many who react to a shabby conscience by giving a suit of clothes to a child in the slums." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Jl 10 '49 1000w

"Mr. Menen's manner of writing is particularly well calculated to make the most of such a frivolity as this. He is always witty, and frequently accurate, with an elliptical style reminiscent of Evelyn Waugh's, although worthy of a better comparison. . . Mr. Menen's own sympathies, however, seem to lie so completely on the side of the witches that 'The Stumbling Stone' is sometimes a chore to read. It is almost as though Mr. Menen finds it difficult to believe that all these people doing good in spite of themselves are really worth writing about." Shirley Jackson
+ — N Y Times p4 Jl 10 '49 600w

New Yorker 25:66 Jl 30 '49 180w

"Mr. Menen does not get to grips with his theme as he did in 'Prevalence of Witches,' with the result that here you get expert light satire, (for some reason, so many English writers seem so competent at this), but along with it the uncomfortable feeling, confirmed in the end, that most of the satirical acrobatics were performed for their own sake chiefly. It's good entertainment, too. But, from a man as good as Mr. Menen it just isn't enough." J. H. Jackson
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 20 '49 800w

"The promise of Aubrey Menen's first and brilliant novel, 'The Prevalence of Witches,' is amply realized by this second, equally entertaining book. 'The Stumbling Stone' (see the Epistle of Paul to the Romans, IX, 32) is a sardonic, witty and provocative picture of professional do-gooders confronted by a really saintly man." Pamela Taylor
+ Sat R of Lit 32:15 Jl 23 '49 700w

"Mr. Menen's book has been conceived in terms of satire, but it is written as light comedy, or even as farce. The slaps at advertising, at documentary film-making and at various aspects of the welfare State are mildly amusing; but the characters, their plots and their predicaments lack equally the force of satire. The Stumbling Stone is not the novel promised by Mr. Menen's earlier work, A Prevalence of Witches."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p837 D 23 '49 360w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 39:189 autumn '49 500w

MENZEL, DONALD HOWARD. Our sun. (Harvard bks. on astronomy) 326p il $4.50 Blakiston
523.7 Sun 49-4507

A study of the new developments and theories about solar chemistry, sunspots, eclipses, and the sun itself, including atomic energy and the sun. Index.

Booklist 45:387 Jl 15 '49

"It is unfortunate, but perhaps space limitations prevented a more lengthy exposition than is given of some of the more important terrestrial influences of the sun's radiation such as ice ages, coal production, and the life cycle. Nevertheless, the chemist should find the book as a whole fascinating reading." Harrison Brown
+ — Chem & Eng N 27:2718 S 19 '49 250w

Library J 74:1562 O 15 '49 50w

"Dr. Menzel is an outstanding authority on solar matters, as well as an experienced writer for the layman, so the book is clearly and simply written even though it covers many technical points."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 S 4 '49 200w

N Y New Tech Bks 54:61 Jl '49

San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 25 '49 90w

"Although 'Our Sun' is intended primarily for students, Dr. Menzel has recognized that the gap between good teaching and good popularizing is an artificial one. That is, he has written an instructive and thoroughly enjoyable book." John Pfeiffer

+ Sat R of Lit 32:25 Ag 20 '49 750w

MEREDITH, ANNE, pseud. See Malleson, L. B.

MERRILL, HARWOOD FERRY, ed. Responsibilities of business leadership. 93p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

174 Business ethics. Business men 48-9649

A collection of articles "based on speeches the authors made at the Eighteenth Annual Conference of the Harvard Business School Alumni Association at Soldiers Field, Boston, June 12, 1948. The Introduction by Dean David is adapted from remarks he made before the Harvard Business School Club of New York on May 17, 1948." (Foreword) Contents: Businessmen's responsibilities to the public, by Clarence Francis; Businessmen's responsibilities to employees, by R. R. Deupree; Businessmen's responsibilities to government, by R. E. Flanders: Businessmen's responsibilities to consumers, by J. I. Straus; Businessmen's responsibilities to stockholders, by H. A. Bullis; Businessmen's responsibilities to the world, by A. W. Dulles.

"There are some statements which will be challenged by the reader. . . Turning from economic theory to economic practice, one must have serious doubts about the recommendation 'that every employee should be helped and given the chance to become a capitalist' (p.23). The unhappy experience with employee stock ownership during the late 1920's fails to support this recommendation. These are but minor limitations in a sincere and timely pronouncement of business statesmanship." G. W. Edwards

+ — Ann Am Acad 263:254 My '49 280w

Management R 38:583 O '49 40w

Reviewed by H. A. Wolff

New Repub 120:24 Ja 24 '49 250w

"Whether intentionally or not, this little book is far more than a statement of the businessman's social responsibilities. It is also an eloquent defense of private capitalism as compared with state capitalism or socialism. Its six chapters are written by six of the country's most successful and socially conscious businessmen. . . The reviewer's chief criticism of this book is its note of defensiveness. In comparison, the Communists and Socialists are positive and effective far beyond their achievements or even their nearby hopes of achievement." H. C. Link

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:47 Ja 22 '49 800w

MERTON, ROBERT KING. Social theory and social structure; toward the codification of theory and research. 423p $5 Free press

301 Sociology 49-11402

"Author [is] Harvard trained professor of sociology at Columbia University. . . For last eight years he has been closely associated with Columbia's Bureau of Applied Social Research, and present work is partly outgrowth of his investigations undertaken there. Book consists of fifteen papers, originally not intended as consecutive chapters of one volume. Nevertheless there is enough unity of thought to hold them together. They center around two main topics: interplay of social theory and social research, and codification of substantive theory and the procedures of sociological analysis." Library J

"Not an easy book for the general reader, but indispensable in university, college, and very large public libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 74:1821 D 1 '49 150w

School & Society 70:256 O 15 '49 50w

MERTON, THOMAS. Seeds of contemplation. 201p $3 New directions

248 Spiritual life 49-1562

Reflections on prayer and the inner life by the Trappist monk, author of Seven Storey Mountain (Book Review Digest 1948) and several books of verse.

Booklist 45:274 Ap 15 '49

"If in style he is sometimes casual or emphatic, or sweeping, if he has not always been alert to possible danger from the roving meticulous eye of a professional theologian, there is still nothing in his pages which could not be remedied easily enough by editorial revision. His book can be of extraordinary value to a large percentage of that immense public which became acquainted with him through the medium of The Seven Storey Mountain." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 169:156 My '49 210w

"Read the book, a chapter a day, and with pencil in hand. And try to do what Thomas Merton has done. You and the world will be better—and better off!" H. A. Reinhold

+ Commonweal 50:19 Ap 15 '49 600w

"It is as if a breath of air from the country blew in your face, bringing the accompaniment of singing birds and running streams. . . As one reluctantly closes Merton's book in the awareness that it will be reopened again and again, there remains the feeling of having touched a naked soul with one's own naked soul, as Unamuno would have said." Émile Cailliet

+ J Religion 29:241 Jl '49 1150w

Kirkus 17:143 Mr 15 '49 160w

"Merton's moral values, religious attitude and complete absence of scientific outlook place him with the mystics of the past. In spirit this book is in line with the Cautelas and the Avisos of St. John of the Cross, the Meditationes of Guigo the Carthusian, and similar books of contemplation. What keeps him from wishing to be compared with the authors of these classic mystical works is his genuine humility." Y. H. Krikorian

+ New Repub 121:17 S 12 '49 1750w

"There is a good deal of youthful eagerness here and much of a very ancient wisdom. The book is in short, unworldly, beautiful and refreshing." G. N. Shuster

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 21 '49 300w

"The Seeds of Contemplation are, inevitably and fascinatingly and richly, seeds also of meditation and conversation and dialogue with one's self. There are many questions which this reading does not answer but makes more urgent, because they are nearer to the right questions. The approach and style and background are the author's own, although his style also is severely disciplined and the writing wonderfully objectified. Fortunately, it is not depersonalized, but vigorous and of great flavor. Mysticism, renunciation and solitude may be seen as a strong and masculine, an energetic and, happily, also a native calling." Philip Burnham

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 20 '49 900w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 S 11 '49 120w

"In 'Seeds of Contemplation' there are poetic passages with the crystaline quality that characterizes the author's early verse. As a matter of fact, the climate of the book, on its own scale and level, suggests something of 'the pure emptiness where God's light shone.' Atmospherically as well as intrinsically, Mr. Merton's devotional prism has caught reflections from Dante's Beatific Vision." A. F. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 32:43 Ap 16 '49 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p845 D 23 '49 750w

MERTON, THOMAS. Seven storey mountain [Eng title: Elected silence]. 429p $3 Harcourt

B or 92 48-8645

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

MERTON, THOMAS—Continued

"To a Protestant, this book is a mixed blessing. As an autobiography it has in it the search for the interior life—a chronicle by turns exhibitionistic, irrelevant, and intense. As a book of spiritual leading, it holds many arrows of truth for us all. . . Yet I cannot agree with some of the sweeping condemnations which he applies so readily to those who are not members of his Church. I think he knows too little of American democracy to speak as he does about our public schools. I think there would have been more humility in his judgment of American problems had he been with us longer, not as a transient but as one who has had to live them through." Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic 183:80 My '49 650w

Reviewed by Illtud Evans

+ Cath World 170:71 O '49 700w

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Chicago Sun Mr 2 '49 90w

"The candid and earnest manner of this detailed intellectual and spiritual document leaves no room for doubt of its authenticity. Important because it opens full swing upon the orbit of a still rising literary talent, the book should be widely read."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:48 Mr '49 320w

Wis Lib Bul 45:65 Ap '49

MERTON, THOMAS. Waters of Siloe. 377p il $3.50 Harcourt

271.125 Trappists 49-10495

"Many a reader of 'The Seven Storey Mountain' may have felt an urge, temporary or relatively prolonged, to betake himself to the peace of a monastery. This new book offers a rather simple but not uninteresting account of what acting on that impulse would imply. There is a concise though somewhat discursive account of Cistercian history, with special emphasis on the foundations in the United States, and a description of the flowering of the order during the twelfth century. And of course an effort is made, quite effortlessly, to show what the men who have made all this history were trying to do." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 46:77 N 1 '49

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley

Cath World 170:198 D '49 3550w

Reviewed by T. A. Meehan

Chicago Sun S 21 '49 600w

Reviewed by F. D. Cohalan

Commonweal 51:19 O 14 '49 550w

"Merton shows the same facility of style in this new book, and there is no doubt that it will appeal to many of the reading public, Protestant as well as Catholic, who would like to understand why such a gifted young man should find this particular answer to the riddle of life. However, were it not for the earlier volume, one would say that this is a book which would appeal largely to those interested in church history or in the philosophy of monasticism."

+ Kirkus 17:412 Ag 1 '49 330w

"High story appeal will attract popular reading clientele from secondary school upward." R. J. Hurley

+ Library J 74:1196 S 1 '49 110w

Nation 169:285 S 17 '49 100w

Reviewed by George Shuster

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 S 18 '49 800w

"Only Thomas Merton could have written single-handed this history of Trappist monks, for it is a work of diverse gifts and skills, an ardent collaboration of scholar and story-teller, priest and poet. It exhibits the devotion of the convert to Catholicism who became a priest and the literary skill and philosophical turn of mind that produced the best-seller, 'The Seven Storey Mountain,' three books of poetry and a volume of thoughtful essays, 'Seeds of Contemplation.' " Fulton Oursler

+ N Y Times p3 S 18 '49 1000w

New Yorker 25:108 O 8 '49 240w

"Some of the most fascinating passages in the book deal with the men, saintly and less saintly, brilliant and dun-colored, who molded the Cistercian spirit and sustained it. . . Perhaps because he is Father Louis, O. C. S. O., Thomas Merton cannot help writing simply and luminously." A. F. Wolfe

+ Sat R of Lit 32:20 S 17 '49 800w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p8C N 13 '49 370w

Time 54:114 S 19 '49 440w

Wis Lib Bul p4 N '49

MESSICK, JOHN DECATUR. Discretionary powers of school boards. 147p $3 Duke univ. press

379.1534 School boards 49-7762

"[The author] presents a 'broad sampling' of cases and a 'representative summary' of court decisions concerning administration of public school systems in this country. The purpose is 'to determine from numerous court decisions just what discretionary powers are vested in a board of school control, to see how far courts will allow school boards to exercise their honest judgment when there is no statutory edict, to formulate for school officials and teachers regulations whereby they may better be guided in their duties, and to safeguard school officials against an abuse of power delegated to them.' " Am Pol Sci R

"The treatment is sketchy; 550 cases are cited, with little analysis. Perhaps, as the author claims, the material should be of some 'practical value to school officials, boards of education, and attorneys at law'—although these people ordinarily would need to know far more about the law of a single state on a specific problem than could be found in this 'outline book.' Of limited practical value, the work also falls considerably short of being a scholarly study in political science or public law." F. A. Clarenbach

Am Pol Sci R 43:614 Je '49 270w

Booklist 45:275 Ap 15 '49

MEYER, ADOLF. Commonsense psychiatry; fifty-two selected papers; ed. with biographical narrative, by Alfred Lief. 677p $6.50 McGraw

616.8 Psychology, Pathological 48-9241

Dr Meyer was for nearly thirty years chief psychiatrist at the Johns Hopkins' Medical School. In his Foreword the editor says: "Fifty-two selections are presented here in a setting meant to portray the evolution of a psychiatrist and of his thinking and work. It is an exposition of American psychiatry and at the same time a picture of a physician in action. The papers have been edited with a view to integration and abridged where necessary to avoid repetition and preserve continuity." Bibliography in Reference notes. Glossary of medical and philosophical terms. Index.

"While the book will have great interest for professional people working in the field of psychiatry, it should appeal also to all those who enjoy well written biography. Alfred Lief in this biography of a distinguished psychiatrist has added another to his list of similar achievements." J. M. Cunningham

+ Am J Pub Health 39:938 Jl '49 320w

Reviewed by Patrick Mullahy

Sat R of Lit 32:35 O 15 '49 650w

"Possibly the most significant comment which may be made concerning these articles and many of the others is to remark their quality of timelessness. They are as pertinent and thought-provoking in these days of advancing psychiatric thought as they were at the time they first appeared. Although the papers were addressed largely to workers in the fields of psychiatry, social work, and education, the concepts are expressed in such 'commonsense' terms as to be readily understood by any interested reader."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:113 Mr '49 360w

MEYER, F. V. Britain's colonies in world trade; issued under the auspices of the Royal institute of international affairs. 281p $6 Oxford

337.92 Great Britain—Colonies, dominions, etc. Great Britain—Commercial policy 48-8972

"In this monograph the author has examined the effects of Britain's imperial preference and other commercial policies on trade within the Empire and between the latter and foreign countries. Statistical tables and selected bibliography." Foreign Affairs

Foreign Affairs 27:341 Ja '49 40w

"Mr. Meyer deserves high praise for having undertaken such a lucid and painstaking study." K. E. Knorr

+ J Pol Econ 57:360 Ag '49 800w

"An admirable study." J. B. Condliffe

+ Pacific Affairs 22:215 Je '49 900w

MEYER MAY, JACQUES. Siam doctor. 255p $2.75 Doubleday

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 49-9551

For nearly a decade before the beginning of World war II, this French doctor lived and worked in Siam. For the most part his book is made up of stories, slightly fictionized, of typical cases he treated, both among Occidentals and Orientals.

Booklist 45:345; 375 Je 15 '49; Jl 1 '49

"Not as impressive an account as Burma Surgeon, this is for some of that market and is highly readable."

+ Kirkus 17:227 Ap 15 '49 170w

"The record set down in the pages of this book makes a brave and interesting tale." Margaret Landon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Jl 3 '49 950w

"Dr. May's experiences are told simply, with little fanfare. Anyone in search of light reading will find them entertaining." L. J. Warshaw

+ N Y Times p10 Jl 24 '49 210w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 2 '49 200w

"His narrative is a conscientious and readable slice of autobiography."

+ Sat R of Lit 32:12 O 1 '49 150w

Time 54:101 Jl 11 '49 450w

MIAN, MARY LAWRENCE (SHIPMAN) (MRS ARISTIDE MIAN). Merry miracle; il. by Susanne Suba. 132p $2 Houghton 49-11660

"The French town of Langladure got more than it bargained for when Dame Amelie opened her 'Saints Rest—a home away from home for tired saints.' The exploits of the heavenly visitors were quite mad and unsaintly and not at all what the people expected. The maid, Bichette, performed a neat job of face-saving for the saints, by concocting a miracle that left the townspeople gasping and reconciled." Library J

Booklist 46:58; 125 O 15 '49; D 1 '49

"A very pleasant bit of foolery. . . A specialty whose amiable satire, gentle but gay religion, offers a real treat for those looking for something unusual."

+ Kirkus 17:519 S 15 '49 160w

"A highly amusing little book. Recommended." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 74:1460 O 1 '49 70w

"The author pleasantly relates the amusing, and somewhat humiliating adventures that befall [the saints] until, chastened, they return to Paradise."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p30 N 13 '49 170w

"With a humor and familiarity reminiscent of the medieval story tellers, Mary Mian recounts a typical folk tale of central France. . . The tale, presented as if it were recorded in the archives by an ancient royal notary, is undoubtedly of the author's invention. Whether or not it contains an allegory or a message for mere humans, it is certainly amusing. Whatever slight local color of the Middle Ages there is in this story the author modestly claims to have derived from her daughter's French school books. Susanne Suba's line-drawings are prefectly adapted to the text." Justin O'Brien

+ N Y Times p45 N 13 '49 270w

"It's a sort of fairy tale and a delicate satire and in some degree a fantasy, though it partakes of none of the sticky-sweet character that marks too many books called fantasies these days. It is, in fact, exactly the kind of writing you'd expect the author to give you, even though this time she has switched from reportage to fable. And it's a book that the reader looking for something quite special shouldn't miss." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 2 '49 750w

"A charming fantasy, a gentle satire, 'The Merry Miracle,' with illustrations by the inimitable Susanne Suba, is a most engaging book." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 33:30 Ja 14 '50 280w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p10B D 25 '49 180w

Wis Lib Bul p9 N '49

MIAO, CHU-SENG, ed. Christian voices in China; with drawings by Jim Lee. 216p $2; pa $1 Friendship press

275.1 China—Church history. Christians in China. China—Politics and government 48-6515

A symposium composed of fourteen essays on the position of the Protestant churches in contemporary China. Brief biographical notes on contributors. Index.

"The volume as a whole is interesting, and does show that the Christian church is producing intelligent and able Chinese leaders, but the treatment in most cases is not fundamental, and the book has only a temporal value." J. K. Shryock

+ — Crozer Q 26:79 Ja '49 600w

Foreign Affairs 27:343 Ja '49 10w

MICHAUX, HENRY A. A barbarian in Asia; English tr. by Sylvia Beach. 186p $2.50 New directions

915 Asia—Description and travel 49-8940

Translation of the impressions of this Franco-Belgian poet on his journey thru Asia some twenty years ago. The countries he visited were India, Burma, Malaya, China, and Japan, and his thoughts on the lands and peoples he visited were written in brief, almost epigrammatic prose.

Kirkus 17:249 My 1 '49 150w

Reviewed by H. P. Linton

Library J 74:894 Je 1 '49 140w

Reviewed by Richard Ellmann

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Jl 10 '49 550w

"Original and stimulating refraction of the Orient through a very special personality." Justin O'Brien

+ N Y Times p10 Je 5 '49 500w

Discussion by J. A. Barry

N Y Times p29 S 11 '49 440w

"'A Barbarian in Asia' does not convey the full range of Michaux's power at fantasy and perhaps makes a slightly deceiving introduction to his work, for he is not usually so accessible as this. But as a travel journal, a form to which we are particularly sympathetic in this age of cultural breakdown and many wanderings, it is superb in its swift illuminations and its wit." Alfred Kazin

+ New Yorker 25:91 My 28 '49 1700w

Reviewed by Jackson Mathews

Poetry 75:100 N '49 430w

"These reflections by Henri Michaux are very personal reflections, because M. Michaux is a poet; they are very accurate, one feels, because

MICHAUX, H. A.—Continued
M. Michaux is a painter. And they are delightful, though if you were journeying in India you could not rely on the volume for directions to the Taj Mahal. . . Seldom does Michaux permit one of his reflections to consume more than a page or two of type. They are paragraphs, disconnected by asteriks, having only the loose continuity of being grouped together geographically. There is wit in them as well as interest and, because of their brevity, they lend themselves to intermittent reading." V. B.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 24 '49 350w

"Michaux's book is full of intellectual chuckles and poetic wisdom about several Asian civilizations, which, though involved with our own, are generally impenetrable for most of us. If he hasn't thrust us inside them with this book, he has at least opened a door to one of the most atractive and entertaining worlds we could find." Hubert Creekmore
+ Sat R of Lit 32:13 Je 4 '49 650w

MICHEL, JEAN BLOCH-. See Bloch-Michel, J.

MICHENER, JAMES ALBERT. Fires of spring. 495p $3.50 Random house
49-7426

A character study of David Harper, from his boyhood in the Pennsylvania poorhouse where his aunt was superintendent, to his marriage to his childhood sweetheart in New York. Along the way he worked summers in an amusement park, where he had his first sex experience; he went to a Quaker college near Philadelphia; and travelled for a time with a Chautauqua group. When he settled in New York he finally discovered his vocation: he was to become a writer.

"A warmhearted, readable story, crammed with lively incident and a remarkably diversified array of characters. But sterner intelligence was required to infuse his vision with genuine meaning. The Fires of Spring is flawed by sentimentality and naïveté." C. J. Rolo
+ — Atlantic 183:84 Mr '49 750w

"Except for its lurid exposé of the sex-magazine-mass production racket, the book is quite without value. . . Certainly the volume is one which should not be left lying around in any respectable home."
— Cath World 169:158 My '49 180w

"Michener once more demonstrates that he is an able writer. But despite his excellences, one feels he has not done his best work here. David's love affair with Mary, for example, is never convincing and the heavy hand of coincidence often jars the balance of the story. I do not feel that 'Fires of Spring' is up to the sustained performance of 'Tales of the South Pacific' but it has sufficient appeal to indicate it will be even more popular." Willard Motley
+ — Chicago Sun F 9 '49 360w

"There are commendable things in this novel. Mr. Michener writes with gusto and a good sense of story. He takes the reader behind the scenes of the amusement park, into the secrets of the brown Chautauqua tents, behind the desks of the men who edit the pulp magazines. The stream of American life through which the hero walks, seeking both its meaning and knowledge of himself, is well realized. . . Mr. Michener is addicted to melodrama, violence, and coincidence, and his story does not have the clarity of outline, the control and reserve his character David finds in Henry James. . . This is an above-the-average novel, one that commendably tries to be better than it is." Horace Reynolds
+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 F 15 '49 700w

"The Pulitzer Prize winner—with his memorable Tales of the South Pacific—is not an author to be passed over lightly. Nor does his new book belie his claim to a rare gift of yarn spinning and writing vigorous, unhackneyed prose. But—and it is a big but—the enthusiasts of the earlier book will find little that captures that appeal in this new book. . . There are unpalatable bits, and others in clearcut drama that balance them off. But the book seems overlong in its exploration of the intricacies of adolescence and growing up, a singularly devious route to maturity. A book to assess for a particular market, rather than to accept on the author's earlier achievement."
Kirkus 16:630 D 1 '48 350w

"The first two sections with a poorhouse and amusement park background are brilliantly done but those that follow never quite measure up to their high promise. Basic weakness is probably the lack of definition of the central character. Libraries will want it but restraint in purchase is indicated." G. D. McDonald
+ — Library J 74:60 Ja 1 '49 140w

"It is a soft, rather sprawling story, but saved from the sentimental excess with which it constantly flirts by a certain discipline of prose and by Mr. Michener's over-arching belief that, while there may be an attractive abundance of life and love among the deformed and dispossessed, the proper goal of a young hero is a place within, rather than outside, the normal social framework." Diana Trilling
Nation 168:192 F 12 '49 250w

"The creative artist's boyhood-to-manhood quest for integrity has been dealt with many times. It is a risky theme. It is likely to become rambling, or else to invite unfavorable comparison with other similar novels. 'The Fires of Spring,' in spite of occasional nuggets of character delineation, loses on both these major counts. . . There is no doubt of the passion in Mr. Michener's book, or, at least, the passionate sincerity. But a good many of the chunks are tedious and too many of his hero's reactions are, indeed, bones left over from meals which other writers have dished up before." J. D. Ross
— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 F 13 '49 800w

"One suffers as Mr. Michener warms up his opinions of literature, music, art—and offers them in page-long monologues. One suffers most of all when Love pants in on cue, every twenty pages or so. . . 'The Fires of Spring' is full of grotesques. And yet, though it is a bad novel, it does manage to rise above itself at times. For all his haste, Mr. Michener's anger at life is sincere. It is a pity he did not let his notes age a bit longer—or, at least, that he did not take the time to dramatize his anger in believable terms." William Du Bois
— + N Y Times p7 F 6 '49 1100w

"Mr. Michener is a stubborn writer, who insists on telling his story in his own way, even if it means nudging the reader constantly to make sure that David is getting undivided attention. He describes the old men at the poorhouse simply and warmly, and the horrible smashup of the roller-coaster car with stolid calm, but when faced with his hero or an abstract noun he becomes very agitated and sentimental indeed."
New Yorker 24:90 F 19 '49 220w

"It's not as good a novel as readers will expect from a prize winner. . . Mr. Michener's pattern is nothing new. Countless novels have been written by the same blueprint, some of them good, some bad. This one is in between. . . This is not to say that there aren't good bits in the book; there are. The author's poorhouse scenes, for instance, are admirable. . . But the novel lacks sharpness; it is never quite in exact enough focus." J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 4 '49 750w

"Most of the writing is brilliant high-school stuff. Not since 'The Story of Mrs. Murphy,' another jumbo job, have we been treated to such soggy prose. Although they went out with Hemingway, conversations are introduced by 'sneered she' and 'quipped he.' We are warned of sparkling talk, only to read pages of embarrassing dialogue. . . Mr. Michener seems to have relied more upon his notebook than upon his intuition or sense of craftsmanship. . . The first fifty pages of 'The Fires of Spring' are quite touching. After these it explodes into what may charitably be called a phony." J. H. Burns
— + Sat R of Lit 32:16 F 12 '49 1200w

"A racy pudding, steaming with over-heated situations."
Time 53:103 F 14 '49 180w

"Mr. Michener is fine with his host of minor characters. But the passionate women in David's life are less convincing, and David himself is of little interest. The Fires of Spring is somewhat sentimental and sententious." Orville Prescott
— + Yale R n s 38:574 spring '49 290w

MICKLEM, NATHANIEL. Religion. (Home univ. lib) 224p $2 Oxford

290 Religions 49-7025

An attempt to present a scientific or comparative study of religions. The author, principal of Mansfield college, Oxford, accepts John Oman's definition of religion as "the story of man's long endeavor to know a higher environment than the world of the senses by learning to live rightly in it." Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:212 F 15 '49

"One might question the method of his presentation, and prefer that the great religions be studied as units, rather than, as Micklem presents them, piecemeal as they may show elements of prophetic religion, mysticism, myth, etc. At times his conclusions might be questioned. This, however, is a volume designed for the many. It was not intended to be exhaustive, but to be a brief but scholarly presentation of religion as it has appeared among men, and in its main developments. Within the scope of the limits laid upon him, Dr. Micklem has done his work well." G. B. King
+ — Crozer Q 26:279 Jl '49 210w

MICOLEAU, TYLER. Power skiing illustrated; principles of the dynamic technique. 96p $2.95 Barnes, A.S.

796.93 Skis and ski running 49-11480

The author, now an instructor in skiing at Squaw Valley near Lake Tahoe, formerly an art teacher, combines a great number of pencil sketches and brief text in this book of instructions in skiing.

"Recommended."
+ Library J 74:1680 N 1 '49 30w

"Even if one could not read, there would be much to learn from this copiously illustrated book, for in avoiding misinterpretation an illustration is sometimes worth many pages of text." Jean Fraser
+ N Y Times p6 Ja 1 '50 150w

Reviewed by Leo Marceau
Springf'd Republican p7C N 6 '49 420w

MIDDLETON, DREW. Struggle for Germany. 304p $3 Bobbs

943.086 Germany—History—Allied occupation, 1945- 49-11456

"Mr. Middleton's book is a last-minute effort to make the American public realize that 'Germany is the center of the struggle for Europe,' that the fate of the world may hinge on whether the future Germany 'faces east or west,' and that western orientation will be meaningful only when Germany is democratic. . . He was close to the places where history was in the making, and has written [a report] retracing the successive stages in the 'struggle for Germany' between the East and the West." (Nation) Index.

"There is more than a hint of 'forget and forgive' in Middleton's recommendations, and it seems to me that his own factual report—a first-rate job—makes Mr. Clark's 'viewing with alarm' the more persuasive attitude. At any rate, both these books are among the most urgent published this fall. They deserve a good many readers." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 184:96 N '49 800w

Booklist 46:170 Ja 15 '50

Bookmark 9:54 D '49 30w

Reviewed by G. J. Scharschug
Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 6 '49 400w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 25 '49 950w

"Readers looking for blunt statements and sensational stories will be disappointed in this book by the Chief Correspondent for the New York Times in Germany. Middleton does not care for one-sided accusations and avoids oversimplification. He is obviously anxious to present an honest, balanced report about Germany and her problems since 1945; and it must be stated that he has succeeded well in doing just this." Waldemar Gurian
+ Commonweal 51:218 N 25 '49 700w

"A painstakingly impartial report." A. R. L. Gurland
Nation 169:425 O 29 '49 2000w

"The book has a balanced viewpoint, knowledge, insight and occasional flashes of a more incisive style than foreign correspondents usually reveal. Unfortunately it does not have a table of contents; nor do its chapters have titles, sub-titles, running heads, or any other indication of their substances. If this is a device of Mr. Middleton's to assure that the reviewer will actually read the book, it seems unnecessarily severe and stringent." August Heckscher
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p25 N 20 '49 900w

"Drew Middleton, head of The New York Times bureau in Berlin, is far too honest and able a reporter to sacrifice truth for simplification. This is demonstrated by the course he steers between the two current and popular syllogisms about Germany and the question of what should be done about Germany. . . This is a well-written, intelligent and valuable book. It is American journalism at its best. It is an honest, able and adult report on the most complex and dangerous problem in America's foreign relations." J. C. Harsch
+ N Y Times p5 O 16 '49 950w

"Mr. Middleton has written a gloomy book, but at least at the end of it the reader knows exactly what has been happening and just where we stand. The facts have been recorded by a trustworthy reporter." J. M. Minifie
+ Sat R of Lit 32:16 N 19 '49 650w

MIKESELL, RAYMOND FRECH, and CHENERY, HOLLIS BURNLEY. Arabian oil; America's stake in the Middle East. 201p $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

338.2728 Petroleum—East (Near East). U.S.—Foreign relations—East (Near East) 49-1200

Study of American petroleum interests in the Middle East since the 1930's, with an account of their relation to our national foreign oil policy. Technical in form, for the oil man and industrialist. Map on end papers. Index.

Reviewed by J. A. Loftus
Am Econ R 39:1339 D '49 550w

Reviewed by J. A. DeNovo
Am Hist R 55:101 O '49 440w

Booklist 45:275 Ap 15 '49

Canadian Forum 29:96 Jl '49 70w

Reviewed by Egon Kaskeline
Christian Science Monitor p18 My 27 '49 120w

Foreign Affairs 27:691 Jl '49 20w

"A documented, careful study, this should be of current interest both to private enterprise, foreign investment, and in governmental and international affairs."
+ Kirkus 17:136 Mr 1 '49 90w

Reviewed by E. A. Speiser
Nation 168:617 My 28 '49 950w

"Here we have enough of geography to keep thinking pertinent; a good account of the fields of the work under way and planned, of the economics of production and sale, of the interests which control the oil, and of the connections between them and with governments. The detailed and annotated map which is given in the end papers is the most easily grasped picture of this oil area that I have seen. Up to now the subject has seemed to exist in an

MIKESELL, R. F.—Continued
obscure and half mysterious haze. These pages bring it into plain sight." Herbert Feis
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Mr 13 '49 1000w

"A fine contribution toward appreciating the importance of the American petroleum operations in Arabia." Seymour Melman
+ Pol Sci Q 64:637 D '49 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 1 '49 360w

"In their chapter devoted to the impact of oil on the Arabian economy, the authors disclose a sympathetic acquaintance with the sociological and political aspects within Arabia. . . When the authors come to deal with the problems arising from the American viewpoint out of the rapidly expanding production in the Middle East, they do a somewhat more complete job of pointing up the problem than they do of suggesting solutions, and this is quite understandable in view of the very deep water in which they find themselves." Dillon Anderson
Sat R of Lit 32:58 My 14 '49 900w
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:197 Je '49 320w

MIKOLAJCZYK, STANISLAW. Rape of Poland; pattern of Soviet aggression. (Whittlesey house publication) 309p il $4 McGraw
943.8 Russians in Poland. Russia—Foreign relations—Poland. Poland—Foreign relations—Russia 48-9402
For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"Those who are interested in contemporary affairs will find in Mikolajczyk's book brief but excellent characterizations of leading world personalities. Likewise, they will find the documents in the body of the book and in a forty-page appendix of great interest and value. The frequent references to the boundary issue and the long enumeration of specific atrocities committed against the Poles make at times for tedious reading. But Mikolajczyk outlines clearly 'the pattern of Soviet aggression'; it should be understood by all who wish to preserve democracy." Charles Morley
+ — Am Hist R 54:681 Ap '49 400w
Booklist 45:223 Mr 1 '49

"This is the story of the tragedy that has overtaken his country during the last ten years, told with restraint and honesty."
+ Foreign Affairs 27:515 Ap '49 70w

"In book form Mikolajczyk's account is an improvement over the serialized 'as told to' version. . . But even in this improved version the book, when considered not as fuel in the cold war but as a reliable historical document, adds little of substance to the known accounts of the Polish case. . . The weakest part of the book is that which purports to give the real lowdown on how the Russians pull the strings in Poland. . . The concluding remarks about Soviet aims may or may not be correct, but they certainly do not come from an expert. By reason of his background—he hails from the ex-German part of Poland—Mikolajczyk was hardly equipped to deal with Stalin and his lieutenants. His short and disappointing experience does not automatically make him an expert qualified to give this country competent advice. He is at best a witness, one more witness to the already established fact that it is difficult to do business with Stalin." S. L. Sharp
— + Nation 168:190 F 12 '49 1550w

MILES, LESTER FREDERICK. Brass hat or executive. 269p $2.95 Funk, W.
658.3124 Executives. Employment management 49-7963

Advice for beginning executives. Contents: Brass hat or executives?; Keeping your eye on tomorrow; Be sensibly realistic; Paths to greater personal efficiency; More fact-finding and better judgment; The danger of repeating errors; Open you mind to new ideas; The importance of your personal relationships; The art of keeping up-to-date; Master salesmanship—a must!; Exit brass hat—enter progressive executive. No index.

Booklist 45:276 Ap 15 '49

"A thoroughly constructive and worthwhile book for the young executive who is anxious to grow, and could be helpful to executives at the top who need stimulation and new vision. A little wordy and repetitious at times, but worth the digging. There are excellent hints for both junior and senior executives."
+ — Kirkus 17:74 F 1 '49 150w
Management R 38:234 Ap '49 60w

Reviewed by Palmer Harman
N Y Times p12 Je 12 '49 90w

MILLAR, KENNETH (JOHN MACDONALD, pseud). Moving target. 245p $2.50 Knopf 49-3023
Detective story.

"Macdonald writes as if he had first made a most careful study of Raymond Chandler's manner and substance and settled himself to produce a pastiche. The consequence is the most creditable imitation I have read and a narrative that keeps one steadily absorbed." James Sandoe
+ Chicago Sun Ap 29 '49 50w
Kirkus 17:71 F 1 '49 80w

"Smoothly written, easy to read, erroneously marketed as 'a novel of suspense.'" Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 My 8 '49 110w

"There is nothing startlingly new about Mr. Macdonald's plot (though there is great technical dexterity in his interweaving of three levels of criminal endeavor); kidnapping, contraband, decadence and brutality are familiar elements of the hard-boiled school. The outstanding freshness of this novel comes, instead, from the fact that Macdonald as a writer, as a weaver of words and an observer of people, stands head and shoulders above most of his competitors. He can evoke pity and terror for his 'foreshortened figures with blood and money on their minds,' and probe the social and psychological implications behind crime and detection—and do this without sacrificing for a minute the impact of a tautly paced, tightly constructed story." A. B.
+ N Y Times p28 Ap 3 '49 180w

MILLAR, MARGARET (MRS KENNETH MILLAR). Cannibal heart. 207p $2.50 Random house 49-10349

Psychological novel. The scene is a house in a remote part of the California coast. The house is rented by the Banners—father, mother, and their eight-year-old daughter—from the owner, Mrs. Wakefield. When the latter appears to take an inventory of the house contents before selling, she brings with her a feeling of mystery. During the course of the story her unhappy past is unfolded, and the book ends in another near tragedy.

Booklist 46:63 O 15 '49

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun S 9 '49 50w

"A story of suspense, which is unorthodox, unusual and expert in execution. . . A finished, fascinating job, which is for the mystery market as well."
+ Kirkus 17:311 Je 15 '49 120w

"The contrasts between the wholesome tenant family, the superstitious caretakers and the highly emotional widow are interesting and well done. Probably will not be enjoyed by the casual reader." M. P. McKay
Library J 74:1025 Jl '49 70w

"The tale is full of secrets, told by hints and implications, with a fine economy of expression, as the saying goes. . . This is for those who are tired of the same old thing." Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ag 28 '49 250w

"The book makes fascinating and suspenseful reading. Unfortunately, at the end, Mrs. Millar reverts to her mystery-writing techniques and resolves the situation in melodramatic action, which is out of key with the rest of the book." Sarah De Vorss
+ — N Y Times p26 Ag 28 '49 320w

"The writing, which is intense, suspenseful, and rapid, deserves a better story."
New Yorker 25:108 S 10 '49 80w

"This is one of those interesting and tantalizing books which seem to be well written quite beyond their deserts. I know Miss Millar will not thank me for putting it that way, but I can't make a better statement of it. From the first page her writing is a delight of clarity and pungency. Her characters are made visible in the freshest of phrases; her dialogue is more than intelligent—it is exciting. . . And we have to struggle back through this, after some hobbling second-thoughts, to perceive that the story is a tenuous one, its characters unreal and incapable of exacting our sympathies, its whole structure shaky at best and actually dependent upon our surrender to the writer's talent." N. L. Rothman
— + Sat R of Lit 32:21 S 24 '49 500w

MILLAR, OLIVER. Thomas Gainsborough. See Gainsborough, T.

MILLER, ALEC. Tradition in sculpture. 176p 205il $6.95 Studio
730 Sculpture [49-9197]

A history of western sculpture from the time of the Egyptians, by a practicing sculptor. His aim is to explain the course of the development of sculpture for students and the general reader. Copiously illustrated. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:30 S 15 '49

"The author has a refreshing and stimulating approach to the discussion of sculpture. . . Worthwhile."
+ Library J 74:1678 N 1 '49 80w

"An intelligent, over-all survey, with good plates and an excellent historical method, although the Orient is not included and the Near East and the Americas barely mentioned." Lincoln Kirstein
+ New Repub 121:26 D 12 '49 120w

MILLER, ALEXANDER RENFREW. Theory of solutions of high polymers. 117p $3.25 Oxford
541.34 Solution (chemistry). Polymers and polymerization 49-7804

"In this study, the behavior of solutions in which one or more of the components is a high polymer is treated from the standpoint of statistical mechanics. The author's object is to develop a theory which will account for the differences in behavior between solutions of high polymers and solutions of low molecular substances. The book is intended for graduate chemists, especially those engaged in theoretical research." N Y New Tech Bks

"The book contains a number of minor errors, few of which are troublesome. It is disconcerting to see Raoult's law misstated on p. 3 and again in the figures appearing on pp. 70, 71 and 72, where the activity is equated to volume fraction in the name of Raoult. Research workers interested in polymers or in the statistical mechanics of solutions will welcome this monograph. It will not be digested easily, however, without a well developed feeling for the methods of statistical mechanics." P. J. Flowry
+ — Am Chem Soc J 71:3577 O '49 390w
N Y New Tech Bks 34:86 N '49

MILLER, MRS ALICE (DUER). Selected poems [foreword by Denning Duer Miller]. 75p $2.50 Coward-McCann 811 49-10914

A selection of the shorter poems by the author of The White Cliffs. The poems are selected from the output of forty years during which Mrs Miller was also earning success as a light novelist and playwright.

"Her work is on a popular level, having its own distinction in common sense, taste and humor." Gerald McDonald
+ Library J 74:1908 D 15 '49 80w

"While our major poets write increasingly of themselves, for themselves, and to themselves (and while, therefore, their readers increasingly perish from the earth), such writers as Mrs. Miller keep the metric speech alive by appealing to the ordinarily poetry-fearing public. What she has to say is not profound but it is clear. She says it graciously, with the same good taste her novels had, and with some gaiety." Phyllis McGinley
+ N Y Times p7 O 9 '49 550w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril
San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ja 8 '50 30w

"This is a slim volume, and would have been even slimmer, obviously, if some of the more trivial of her early poems had been omitted. But it would have been better. Those qualities which made Mrs. Miller's poetry speak to and for a great many people were at their best in her last two books." S. H. Hay
Sat R of Lit 32:26 N 26 '49 600w

Reviewed by John Garrett
Spec 183:272 Ag 26 '49 400w
Springf'd Republican p7C O 16 '49 60w

MILLER, ARTHUR. Death of a salesman; certain private conversations in two acts and a requiem. 139p $2.50 Viking 812 49-8817

The dramatization of the life of an American salesman, who does not realize the American dream.

Booklist 45:289; 310 My 1 '49; My 15 '49
Bookmark 9:4 O '49 30w

Reviewed by A. A. Shea
Canadian Forum 29:96 Jl '49 800w

"Here is a great American tragedy, shattering to the audience, overwhelming in its implications, cutting to the root of the poisonous fruits of the success rule of life. . . Death of a Salesman is the perfect example of the American drama of drab lives and hard-hitting dialogue; the drama of disillusion without the catharsis of faith." Dramatic criticism by E. V. Wyatt
Cath World 169:62 Ap '49 500w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p8X My 22 '49 470w

Reviewed by John Beaufort
Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 5 '49 240w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '49

"The title of Arthur Miller's fine play is exact: depicting, as it does, an American tragedy. The author examines his hero at the moment of catastrophe, welding this fine moment of doom to all the crucial instances of the man's past life. The result is a drama which in the writing, as well as in the extraordinary performances, is surely the most important we have had since the earlier O'Neill. It is as experimental as it is classical (in scheme), and it is as emotionally moving as it is socially terrifying." Dramatic criticism by Kappo Phelan
+ Commonweal 49:520 Mr 4 '49 900w

"A new play which is the smashing sensation of the season and the most distinguished event in the theatre of this decade."
+ Kirkus 17:125 Mr 1 '49 30w

"Highly recommended for all libraries regardless of size." George Freedley
+ Library J 74:960 Je 15 '49 70w
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 23 '49 100w

"Since Tennessee Williams is the only other recently emerged playwright who has awakened even remotely similar enthusiasm, certain comparisons will inevitably be made between them. Against Williams it will be said that he is eccentric and neurotic and that he has so far dealt exclusively with abnormal people, whereas 'Death of a Salesman' involved characters

MILLER, ARTHUR—Continued
and situations true to life as everyone has observed it and presented with an objectivity which everyone can recognize. . . But Mr. Miller's new play is extremely good in its own way, and it will appeal to an even larger audience than was attracted to either 'A Street-car' or 'Summer and Smoke' seems probable. But to me at least it seems, nevertheless, relatively old-fashioned." Dramatic criticism by J. W. Krutch

Nation 168:283 Mr 5 '49 1100w

"The whole makes a high point of significant expression in the American theatre of our time." Dramatic criticism by Harold Clurman

+ New Repub 120:26 F 28 '49 1600w

"For the first time in its history the Book-of-the-Month Club has made a play, 'Death of a Salesman,' a choice for its members. It is not often that a play text is scrutinized by so many readers. When that does happen the text generally has positive and conventional literary merits in the dialogue, as in the case of Shaw's plays. The dialogue in Arthur Miller's play has, in this narrower sense, no literary merit. It is flatly realistic. . . But to a reader unaccustomed to visualizing a printed script in stage terms . . . it may well be that the script will prove difficult, certainly far less rewarding emotionally than its stage performance. . . The play has overtones quite beyond its flat dialogue, and marches poignantly to a pitiful conclusion." W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 22 '49 900w

Discussion by Frederic Wertham

N Y Times p4 My 15 '49 1700w

"Mr. Miller's occasional tendency to overwrite is more evident in book form than it is on the stage, and his alternation of reality with memory and hallucination may not be quite as easy to follow without visual assistance, but this story . . . is still a deeply affecting tragedy."

+ New Yorker 25:117 My 21 '49 120w

"The play's only limitation is in its chief character. Had Willy Loman been smarter, his tragedy might have been more disturbing. As it stands, he seems almost to deserve all he gets. That is a minor point, however. On the whole, 'Death of a Salesman' makes stimulating reading. Local theatergoers have much to look forward to whether it is produced here professionally or by amateurs." W. R. White

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 22 '49 1050w

"How good the writing of this or that of Mr. Miller's individual scenes may be, I do not know. Nor do I really care. When hit in the face, you do not bother to count the knuckles which strike you. All that matters, all you remember, is the staggering impact of the blow. Mr. Miller's is a terrific wallop, as furious in its onslaught on the heart as on the head. His play is the most poignant statement of man as he must face himself to have come out of our theatre. It finds the stuffs of life so mixed with the stuffs of the stage that they become one and indivisible." Dramatic criticism by J. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 32:30 F 26 '49 2450w

Reviewed by Rochelle Girson

Sat R of Lit 32:31 Ag 13 '49 200w

"It reads as well as it performs."

+ School & Society 69:303 Ap 23 '49 30w

MILLER, GLENN WASSON. American labor and the government. 638p $7.35; to schools $5.50 Prentice-Hall

331 Labor laws and legislation—U.S. Industrial relations 48-9403

"Analyzes in non-legalistic language the laws, court actions and government policies that affect the actions and attitudes of workers and employers in their relationship to each other. In discussing the course of future labor legislation the author concludes that 'the legislation and judicial and administrative attitudes of the future must, in a broad sense, be pro-labor. . . in order to achieve a relative adequate balance of power.'" (Management R) Index.

Reviewed by Clark Kerr

Am Econ R 39:1055 S '49 140w

"Mr. Miller's book is well-suited for courses on government and labor. It covers the entire range of past and current legislation affecting labor, is thorough, and is admirable for the clarity of its style. . . This reviewer found his treatment of earlier legislation most satisfactory. However, the book's final section dealing with World War II controls, current state labor legislation, and the Taft-Hartley Act is also a competant piece of work. The documentation is not extensive. Many excellent sources are not cited. This is not a fatal omission in a text, but it somewhat limits the usefulness of an otherwise excellent book." H. W. Davey

+ — Am Pol Sci R 43:829 Ag '49 380w

"On the whole, this book reflects a good deal of competent and thorough work, since anybody reading it can hardly fail to know what has been going on in this field for several generations. I certainly have no doubts that Mr. Miller himself is familiar with practically all that has been happening in this field. But I have read this book as a lawyer; and in doing so I have not perceived in it the sort of insight and analysis which I feel sure is essential in a book dealing with governmental control of labor, organized and other." C. W. Gregory

+ — Ann Am Acad 262:228 Mr '49 360w

Management R 38:235 Ap '49 80w

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING). Born strangers; a chronicle of two families. 288p $3 Bobbs

49-5742

Chronicle of two pioneer families living in Michigan in the 1840's. The novel is based on the stories of the author's own ancestors.

Booklist 46:48 O 1 '49

"'Born Strangers' is a period piece that should give as much pleasure to the reader as its composition gave the author."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p71 S 25 '49 100w

"The hardships of pioneer life in both families are realistically pictured. Family crises are frequent enough to keep the reader interested. But the story suffers from the packing of too many people and events into one moderate-sized, loosely constructed novel." Barbara Bond

N Y Times p43 O 2 '49 270w

"Miss Millers' [geneological] chart, though not a complicated one, scared me silly when I saw it. A little more attention to character portrayal, a little more warmth, vitality, individuality, among her numerous characters would have rendered that somewhat stuffy little device unnecessary. What Miss Miller's publishers salute as a novel which 'touches the heartstrings' leaves me unmoved and just a little overcome with keeping track of its people." N. G. C.

Sat R of Lit 32:46 N 19 '49 180w

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING). Mirage. 306p $3 Appleton

49-4451

A love story with a historical background, the Texas frontier twenty years after the Civil War.

Booklist 46:141 D 15 '49

"Mrs. Miller knows how to create interesting if not complex characters and how to utilize the history and mores of her chosen background to make a good, fast-moving story."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 1 '49 170w

Kirkus 17:281 Je 1 '49 240w

"An engaging, readable story. . . One of Mrs. Miller's best." Barbara Bond

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 21 '49 130w

MILLER, JOHN PERRY. Pricing of military procurements. 292p $4 Yale univ. press

355.26 Prices. Military supplies. Industrial mobilization (for war) 49-8352

"This monograph examines, through text, graphs, and tables, the effect of purchasing and pricing policies followed by the services on the 'delicate mechanism' of the American price system. In the recent war, the price and stabilization program of OPA and the War Labor Board facilitated procurement and effective pricing of military goods. Services should have discretionary power to use either the competitive bid system or negotiation." (Library J) Index.

"This book is an excellent summary and appraisal of the economic significance of military procurement policies before 1939 and during World War II. It concludes with recommendations as to procurement policy in a society at peace but with large military expenditures continuing. The book is well written, the points made are clearly stated, and the author makes explicit the point of view from which his analysis stems." R. T. Bowman
+ Am Econ R 39:1352 D '49 850w

"Useful handbook for the next war; of present value to business and special, university and large public libraries." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 74:492 Mr 15 '49 130w
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:197 Je '49 280w

MILLER, MARY BRITTON (ISABEL BOLTON, pseud). Christmas tree. 212p $2.75 Scribner 49-7858

"Mrs. Danforth, planning a Christmas tree for her grandson, looks back on the world of her childhood, the cushioning of privilege and protection, the prevalence of elegance and decorum; from that milieu, to the marriage which was loveless and lonely, and the birth of her only son, Larry, whom she was to idolize, and for whom she assumes the guilt of his later homosexuality. The failure of Larry's marriage to Anne, his continued relationships with younger men which never delete his bondage to her, all reaches its crisis at the Christmas tree when Larry comes home, confronts Anne's new husband, and kills him." Kirkus

"Miss Bolton's prose, which owes a debt to James and Proust, is (excepting for rare lapses) exquisitely good—precise and packed with feeling, marvelously evocative, faultlessly accented in its elaborate rhythms." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 183:85 My '49 750w

"Miss Bolton has embellished her morality play for moderns with such a prodigious display of verbal lights and shadows that one is continually impressed by the artistry of her production. The originality of her writing is noted chiefly in a certain blithe and unique arrangement of phrases, and in her mastery of an extensive vocabulary as deft as it is precise. Yet in spite of such sensitivity of perception and obvious sincerity, there is lacking here the warmth of that irresistible fervor by means of which an author may reach the heart of the reader and find—or instill—there some glowing response. In 'The Christmas Tree,' the residue of thought or emotion, which remains, at the end, with the reader is liable to be simply one of pity. And pity is not enough." M. W. Stoer
— + Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 17 '49 550w
Kirkus 17:14 Ja 1 '49 150w

"Recommended for the sophisticated reader." Harriet Forbes
Library J 74:376 Mr 1 '49 110w

"Less scintillating than 'Do I Wake or Sleep,' 'The Christmas Tree' has the compensation of also being less 'written.' Its emotions are more open, richer, warmer, wider. A rarity and wonder these days, it is a novel whose sympathies and insights enlarge rather than simply confirm our own. Dealing with that most hazardous of themes, the sources of homosexuality, it adds a whole new dimension of feeling to anything fiction has hitherto given us on the subject." Diana Trilling
+ Nation 168:339 Mr 19 '49 1200w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 120:26 Mr 21 '49 270w

"Miss Isabel Bolton's first novel marked a genuine literary debut; now in its successor, 'The Christmas Tree,' she offers something just as good as well as much more substantial." James Hilton
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Mr 13 '49 850w

"The ambition of this novel is necessary to the future of its kind, and the fault of the ambition is only that it seems, here, a little egregious. Yet one finishes the book with the feeling that success in Miss Bolton's effort is not really beyond her distinguished talent; it is rather beyond the scope of the particular materials she has chosen to embody it—or rather beyond her careless moral and imaginative analysis of that material." Mark Schorer
— + N Y Times p4 Mr 13 '49 1100w

"It's a pity that Larry so often seems merely petulant and childish, and never quite important enough to justify all the emotion that is spent on him."
New Yorker 25:102 Mr 19 '49 150w

"The sense of construction, the ability to choose precisely the right word, the delicate vibratory reaction to nervous, over-refined intellectual life, to our vague discontented, ever-groping pattern of living—these are surely there. Miss Bolton is undoubtedly head and shoulders over most of the people writing today. But I believe we have yet to see a book which utilizes fully her vast ability." N. G. Chaikin
+ Sat R of Lit 32:23 Ap 16 '49 650w

"Miss Bolton's is a lyric, not a dramatic talent. Whenever she tries to speak through a character who is not her own kind and her own sex, she loses her firm tone of voice. But, speaking for herself, Author Bolton has much to say."
Time 53:104 Mr 28 '49 600w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott
Yale R n s 38:767 summer '49 160w

MILLER, MAX. No matter what happens. 249p il $3 Dutton
B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 49-5277

A rambling autobiographical account of the life of this newspaper man and author best known for his I Cover the Waterfront.

Booklist 46:12 S 1 '49

Reviewed by George Miles
Commonweal 50:541 S 9 '49 160w

"The casual, effortless and sometimes funny touch here gives this its special quality and easy charm."
+ Kirkus 17:320 Je 15 '49 160w

"In many ways this autobiographical sketch is routine. . . He sees the humor in situations he gets into, and he isn't too proud to laugh at himself. The completed portrait has much human interest." Clarence Gorchels
Library J 74:1022 Jl '49 100w

"'No Matter What Happens' is informal autobiography, presented in prose that has the easy grace of good talk—talk free from any attempt to impress, coerce or exert charm. It gives Mr. Miller all the room he needs in which to prove how much he has to learn, how unlikely his chances are of learning it." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S 4 '49 450w

"Mr. Miller's prose is of a transparent texture and makes up in simplicity what it lacks in richness. In the even tenor of his writing and in his understatements, he reminded this reader of Ernie Pyle. . . But even though the incidents set down in this book are carefully selected, they mesh into an integrated portrait of a simple man, naive sometimes, yet not much surprised by either the villainy or the good in this world. . . Mr. Miller's volume will be a corrective to the many other books by journalists." Thomas Lask
+ N Y Times p7 Ag 28 '49 700w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 32:13 O 1 '49 230w

MILLER, MERLE. Sure thing. 341p $3 Sloane
49-10222

The story of thirty-six hours in the life of a young member of the State department in Washington. During that period he is subjected to an unjust investigation which eventually costs him his job. The whole course of his life, his two marriages, and his war service, is traced in flashbacks.

Booklist 46:34 S 15 '49

— Cath World 170:159 N '49 220

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p8X Ag 21 '49 600w

"As a protest against the intimidation of sincere and worthy men because of their past or present 'liberal' sympathies it is an interesting book. But as a novel it is very bad. Merle Miller has failed to write a satisfactory novel because he has failed to create characters of any depth. . . Miller makes real attempts to picture compassionately an isolationist senator and an FBI agent, but it doesn't come off. With this monotone of Good people and Bad people, both existing at the most inconceivably shallow level of experience and thought, the novel loses all meaning of tone it could have been given by genuine and comprehending characterization." William Pfaff
— + Commonweal 50:493 Ag 26 '49 460w

"A somewhat gestapo picture of the intensified loyalty investigation, which does not miss the human qualities of the hunters and hunted, this has a balanced approach and avoids the hysteria implicit in the subject."
+ Kirkus 17:333 Jl 1 '49 210w

"Thought provoking. For mature readers." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:1025 Jl '49 90w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones
Nation 169:257 S 10 '49 220w

"As a novel it has certain obvious defects. The author's honesty produces an indecisive plot, and the narrative device of innumerable flashbacks is often awkward and disconcerting. Miller has, it seems to me, straddled the crucial social problem by making his hero a quondam Communist. . . It is an effective book, nevertheless. Miller writes with sympathy, with intelligence and often with brilliant insight. He succeeds admirably in catching the loneliness and nostalgia of Washington." J. R. Newman
+ — New Repub 121:18 O 24 '49 1300w

"Given [a] promising framework and a writer of Mr. Miller's ability, it is disappointing to have to report that 'The Sure Thing' does not fulfill its possibilities. It is unsatisfactory in style and tone, although the writing in the second half of the book shakes off the slickness that marks the first half, and many of the individual insights in the latter part are fairly rich and convincing. . . The attempt is clearly that of an independent man who wants to think for himself and of an honest artist who wants to understand people, not merely condemn or whitewash them. Yet through inadequate command of characterization and an inability either to locate or to state the theme clearly, the attempt is a failure." Hiram Haydn
— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 21 '49 1450w

"Washington being the kind of place it is today, it was inevitable that such a book as Mr. Miller's would be written. It is fortunate that the theme fell into his hands. . . Mr. Miller has made the thirty-six hours of FBI interrogations, press exposés, political denunciations, empty regrets, frightened condolences, welching friends, fear and loneliness as real as the smell of burning flesh. Not all Mr. Miller's characters emerge from his pages with as sharp a delineation as they might; the flashbacks with which he buys depth for his thirty-six hours are, on occasion, mechanical and even superfluous. . . Mr. Miller has also a warm compassion for the suffering of a fellow being and a rich, even brilliant, understanding of the people who, wittingly or unwittingly, find themselves hunting with the pack." J. K. Galbraith
+ N Y Times p8 Ag 21 '49 750w

New Yorker 25:64 S 3 '49 160w

"This is a topical novel and therefore written with some over-emphasis. At the same time it is technically a performance far ahead of Miller's 'That Winter.' Characterizations are inclined to be pretty straight black or white, and the villains of the piece are all pretty nasty characters, even though Miller does try to moderate their nastiness by the old reliable 'only human-after-all' approach. In general, though, the yarn will fascinate most readers. Mr. Miller knows his background, he understands suspense and how to manage it, and he has hit upon a topic that is in everybody's mind." J. H. Jackson
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 29 '49 1000w

" 'The Sure Thing' is an honest, angry book, a cautionary tale which scarcely could have been published at a better time. It is bound to stir up controversy, and that will be a good thing; it may, I hope, call attention to the prevalence of witch-hunters, and that will be a good thing, too." John Woodburn
+ Sat R of Lit 32:13 Ag 20 '49 900w

"The tale is told with technical skill rarely found in a novel." J. F. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p5D S 11 '49 120w

MILLER, PERRY GILBERT EDDY. Jonathan Edwards. (American men of letters ser) 348p il $3.50 Sloane

B or 92 Edwards, Jonathan 49-50164

"Mr. Miller sees Edwards as the foremost philosopher of his age, as one of the few great American philosophers and perhaps the most original. He sees him as a thinker whose ideas are much more acceptable to mid-twentieth century minds than they were to the age whose main intellectual currents he opposed with a power that can only now be appreciated. He sees him also as a great artist not only in idea but in form and style as well." (N Y Herald Tribune Bk R) Index.

Booklist 46:158 Ja 1 '50

Chicago Sun p32 D 29 '49 300w

"This is the most remarkable study yet written of one of the most remarkable Americans. . . Some of Mr. Miller's chapters are nearly as distinguished in their grasp of theological nicety as the works of Edwards with which he is dealing. If we have forgotten the energy, the love, almost, perhaps, the savagery, with which New Englanders assaulted each other's ideas of God, Mr. Miller's brilliant book will remind us for a long, long time." Paul Engle
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 D 25 '49 400w

"A brilliant study of Jonathan Edwards. . . Anyone who has thought of Edwards merely as a magnificent religious failure without relevance to our own day will find himself startled by Professor Perry Miller's interpretation." Robert Peel
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 5 '50 1800w

Churchman 164:17 Ja 15 '50 180w

"This is in a wholly different category from its predecessors in the American Men of Letters series. Where the others have been urbane, scholarly but delightful biographies, this is definitely not for the general reader. It is deep delving into the drama of ideas behind Edwards' works, rarely understood by modern theologians, and of interest only to colonial America. This is a technical and highly intellectual criticism of Edwards' writings and lectures."
+ Kirkus 17:460 Ag 15 '49 240w

"In the nature of things, this latest addition to the American Men of Letters series will have less general appeal than such previous volumes as those on Hawthorne and Thoreau, but it is a full and assured study. . . Recommended for college, university, and larger public libraries." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 74:1196 S 1 '49 100w

"Miller's restoration is a brilliant biographical study. It is not easy to say in a brief review why this study makes so profound an impression upon the reader. It is partly due to a very sophisticated analysis of Edward's thought." Reinhold Niebuhr

+ Nation 169:648 D 31 '49 1200w

"'Jonathan Edwards' is literary and philosophical criticism of the highest rank. Though clearly it is not yet the culmination of Perry Miller's long study of the New England mind, it brings it to a new high point. That study must be recognized as of revolutionary and permanent importance in American thought." Bernard DeVoto
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 20 '49 1300w

"This book is a unique and major contribution to American letters, thought and history. It should be read and reread not only by serious students of our culture but by those common men in whose capacities and powers of understanding Edwards so devoutly believed." M. E. Chase
+ N Y Times p4 D 11 '49 650w

Reviewed by M. L. Mueller
San Francisco Chronicle p17 D 25 '49 550w

"Because the spirituality, the pervasive humanity, the tragedy of Jonathan Edwards are disembodied, the portraiture is shadowy. But for the first time it may be said that Edwards, the artist working with ideas, emerges as a world figure." T. H. Johnson
+ Sat R of Lit 33:17 Ja 7 '50 650w
Time 54:54 D 26 '49 950w

MILLER, WADE, pseud. See Wade, B., and Miller, B.

MILLER, WILLIAM. Book industry [a report of the Public library inquiry of the Social science research council]. 156p $2.75 Columbia univ. press

655.473 Publishers and publishing. Book industries and trade 49-10422

"This study of the book trade 1947-48 is an important supplement to Cheney's Economic Survey of the Book Industry. Mr. Miller has classified the industry's main trends, analyzed the principal factors responsible for the quality of trade books, and indicated some expectations for the future. An interesting summary of editorial policies, production costs, and marketing methods which will give librarians a better understanding of publisher's problems and an answer to questions regarding the large number of standard titles discontinued on publisher's lists." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 46:8 S 1 '49

"It is regrettable that this part of the Public Library Inquiry gives such slight attention to the library's potential influence on the Book Industry. An exploration of the areas in which the public library is the largest consumer is needed to assist the publisher of serious literature to develop new markets for titles outside the best seller field, and to give librarians the materials they know they need to develop more readers of good books." Edith Busby
Library J 74:1433 O 1 '49 210w

"Mr. Miller's book is a rich mine of information set deep in a fabulous forest of conjecture. It operates with a kind of exasperated hard-headedness in a land of angels and demons and gods. Its wealth of analytical ore and mythical lore will repay all who read and write and publish and buy and sell and borrow books. Not in a long time have we had such a sweeping and penetrating view of an art that strains to be a business and a business embarrassed by being an art." Charles Graydon
+ N Y Times p16 Ja 1 '50 1200w

"Here is the first solid attempt to bring the Cheney Report of twenty years ago up to date. I believe that the sharp-tongued Mr. Cheney would not only have approved most of Mr. Miller's findings, but he would have appreciated the swish of his scimitar. Mr. Miller is not afraid to say what's on his mind. And what he says makes glowing sense." Aaron Sussman
+ Sat R of Lit 32:11 O 29 '49 900w
Special Libraries 40:379 N '49 100w

"This is the most interesting and useful work on book-publishing since the ill-fated Cheney report of 1933. . . Though Mr. Miller does not write with the wit and the biting irony indulged in by Pelham Barr (who did the actual writing for banker Cheney), his picture of the industry is little less critical. Mr. Miller writes well, his information is for the most part accurate, he has sought his facts widely and demonstrates that he is not a man who believes everything he is told. But there is one difficulty: his book is too short for the complex subject with which it deals. As a result he sets down much that may be fact but isn't really truth. His text abounds in choice bits of backstairs information, and since publishing has always been one large whispering gallery and people in the book-business inveterate gossips, it has an interest like that of a New Yorker profile." A. A. Knopf
+ — Yale R n s 39:355 winter '50 1000w

MILLGATE, IRVINE H., and MILLGATE, RACHEL W. Let's live at home [a practical guide to family living]. 180p il $2.50 Harper

640 Family. Home economics 49-11917

"How the parents of two children meet the high cost of living and make 'the home a way of life' is described in the first half of the book, while Part II is devoted to methods and suggestions for the sub-zero storage of food. Index." Bookmark

Booklist 46:115 D 1 '49
Bookmark 9:54 D '49 40w

"This is a book for families, domestic economy and a more secure way of life, which has practical suggestions to offer and workable living processes to study. The market would be home economics courses, young marrieds who are trying to plot an independent type of life."
+ Kirkus 17:505 S 1 '49 130w
Springf'd Republican p10B D 25 '49 90w

MILLIGAN, HAROLD VINCENT, and SOUVAINE, MRS GERALDINE, eds. Opera quiz book; questions and answers from the Opera quiz, famous intermission program of the Metropolitan opera broadcast; incl. opinions by the opera quiz experts: Olin Downes [and others]. 192p $2 Current bks.

782 Opera 49-92

A compilation of some of the questions asked during Saturday afternoon broadcasts from the Metropolitan Opera house. Correct answers are included. Alphabetical list of operas, with their composers. Index.

Kirkus 16:562 O 15 '48 90w

"Designed presumably as a game book for parties of opera-lovers, the volume is actually a handy compendium of both important and trivial information, since a good index to topics is included. . . In view of the present popularity of quiz programs and the general interest in opera, the book will certainly be useful in any public library." Katherine Conger
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 6:474 Je '49 200w

"It assumes a fairly good grounding in the history, stories and actions of the operas, and it is not a tome which the freshman student in music appreciation is going to brush off before breakfast. It contains a wealth of operatic lore. . . Stay with this volume long enough and you will probably be queuing up at the box office for the Met's next open date." Arthur Leonard
+ N Y Times p8 D 19 '48 180w

"These lumbering inquisitions, while fairly agreeable over the air, are tiresome in print. It offers an easy, if disordered, way to pick up operatic facts, however." Roland Gelatt
— + Sat R of Lit 32:62 Ja 29 '49 40w

MILLIN, SARAH GERTRUDE (LIEBSON) (MRS PHILIP MILLIN). King of the bastards. 304p $3 Harper

Buys, Coenraad de—Fiction 49-7707

"A novel set in South Africa during the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, and

MILLIN, S. G.—Continued
based . . . on the life of Coenraad de Buys, the first white settler in the Transvaal. The bastards of the title are his children by a Hottentot and several Kaffir wives, their children, and similar families who trek with him from one tribal village to another." New Yorker

---

Booklist 45:243 Mr 15 '49

"I found this very dull reading—and that in spite of a bias in favor of Sarah Gertrude Millin as interpreter of various facets of South African life and history."
— Kirkus 17:10 Ja 1 '49 250w

"Bickering and fighting overshadow the story of Coenraad de Buys . . . and detract from the readability of the story. Nevertheless, for those who seek authoritative information about early colonization in easy doses this should prove interesting. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ — Library J 74:312 F 15 '49 100w

"This is a bitter tale. The pity of it is, however, that none of the characters, as Mrs. Millin tells it, seem of much moment. Coenraad himself is too far gone as a renegade to enlist sympathy. His rabble of a family are so many shadows, and the style of the telling has a staccato monotony which seems to emphasize the philosophy of Coenraad himself: 'It goes as it goes.'" Margaret Hubbard
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 F 27 '49 900w

"One of Mrs. Millin's finest novels. Even in a year that has already witnessed several praiseworthy books out of Africa, this one is a notable achievement. Not only does it throw light on darkness, but greatly contributes toward an understanding of the present-day Afrikaner's inflexible attitude on color questions. . . Mrs. Millin's naturally oracular prose is well suited to a story of this kind." John Barkham
+ N Y Times p5 F 20 '49 550w

"Mrs Millin handles it awkwardly, constantly interrupting the story with passages of frantic exposition and school-pageant dialogue, but the book may be worth the effort, for de Buys, a bitter, complicated man, is a fascinating character, convincingly done. When the going gets too tough, it's helpful to turn to Field Marshal Smuts' clearly written preface for briefing."
+ — New Yorker 25:93 F 26 '49 240w

"Miss Millin's novel, historically accurate in all its details, is more than just a costume piece, fantastic and often exciting as it is on that ground. It is also a sharply dramatic story of a man who cuts himself off from society, finds that he has gone so far that he cannot return and proceeds to live a long and vigorous life wholly alone as far as his own people go." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 23 '49 750w

"Violence mitigated by miscegenation, dark gods at war with Christianity, and the struggle for a country's birth lose pungency in Mrs. Millin's tortured pseudo-Biblical telling. Labyrinthine reading." C. M. Brown
— Sat R of Lit 32:31 Mr 26 '49 140w

"An intensely interesting but highly specialized chronicle which will well repay the reader because of the historic insight which it offers. Mrs. Millin's measured and Old Testament styled prose is admirably suited to enhance the fabulous aspects of the story she is telling, and at the same time to lend natural dignity to the characterizations." L. S. Munn
+ Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 20 '49 370w

MILLS, CHARLES WRIGHT, and SCHNEIDER, HELEN. New men of power, America's labor leaders. 323p $3.50 Harcourt

331.88 Labor and laboring classes—U.S. Labor officials. Trade unions—U.S. 48-8513

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"Professor Mills has written an outstanding, stimulating and highly useful book. It remains regrettable that certain inconsistencies and discrepancies leave the reader in doubt about the thoroughness with which the author thought through a few of his major problems and proposals." C. A. Gulick
+ — Am Econ R 39:1059 S '49 900w

Reviewed by C. E. Lindblom
Am Soc R 14:432 Je '49 1050w

Reviewed by P. A. Dodd
Ann Am Acad 263:249 My '49 550w

"In its central part this book provides a great deal of useful new information, both in its vital statistics of labor leadership and in its comments on the job of the labor leader. But it is certainly not the book about labor leaders as the 'new men of power' which it purports to be. That book still has to be written." P. F. Drucker
+ — Management R 38:221 Ap '49 1450w

"A valuable and definitive study that students of labor will prize but the average reader probably will find too extensive and detailed for his taste." G. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 10 '49 200w

"The New Men of Power can be used very profitably by teachers of economics and economic history in the secondary or college level for reference work."
+ Social Studies 40:142 Mr '49 200w

"The treatment is deliberately popular in tone, although with unequal success in minimizing technical language. Its subject is of such contemporary interest that nonprofessional readers will certainly find the book provocative."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:483 D '48 300w

MILLSPAUGH, ARTHUR CHESTER. Toward efficient democracy; the question of governmental organization. 307p $3.50 Brookings

342.73 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century 49-3063

"The object of the study is to recommend a fundamental change in the U.S. government that would give supreme legislative and executive powers to a national council that would appoint the chief executive. Examination of the structure of our present government and its inadequacies to meet modern needs leads to presentation of the plan. Of more interest to political science students than to general readers." Booklist

---

"Each reader must decide for himself just how seriously this plan is to be taken. It is only fair to point out that Dr. Millspaugh shrewdly anticipates all the 'criticisms and objections' that are likely to be levelled against an essentially utopian work of this nature. Although this advance apology will hardly render his National Council any less fantastic to the cynical or realistic or 'practical' or just plain earthbound student of American government, it is useful to remember that for some centuries now certain thinkers have done great service to their fellow-men with books that counseled unexecuted schemes of constitutional reform. . . The fact that Millspaugh's Republic will not come to pass in our life-time by no means signifies that it will fail to answer its author's admirable purpose. And who are we to say that his plan wouldn't work?" C. L. Rossiter
Am Pol Sci R 43:816 Ag '49 700w

Reviewed by C. A. Dykstra
Ann Am Acad 266:221 N '49 550w

Booklist 45:328 Je 1 '49

"Dr. Millspaugh puts forward his suggestions merely as 'something to shoot at,' and some of his suggestions will presumably raise the eyebrows of other experts. Particularly, his version of the parliamentary system would seem unnecessarily to drain from it the color, personal warmth and capacity for developing inspiring leadership which go with a legislative body large enough to justify a rousing speech now and then." Marshall Knappen
Christian Century 66:918 Ag 3 '49 1000w

Reviewed by R. L. Strout
Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 22 '49 850w

"Dr. Millspaugh coolly dissects various proposals to tinker piecemeal with the system. He believes that they would be palliatives at best. And, although his volume is rather pedestrian in style and organization, he does show that the real trouble lies deep in our structure of government and party organization. Congress, composed of state and local representatives, suffers from factionalism and parochialism, he says, while the Presidency, the only 'national' office, is unpredictable and overly personalized. . . Many students of government who would applaud Dr. Millspaugh's excellent diagnosis of the problem will hesitate at his prescription." J. M. Burns

N Y Times p3 Je 5 '49 600w

Reviewed by Lucius Wilmerding, Jr.
Pol Sci Q 64:603 D '49 1900w

Reviewed by S. B. Shear
Springf'd Republican p5D S 11 '49 120w

MILORADOVICH, MILO. Art of fish cookery. 457p il $3.50 Doubleday

641.692 Cookery (sea food) 49-8110

Instructions on how to cook fish and shellfish at home. There are recipes, menus, discussions of how to purchase fish, and identification charts. Index.

Booklist 45:330 Je 1 '49

+ Kirkus 17:44 Ja 15 '49 150w

Reviewed by Mary Poore
N Y Times p20 Jl 17 '49 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 29 '49 320w

MILTON, JOHN. Portable Milton; ed. and with an introd. by Douglas Bush. (Viking portable lib) 693p $2 Viking

828 49-8563

"This volume contains all Milton's major poems, most of the minor ones, and of the prose, 'Areopagitica,' the tract 'Of Education,' and three autobiographical passages from the polemical pamphlets." (Nation) Bibliography. Chronology. Glossary.

Booklist 45:315 My 15 '49

Chicago Sun p6X My 28 '49 30w

Kirkus 17:230 Ap 15 '49 110w

Nation 168:620 My 28 '49 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Jl 17 '49 80w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 32:38 Ag 27 '49 90w

MINDSZENTY, JOZSEF, cardinal. Cardinal Mindszenty speaks [auth white bk] pub. by order of the Cardinal, introd. by Akos Zombory. 234p $2.50 Longmans

282.4391 Roman Catholic church in Hungary 49-4067

"A collection of papers, translated from Hungarian and German, that Cardinal Mindszenty turned over to a Swiss publisher shortly before his arrest, with the request that they be published as a white book in case of his imprisonment. The documents are pastoral letters, ecclesiastical statements, and a transcript of a broadcast appealing to the postwar governments of Hungary to stop persecuting the Church, as well as numerous open letters to critics who accused him of collaboration with the Fascists, indifference to the fate of the Jews in Hungary, and other grave offenses. In an introduction, Akos Zombory, a Hungarian writer, gives the historical background of the cause célèbre." New Yorker

Booklist 45:384 Jl 15 '49

"The book presents the Cardinal as a fighter for the Church, for human ideals and rights." John Fermatt
+ Cath World 169:474 S '49 120w

Reviewed by Ernest Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 10 '49 500w

Reviewed by J. S. Roucek
Commonweal 50:565 S 16 '49 260w

"Recommended for public libraries and those of institutions of higher education." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 74:957 Je 15 '49 130w

Reviewed by Frank Kelley
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Jl 10 '49 450w

"In this quite remarkable book of documents, the ghost of the Hungarian leader speaks with living force. . . The book does not present a formal, mathematical legal case, which would have been difficult to do before the final charges were decided upon. It does not tell what happens to men awaiting trial behind the Iron Curtain. It perhaps does not furnish the answer sought to a certain kind of question about 'What is truth?' The document presents clearly, however, the development of the contest, and they show a man." Philip Burnham
+ N Y Times p5 Je 5 '49 750w

New Yorker 25:100 Je 11 '49 160w

Reviewed by G. N. Shuster
Sat R of Lit 32:19 Jl 30 '49 450w

Springf'd Republican p7B Jl 31 '49 210w

MINNEAPOLIS. PUBLIC LIBRARY. Music department. Index to folk dances and singing games; supplement; comp. by the staff. 98p pa $1.25 A.L.A.

781.97 Dancing—Folk and national dances—Indexes. Singing games—Indexes

"Sixty-eight collections are indexed in the supplement; entries are made as in the original index under title, nationality, and type of dance and this time circle, contra, and square dances are indicated." (Booklist) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest 1937.

Booklist 45:292 My 1 '49

"A valuable supplement to the original bibliography issued in 1936. Recommended for all collections dealing with these subjects. Of considerable practical value to children's librarians." George Freedley
+ Library J 74:960 Je 15 '49 30w

MIRSKII, DMITRII PETROVICH. History of Russian literature; comprising A history of Russian literature and Contemporary Russian literature; ed. and abr. by Francis J. Whitfield. 2v in 1 518p $5 Knopf

891.709 Russian literature—History and criticism 49-10390

"A new edition of a work useful to students, first published in 1927 and long out of print. It summarizes the development of Russian literature from the earliest times through 1925. . . Biographical information is included on the major, and many of the minor figures, and there is much useful critical interpretation. In the abridgement, the editor has cut the biographical material throughout, omitting some sections on contemporary writers which were necessarily incomplete, and has added a brief review of the general development of Soviet literature. A bibliography of general studies in English and of anthologies in English translation is included." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 46:66 O 15 '49

"For years the classic in its field, this has long been unavailable."
+ Kirkus 17:346 Jl 1 '49 40w

Reviewed by B. B. Libaire
Library J 74:1090 Ag '49 140w

New Yorker 25:88 Ja 28 '50 170w

"Unfortunately, this 'abridged' version, conscientious though it is, leaves one with too many grounds for complaint and regret. There was a good case for correcting the perspective of Mirsky's closing sixty or seventy pages; but the drastic cutting down all through the work of both biographical and historical detail, the severe reduction in quotations and the general process of carving little bits out of the original paragraphs, by which some seven hundred pages of text have been reduced to five hundred, with an additional dozen by way of postscript, can only be considered unfortunate."
— + Spec 183:902 D 23 '49 270w

MISES, LUDWIG, edler von. Human action; a treatise on economics. 889p $10 Yale univ. press

330.162 Economics 49-9576

A revision of the author's "Nationalökonomie, Theorie des Handelns und Wirtschaftens" (Geneva, 1940). "Professor von Mises (New York University) covers the whole general subject of the economics of the old world and the new, the several schools of thought—socialist and capitalistic—in an analysis of man's needs, aims, and methods for attainment. There is a good deal of psychology in it also." (Current Hist) Bibliographical footnotes. Index.

Current Hist 17:98 Ag '49 50w

"Profound work, displaying an encyclopedic mind, ought to prove thought provoking for every reader, whether he disagrees (as reviewer) or not. Too difficult for general public, book is suitable for scholars only." H. H. Bernt

Library J 74:1197 S 1 '49 100w

Reviewed by J. R. Hicks

Manchester Guardian p3 D 30 '49 600w

Reviewed by Alfred Sherrard

New Repub 122:18 Ja 9 '50 2300w

Reviewed by Peter Sovren

New Statesman & Nation 38:702 D 10 '49 900w

"Anyone who has been yearning, if only from nostalgia, for a truly unvarnished and unconditional defense of laissez-faire should be well satisfied with this book. For nearly half a century, in Vienna, London and more recently in New York, Professor Mises has been battling socialists, planners, reformers and every other kind of sponsor, deliberate or unwitting, of government interference with economic process. As the reader will quickly discover, he has not surrendered an inch of ground. . . I come now to the publisher. However much one may disagree with Professor Mises, he is a learned man and a famous teacher. The market, in spite of its virtues, does not pay for all the books that deserve publication and it is therefore both appropriate and good that a university press made this one available. But surely it should do so with some obligation to scholarly restraint." J. K. Galbraith

+ — N Y Times p45 O 30 '49 1200w

"Professor Von Mises presents ably and clearly the Austrian theory of capital and the rate of interest, a nineteenth-century theory of the relation of money and prices, a critique of Marxism, a monetary theory of the trade cycle, a long discussion of the epistemological problems of the sciences of human action, of the market and the pricing system, etc. But this book could just as well have been written in 1900 as in 1950, for the author has little use for twentieth-century economics. . . One could go on endlessly listing the errors, the misinterpretations, the archaic doctrines held by Professor Von Mises. We do, indeed, need forthright criticism; but we also need some understanding of what is being criticized. Another Austrian economist, Professor Joseph Schumpeter, perhaps the outstanding economist of the day, also critical of Keynes and Marx, has done a much better job of criticism." S. E. Harris

— + Sat R of Lit 32:31 S 24 '49 1200w

Reviewed by Robert Cousins and S. T. Williamson

Sat R of Lit 33:33 Ja 28 '50 50w

MITCHELL, BROADUS. American adventure; frontispiece by Marc Simont. 243p $2.50 Harper

973 U.S.—Social conditions. U.S.—History 49-10569

Interrelated but separate chapters on various aspects of American history and progress. For high school readers. Contents: Whaling days; Trappers and fur traders; Washington's aide; California gold rush; Gregg of Graniteville; The conquering clippers; City of steel; Underground railroad; Hammering hoofs—the great cattle drives; Rescue of four million; A new American adventure.

Booklist 46:84 N 1 '49

"He writes with an irresistible punch which boys especially will like. He includes more exact and detailed information than can be found in dozens of volumes." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun O 8 '49 140w

"Mr. Mitchell writes with spirit and enthusiasm, but the chapters are too short to give adequate presentation of such great subjects. Yet the book may well serve as an introduction, showing how thrilling a longer study can be." A. M. Jordan

+ — Horn Bk 25:542 N '49 100w

"A collection of essays, thinly held together by a central thread, in the main readable, but too often slipping into pedestrian vein."

± — Kirkus 17:344 Jl 1 '49 150w

"Useful for junior high history and supplementary reading. Recommended." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 74:1682 N 1 '49 80w

Reviewed by Howard Pease

N Y Times p20 Ja 29 '50 170w

"Vigorously written history for anyone from ten up."

+ New Yorker 25:185 D 3 '49 90w

"Mr. Mitchell knows how to give detailed, clear explanations, and he includes lots of anecdotes and personalities. The chapter on whaling is particularly good reading." Virginia Mahoney

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 13 '49 190w

"Some of the chapters here are fascinating, especially the one on the Underground Railway and on the cattle drives. The detail, the action, the colorful descriptions will all bring to the younger generation a picture of the grandeur of the nation's growth." R. A. B.

+ Sat R of Lit 32:40 N 12 '49 230w

MITCHELL, EDWIN VALENTINE. It's an old Cape Cod custom. (American customs ser) 242p il $3 Vanguard

917.49 Cape Cod 49-9162

Presents the essence of life in and around Cape Cod in chapters on things as various as mooncussing, harpooning whales, Cape Cod houses, dipping bayberry candles, cranberry harvesting, and antiques and Sandwich glass.

Booklist 45:353 Je 15 '49

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg

Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 12 '49 230w

Kirkus 17:244 My 1 '49 150w

"To be sure there is more history than customs and manners in Mr. Mitchell's book, but it is entertaining reading on the life and times of the 17th and early 18th centuries with a few contemporary reactions included." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 74:816 My 15 '49 70w

"Mr. Mitchell's book is a valuable and pleasant addition to the growing Cape Cod shelf." Richardson Wright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Jl 3 '49 600w

"Mr. Mitchell gives a whole chapter, which is none too long, to cranberries. Another deals charmingly with bayberries and how to transform them into sweet burning candles. Also he has collected a number of Cape Cod 'receets' for such delicacies as 'Cape Cod turkey and stuffing,' 'Joe Floggers' and 'fumididdle.' " S. T. Williamson

+ N Y Times p8 Je 19 '49 600w

Reviewed by Anne Comfort

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 3 '49 200w

Sat R of Lit 32:37 Je 18 '49 140w

Springf'd Republican p8B Jl 3 '49 180w

MITCHELL, EDWIN VALENTINE. It's an old state of Maine custom. (Am customs ser) 248p il $3 Vanguard

917.41 Maine—Social life and customs 49-9766

A miscellany of Maine local history, legends, customs, and personalities.

Booklist 46:81 N 1 '49

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 12 '49 300w

Kirkus 17:286 Je 1 '49 110w

"Just the thing for the Maine vacationist to take along to appreciate his own location, with an inducement to extend his travels." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:1027 Jl '49 80w

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 27 '49 360w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson
N Y Times p10 O 16 '49 500w

"Mr. Mitchell's fourth book in the 'Old Customs' series is written with that same, quiet, unliterary manner which makes his other books so enjoyable." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 31 '49 200w

Sat R of Lit 32:33 Ag 13 '49 180w

MITCHELL, EDWIN VALENTINE. Yankee folk. 278p il $3 Vanguard

917.4 New England 48-9342

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"An extremely entertaining presentation, 'Yankee Folk' will amuse and instruct, and whichever you place first, you will be satisfied. It isn't every Yankee book that does both together." John Gould
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 3 '49 300w

"An idle-hour book for the idle-minded, as disjointed as a dictionary." Allan Nevins
Sat R of Lit 32:27 F 12 '49 110w

"What a writer who is also an attorney, bookseller, scholar and researcher into New England lore can do with his pen is delightfully illustrated in 'Yankee Folk.' The many facets of our New England heritage are vividly brought home as chapter after chapter reveals the history, privations, customs and morals of our forebears. Then, as now, there were saints and sinners, odd characters, and strange happenings in these New England states." Ethel Dexter
+ Springf'd Republican p8B Mr 13 '49 550w

MITCHELL, JOHN, and SMITH, DONALD MILTON. Aquametry, application of the Karl Fischer reagent to quantitative analyses involving water. (Chemical analysis, v5) 444p il $8 Interscience

545.6 Water—Analysis 49-7164

"This monograph is the fifth of a series dealing with topics in Analytical Chemistry. The present work is primarily concerned with 'the application of the Karl Fischer reagent to quantitative analyses involving water' but the authors have done much more than is indicated in this sub-title. The book is written in two parts; the first and longer section deals with considerations of a general nature as well as with specific quantitative determinations using the Karl Fischer reagent; the latter part deals with the determination of organic functional groups." Am Chem Soc J

"The volume as a whole is formulated in a concise, accurate and readable manner. The lack of serious errors is commendable and is probably due in large part to the care with which practically every entry was checked in the laboratory of the authors. If all future volumes in the Analytical Chemistry series are up to the standards set by Mitchell and Smith, one can easily visualize a set of these treatises in every complete chemical library." E. H. de Butts
+ Am Chem Soc J 71:3576 O '49 400w

"A book packed with valuable information. Control laboratories are likely to continue to use oven drying and other time-proved methods for many purposes. But already, as happens with every important new tool, it is hard to see how we ever got along without the Karl Fischer method. Mitchell and Smith have provided an authoritative handbook on the many ramifications of the method." M. E. Auerbach
+ Chem Eng 56:281 Ap '49 450w

MITCHELL, SYDNEY BANCROFT. Iris for every garden; drawings by Tom Craig. 224p il $3 Barrows

635.93424 Iris (plant) Agr49-116

A manual for "the general gardener as well as the iris addict," written by an iris authority who has grown this flower both in Canada and the United States. Contents: Irises for American gardens; An iris world tour; Irises from bulbs; Crested irises; Beardless irises of America; Beardless irises from the old world; History of bearded irises; Bearded irises—culture, propagation, diseases; Bearded irises—breeding and raising from seed; Planning the garden with bearded irises; What makes a choice variety; Oncocyclus and regelias. Gives a list of Iris society's choice of one hundred bearded varieties for 1948; sources of plants; a blooming sequence of irises, and an index.

Booklist 46:138 D 15 '49

"If you are not already an iris devotee, this latest of Dr. Mitchell's books will make you one in record time. Rarely indeed has there appeared a one-genus gardening volume so delightfully written and so explicitly informative. . . Too much commendation cannot be bestowed on the illustrations, black-and-white drawings as well as full color photographs." R. S. Lemmon
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p40 D 4 '49 230w

MITFORD, NANCY. Love in a cold climate. 304p $2.75 Random house 49-9848

Sequel to Pursuit of Love (Book Review Digest 1946.) "This continues with the successful marriage of Fanny, the Bolter's daughter, and the bitter disappointment of Lady Montdore of Hampton in the marriage of her beloved daughter Polly to the aging 'Boy' Dougdale, the Lecherous Lecturer." (Library J)

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 184:83 Ag '49 390w

Booklist 45:393 Jl 15 '49

Reviewed by Edward Uzemack
Chicago Sun Jl 31 '49 130w

"A portrait of an era, a class, a tradition which is always amusing and accomplished—but which lacks the engaging, endearing (presumably more popular) qualities of the first."
+ — Kirkus 17:241 My 1 '49 180w

"All very E. H. Bensonish, but not nearly such fun. Pick it up later at a book sale, perhaps." F. A. Boyle
Library J 74:1025 Jl '49 70w

"Miss Mitford's eccentrics, like her enfants terribles, are always endearing. Uncle Mathew is a particular joy. And there is just enough reflection of the actual world to salt with occasional satire her riotous humour." H. I'A. Fausset
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 22 '49 150w

"The characters aren't, by the nature of the thing, 'solid'; an over-feminine finish has given everyone, man or woman, much the same kind of existence and even diction; but they bounce, ever higher and higher, which implies remarkable solidity of a kind. Miss Mitford doesn't attempt here the dangerous feat of bringing her people to war and the near present; they end a foot or so more off the ground than when they started. Even poor Fanny, living out the squalor of Oxford, has her head in the clouds or the family cupboard." G. W. Stonier
+ New Statesman & Nation 38:129 Jl 30 '49 950w

MITFORD, NANCY—Continued
"Altogether 'Love in a Cold Climate' adds up to cooling, delightful, adult summer reading, in the good tradition of gentle English satire, excellent fare for lawn, beach or lakeside." Blythe Morley
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Jl 10 '49 550w

"The book is an excellent performance in many ways. It has the deadpan virtuosity of Miss Mitford's previous novel, with less sentiment and more malice. It has elegance as this sort of satire should. . . It is all quite funny and rather frightening. The people of this chilly climate are so grand and rich and evil in such a childlike way, and Miss Mitford obviously admires them so much even while she flays them, that the novel has a schizoid quality." Phyllis McGinley
+ — N Y Times p4 Jl 10 '49 850w

"At first glance, 'Love in a Cold Climate' is an excellent specimen of this genre—one of those mysteriously able and amusing and unimportant books that the English appear to have taken out a perpetual patent on and that America, for all its industrial know-how, rarely manages to imitate successfully. . . The title itself could scarcely be more adroit. . . The novel has, moreover, the advantage of being about exceedingly well-bred people who behave exceedingly badly, and what could be more refreshing than to hear, for the fiftieth time, the good news that our supposed betters are at least as wicked as we are, and maybe wickeder? . . Miss Mitford has violated most of the conventions of the light novel in writing what is still unquestionably a light novel, and while 'Love in a Cold Climate' can be recommended as a means of passing a long summer afternoon, it has an ending about as happy as that of 'Hamlet' and can guarantee no one the prospect of pleasant dreams." Brendan Gill
+ — New Yorker 25:70 Jl 23 '49 950w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 14 '49 500w

" 'The Pursuit of Love' was such a thoroughly entertaining, deliciously witty, and slightly naughty novel of love among England's upper classes . . . that a following volume ought to be extremely good news. Such, alas, is really not quite the case. I do not believe Miss Mitford could write a dull book, but here she has certainly fallen far short of her past performance. . . A curious atmosphere of thin-blooded inertia pervades the whole plot, and it is not until Cedric, the golden-haired, exquisite unknown from Nova Scotia . . . appears, that the author lets herself go. The portrait of Cedric is a masterpiece. . . It is a wicked novel, never a good one, but it has moments of high entertainment." Pamela Taylor
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:15 Ag 13 '49 500w

"Miss Mitford, who has some really comic passages, is shrewd as well as amusing, but I hope I may say that it is not difficult to be funny by putting sophisticated salacities into the mouth of a fourteen-year-old girl." R. D. Charques
Spec 183:188 Ag 5 '49 80w

"The frosting on Author Mitford's story of the happily selfish Montdores is so light and fluffy as to leave the reader wondering whether she is really selling satire or simple nostalgia for the good old prewar and pre-Labor days in Britain."
Time 54:81 Jl 18 '49 440w

"Together with her gift for suggesting the lights and shades of high-life, Miss Mitford possesses an easy and unpretentious style which expresses at first hand what she sees and thinks. She writes about things clearly as they appear to her to happen: not about things which might happen if human beings were altogether different; or things described through a fog of verbal obscurity. In doing this she does no small service to the contemporary English novel, sailing its uneasy course between extravaganza and romance. She does not preach or prophesy; she merely watches people behave."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p485 Jl 29 '49 550w

MITSCHERLICH, ALEXANDER, and MIELKE, FRED. Doctors of infamy; the story of the Nazi medical crimes; tr. by Heinz Norden; with statements by three American authorities identified with the Nuremberg medical trial: Andrew C. Ivy, Telford Taylor, Leo Alexander, and a note on medical ethics by Albert Deutsch. (Life of science lib) 172p il $3 Schuman
940.5475 World war, 1939-1945—Atrocities. Medical research 49-7900

A documented account of the Nuremberg medical trial and of the events that led up to it. Index.

Reviewed by B. Bettelheim
Am J Soc 55:214 S '49 1150w
Am Soc R 14:569 Ag '49 200w

"This book is valuable reading for those who wish to understand man's capacity for evil and destructiveness under adequate and early training. It bears directly on education." J. A. Kindwall
+ Ann Am Acad 265:190 S '49 850w
Booklist 45:368 Jl 1 '49

Reviewed by N. D. Fabricant
Chicago Sun Mr 10 '49 500w
Christian Century 66:438 Ap 6 '49 270w

Reviewed by H. B. Nichols
Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 12 '49 650w
Kirkus 17:136 Mr 1 '49 120w
Nation 168:424 Ap 9 '49 40w

"Whatever extenuating matter Dr. Mitscherlich may later have found it expedient to write, his original observations are something every adult should read, preferably not just before going to bed. It is the sort of story, told calmly and without passion, that leads to nightmares. . . The book, in the light of its reception by the German medical profession, is more than a gruesome fragment of history: it is a warning to those who think democratic forms and the democratic spirit are synonymous, and to those others who profess to believe that anti-Sovietism and pro-Americanism are one and inseparable and that a little fascism is a salutary thing." Delbert Clark
+ N Y Times p6 My 22 '49 650w

"No matter how much one has already read or heard from returned soldiers, the stories of the so-called medical experiments retold in the documents in this book still have the power to horrify and shock. Part of this emotional effect is due to the legal phrasing and understatement in these records, which allow the descriptions of human torture to speak for themselves. . . These legal and medical records may prove hard going for the non-medically trained mind, but the excellent historical preface by Brig. Gen. Telford Taylor, chief of counsel for war crimes, and the analytical preface by Dr. Leo Alexander, consultant psychiatrist, provide sufficient background with which to garner the full callousness and intellectual dishonesty of the doctors and lay personnel involved." Bertram Schaffner, M.D.
Sat R of Lit 32:16 Mr 12 '49 1100w

"For those short on memory, for those who, out of a kindliness and Christianity, plead that we must be gentle with the Germans, for those whose moral sense is dwarfed by their dollar sense, Doctors of Infamy is required reading." Joseph Hirsh
+ Social Forces 28:102 O '49 650w

MIZWA, STEPHEN PAUL, ed. Frederic Chopin, 1810-1849; pub. under the auspices of the Kosciuszko foundation. 108p il $3 Macmillan
B or 92 Chopin, Frédéric François 49-11025

"This volume is specifically issued as tribute 'to a great artist pointing out his place in the literature of music as understood by critics, artists, and composers at the half-turn of the twentieth century.' There are, accordingly, testimonials by several eminences, stressing the Polish national character of Chopin's genius, and there is an excellent brief summary of Chopin's life by the editor. But the most interesting section of the slim volume . . . is a selection of twenty-odd pages from previously unpublished letters of Chopin to Delfina Potocka. These selections cast considerable light on Chopin's thoughts regarding other composers and the value of his own music." (N Y Times) Lists of works of Frederic Chopin.

Reviewed by Edward Barry
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 13 '49 40w

Christian Century 66:1393 N 23 '49 270w

Reviewed by L. A. Sloper
Christian Science Monitor p15 N 10 '49 120w

Reviewed by Gilbert Chase
Music Lib Assn Notes 7:100 D '49 280w

Reviewed by Moses Smith
+ N Y Times p30 O 16 '49 370w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 27 '49 170w

"The chief value of the book lies in the generous selection of hitherto unpublished passages from Chopin's letters to Delfina Potocka. The letters as a whole, the editor tells us, show beyond doubt that Chopin did have a love affair with Countess Potocka—a long disputed matter. But the excerpts translated here are all concerned with music and musicians, and very sensible they are." Gerald Abraham
+ Sat R of Lit 32:34 O 29 '49 400w

Reviewed by Victor Prahl
Springf'd Republican p6D O 2 '49 650w

MODELL, MRS MERRIAM (EVELYN PIPER, pseud). The innocent; a novel of suspense. 241p $2.50 Simon & Schuster 49-7784

Murder story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
+ Chicago Sun Mr 4 '49 230w

Kirkus 17:15 Ja 1 '49 100w

New Repub 120:26 Mr 21 '49 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Mr 6 '49 180w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p27 Mr 6 '49 140w

"An excellent suspense story. . . Handled with great technical skill and in a forthright, if not especially distinguished, style."
+ New Yorker 25:96 Mr 5 '49 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 27 '49 120w

"There is a patently overt attempt upon the part of the author to create an atmosphere of uncertainty, anxiety, indecision, unrest and fear. It practically wallops the reader over the head, until he may find himself yawning from the fatigue of the blows." D. F. M.
— Springf'd Republican p18A Mr 27 '49 120w

MODERN INDUSTRY (periodical). Management men and their methods. See Villalon, L. J. A., ed.

MOLDENKE, HAROLD NORMAN. American wild flowers. 453p il $6.95 Van Nostrand

582.13 Flowers. Botany—U.S. 49-5118

"Thousands of flowers are mentioned in this commendable attempt to list the best known wild flowers of Canada and the U.S. Descriptions are by families, with brief information on the character of the plants and their bloom, scientific and common names, range, and habitat. Although it is intended as a popular guide, the book contains no keys to identification nor geographical or seasonal guides. The index and illustrations, both color and sepia, are good; not all flowers are illustrated." Booklist

Booklist 46:8 S 1 '49

"Photographs occasionally disappointing in clarity of color and detail. A local flower guide would be first choice, but this kind of book would also be desirable."
Library J 74:1562 O 15 '49 70w

MOLEY, RAYMOND. 27 masters of politics, in a personal perspective; pub. for Newsweek. 276p $3.50 Funk

923.273 U.S.—Politics and government. U.S.—Biography 49-48263

Sketches of twenty-seven American political leaders who, the author believes, had something to teach us in politics. Most of his subjects were personally known to the author. Contents: Tom L. Johnson; Charles A. Beard; Alfred E. Smith; Herbert Hoover; Franklin D. Roosevelt; Wendell Willkie; Thomas E. Dewey; John Nance Garner; Henry A. Wallace; Earl Warren; Will H. Hays; James A. Farley; Edward J. Flynn; Louis McHenry Howe; Charles Michelson; Felix Frankfurter; Hugh Johnson; Ruth Hanna McC. Simms; Will Woodin; Robert Moses; James J. Walker; Samuel Seabury; Huey P. Long; Hiram Johnson; Sam Rayburn; James F. Byrnes; Hatton Sumners. Index.

Reviewed by Walter Trohan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 6 '49 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '49

Kirkus 17:525 S 15 '49 100w

"Mr. Moley snipes at Roosevelt and praises Dewey but whatever your political opinion, you can't help appreciating his lucid, graphic style, his wit and flippancy, his first-rate writing. Absorbing reading for students of contemporary American political history. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 74:1197 S 1 '49 100w

"Mr. Moley's attitude toward politicians reminds one of Schopenhauer's attitude toward women—perceptive, illuminating, witty, and lucid, but marked by a slight, yet distinct, recoil from a distasteful subject. He is at his best where one would least expect it—for instance, in the analysis of Huey Long that it is an understatement to call superb, and in his warm-hearted eulogy of William Woodin, the forgotten martyr. He is at his worst when he makes such statements as that Roosevelt did nothing to build up the Democratic party." G. W. Johnson
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 11 '49 1350w

"It may be questioned that 'most worthwhile political writing' has, as he says, 'always been from a personal point of view.' But this reviewer entertains no question that Dr. Moley lent values to his studies of political action which can be acquired only in personal association, and these would make the work 'worth while,' even if shorn of its high literary quality and the tolerant objectivity of the analyses." Arthur Krock
+ N Y Times p7 O 23 '49 1250w

Reviewed by R. S. Allen
Sat R of Lit 32:11 D 24 '49 800w

Wis Lib Bul p7 N '49

MOLLOY, MRS ANNE STEARNS (BAKER). Celia's lighthouse; il. by Ursula Koering. 248p $2.50 Houghton 49-7323

A fictional biography of poetess Celia Laighton Thaxter's girlhood on a New Hampshire lighthouse island, from 1839 to 1851. For grades 6-9.

Booklist 45:265 Ap 1 '49

"Anne Molloy is much more skillful in describing the Laightons' life and happy family relations than she is in creating the people who enact the various roles. Ursula Koering's period pictures capture the significant milestones in Celia's life on the New England shores from 1839 to 1851 and add immensely to rounding out the story." H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p7 Mr 10 '49 300w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:218 My '49 100w

MOLLOY, A. S.—Continued

"Her previous novels for girls have shown a rather morbid concentration on self-sacrifice, sickness, false pride. Celia Thaxter's isolated youth has given opportunity for more of the same."

Kirkus 17:2 Ja 1 '49 250w

"A good story, well written. Recommended for girls 10-14." D. M. Blasco

+ Library J 74:500 Mr 15 '49 80w

"Anne Molloy's style is not distinguished, but she has a lively ear for old sailors' yarns and for islanders' phrases. One regrets that a bit of Celia's own poetry could not have been included as a reminder to an age which knows her so little." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 6 '49 270w

"The events are simple . . . but there are such warmth, liveliness and clarity in the telling that any 11-13-year-old girl will be captivated." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times p24 F 20 '49 190w

"The story is told with understanding and sympathy, and with keen insight into a young girl's mind and heart. The illustrations are very well done. Unfortunately, perhaps, this reviewer feels that he cannot stop with these words of praise for a sensitive and readable book. . . The difficulty lies in the fact that it purports to be a biography of an historically important woman. Many readers will accept it as a biography, will be entranced by its charm—and will get a distorted and inaccurate picture of a person and of a period. This is fiction, not biography. The author invents conversations, analyzes the imagined thoughts of her characters, and shows a fine disdain for historical accuracy. Miss Molloy's talent as a writer is very real. It is not fair to young readers, however, to label a book biography when it is really fiction." R. A. Brown

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:35 Ag 13 '49 250w

Wis Lib Bul 45:50 Mr '49

MOLLOY, ROBERT. Best of intentions. 314p $3 Lippincott

49-10919

Character study of Joe Moreton, a white collar worker, who at forty-two has reached an impasse. He thinks he is bored with his wife; his job is mediocre; his children annoy him. He contemplates divorce, but that is impossible because of his religion. Finally he gets down to brass tacks and takes a more sensible view of himself and his situation.

Booklist 46:4; 48 S 1 '49; O 1 '49

"Pseudo-realism is gained by knowing references to I.R.T. stations which can be authoritatively checked with any subway map. But Molloy is blind to the realities of Catholicism although his characters are supposed to be Catholic." Mary Sandrock

Cath World 170:315 Ja '50 210w

"Mr. Molloy is clearly a skilled and professional novelist. His skill is considerable enough to induce a certain kind of terror in his reader—terror that comes not from things happening but from things not quite happening. Hemingway's art has been described as concerning itself with 'people to whom things happen.' Mr. Molloy's art concerns itself with people to whom things do not happen. . . There is pertinent comment—low in tone, minor in key—in this book and it may easily be missed. In it, the properly pious will find confirmation of their noontime vision of things; but those who see a world caught in 'the whirling ditch of daybreak' will pause and ponder." M. H. Ley

+ Commonweal 51:277 D 9 '49 550w

"There are streaks of tenderness and irony in Mr. Molloy's work, as well as the unerring instinct for the indignities that make up the daily struggle to survive. And though no one can be expected to relish identifying himself with the leading character in 'The Best of Intentions,' most men will find, however unwillingly, some reflection of themselves in this all too human account of a kind of Walter Mitty peculiar to our American society." Virgilia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 O 2 '49 600w

"All of the characters are entirely credible, and their speech, which makes up most of their story, is handled fluently. Mr. Molloy's latest novel is something like a British documentary film, with rugged emphasis on plainness and honesty. Its weakness is that it hews a little too closely to its formula." Gerald Sykes

+ — N Y Times p32 O 23 '49 450w

"Mr. Molloy is very perceptive on occasion, but his book adds up to little more than glints of insight relieving a general gloom."

+ — New Yorker 25:124 O 22 '49 100w

"For those who read fiction to gain a little more insight into the ways of their fellow human beings this book will be absorbing and convincing. Mr. Molloy is not sorry for Joe Moreton, the eternal bungler, the frustrated little man who was born to be the butt of every potential sadist, plodding from day to day in a life to which he brings no content, nor even satisfaction. . . Mr. Molloy plucks him out as a scientist might a sea-anemone, and lays him before us, dim, well-intentioned, squirming." Pamela Taylor

Sat R of Lit 32:58 N 12 '49 500w

Time 54:116 O 17 '49 500w

MONIER-WILLIAMS, GORDON WICKHAM. Trace elements in food. 511p $6 Wiley

543.1 Trace elements. Food—Analysis

A49-4629

"A useful digest and summary of the published knowledge regarding the nutritional or toxicological significance of the elements which are found in the human body or foods in amounts up to 0.005 per cent. In general, each element is discussed from the standpoint of biological importance, methods of absorption into the body, excretion, retention, deficiency effects, toxicity, occurrence in foodstuffs, analytical determination and governmental regulation. The text is keyed to extensive reference lists which are appended to the chapters. . . The author is in charge of the Food Research Laboratory of the British Ministry of Health." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The book is very valuable to workers in many fields and certainly everyone interested in public health should have the book available. As one would expect when a single author attempts to cover as extensive a field as trace elements, a few significant references are omitted and certain insignificant material is included." C. A. Elvehjem

+ Am J Pub Health 39:1058 Ag '49 230w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 74:130 Ja 15 '49 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:36 My '49

MONRAD, JEAN. How many kisses good night? pictures by Lucienne Bloch. [20p] $1 Scott, W.R.

49-8112

A good-night poem in picture-book format for mothers and children.

Kirkus 17:107 Mr 1 '49 90w

"Miss Bloch's unusual illustrations are perfect: they lend a rhythmic joy to the simple processes. Taken with the delicate decorations of the text pages they make the whole a book of artistic distinction." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 My 8 '49 120w

Springf'd Republican p5D Ap 17 '49 30w

MONRO, ISABEL STEVENSON, and MONRO, KATE M. Index to reproductions of American paintings; a guide to pictures occurring in more than eight hundred books. 731p $8.50 Wilson, H.W.

759.13 Paintings, American—Indexes

48-9663

"Index to reproductions of paintings by American artists in 520 books and more than 300 catalogs of the permanent collections and annual and special exhibitions of art museums. . . Each painting is entered under the name of the artist, under its title and in many cases under its subject. Prolific artists whose work has been frequently reproduced are represented by long lists of titles some covering four 2-column pages. Under George Bellows, for example, are more than 200 titles of paintings, many of them duplicated in half a dozen or more books or catalogs. In many cases the locations of the original paintings are shown." Library J

"Very valuable as a guide to particular paintings and useful also as a catalog of American artists."
+ Booklist 45:133 D 15 '48

"An important addition to the reference tools available to art and reference librarians. No index previously published has covered so wide a field in a single volume. Supplementing the Art Index which has since 1920 indexed reproductions in art periodicals and museum bulletins, this new index will save countless hours of search for desired pictures. . . Accuracy and thoroughness are assured by the previous publication of the compilers. . . This new Index to Reproductions of American Paintings deserves a place in every library which does reference work in the field of art as well as in every art museum." H. S. Hirshberg
+ Library J 74:550 Ap 1 '49 420w

MONSARRAT, NICHOLAS. My brother Denys. 242p $2.75 Knopf

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Monsarrat, Denys 49-7045

Pictures the life in an English doctor's family from about 1914 until 1943. The author's family lived in Liverpool, and had a summer cottage in Northern Wales, to which they returned joyously every summer from 1910 to 1939. Mr Monsarrat's reminiscences begin with the arrival at the Trearddur Bay house in 1914, the year his brother Denys was born, and ends with the death of Denys in Africa during World war II.

"A sensitive, and at times quite beautiful picture of the growth of a young man. That the subject of this picture is more clearly Mr. Monsarrat than his brother Denys in no wise detracts from this." J. O. Frederick
+ Commonweal 49:524 Mr 4 '49 320w

"There's casual charm characteristic of Monsarrat, some nostalgia, and a neatness of phrase which gives this a modest distinction. Limited appeal."
Kirkus 16:588 N 1 '48 180w

"Best sections are vivid accounts of idyllic vacations and excitement of yacht racing at Welsh resort. Well written, interest holding." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:56 Ja 1 '49 100w

"Quiet and modest memoir. . . It is of sailing and of sailcraft that Mr. Monsarrat writes at most length and with most feeling. . . And it is by no means necessary to be an initiate of this particular sport to enjoy the glow and gusto with which it is described here. It is against this salt sea background that, evidently, he best recalls the younger brother whose short life ended in Africa during the fourth year of the war. Even the impersonality and obliquity with which Denys is described seem appropriate to this small, well mannered and characteristically English story." Iris Barry
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ja 23 '49 400w

"Mr. Monsarrat has not attempted anything so ambitious as a social study. This is a low-pitched threnody—modest, urbane and, because Mr. Monsarrat has singularly good taste in the selection of small, agreeable details, quite winning. An American writer would probably have tried to make comparable material more 'significant,' more searching and more bold. He might have succeeded in those aims, but he might have missed the sweetness and the smiling balance that mark 'My Brother Denys.'" Herbert Lyons
+ N Y Times p24 Ja 30 '49 500w
+ New Yorker 24:83 Ja 15 '49 100w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 27 '49 800w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith
Sat R of Lit 32:17 F 5 '49 850w

"The value of this family disclosure rests in its typicality of a generation born into uncertainty and propelled toward chaos, unable to steer an undeviating spiritual course because its ideals of socialism and pacifism had to be jettisoned midway in youth. There was nothing to take their place, except these memories of a wealthy, lazy childhood that proved no adequate training for the stress to come. Mr. Monsarrat's picture, disappointing in its artistic promise, has this value and is clearly readable."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p21 Ja 8 '49 450w

MONSELL, HELEN ALBEE. John Marshall: boy of young America; il. by Syd Browne. 206p $1.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Marshall, John—Juvenile literature 49-8116

A child's biography of John Marshall which shows how this famous chief justice's early experiences in explaining his father's rules to his younger brothers and sisters later helped him interpret the Constitution for the people of the United States. For ages 8-11.

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Ap 9 '49 20w

"Very simply told story of our first chief justice. Historical information, colonial life, and some of our famous statesmen are made to seem very real for young readers. Book satisfies the need for stories of real people and of family life as well as containing excellent background material for social studies classes." Harriet Morrison
+ Library J 74:666 Ap 15 '49 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 17 '49 140w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
N Y Times p22 Jl 17 '49 80w

MONTGOMERY, DONALD JOSEPH X. Cosmic ray physics; based on lectures given by Marcel Schein at Princeton univ, with special contributions by Shuichi Kusaka and Niels Arley. 370p il $5 Princeton univ. press

535 Cosmic rays 49-8013

"A fairly comprehensive survey of the current knowledge of cosmic rays is provided in this work. It is designed as an introduction for intermediate and advanced students of physics, and most of the chapters are essentially digest of the published literature with references to the original sources included in the text. The chapters on apparatus and experimental methods contain discussions of the principles of apparatus used in investigations, the special problems of research in the field, and the experimental techniques; but they do not cover laboratory manipulations or the mechanical or electronic details of apparatus." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 34:3 Ja '49

"In addition to serving as an introduction to the subject for physicists with intermediate or advanced training in other branches of physics, the book should be useful to the cosmic ray specialist as a source of information on the broad aspects of cosmic radiation."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:276 Je '49 300w

MONTGOMERY, DOROTHY FORD. Essentials of horsemanship. 242p il $3.50 Harper

798.2 Horsemanship Agr49-422

"This material is organized on the theory that knowledge of the horse is basic for good horsemanship and can be used by the novice, the experienced rider, and the instructor. Part

MONTGOMERY, D. F.—Continued
III has chapters on How to buy or sell a horse, Care of the horse, The sick or injured horse, and advice on stabling and boarding. Appendix suggests How to organize a horse show. Bibliography and index." Booklist

---

Booklist 45:338 Je 1 '49

"Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:1032 Jl '49 30w

"The book is nicely written, usefully indexed, and contains a bibliography which students will find it helpful to peruse." B. B.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Je 19 '49 90w

"This book should be useful to the beginning and the experienced rider as well as the riding instructor."
+ Wis Lib Bul 45:105 Je '49

MONTGOMERY, MRS ELIZABETH RIDER. Story behind modern books. 208p $2.50 Dodd
028.5 Authors. Children's literature—History and criticism 49-7920

"Collection of live accounts of the people who wrote many of our best recent books for young readers and of the diverse backgrounds, influences, special circumstances and personal preferences and fancies which made them write the books they did. . . The writers range from the Petershams of picture book fame, through Hugh Lofting and Robert Lawson, Mary O'Hara and Phil Stong, Carl Sandburg and Cornelia Meigs to Esther Forbes, Pulitzer Prize winner." Publisher's note

---

Booklist 45:360 Je 15 '49

"Should prove extremely valuable to all adults interested in children's books. Excellent human interest material for book talks. Especially recommended for all junior high school libraries." Harriet Morrison
+ Library J 74:1036 Jl '49 80w

"A young reader may well find this book a good introduction to titles he has missed, for the author's first paragraphs about the books themselves are contagiously interesting. It is also a good book for young would-be writers, for it shows vividly the variety of inspiration, of ways of working, of the kinds of lives of many authors, and records the long toil that generally follows that first inspiration." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Je 19 '49 290w

"Though some of the sketches are quite superficial, the book for the most part gives interesting and valuable information about the origins of such books as 'Mary Poppins,' 'Hitty,' 'The Yearling,' 'Rabbit Hill' and many others. Bookish children of 10 to 14 will enjoy reading these accounts for themselves, and librarians and teachers responsible for stimulating interest in the best of modern books will find them useful." Elizabeth Hodges
+ — N Y Times p28 Je 5 '49 180w
Wis Lib Bul 45:108 Je '49

MONTGOMERY, ROBERT BRUCE (EDMUND CRISPIN, pseud). Buried for pleasure. 222p $2.50 Lippincott 49-8208

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Ap 22 '49 270w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 37:305 Mr 26 '49 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ap 24 '49 230w

"Absolute and unalloyed delight." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p14 Ap 17 '49 150w

MONTGOMERY, RUTHERFORD GEORGE. Kildee house; il. by Barbara Cooney. 209p $2.50 Doubleday
49-10940

Story of a gentle hermit who retired to a hundred acres of redwood forest to live out his days. His welcome to a family of skunks and to some raccoons finally caused him such a problem that he thought he would have to move out, until a couple of children helped him.

"An unusual story, excellently done." Jane Cobb
+ Atlantic 184:103 D '49 110w
Booklist 46:70 O 15 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun O 15 '49 250w

"This book will go at once on the shelf of special favorites to be read silently and aloud again and again." Lucile Pannell
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 N 13 '49 190w

"A contribution to animal literature as delightful as it is original." A. T. Eaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 17 '49 240w
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '49

"A simple story in which true values are explored without preciousness or over-emphasis."
+ Kirkus 17:470 S 1 '49 120w

"An ingratiating tale." Alice McQuaid
+ Library J 74:1540 O 15 '49 50w

"This is that rarity—an animal story in which animals are never sentimentalized or given human characteristics, yet emerge as real personalities." Clara Adams
+ Library J 74:1761 N 15 '49 100w

"When an American writes this sort of animal story, with good plot and humor plus loving observation of the California woods and their creatures, it is good news for the children." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 N 13 '49 270w

"The habits and feuds of these skunks and raccoons make a quietly amusing woods comedy, beautifully illustrated, for nature lovers of all ages." I. S.
+ N Y Times p28 N 13 '49 140w
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 13 '49 100w

MONTGOMERY OF ALAMEIN, BERNARD LAW MONTGOMERY, 1st viscount. El Alamein to the river Sangro. 192p col maps $6.50 Dutton
940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles [48-10182]

Records the military operations of the British Eighth army in the North African campaign, during the invasion of Sicily, and the Italian campaign, from August 1942 thru 1943. No index.

Booklist 45:259 Ap 1 '49

Reviewed by R. E. Merriam
Chicago Sun Ap 25 '49 70w

"A masterpiece of basic actuality—that is to say it is like an X-ray photograph of a highly spectacular individual dressed in the glamorous panoply of war. It is colorless, but immensely revealing—not least of all concerning the great commander who made the British Eighth Army one of the most successful fighting forces in history." Ronald Stead
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 19 '49 800w
Kirkus 17:44 Ja 15 '49 170w

"Personalities, human interest, drama and color have been left to other pens. . . An important record for the specialist." G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 74:493 Mr 15 '49 130w

"Viscount Montgomery's conclusions are sound and unspectacular. . . Montgomery is here in no sense writing autobiography, nor even memoirs. Yet, of course, his personality comes through in every line. There is the 'I,' so insistent and so natural as to be in fact modest. . . There is the naturalness of command. There are hints of a firm will that may seem to the hostile observer arrogance. There is the very great caution, the desire not so much to play safe as to avoid indecent irregularities. But at least in this book, there is not much nourishment for the legend of the theatrical Montgomery, the Montgomery in special alliance with a Puritan God, the Montgomery who would like to eat Americans, but had to content himself with knifing them. It is, of course, not impossible that this legend is false." Crane Brinton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Mr 27 '49 1200w

"The book is by a soldier and, in the main, for soldiers. Montgomery, like Eisenhower in 'Crusade in Europe,' has avoided personalities and gossip. But the ordinary reader will find profit and pleasure in this straightforward record of how the last campaign in the desert was planned and fought, and in Montgomery's reflections on this campaign and those in Sicily and Italy." Drew Middleton

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 20 '49 850w

"He writes in clear, dry prose and does not seem to be too much concerned with his armchair, or other, critics."

New Yorker 25:115 Mr 26 '49 200w

"The Field-Marshal's book will be of greatest interest to students of military history, and, of course, to those who were in the battles he describes, but the layman with only a casual interest in how battles are fought will, I am afraid, find it slow going." H. C. Butcher

Sat R of Lit 32:17 Mr 26 '49 900w

Time 53:110 Ap 4 '49 300w

"It is a strictly military narrative, written in good, clear, and precise prose, but it avoids the lights and shades of personal sentiment and opinions on any events, save those of the war itself, or on any of the men with whom the writer had to deal. It is, however, lighter and easier reading than the earlier book. Similarly it is illustrated by a number of boldly-drawn maps in colour, which make it a simple matter to follow the text."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p131 Mr 6 '48 950w

"In a readable style, revealing of the man's austere dedication to his career, the Field Marshal's narrative in this volume concentrates on the Eighth Army, its commander, and its accomplishments. The accomplishments are brilliant, though the failure further to exploit the potentialities of air power is a clear indication of their self-appointed limits. Paradoxical to the end, the writing remains an unglamorous account by one of the war's more glamorous commanders." T. C. Mendenhall

+ Yale R n s 38:762 summer '49 900w

MOON, BUCKLIN. Without magnolias. 274p $3 Doubleday

49-8390

Novel about the mental conflicts of the members of a Negro community in Florida, and about the relationships of Negroes and whites here.

Booklist 45:281 Ap 15 '49

Reviewed by Edith Fowke

Canadian Forum 29:119 Ag '49 350w

"To the credit of Moon's artistry, the book remains a novel and does not turn into a tract. But though we read it primarily for our interest in the people and their fate, we feel, perhaps more strongly than if it had been deliberately didactic, the shadow which never leaves them wholly free. And who and what casts the shadow is clear enough. This is a competent novel on an important theme." M. R. Grennan

+ Cath World 169:314 Jl '49 250w

"An especially appealing and vital character is Luther, who progresses from flunky in a white man's taproom to a CIO union official. Though—from necessity imposed by space—Moon's people are often sketched in rather broad lines, the picture of them is always graphic, compelling, and true. It is a notable season, indeed, which sees the publication of a novel on racial relations as thoughtful, wise and engrossing as 'Without Magnolias.'" Jack Conroy

+ Chicago Sun Ap 13 '49 460w

"'Without Magnolias' although in novel form, is actually an incisive analysis of the position of the southern Negro. . . As the title implies, the approach to the problem is in terms of matter-of-fact appraisal; the author stands squarely for legal reforms, and states his case with clarity, fairness, and meticulous attention to detail. In spite of the fact that he has refrained from including sensational elements, it should be mentioned that some readers may find a few of the incidents, as well as some of the dialogue, questionable in taste. Even so, the narrative has genuine appeal for Mr. Moon has skilfully drawn a warm portrayal of a group of ordinary likeable, human beings trying, each in his own way, to cope with a hostile environment. And, for all the heartache, there is still a good deal of humor—and much gentleness." M. W. Stoer

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 26 '49 650w

Kirkus 17:116 Mr 1 '49 340w

"Let us have more such well-tempered novels to aid us. Buy it." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 74:496 Mr 15 '49 70w

"This is Bucklin Moon's second novel and it deserves the prize it won, for he has painted an accurate, realistic picture of the delicate balance of race relations in the South, spicing it with small vulgarities and an occasional bitter joke. In this sense it is an extraordinarily successful book, for the seamy side of race relations comes through as a powerful undercurrent, revealed largely through conversations in bars and barber shops, at parties." Anne Petry

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ap 10 '49 1050w

"Unlike many novels about the problems of Negroes in this country, 'Without Magnolias' is a good story. In addition to an effective sympathy, Bucklin Moon has a good eye, a sharp ear and an unobtrusively smooth narrative style that carries his book along. . . One particularly interesting aspect of this book is that it never uses violence as a plot device." W. F. Weaver

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 10 '49 360w

"One of the most reasoned and polished works that have so far appeared in the increasing pile of novels about Negro life in America. Mr. Moon, unlike most other recent writers, has managed to avoid the invective and exacerbation that this topic so often calls forth."

+ New Yorker 25:120 Ap 9 '49 160w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 3 '49 300w

"The story moves successfully on two levels. On one level complication and conflict arise when Negroes and whites are thrown together—in work, transportation, business, industry, etc. On the second level the Negroes live their lives and wrestle with their problems as human beings, no more conscious of their color than whites in Sweden. This dual movement is quite effective, for it leads the reader to regard unfairness and injustice as wrongs not to Negroes but to people." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 32:14 Ap 9 '49 700w

"True or false, this is the conviction of tens of thousands of Negro Americans today, the terrifying measure of the bitterness engendered by the injustice and discrimination which are the theme of this significant novel. Most readers will agree that the George Washington Carver Award 'for outstanding writing by or about American Negroes,' was worthily bestowed." Beulah Amidon

+ Survey 85:495 S '49 350w

"The slightly lazy and limpid air of a fresh Florida morning, authentic as can be, comes through on the first page of this novel. The rest is not all so authentic, but as a novel about the 'race problem' it makes more sense than many more violent pieces of writing."

Time 53:108 Ap 25 '49 440w

Wis Lib Bul 45:88 My '49

MOORAD, GEORGE. Lost peace in China. 262p $3 Dutton

951.042 Communism—China. U.S.—Foreign relations—China. Russia—Foreign relations—China. China—Foreign relations 49-4853

"Mr. Moorad, a journalist of extensive experience in the Far East, was among the party of correspondents visiting Indonesia who were lost in the tragic crash in India. His book narrates his post surrender experiences in China, and seeks to trace the background and reasons for the present situation." (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

Reviewed by Keith Wheeler
+ Chicago Sun Jl 27 '49 650w

"Factual reporting by competent observers like Mr. Moorad is an essential corrective for cloistered theorists. Nevertheless, the reaction that greeted the careful and intelligent attempt made by Holland to restore western guidance in Indonesia, an area where nationalism was less advanced than in China, suggests that the old methods, however efficient, are no longer possible." M. B. Jansen
Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 2 '49 650w

"Mr. Moorad's writing in Lost Peace is gifted criticism and analysis. It is gifted because, however unsavory it must have seemed to him, the dish Mr. Moorad served is essentially one of truthfulness and sincerity. . . For as serious a condemnation of our policies as it is, Lost Peace in China is a remarkable piece of work because it is written with no hysteria, with none of the bitterness the author must have felt, and with but little of the hopeless feeling of great opportunities neglected or misused. In general it is a sober, factual account of what Mr. Moorad saw and experienced in China immediately following the war." J. O. Frederick
+ Commonweal 50:442 Ag 12 '49 430w
Kirkus 17:288 Je 1 '49 160w

"Author's distinct pro-Nationalist bias tends to furnish a onesided picture of events and serves to justify Chiang Kai-shek's position. Of interest as a description of postwar confusion and mistakes." Philip Yampolsky
Library J 74:1022 Jl '49 130w

Reviewed by E. D. Hawkins
Nation 169:578 D 10 '49 90w

"A few sections of the book are of good quality, including those which give a direct account of what Mr. Moorad saw in newly liberated Hong Kong. . . Much of 'Lost Peace in China,' unfortunately, seems to have been written in haste. Parts of it are confused. Criticism of almost every one who has had anything to do with China, and especially of Americans, is carried to extremes. There is little evidence that the author had much knowledge of Chinese history or strong interest in China's basic economic problems." Floyd Taylor
— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 O 9 '49 320w

"However much one may disagree with Moorad's premises or conclusions, his book merits attention as a sober effort to explain the China mess. If it seems too heavily charged with foreboding, it is important to remember that it comes from a man who had seen a great deal of Communism in action and to whom its protective colorations and pious protestations were painfully transparent and familiar. . . This book, coming at this moment of the author's untimely death in an aircrash in India, bears eloquent testimony to the honesty and forthrightness which characterizes the best in American journalism. It is for these qualities quite as much as for its substance that this report stands out." G. G. Stevens
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 31 '49 850w

"Chiang Kai-shek is presented in this book as a figure of heroic dimensions, which to this reviewer is the principal weakness of an otherwise well-thought-out handling of the East Asia tragedy. . . 'Lost Peace in China' appears to have been written in great haste, and to have been hastily edited, for it abounds in inaccuracies both statistical and historical. . . In spite of minor errors of this kind, 'Lost Peace in China' is a book of enduring value, and is packed with brisk writing which will give pleasure to any reader. To students of Far East affairs it will ring true, and it will be of value to the historians of the future. It is an excellent eye-witness account of momentous events which will long have disastrous effects upon America's position in the Far Pacific." Hallett Abend
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:9 S 3 '49 950w

MOORE, CHARLES B. Painting and paper hanging for the home owner. 188p il $2 Garden City pub. co.

698.1 Paper hanging. House painting 49-3319

Guide for the amateur on painting woodwork, metal furniture, plaster, masonry, wall boards, floors, shingles, awnings, boats, etc. Includes information on paper hanging. Index.

"Very practical guide for the amateur."
+ Booklist 46:9 S 1 '49
Bookmark 9:9 O '49 20w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '49
N Y New Tech Bks 34:99 N '49

MOORE, MRS GAY (MONTAGUE). Seaport in Virginia; George Washington's Alexandria; drawings by Worth Bailey; phot. by Walter Wilcox. 278p $10 Garrett

975.5296 Alexandria, Virginia. Washington, George 50-218

The history of the town of Alexandria, Virginia, first laid out in 1749 by John West, junior, and a seventeen-year-old surveyor named George Washington. Especially stressed are the beautiful houses still remaining in Alexandria, with many illustrations of their exteriors and interiors. Bibliography. Index.

"This beautiful book commemorates Alexandria's two hundredth anniversary. . . Mrs. Moore's book is far better documented than books about Alexandria tend to be. (It is no better indexed, though.) Mrs. Moore weighs tradition and sometimes finds it wanting, and she is commendably cautious about fixing a house date. . . Occasionally she misses a turn in the genealogical maze . . . but in the main 'Seaport in Virginia' is solid and valuable as well as easy to read. Alexandria, which, after two hundred years is used to pointing with pride, may do so again." E. H. Smith
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 N 27 '49 360w

Reviewed by H. I. Brock
+ N Y Times p43 N 27 '49 130w

MOORE, JESSIE ELEANOR. Children's prayers for every day; il. by Edith May Cunnings. 64p $1 Abingdon-Cokesbury

264.1 Children's prayers 49-9805

Prayers, old and new, to be used in family and private worship by ages 4-10. The material is grouped under the following headings: In the morning; At the table; Our home; Outdoors; The Sabbath; Special days; Our world; When evening comes.

Reviewed by T. D. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p28 D 4 '49 30w

"Highly recommended." J. F. Carter
+ Library J 74:1106 Ag '49 80w

"A few of these [prayers] verge close to the jingle in form, but in them, as in the traditional prayers, there is an emphasis upon those aspects of life which a child knows and understands." E. L. B.
N Y Times p24 Ag 28 '49 140w

MOORE, JOHN CECIL. Blue field; portrait of an English village. (Whittlesey house publication) 212p $3 McGraw

828 England—Social life and customs 49-4544

"The Blue Field of flax in Brensham Village is the background for the last drama in William Hart's life. William and his daughter Pru, Sir Gerald, Mr. Chorlton and Mrs. Merrythought are the quiet—or turbulent—characters who people this bit of Shakespeare country. . . This tale completes the trilogy which began with Fair Field and Brensham Village [Book Review Digest 1946, 1948]." Library J

Booklist 46:11 S 1 '49

"Mr. Moore's humor and élan are irresistible; but if Brensham, as he reveals it, has a touch of the glamour that reigned in 'a wood near Athens,' so that farce and fantasy seem always just round the corner, the picture never fails to convince us of its authenticity and insight. This is England, and indeed I think that Mr. Moore brings us as close to the heart of it as any writer has done since Kipling explored Merlin's Isle, or Hardy ranged under the greenwood tree." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 30 '48 650w

"Brensham, as presented by Mr. Moore, is a land of beguilement and bewitchment. Reading, one falls completely under its spell. But there comes a moment when one begins to suspect Mr. Moore's intentions. For Brensham is more to him than merely a fascinating and isolated corner of England—it and its ways take on the character of a moral imperative." Ruth Chapin

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 25 '49 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '49

Kirkus 17:345 Jl 1 '49 160w

"These stories of the spirit of place are recommended for the general reader." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 74:1095 Ag '49 140w

"The undeniable charm of this book is difficult to capture and more difficult to define. At the start the reviewer is skeptical and uneasy over the frail chance not only of appeal but of value. . . [The] chapters are written with such good humored zest and buoyancy that this reviewer has not been able to discover a dull line in the book." M. E. Chase

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 S 4 '49 600w

Reviewed by J. F. Dobie

N Y Times p9 Ag 21 '49 600w

"Mr. Moore has an artfully straightforward style, an aptitude for literary reference, and what is often called quiet humor, and there is a basic honesty in his writing and in his interest in people that saves the book from being meretricious."

+ New Yorker 25:67 S 3 '49 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 14 '49 400w

"'The Blue Field' is a rich study in characters. . . To anyone who would understand the odd business of English country people in conflict with the 'high-ups' in London 'The Blue Field' is highly recommended; to others it is an entrancing picture of the English landscape and the English country people." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 32:11 Ag 27 '49 650w

MOORE, ROBERT ETHERIDGE. Hogarth's literary relationships. 202p il $3.75 Univ. of Minn.

759.2 Hogarth, William. Art and literature 49-7026

"In his study of the great English satirist Mr. Moore emphasizes the most important series of his prints: 'The Harlot's Progress,' 'The Rake's Progress,' 'Marriage à la Mode,' and (briefly) 'Industry and Idleness.' He describes their publication, reception, imitations; and their relationship to Fielding's comedies, farces, and novels, and to Smollett's novels. Since Hogarth considered himself a 'dramatic writer,' Mr. Moore analyzes him as such." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

"One too seldom finds a work of criticism which breaks new ground in old regions. Robert Etheridge Moore has produced such a work. It is an important book, because of the new light it sheds on William Hogarth himself, on his relations to his times, and on his influence upon the literature of his century." Delancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Je 12 '49 900w

"As long as [Mr. Moore] bases his analyses on documentation he is entirely reliable. But occasionally he distorts the artist's milieu in an attempt to make him a unique sensibility. . . The book is beautifully made and carefully annotated, but the style would have benefited by more compression." Robert Halsband

— + Sat R of Lit 32:21 My 14 '49 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p716 N 4 '49 1100w

MOORE, ROSALIE (MRS WILLIAM L. BROWN). Grasshopper's man, and other poems; with a foreword by W. H. Auden. (Yale ser. of younger poets) 66p $2.50 Yale univ. press

811 49-9307

Collection of short poems by an American author, who at present lives in California.

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun Ag 1 '49 80w

Reviewed by Vivian Mercier

Commonweal 50:396 Jl 29 '49 220w

"It is possible that her acute sense perceptions may someday take on meaning for others beside herself—enough of her words may be accumulated and we may thereby become sufficiently familiar with the furnishings of her mind to understand her. At present all one can say is that she has elegance, that she belongs to the 'Activists' group. . . She has talent of a sort, and a fine ear for words, though not for meaning."

+ — Kirkus 17:173 Mr 15 '49 130w

Reviewed by G. S. Fraser

New Statesman & Nation 38:335 S 24 '49 500w

Reviewed by David Daiches

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p74 S 25 '49 270w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

New Yorker 25:130 N 26 '49 260w

"The poet's best moments are in her triumphs over her own virtuosity, when she can keep the poem from splintering into too bright images and instead make lines and phrases humble before the complete task. . . There are failures of communication, some stammerings between the bursts of remarkable clarity, some small awkwardnesses of rhythm and tone. It will not do to suggest correctives that would work too violently, saving the detail and killing the poetry. What works out practically is this, that with greater intimacy with her preoccupations the poet will develop her own kind of clarity. Her line will be purer, her logic of association and transition more predictable for herself and for her reader." Henry Rago

+ — Poetry 75:98 N '49 600w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril

San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 18 '49 160w

"This book was worth publishing if only to give us the benefit of W. H. Auden's witty and instructive foreword. Everything he says is true and important. . . I must confess that to me, with a few exceptions, the poems in this volume were a disappointment. Miss Moore is particularly unintelligible a great deal of the time and her reasons for being so do not seem to be of much importance." Martha Bacon

— + Sat R of Lit 32:10 Jl 16 '49 550w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch

Yale R n s 39:361 winter '50 550w

MORA, JOSEPH JACINTO. Californios; the saga of the hard-riding vaqueros, America's first cowboys; il. by [the author]. 175p $3.75 Doubleday

979.4 Cowboys. Frontier and pioneer life—California 49-9653

"Jo Mora, who has been sculpturing and painting in California since he left the Texas

MORA, J. J.—Continued
border four decades ago, celebrates here in words and pictures the bow-legged genus vaquero as it flourished on the Coast in the pastoral age. His Californios came riding up from Sonora and Jalisco with their Padres, families, guitars and herds to stake out ranchos at about the time Napoleon was born. . . They were the first to make a craft of cow-punching in what we now designate as the United States, and brought with them all the mysteries of a cult dating back to the sixteenth century, when Coronado brought his shipload of cattle into Mexico. . . But the period of the California vaquero was brief. It declined with the fall of the Mission system, faded with the inrush of the Argonauts, and vanished in the Monterey hills a half century ago." N Y Times

Booklist 45:391 Jl 15 '49

Kirkus 17:227 Ap 15 '49 130w

"Especially recommended for Western collections." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 74:1027 Jl '49 100w

"With this breezy, picture-crammed volume Jo Mora, the effervescent old writer, artist and horse-wrangler, adds his considerable mite to the rush of literature coming out of California in the year of the 100th anniversary of the Forty-Niners. Mr. Mora's prose is chatty, exclamatory in spots; the time he attempts to recreate is surely one of the most picturesque in all our history. His drawings are lively, and technically faithful in the smallest detail." Stanley Walker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Jl 3 '49 550w

"The text succeeds less well than the art, for it is antiquarian material on the whole, with not much impact, despite efforts to make it breezy with informal slang. But the reader with a turn for cow history will find Mora's work the record of a phase of it that was not without its peculiar charm and glory." Idwal Jones
+ — N Y Times p10 Je 26 '49 470w

"His book is packed with information. . . Mora spent years collecting his material; the subject was one of his long-time hobbies. And the result is evident in what he has done here. As for literary quality, the reader of this kind of work isn't looking for style, but for the facts. Mora's manner is on the chatty side, a touch old fashioned and exclamatory." J. H. Jackson
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 12 '49 800w

"Mr. Mora, Uruguayan-born, died two years ago at the age of seventy-one and this book, completed within three weeks of his death, is a worthy monument to his art and his scholarship, and an eloquent and engaging expression of his devotion to the cause of the pre-Yankee, Spanish-speaking horseman." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 32:23 O 22 '49 110w

MORAN, BENJAMIN. Journal, 1857-1865; ed. by Sarah Agnes Wallace and Frances Elma Gillespie. 2v ea $12.50 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Diplomatic memoirs. U.S.—Foreign relations—Great Britain. Great Britain—Foreign relations—U.S. 49-9584

"The Journal consists of forty-one mottled-back volumes written by Moran from 1857 to 1875, when he served as secretary of the United States legation in London. . . The present two volumes cover the period from the beginning of the Journal in January, 1857, to the reports in London in May, 1865, of Lincoln's death. This will include only the mission of George M. Dallas and the first part of that of Charles Francis Adams—or fourteen of Moran's note-books." (Pref) Index.

"The editing is admirable. Each volume is introduced by an appropriate commentary giving accurately and adequately the historical setting of the journal. The copious footnotes give illuminating biographical data on every significant person mentioned by Moran and even on many of the insignificant ones. Because of Moran's habit of noting weather conditions, the height, weight, hair, eyes, and other features of callers at the Embassy, and other trivial matters, the researcher is likely to do a lot of panning before striking pay dirt, but the nuggets are there if only he is persistent and patient enough." W. E. Binkley
+ Ann Am Acad 266:232 N '49 440w

"With unvarying frankness, much prejudice and a taste for scandal, [Moran] sets down his impressions of men, scenes and events. . . For the course of events in England during our Civil War the second volume of this massive diary is invaluable. . . Of major 'revelations' this diary contains none. Moran, after all, was in no position to learn secrets of the first importance. . . But in background material the volumes are rich, and it is unjust to their contents to fix attention too largely on the Civil War." Allan Nevins
+ N Y Times p3 D 25 '49 1200w

MORAN, CHARLES J. Handbook of export traffic. 191p il $3 Duell

382 Shipment of goods. Shipping 49-11042

"It is hoped that this book will help promote a better understanding of the elementary routine of shipping goods overseas. . . It deals with inland transportation, cartage, and ocean transportation and the fundamentals of packing, marking, documentation, insurance, and the collection of the bill of sale. The chapters have been arranged in sequence so as to describe the handling of an order from availability in the plant to delivery on board steamer." Foreword

Booklist 46:91 N 15 '49

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 74:1756 N 15 '49 100w

MORAVIA, ALBERTO, pseud. See Pincherle, A.

MORE, JASPER. Land of Italy. 264p il $5.50 Batsford

914.5 Italy—Description and travel 49-9804

A combination of guidebook and historical study of Italy, copiously illustrated with photographs and reproductions of water colors. Maps on end papers. Index.

"Mr. More has managed to give us a travel book which entertains as well as instructs, a not too minor miracle. . . But perhaps the thing which recommends this book above all else is the 160 photographs and four color plates which illustrate the text. If you can look at one-tenth of them and not make a resolution to visit Italy next year you will show a sales' resistance well above the average." J. G. Harrison
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 22 '49 310w

"Both text and photographs perform with simplicity the Cicerone's task, with now and then a mixture of British and American vocabulary that only bespeaks invitation to a double public. . . There is a good chapter on the wines of the country and the fish and pasta of both north and south. This is none of your 'written up quickly' bits of travel merchandise, but a good book distilled out of affection and knowledge from long residence." Ernestine Evans
+ Commonweal 50:347 Jl 15 '49 140w

"This is indeed a guide service provided by an expert. Anyone planning a trip to Italy in the immediate future will have to be supremely well acquainted with the country before he can afford to leave 'The Land of Italy' unread. It is a book for the traveler, to savor, to study and to keep as a constant companion. And it is a book which will give the greatest pleasure to all who are stirred by skillful descriptions and fine reproductions of the enduringly beautiful art of Italy." C. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 11 '49 350w

"The first entry in the postwar Italian travel-book sweepstakes is not quite as stiff as the conservative typography and starchy layout would make it seem. Mr. More has treated Italy—which threatens to become the top European tourist favorite—efficiently and thoroughly." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 32:25 Jl 23 '49 100w

"This is indeed a worthy successor to the earlier books of this admirable series."

+ Spec 183:26 Jl 1 '49 550w

"Mr. More lacks the charming eccentricities of Herr Baedeker or John Murray's assistants, but he could have written a valuable guidebook. The knowledge and sympathy are both there, but the conception of what should be done with them is muddled. The book, however, is pleasantly produced, illustrated with nearly 200 photographs, and, taken in addition to a guide, might well fill in some historical gaps."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p378 Je 10 '49 550w

MOREHEAD, ALBERT HODGES, and MOTT-SMITH, GEOFFREY. Complete book of solitaire and patience games. 190p $2.50 Longmans

795.43 Solitaire (game) 49-9789

Descriptions of more than 150 games, illustrated with diagrams, and giving detailed instructions in layout and play with sometimes "tips" on the best ways to proceed. Average required time of play and chances of winning are given. Index.

Booklist 45:388 Jl 15 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '49

Springf'd Republican p7B Jl 24 '49 150w

MOREHOUSE, WARD. Matinee tomorrow; fifty years of our theater. (Whittlesey house publication) 340p pl $5 McGraw

792 Theater—New York (city) 49-11261

Informal, anecdotal history of the New York stage from 1898 to 1948 by the dramatic critic of the New York Sun. Index.

Booklist 46:93 N 15 '49

Bookmark 9:27 N '49 30w

"Out of 40 years of playgoing and zestful inquiries into stage history Ward Morehouse has distilled for the general reader an informing and entertaining record of the twentieth-century theater in the United Staets. For students of the period, this should prove a useful reference book. The author's forthright opinions are embroidered upon a texture of thoroughgoing research." E. C. Sherburne

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 10 '49 390w

"The total effect is one of trying to cover too much and the result is a slight smattering of everything. There will be some audience for this among followers of the theater—but not too wide a one."

Kirkus 17:416 Ag 1 '49 100w

"I don't know of a book about the theatre from which you are likely to get more enjoyment than Mr. Morehouse's nostalgic, sentimental, shrewd, and racy account of the first half century of the contemporary theatre." George Freedley

+ Library J 74:1605 O 15 '49 80w

Reviewed by Harold Clurman

New Repub 121:21 O 10 '49 1000w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 6 '49 550w

"Ward Morehouse has told his story with relish and gusto, enlivening it with countless green-room anecdotes and some delightful writing. 'Matinee Tomorrow,' though entertainingly composed, is a sound history book, the best one-volume study of the American drama and the American stage to have yet appeared." T. Q. Curtiss

+ N Y Times p23 O 9 '49 800w

"Although he is much too fond of the theatre and the people who work there to deal very seriously with their shortcomings, and although many of his stories seem rather pointless, his book is entertaining and, in a way, even valuable as a record of the places actors and playwrights lived and ate, the people they married and divorced, the money they earned, what their real names were."

+ — New Yorker 25:170 N 19 '49 140w

"Mr. Morehouse is writing this book because he couldn't bear not to have written it. The result is, for anyone who has spent a few decades in theater-going, as thorough a treat as will come his way in half a lifetime. If you're one to whom the theater has meant anything in the last 50 years, run, don't walk to your nearest bookstore and get hold of 'Matinee Tomorrow.' You'll call the money well spent." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 26 '49 900w

"This is an informative book that also smells of the theatre. Mr. Morehouse's theatre is the one that people have always gone to for excitement and enjoyment, no matter how cantankerous the critics have been. It is copiously illustrated with photographs that make the past seem not only plausible but desirable. . . No one who knows how much work Mr. Morehouse does can imagine how he found time to write this thoroughly documented book. But you can depend upon it that he did not write it in one place." Brooks Atkinson

+ Sat R of Lit 32:17 N 12 '49 800w

MORGAN, ALFRED POWELL. Pet book for boys and girls; il. by the author and Ruth King. 246p $2.75 Scribner

636.7 Pets—Juvenile literature 49-10694

"Directions for the choosing, care, feeding, housing and, in some cases, the training of a variety of pets. Animals included are: dogs, cats, rabbits, guinea pigs, hamsters, skunks, raccoons, squirrels, moles and mice, chameleons, tortoises and turtles, parrots, and wild birds. Enlivened by anecdotes and character sketches of animals the author has known." Booklist

Booklist 46:38 S 15 '49

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 10 '49 120w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '49

Commonweal 51:191 N 18 '49 150w

"Careful directions for keeping different kinds of pets are to be found in this excellent book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 25:542 N '49 80w

"Sound information and no fuss and feathers."

+ Kirkus 17:328 Jl 1 '49 120w

Reviewed by Alice McQuaid

Library J 74:1544 O 15 '49 100w

Reviewed by J. M. Smith

Library J 74:1609 O 15 '49 70w

"This fine, practical book is highly recommended." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 O 16 '49 230w

New Yorker 25:183 D 3 '49 70w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R of Lit 32:34 N 12 '49 40w

MORGAN, MRS BARBARA (SPOFFORD). Man's restless search. 224p $2.50 Harper

201 Religion—Philosophy 49-7181

A revised edition of the author's Skeptic's Search for God (Book Review Digest 1947). Index.

"One may suspect that the earlier title of this book repelled more readers than it attracted. Self-confessed and satisfied 'skeptics' are not interested in books that offer to tell them how they may quit being skeptics. 'In vain is the net spread in the sight of any bird,' and the skeptical bird does not want to be caught. 'Man's Restless Search' is better. If it wins the attention of persons who are skeptics but do not like to admit it, even to themselves, much less to the clerk in a bookstore, it may render the service for which it was designed." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 66:147 F 2 '49 280w

MORGAN, BARBARA—Continued

Reviewed by T. D. Mygatt
Churchman 163:15 Ap 1 '49 300w

"Mrs. Morgan, the wife of a prominent New York banker, is a distinguished scholar, having earned her Ph.D. in the field of philosophy, she now turns her scholarly interest and her ability to write to the task of making religious faith acceptable and intelligible to modern man. . . Those interested in philosophical problems as well as religious readers should welcome this book."
+ Kirkus 17:54 F 1 '49 180w

MORGAN, BRIAN STANFORD. Rosa. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 235p $2.75 Little 49-11830

"An English inspector sets out to discover why a young girl was strangled. Rosa, an Austrian seeking refuge in London, had unwittingly stumbled upon an accidental murder by a tough gang leader. Her attempts to reform the gangster, rather than tell the police stem from her past horror of the law." Springf'd Republican

" 'Rosa' is what happens when a devout admirer of Graham Greene attempts something of the same sort without possessing the gift of vitality." James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p51 N 25 '49 270w
Kirkus 17:486 S 1 '49 180w

"Although the story of a murder, this is no conventional mystery story, nor even what is nowadays called a novel of suspense. Bryan Morgan instead had tried to establish the character of one already dead through the eyes of those who knew her, and to tell a story of modern day good and evil. But perhaps because of his diffuse way of telling the tale, Rosa Kreutz never really emerges as a person. And since the reader is never convinced of Rosa's saintliness, he is not convinced either of Mr. Morgan's message."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 D 11 '49 230w

"It is regrettable that two acts of violence, essential to the plot, puts 'Rosa' in the classification of a murder story. The book deserves a better fate, a wider audience. . . [It is] a fine and sensitive novel." P. J. McDonnell
+ N Y Times p58 D 4 '49 110w

"Highly recommended." E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p36 N 20 '49 160w
Springf'd Republican p7D D 11 '49 70w

MORGAN, CHARLES. River line. 195p $2.75 Macmillan
49-10374

The meanings of history, the meanings of life and death, of personal attitudes and responsibilities, these philosophical questions underlie this story of five people brought together in close association in a station of the French Underground during the war. The story of the five and why one of them had to die is told in flashbacks and reminiscences when three of them, the American amateur soldier, the English professional, and the French girl Marie come together again in England after the war.

"Better than average but not up to Mr. Morgan's par. The trouble is that he has fashioned the kind of story that should have a great deal of suspense, and he doesn't keep the reader guessing enough of the time. As to the philosophizing: interesting, but only mildly."
Atlantic 184:99 N '49 90w
Booklist 45:346; 46:14 Je 15 '49; S 1 '49
Bookmark 9:6 O '49 30w

"It all works out satisfactorily in the end, both from the point of view of plot and of the successful maturing of the young American's originally naive character. Very neat, and psychologically convincing." D. H. M.
+ Canadian Forum 29:190 N '49 270w

"Strange and beautiful story."
+ Cath World 170:73 O '49 420w

"There is a tendency toward melodrama now and then, but British restraint holds the reins most of the time. The language is chaste enough for the readers of Good Housekeeping, where the novel appeared serially as 'The Edge of Happiness.' This might be regarded as a positive virtue, since there is no lack of war novels bristling with lurid and sulphurous words." Jack Conroy
+ — Chicago Sun Ag 17 '49 360w

" 'The River Line' does attempt honestly to make what Mr. Morgan calls soundings in the human personality, and to investigate the forces influencing existence. Although one may not always agree with the author's conclusions, his sincerity of purpose must be respected." M. W. Stoer
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 25 '49 1000w

"I liked this better than anything Morgan has done in recent years, better, perhaps, than Sparkenbroke; [and] though it is, in many ways, a less important book it is more readable."
+ Kirkus 17:338 Jl 1 '49 300w

"One may not easily believe that a philosophical discussion of guilt and responsibility can be filled with suspense but in this story, as in Judge's Story (1947), it is indeed, and is well worth reading." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 74:1095 Ag '49 130w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Jenkins
Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 15 '49 240w

Reviewed by J. D. Scott
New Statesman & Nation 38:203 Ag 20 '49 420w

" 'The River Line' has passages of austere beauty, it probes some of the fantastic human behaviors of our times with far more subtlety than is often met with in fiction, and it is clearly the work of a thinker and a craftsman. But its underlying problem does not underly it deeply enough; there is no heart of darkness to give spiritual warmth to an often illuminating intellectual argument. Perhaps one's real and unreasonable complaint is that Mr. Morgan is neither Conrad nor Dostoievsky." James Hilton
— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S 4 '49 850w

"Its real weakness is not an intellectual one. Better novels have been written on worse themes. Morgan may have grasped the factual and the philosophical truth of his situation, but there must also be a dramatic truth, and that Morgan does not achieve. . . But Sturgess is no modern Hamlet. When he is retelling the story of his crucial days with the underground, the narrative tenses and quickens, but when he speculates on the implications of his act, the novel fades away. He and the other characters are too thin, too little particularized to make their dilemma compelling." Charles Weir
— + N Y Times p7 Ag 21 '49 550w
New Yorker 25:66 Ag 27 '49 140w
San Francisco Chronicle p26 O 9 '49 220w

"Not a word in the novel is wasted, not a scene could be spared. It builds up to a tense and dramatic revelation of human relationships in the shadow of a tragic past event. . . Mr. Morgan does not belabor the obvious. But the vibrations, the impressions, the overtones and undertones—he makes them all count. He builds a situation deliberately, and though it is simple it is also complex, with intricate relationships and the inevitable intruding into the present of the past." Walter Havighurst
+ Sat R of Lit 32:10 Ag 27 '49 600w

"This type of story has been written squarely and vividly from experience and does not, in itself, gain by being pressed through the silken mesh of Mr. Morgan's mind. It seems evident that he did not intend it to gain; that it serves only as a tangible prop for the spiritual and technical textures that make the book. These latter do interpenetrate. . . There are no rules as to what scaffolding a creator may or may not use. Webster is a poet while he is murdering; some of James's plots, without his sublimation, would serve in a cheap romance. The proof lies with the artist's wizardry; if, as in Mr. Morgan's case, the texture is so fine-spun that the highest criteria have to be invoked, then a small flaw in what could have been a triumph of interweaving shows up nakedly." Sylva Norman

Spec 183:154 Jl 29 '49 600w

Springf'd Republican p4D S 25 '49 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p457 Jl 15 '49 650w

MORGAN, MURRAY C. (CROMWELL MURRAY, pseud). The Columbia, powerhouse of the West. 295p $3.50 Superior pub.

979.73 Columbia river 49-9847

The story of the Columbia River which the author calls "three hundred pages of the most interesting facts I could find about the river." "The volume opens with a section on the geography and geology of the river, with sketches of its history, and then takes up, in three sections, the present-day Columbia." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:12 S 1 '49

"The book is well written, informative in a lively way and objectively reportorial."

+ Commonweal 50:422 Ag 5 '49 90w

"Tucked away in this volume is a wealth of fascinating detail. . . A first-rate introduction to the Columbia, great river of the West which will be of special interest to tourists. If you want to take a wonderful auto-and-boat trip, Mr. Morgan has mapped it for you—the Columbia from its source to the sea—and provided some excellent entertainment en route." Carey McWilliams

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ag 7 '49 750w

"Murray Morgan, a young professor at the College of Puget Sound, knows the Columbia where it bisects the sub-Arctic and where it influences the atomic age. Nor is his acquaintance with the great river merely platonic. He and his wife once nearly lost their lives in a kayak in Box Canyon. His book is not only an excellent account of the Columbia, based on first-hand knowledge, but also particularly pertinent right now, for Congress is heavily involved in debating the Columbia Valley Administration bill of Senator Magnuson and Representative Mitchell." R. L. Neuberger

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 21 '49 340w

Reviewed by Maurine Neuberger

Sat R of Lit 32:23 S 10 '49 200w

MORGAN, MURRAY C. (CROMWELL MURRAY, pseud). Viewless winds. 220p $3 Dutton

49-7477

The murder of the wife of a labor leader in an Oregon logging town sets off the action. The husband is the chief suspect, but a young newspaper man has his doubts. The tension between labor and the mill owners finally bursts into open warfare.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun F 25 '49 150w

Kirkus 16:630 D 1 '48 90w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 6 '49 180w

"Although the style is post-Hammett, the material is somewhat old fashioned. . . Mr. Morgan's people talk convincingly. The harangues of the labor people are full of a swollen humanism that has the curious effect of dehumanizing itself. And the newspaper publisher, so eager to bend his editorials around the machinations of the lumber mill owner, is caught, realistically, in his own clichés. As for the turbulent williwaws of West Coast labor politics, they are presented in bold relief." H. B. Parker

N Y Times p22 F 20 '49 180w

"Principal figures in labor-management feud are robustly portrayed in tough, explicit drama with much violence and considerable amount of excellent writing."

+ Sat R of Lit 32:33 Mr 5 '49 40w

MORGENTHAU, HANS JOACHIM. Politics among nations; the struggle for power and peace. 489p maps $5.50; text ed $4.25 Knopf

341 World politics. International relations 48-8748

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

Reviewed by G. S. Pettee

Am Econ R 39:1025 S '49 1650w

"It seems to this reviewer that the author exaggerates the lack of light and air and order and agreed pathways therein; to some extent, indeed, the volume appears to be a massive effort toward intellectual and practical reaction in the style of that curious mixture of mysticism and obscurantism with excessively abstract theory characteristic of much Central European thought in political and legal science. Concretely it appears that the volume abounds in misreading of fact and lack of clarity of thought, often imposed upon the author precisely by his instinctive appreciation of the international situation, an appreciation which is quite sound in quality but seems excessive in its intensity." P. B. Potter

— + Am Hist R 54:651 Ap '49 360w

"This is the most mature and scholarly book yet to appear in its field. And it is the one most likely to convince even the skeptic that world politics has now come into its own as a distinct branch of learning." J. B. Whitton

+ Am Pol Sci R 43:1291 D '49 550w

"At most points the author's arguments will stand or fall on the basis of his interpretations of the institutional mechanisms of world politics, such as the balance of power. Morgenthau's book is that rarity, an attempt to face crucial contemporary problems in the scientific spirit. Its achievements stand head and shoulders above the crusading or pontifical writings that constitute the major intellectual fare in this field." Barrington Moore

+ Am Soc R 14:326 Ap '49 800w

"This book is in many ways a remarkable piece of work. It combines learning with philosophic insight. It is a healthy counteragent to the overidealistic kind of treatise on international affairs. There can be little question, however, that its general tone is so profoundly critical as almost to give one the impression of hopelessness as to the future of international relations." Dexter Perkins

+ — Ann Am Acad 264:124 Jl '49 420w

Foreign Affairs 27:502 Ap '49 10w

"It will afford an excellent basis for discussion in any class. It is a valuable plotting out of the subject matter of power politics. It gives international relations a focus which it has lacked in many other books. It can be profitably used with students who have a broad background of knowledge concerning contemporary world affairs, international law, foreign policy, international organization and economics." N. J. Padelford

+ Pol Sci Q 64:290 Je '49 1050w

Reviewed by M. P. Allen

Social Educ 13:396 D '49 1650w

"Mr. Morgenthau's book can be regarded as an excellent instrument for the interpretation of the international situation and as an excellent guide to the solution of the contemporary international problems. Students of international relations can hardly get a better text book for equipping them for active participation in the solution of the crucial international issues of today." Ernst Borinski

+ Social Forces 28:224 D '49 500w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:232 Je '49 280w

MORI, TOSHIO. Yokohama, California; with an introd. by William Saroyan. 166p $3 Caxton printers

49-8320

A collection of twenty-two stories about the Japanese in California. The author was born in Oakland, California, of Japanese parents.

Booklist 45:262 Ap 1 '49

MORI, TOSHIO—Continued

"The collection has a nice indigenous flavor, but its marketability is dubious—needs special selling."

Kirkus 17:11 Ja 1 '49 130w

"The book has a kind of charm. These unpretentious sketches of the Japanese of Oakland and San Leandro before Pearl Harbor sometimes do become fiction, although frequently one understands what Mr. Mori intended to say, not what he has said. The feeling here is mostly sound. . . What is most interesting here is the English, with which the Caxton Printers have wisely not tampered. It is the language of a writer dependent on the dictionary rather than on an extensive knowledge of connotations, and for this very reason often wonderfully fresh and spontaneous. When Mr. Mori learns that anecdote is but the bare bones of serious fiction, and when he emerges from the wholly baleful influence of William Saroyan, he may become a very good genre writer." Ernest Jones

Nation 168:480 Ap 23 '49 320w

"In these stories, Mr. Mori, with a bland and somehow not at all worrisome disregard for plot and syntax, reveals the minor crises of his people in their process of Americanization. He gently chides those who ape our high-pressure business methods too closely, and compassionately watches those who are trying to preserve a philosophical Oriental outlook. He is least successful in a couple of attempts to wave the American flag, for he himself displays refreshing traces of Eastern calm."

New Yorker 25:100 Ap 23 '49 140w

"The shrewdest thing Saroyan says in his prefatory note about Mori is 'He has already what other writers try for years to get and sometimes never do. I mean The Eye. He can see through a human being to the strange, comical, melancholy truth that changes a fool to a great solemn hero. And with the Eye he has The Heart. He has understanding sympathy, generosity and kindliness.' It is a pleasure to agree with Mr. Saroyan about this." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 3 '49 650w

"Because Mr. Mori is more interested in character than in plot, his people often seem like transcripts from life. Even the occasional lapses from orthodox grammar . . . seem to fit. Mr. Mori's humble folk do foolish things, yet somehow they preserve, in his own phrase, 'the dignity that is deserving to the living.'" Bradford Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 32:36 My 7 '49 550w

Springf'd Republican p8B S 18 '49 60w

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT. History of United States naval operations in World war II; v 4, Coral sea, Midway and submarine actions, May 1942-August 1942. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 307p pl maps $6 Little

940.545973 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations. U.S. Navy (47-1571)

"Detailed review of plans and actions of the U.S. Navy in the Pacific during the summer of 1942, the period in which the U.S. took the offensive. Japanese as well as American sources have been used." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 46:46 O 1 '49

Reviewed by F. L. Oliver

Christian Science Monitor p12 O 24 '49 650w

Current Hist 17:285 N '49 50w

Kirkus 17:316 Je 15 '49 250w

"An important period of the War, presented with skill, authority and interest for the lay reader. Recommended." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 74:1090 Ag '49 140w

"An excellent book, absorbing, dispassionate and crystal clear."

+ Nation 169:333 O 1 '49 40w

"This fourth volume has all the sinewy virtues of its predecessors—terseness, accuracy, clear and (when called for) vivid writing, no nonsense and a basic understanding of the sea and of sea warfare, even in its new, aerial phase. It has the added attraction that here the author, after tracing the early record of almost unbroken defeat, reaches the beginnings of success." Walter Millis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 O 2 '49 1400w

"It can be regarded as a matter of public regret that the publishers have set a price of $6 on each volume of the series. These volumes ought to be made as accessible as the daily paper is. The citizen of today cannot be informed about the events now shaking him unless he understands the war from which they stem, and nothing else has been written thus far on the war in the Pacific that comes as close to serving that purpose as Dr. Morison's book. He writes well and economically, has a lively eye for the human, a genius for making the difficult understandable, and he is accurate." Ira Wolfert

+ N Y Times p4 S 25 '49 1000w

Reviewed by Scott Newhall

San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 18 '49 1400w

Reviewed by C. Van Woodward

Sat R of Lit 32:20 O 29 '49 850w

"The complete account of the war, in the Pacific or anywhere else, will not be told until some historian is able to write in terms of overall operations, rather than from the standpoint of one branch of the armed forces. That Prof. Morison has not done. But from the standpoint of future students of the war as a whole he is performing a valuable service, since there is very little about the Navy and its role in the struggle that his history fails to cover in a way that is admirably conscientious and, better yet, frank and honest." Donald Derby

+ Springf'd Republican p19A O 23 '49 550w

Time 54:86 N 28 '49 300w

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT. History of United States naval operations in World war II; v5, Struggle for Guadalcanal, August 1942-February 1943. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 389p pl maps $6 Little

940.545973 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations. U.S. Navy (47-1571)

"This volume is the third devoted to recording the activities of the United States Navy in the Pacific, and the fifth book of Professor Morison's projected fourteen-volume history of the navy's operations during the war. Like its predecessors, it is a factual account assembled from official and personal records made available in the United States and Japan. The present book covers events which took place during the vital six months' struggle for control of Guadalcanal." (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

Booklist 46:156 Ja 1 '50

Reviewed by Keith Wheeler

Chicago Sun p35 D 28 '49 500w

Reviewed by F. L. Oliver

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 6 '49 650w

Kirkus 17:534 S 15 '49 150w

"'For us who were there,' says Morison at the end, 'Guadalcanal is not a name but an emotion.' The emotion, and the horror, are well if quietly conveyed in this book, together with the vital facts; the result is one of the great studies and great stories of the second world war." Walter Millis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 11 '49 1400w

"Mr. Morison has written a good book, not a great one. And Guadalcanal should have a great one." Ira Wolfert

N Y Times p3 N 27 '49 1600w

"Beyond the literary and historical excellence which mark the book, Captain Morison performed an even greater service to the Navy and those of Guadalcanal by his forthright, unvarnished appraisals of the faults and failures of individual commanders and units on both sides that did not measure up in action. This was proper tribute from an historian who rightly remembers Guadalcanal with its other survivors, 'not as a name but an emotion.' " J. A. DeChant

+ Sat R of Lit 33:12 Ja 14 '50 800w
Time 54:86 N 28 '49 300w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON. Ironing board. 255p $3 Doubleday
814 49-11831

A selection of essays written during the last ten years. Contents: The ironing board; On belonging to clubs; Notes on an island; Time of life; Saint Bypass; An American gentleman; Another letter to Lord Chesterfield; A Christmas story without slush; Bronzino's mixture; Codeine (7 per cent); Hitch your wagon—; Murder in red and green; The adventure of Foggy Bottom; Conference at Quebec; Weeding beets; Watson à la mode; In memoriam: E. V., Bill Footner, Tom Daly, Bob Holliday; The atom splitter; Two tributes: Max Beerbohm, Walter De La Mare; Tempest 1941; Bacon's essays; The sense of place; The bird that didn't go south; The consolable widow; The autograph; A letter to T. W. L.

Booklist 46:155 Ja 1 '50
Bookmark 9:80 Ja '50 20w

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p24 D 15 '49 310w

"I suppose The Ironing Board will be lapped up eagerly along with all the rest of the cloying seasonal eggnog. It is a book full of generous, often honest intentions and a swashbuckling, journalistic outlook on most matters. Only in the case of his tributes to Max Beerbohm and Walter de la Mare does Christopher Morley tip his vizor in a straight-forward fashion. Aside from this piece and the English trip, I'm afraid Mr. Morley's ironing bored me to a shuddering malaise." Elizabeth Johnson
— + Commonweal 51:347 D 30 '49 550w

"Occasionally, Mr. Morley cannot resist being erudite to the extent of artificiality; but in an essay it is forgivable. Rather stimulating. His humor, his originality are all his own and defy analysis."
+ — Kirkus 17:502 S 1 '49 120w

Reviewed by E. B. Davis
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 D 4 '49 1050w

"This is a book of casual little pieces, as Mr. Morley says in the preface, but it's a book that reveals its writer. The man revealed is a delightful, gently mad virtuoso of language, an old Rhodester careening along on an Oxford mixture of Chaucer, Shakespeare and Max Beerbohm, the Augustan age, George Gissing, a dash of French argot and Sherlock Holmes. Before picking up this book a reader should select a chair for complete relaxation and put beside it a low, strong table. The table is for the dictionary, an unabridged edition." Harry Gilroy
+ N Y Times p40 N 20 '49 500w

"The book has its quota of the unforgivable kind of pun that Mr. Morley has taught his public to expect of him, and unless you are familiar with his special references, you may not always know just what he is talking about. He claims he has given up amusing himself in public, but that is not yet apparent. A lot of it is entertaining stuff, however."
+ — New Yorker 25:62 D 24 '49 130w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 25 '49 750w

"Out of the ironing board, or off it, comes this collection of papers—literary, personal, general, specific, pertinent, impertinent, all of them easy to take. The collection dates, and therein lies much of its charm and value." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 32:23 N 19 '49 450w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON. Man who made friends with himself. 275p $3 Doubleday 49-8864

Symbolic novel describing the reflections, after death, of a sensitive literary agent in love with his lady psychiatrist.

Booklist 45:325; 336 Je 1 '49

"To give Mr. Morley his due, many of the incidents are amusing, and many of the epigrams are witty. However, the book as a whole suggests an over-rich mince pie topped with whipped cream and chocolate sauce." E. Fowke
— + Canadian Forum 29:188 N '49 240w

"At its best, the result is highly amusing Morleyan fare: witty verse, gay learning, and the light, quick observations of the born essayist. At its worst, there are too many private jokes and too many of them unpleasant." M. R. Grennan
+ — Cath World 169:393 Ag '49 370w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p8X Je 12 '49 600w

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 17 '49 550w

"Mr. Morley has written well and he has written with insight; so much so that one would like to see him try his hand at a myth for our age. In his reflections on atomic fission, in his acid awareness of the monstrous mushroom at Bikini, he has himself supplied some of the elements for such an undertaking. Myth cannot stop the approach of Bikini explosions, but it can perhaps make the dread step heard and the awful intent known." M. H. Ley
+ Commonweal 50:300 Jl 1 '49 550w
Kirkus 17:183 Ap 1 '49 220w

"After promising to be a delightful Morleyesque phantasy, in spite of occasional beauty—flashes of a faded genius—The Man degenerates into a tedious vehicle for the exploitation of a card-indexed collection of smart trivia, witcracks, aphorisms, literary allusions, plays on words old and newly invented. Its wit is bawdy, vulgar; its morality loose." R. W. Henderson
— + Library J 74:892 Je 1 '49 80w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p4 O 28 '49 210w

"A pleasant 275-pages-long literary perambulation in the charming, discursive, whimsical, shrewd and altogether excellent company of Mr. Christopher Morley." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Je 12 '49 500w

" 'The Man Who Made Friends With Himself' is Mr. Morley's first novel in six years, and for some it will have been worth the wait. They will not find it an easy book to read, but considering the time lapse and the times, perhaps it was not an easy book to write. Mr. Morley is playful, ironic, sometimes even arch, but in the end, when black and white go up in holocaust, he is doomsday-serious. With the world in fission there is only one question left, he seems to say, and somewhere we must find the answer." Allen Marple
+ N Y Times p4 Je 12 '49 600w

"This inconclusive tale displays some of its author's flair for lush epigram and also reveals the scars the co-editorship of 'Bartlett's Familiar Quotations' has left upon him. The dialogues and meditations of the hero and his acquaintances are made up, by turns, of material from that volume (always properly attributed), original doggerel, and catchy-sounding pronouncements on such matters as sex, literature, human nature, and suburban life. On the first of these subjects, the author usually sounds self-consciously naughty, and on the others he is sometimes amusing, seldom profound, and occasionally just cute."
+ — New Yorker 25:84 Je 18 '49 120w

Reviewed by Edith James
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 23 '49 700w

"The result, at any rate, is a strong brew in which bitter despair is made bearable by

MORLEY, C. D.—Continued
humor, and the small details of daily life are made significant by a frame of allusions." D. A. Stauffer
Sat R of Lit 32:13 Je 11 '49 1050w

Reviewed by R. D. Charques
Spec 183:616 N 4 '49 70w

"A fuzzy allegory that pretends much and says little."
— Time 53:91 Je 20 '49 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p709 N 4 '49 420w

MORLEY, FELIX. Power in the people. 293p $3.50 Van Nostrand

342.739 U.S.—Politics and government. Liberty. Democracy. U.S.—Constitutional history 49-9180

An examination of the present state of American devotion to liberty, set against a review of past history. The author has been a newspaperman both at home and abroad, and was for several years president of Haverford College. Select bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by G. W. Johnson
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Je 12 '49 1150w

Reviewed by J. M. Burns
N Y Times p18 Jl 24 '49 650w

Reviewed by Henry David
Pol Sci Q 64:624 D '49 1000w

"This is a remarkable book, nobly written and profoundly thought out. It is also, at least to this reviewer, sui generis, an account of the founding and development and significance of the American Republic which is unique as far as my acquaintance with the literature on the subject goes. . . There is a fire in it which no survey of the past as the past could kindle. 'The Power in the People' is a Tract for the Times, concerned with what is of paramount importance for us today, at this precise moment in our history." Edith Hamilton
+ Sat R of Lit 32:19 S 3 '49 2200w

Reviewed by Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p6D Je 26 '49 500w

MORLEY, ROBERT, and LANGLEY, NOEL. Edward, my son; a play in three acts. 177p $2.50 Random house

822 49-7515

Play showing how love for his son leads an Englishman to a successful career tho it meant wrecking other lives on the way.

Booklist 45:239 Mr 15 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '49

Kirkus 16:636 D 1 '48 80w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 F 27 '49 250w

Reviewed by Robert Morley
N Y Times p6 F 13 '49 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 17 '49 170w

Dramatic criticism by J. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 31:26 O 16 '48 1700w

MORREL, MRS MARTHA (MCBRIDE). Young Hickory; the life and times of President James K. Polk. 381p $4.50 Dutton

B or 92 Polk, James Knox 49-964

Biography of James K. Polk, who altho not so well known as some of the presidents of the United States, has recently been designated as one of the six really great among our presidents. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:224 Mr 1 '49

"Mrs. Morrel takes the liberty of inventing conversations to illustrate [the Polks'] home and social life, but explains that the speeches are a justifiable extension of thoughts expressed in their letters and Polk's diaries. . . Polk's personality is not an easy one to pin to paper. Mrs. Morrel has succeeded as well, perhaps, as may be, and with genuine warmth of feeling." W. K. Rugg
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 26 '49 700w

"Fairly well-rounded biography; history diluted with tender romance."
Kirkus 16:654 D 15 '48 140w

"Libraries who buy this hybrid at least have fair warning of what they are getting. Whenever historical fact is allowed to speak for itself, the book is competently written." E. F. Walbridge
Library J 74:380 Mr 1 '49 100w

Reviewed by H. S. Commager
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ap 17 '49 700w

"Mrs. Morrel makes out a convincing case for Polk on the basis of his steadfast character and the accomplishments of his administration. . . Unfortunately, she has cast the book in a semifictional mold, which, no matter how scrupulously it is done, always makes the reader uneasy."
+ — New Yorker 25:94 Mr 5 '49 170w

"The author is frankly pro-Polk, and she makes a very good case for her view; her book should do much to rehabilitate the man in the minds of present-day readers." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 7 '49 700w

" 'Young Hickory' is highly entertaining. The dialogue flows smoothly and, on the whole, naturally, even if occasional doubts are raised in the reader's mind by such discoveries as that of Andrew Jackson's ready command of slang. The story of Polk's life is told simply, and it is woven neatly into the pattern of great events with which it was surrounded. The narrative has pace, and Polk's personality emerges with clarity and emphasis. . . The author tells us that her book is an endeavor to amend history's injustice to James K. Polk. To some extent she has achieved her objective. But in so doing she has swung too far in the opposite direction. She has presented an uncritical portrait of her hero, and a picture of the times in which he lived that is, in places, gravely inaccurate." G. G. Van Deusen
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:25 Mr 5 '49 750w

MORRIS, CHARLES WILLIAM. The open self. 179p $3 Prentice-Hall

126 Self 48-8817

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"Another attempt by a philosopher to integrate what is known of the somatic, psychic, and social aspects of personality development and adaptation in modern society. The synthesis represents a novel and peculiar blend; it merges Sheldon's emphasis on constitutional differences with Freud's stress on unconscious psychic determinants, all heavily weighted with semantic, metaphysical, religious, and moral connotations. Except for its point of view, and forceful to flippant style of writing, the book presents relatively little that is new or notable."
— + Am Soc R 14:331 Ap '49 80w

Reviewed by Huston Smith
Christian Century 66:1170 O 5 '49 650w

"In some way that I felt it hard to analyze, the book remains unsatisfactory—perhaps in its very intellectualism. Its eloquence is partial though rewarding. Its excitement is less contagious than it should be, owing, I believe, to its earnest rationalism. With this reservation, I urge scholars in the social sciences to share the synthesizing interest and the commitment to ultimate human values which this volume espouses." Ordway Tead
+ — Ethics 59:228 Ap '49 360w

"The book is a healthy tonic for those who hesitate to trust a democratic social order and a creative educational process." E. J. Chave
+ J Religion 29:168 Ap '49 220w

MORRIS, DAVID ELWYN. China changed my mind. 202p $2.50 Houghton

940.54777 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English. World war, 1939-1945—China. World war, 1939-1945—War work—Friends, Society of 49-8209

An account of the author's adventures driving a Friends ambulance unit truck on the Burma road. He describes life in South West China and tells how his experiences changed him from pacifist to soldier.

Booklist 45:310 My 15 '49

"The book remains primarily information; it is raw material—left for the reader to incorporate into his own pattern of thinking." H. B. Ellis

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 21 '49 1000w

"It is a rare treat at any time to meet such a book as this. The reader who knows the Orient will find much here to stir old nostalgic echoes. The reader who does not will find a picture that is altogether true, in both its pleasant and unpleasant aspects. . . The important thing is the really fine writing it contains. The simplicity and understanding, the quiet humor and clear description—these are the most impressive and finest things about the book." J. O. Frederick

+ Commonweal 50:155 My 20 '49 350w

Foreign Affairs 27:692 Jl '49 20w

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 3 '48 180w

" 'China Changed My Mind' will win friends among those who want to know what a great deal of China was really like during the war, and among those who like honesty of mind, warped neither in the direction of pretentiousness nor in the direction of false humility." Owen Lattimore

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 1 '49 750w

"Sometimes a book takes you by surprise. It arrives without recommendation; it bears an unknown author's name; its subject seems not too vital, and its approach not too ingenious. It begins quietly, continues unassumingly and ends by charming you completely. 'China Changed My Mind' is such a book. Not important, not profound, not superbly written, it is still delightful." Annalee Jacoby

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 17 '49 550w

Reviewed by Stuart Lillico

Sat R of Lit 32:10 Ap 9 '49 700w

"Mr. Morris has attempted nothing ambitious. He simply describes what he has seen, and tells of the people he has met—which is precisely the right thing to have done. There is not a dull page in the book, there is a good deal of quiet admirable writing, and behind it all a cheerful, humorous, courageous and conscientious personality. A very good book indeed." H. W. H.

+ Spec 181:120 Jl 23 '48 550w

"There are those who go to China from countries across the oceans and live there for forty years who have not seen as much as David Morris saw in his two years, and yet he is modest and knows he has not seen it all. But he has the eye that sees and the mind that can put together what he sees, which is the only kind of seeing that really counts." I. M. Pruitt

+ Survey 85:403 Jl '49 750w

"Not a dull page in the book, a good deal of admirable writing, and behind it all, a cheerful, humorous, courageous and conscientious personality."

+ Wis Lib Bul p6 N '49

MORRIS, HOWARD HASTINGS. How to build a better home. 3d ed 183p $3.98 Westport pub. co, 212 E. State st, Westport, Conn.

690 Architecture, Domestic. Building 48-11862

"A guide book for the prospective home owner. Contains sections on each step from deciding to build a house to its completion. Also has a section on buying a ready-built house. Contains many plates, illustrations and tables showing structural details. Intended to help the inexperienced home-owner avoid risks resulting from faulty design, undesirable location, faulty materials and poor workmanship." Library J

"Gives prospective home owners unbiased basic information and definite recommendations, to increase their chances of acquiring a worthwhile home."

+ Bookmark 9:9 O '49 20w

Reviewed by Julian Sohon

Library J 74:552 Ap 1 '49 70w

MORRIS, LLOYD R. Not so long ago. 504p il $5 Random house

973.91 U.S.—History—20th century. Automobiles—History. Moving pictures—History. Radio—History 49-11404

This sequel to Postscript to Yesterday (Book Review Digest 1947) takes up the motion pictures, the automobile, and the radio and their influence on American life during the first half of the twentieth century. Index.

Booklist 46:94 N 15 '49

Reviewed by J. A. Clark

Chicago Sunday Tribune p21 N 20 '49 500w

"Alluring style, organization indicating the social forces behind the brilliant facade of raillery."

+ Kirkus 17:503 S 1 '49 240w

"Lloyd Morris has written in so fascinating a style as to achieve a new high in the social history of the United States. Highly recommended to literature, American history, transportation and theatre collections in all libraries regardless of size." George Freedley

+ Library J 74:1197 S 1 '49 100w

"Within its limits, 'Not So Long Ago' does a fine job of recalling and characterizing the men and instruments which have transformed our life within the memory of a single generation. A word should certainly be added for the excellence of the illustrations." Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.

+ Nation 169:550 D 3 '49 450w

"A book that is at once a fascinating story of developments that concern us all and a suggestive outline of questions that all of us are going to be compelled to answer and that ere long, has a wide enough appeal to be recommended to anyone. Mr. Morris has made a distinct contribution to popular understanding of the popular mind." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N 6 '49 1150w

"This is an able, absorbingly interesting, highly readable book." D. L. Cohn

+ N Y Times p5 N 6 '49 850w

New Yorker 25:159 N 12 '49 170w

"A lively, wise, and often witty book." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 22 '49 900w

"Mr. Morris's pages are easy to read, they present a great fund of specific information skilfully and persuasively, and if his book lacks a final perfection of form, if it is a little 'got up' for the purpose of popular consumption, it can be read with pleasure. It yields a good deal of information. I ought to add that the pictures are adroitly selected and add much to the text." H. M. Jones

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:31 N 19 '49 600w

MORRIS, WRIGHT. World in the attic. 189p $2.75 Scribner

49-5058

Continues the story begun in The Home Place (Book Review Digest 1948) but this book has no photographs. It is the story of the return to Nebraska of the hero, and the experiences he had in reviving his past.

Booklist 45:366; 46:14 Jl 1 '49; S 1 '49

Reviewed by Eleanor McNaught

Canadian Forum 29:214 D '49 350w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 12 '50 210w

MORRIS, WRIGHT—Continued

"A great deal of every day humor, a feeling of factual-basis fiction, this expands the pattern begun in the earlier book, and should be of special interest to that market."

+ Kirkus 17:368 Jl 15 '49 190w

"Humorous and thoughtful, this small book will appeal to a limited audience." W. K. Harrison

+ — Library J 74:1095 Ag '49 70w

"Mr. Morris re-creates the new Junction and the old, as it still lived in Clyde, through many individually effective details and episodes, too many. The local color, past and present, becomes so thick and the characters so touching that one ceases to react. 'The World in the Attic' is a sort of sequel to Mr. Wright's 'The Home Place.' No pictures, though." Mary Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 28 '49 450w

"Mr. Morris has done touching and memorable work in his photography; it seems a pity, when he can observe so significantly, that his ear is not as sharp and sensitive as his eye. However, if his story is vague and subject to sentimental confusion, he succeeds in communicating the desperate loneliness and the rootless homesickness so peculiar, we are told, to rural Americans." Elizabeth Parsons

— + N Y Times p4 Ag 28 '49 700w

"The author's skillfully casual style stands up well against the bleak background of his story."

+ New Yorker 25:107 O 8 '49 90w

"At the heart of this novel, flawing its integrity either as a work of art or as a perceptive report of smalltown Americana, is an irritating pretentiousness. It is evident that Mr. Morris believes he has done what his publishers say he has done, namely 'made a novel that expresses much more than is apparent on the surface.' In the opinion of one reader, at least, he has done precisely the opposite; he has made a novel expressing much less than seems apparent on the surface." K. S. Davis

— Sat R of Lit 32:19 S 24 '49 500w

MORRISON, CHARLES CLAYTON. Can Protestantism win America? 225p $2.50 Harper

284 Protestantism. U.S.—Religion 48-9379

"A Protestant leader issues a call to unite Protestant forces in the U.S. to provide a vital, aggressive church in keeping with American democracy and culture. Based on a series of articles in the Christian Century, rewritten and supplemented. For churchmen and laity." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 45:204 F 15 '49

"One does not ordinarily recommend a 'tract for the times' as suitable Lenten reading. But one can hardly conceive a Lenten project pregnant with larger fruitage for Christ's church than the adoption of this book as a text for study groups, midweek forums and private meditation in thousands of congregations in the coming weeks. The first result might well be—penance, a most appropriate outcome, for the failings here exposed are basically sin." H. P. Van Dusen

+ Christian Century 66:16 Ja 5 '49 1300w

Reviewed by Neil Martin

Christian Science Monitor p11 My 5 '49 500w

"Here is a book every Protestant should read. It has the realism of intimate and objective knowledge, the drive of conviction, the depth of insight, and the power of courage. Because of the very confusion in Protestantism to which it points, it is hard to forecast what reception the book will get. Many laymen, tired of the pettiness of sectarian rivalries, will welcome the frankness of the volume. Clergymen will be annoyed and possibly aroused by it, but they will feel discouraged by the stranglehold of denominational ecclesiastics, and the inertia of the mass of church members. . . The book as a whole is so good that it may seem captious to question some minor points of fact. We are told that Catholics do not support the public schools (p.66). But do not Catholics pay taxes for support of our schools?" E. E. Aubrey

+ — Crozer Q 24:147 Ap '49 900w

"Catholics and Protestants alike will find the analysis stimulating. It presents a broad and clear picture of the weaknesses and some of the strong points in Protestantism, as well as of the problems it faces today."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:173 Je '49 200w

MORRISON, ERWIN G. Here's how in fishing; il. by [the author]. 128p $2.95 Doubleday

799.1 Fishing 49-8160

"Fishermen of all ages, beginners and experts alike, will welcome this extensively illustrated book which answers hundreds of questions that sportsmen have asked while fishing or considering the purchase of new equipment. [It] points the way to real skill in the sport of fishing in all its forms from still fishing and dry-fly fishing to deep-sea angling." Publisher's note

"Excellent for beginners." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 74:737 My 1 '49 30w

Reviewed by Rex Lardner

N Y Times p14 My 22 '49 140w

"A useful and unconventional handbook."

+ New Yorker 25:114 My 7 '49 20w

Reviewed by Stanleigh Arnold

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ap 3 '49 500w

MORRISON, ERWIN G. Here's how in golf; il. by [the author]. 128p $2.95 Doubleday

796.352 Golf 49-5795

Advice on how to play golf given thru the medium of many pictures (cartoon drawings) and brief text, for the most part directly accompanying the pictures. Two sections are devoted to The mental side of golf, and Golf fatigue and how to avoid it.

Booklist 46:10 S 1 '49

Reviewed by Scott Newhall

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 21 '49 350w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ag 27 '49 400w

MORRISON, RAY. Angels camp. 263p $3 Norton 49-9145

"Life at a California state camp for delinquent boys, as experienced by one of the councillors and a couple of the inmates. The councillor, a quixotic Scotsman, sometimes appears to be under the illusion that he is at a politer institution and tries to influence his charges by taking a detached, progressive-school attitude toward them, which results in a number of escapes and various other breakdowns of authority. In the case of one likable and not overly depraved lad, however, he finally succeeds in effecting a regeneration." New Yorker

Reviewed by Willard Motley

Chicago Sun Je 14 '49 450w

Kirkus 17:187 Ap 1 '49 190w

"As a work of fiction, 'Angels Camp' misses fire by a narrow margin. As a semi-fictional documentary about the treatment of juvenile delinquency—like alcoholism, a form of mental illness—it is worth any adult citizen's time." Richard Match

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Je 12 '49 650w

Reviewed by Herbert Mitgang

N Y Times p22 Je 5 '49 220w

"Mr. Morrison devotes somewhat too much time to the tensions between the councillor and [one] particular boy, but his study of the motivations of the youthful criminals, whose mental horizons are bounded almost entirely by jazz, automobiles, and Hollywood, is convincing."

+ — New Yorker 25:98 Je 11 '49 140w

"While the novel certainly deals with a vital problem, it lacks force because unfortunately it is peopled with wooden and incredible characters." M. R.
— San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 31 '49 200w

"On the whole, 'Angels Camp' reads easily. The author's use of terms like 'queer,' 'fruit,' and so on, without arranging them in context so readers unfamiliar with rough pieces of living can interpret their meanings makes for unnecessary confusion. It's to Mr. Morrison's credit that he points out again—in much the same manner as many other novelists have pointed out—the miserable conditions under which these kids are imprisoned. His plea for an institution like Camp Mathews to help rehabilitate these children is very commendable. But it's Mr. Morrison's emphasis on the brutal and violent, and his neglect of looking more deeply into the essential character of his children that places his novel in the same class as a Hollywood thriller-diller. It's full of sound and fury signifying very little." Robert Mende
— + Sat R of Lit 32:27 Je 4 '49 600w

MORSTEIN MARX, FRITZ, ed. Foreign governments; the dynamics of politics abroad, by Mario Einaudi [and others]. 713p $6.35; to schools $4.75 Prentice-Hall
320 Political science 49-887

"A new departure in texts on comparative government in its attention to social and psychological factors. The countries treated in detail by the eight authors include Britain and the Commonwealth, France, Italy, Scandinavia, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, China, Japan, Mexico, Brazil and Russia and her satellites." (Foreign Affairs) Index.

"Particularly valuable are his sections on the service functions of government. He also describes the constitution, the mechanisms of organized discussion, public administration and the empire and commonwealth. . . Morstein Marx's work refers the reader to additional material by the footnote route instead of by an extended terminal bibliography. His authors should be applauded for showing the page of the earlier citation. How often one wishes that other authors would be as helpful! There are some factual errors in the symposium which it is hoped subsequent editions will remove." E. G. Lewis
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:600 Je '49 450w
Foreign Affairs 27:679 Jl '49 50w

"The principal contribution made by the book lies in the endeavor of the authors to indicate how the ideology of the people is reflected in their form of government as well as in their political acts. This endeavor is best accomplished in the chapters on Germany, Soviet Russia, and China."
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:233 Je '49 320w

MORTON, ANTHONY, pseud. See Creasey, J.

MORTON, FREDERIC. Darkness below. 248p $3 Crown
49-11083

"Tales of a refugee doctor, who, while working his way through medical school, finds his true destiny to rest in a baking oven rather than an operating table. The job of baker's assistant unleashes in the young Austrian a sense of fulfillment which his ambitious mother, and then wife, had hitherto successfully thwarted. However, an affair with an earthy salesgirl results in shattering his new existence in a climactic convulsion of violence." Library J

Reviewed by Pat Patten
Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 N 6 '49 200w

"An oddly absorbing—at the same time an unpleasant and distasteful book."
Kirkus 17:562 O 1 '49 220w

"The young author handles this difficult theme in a restrained and often convincing manner. Recommended." A. J. Gaines
+ Library J 74:1322 S 15 '49 100w

"Frederic Morton is undoubtedly one of the most gifted young writers to appear on the American literary scene in a long, long time." J. J. Maloney
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 O 30 '49 800w

"The author's compelling talent, if it were tempered to a shorn prose, sparer and more sinewy, should make him a powerfully interesting novelist." A. S. Morris
+ N Y Times p32 O 23 '49 500w
New Yorker 25:162 N 19 '49 120w
San Francisco Chronicle p29 N 6 '49 270w

"To this reader's knowledge no one has written of the baking of bread more knowingly or more tenderly. Yet though he has actually forged a mystery of the spirit out of frozen eggs and pumpernickel, one is left at last feeling that this time the yeast failed to ferment." Nelson Algren
Sat R of Lit 32:28 O 29 '49 650w

MOUAT, LAWRENCE H. How to make a speech and like it! il. by J. Wendell Johnson. 94p $2; pa $1.25 Pacific bks, publishers, box 558, Palo Alto, Calif.
808.5 Public speaking 49-8651

The do's and dont's of speech making, illustrated with line drawings to emphasize the points made.

Booklist 45:389 Jl 15 '49

"The reasons I've given so small a book this space are two. First, the longing to be able to make a good speech is pretty nearly universal. And second, a little book like this could easily be passed over, for the amusing drawings could suggest, to the potential reader who might just glance at the book, that it was all just kidding. It's far from that, entertainingly as it's done. It is in effect a full course in public speaking boiled down to essentials and presented with a minimum of guff and a maximum of practical good sense. The author and artist deserve the success I hope they'll have." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 5 '49 600w
School & Society 69:326 Ap 30 '49 30w

MOULTON, HAROLD GLENN. Controlling factors in economic development. 397p $4 Brookings 338 Economics. Economic policy. Business cycles 49-5544

"Analysis of the forces and factors that produced the economic progress of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries and an estimate of future potentialities. Depressions and retarding as well as dynamic factors are considered. It is an essentially optimistic estimate of America's capacity to produce and maintain a high standard of living within the bounds of a capitalistic system, in spite of inevitable slumps. Not highly technical." Booklist

Reviewed by N. L. Silverstein
Am Pol Sci R 43:1295 D '49 330w
Booklist 46:28 S 15 '49

"Mr. Moulton's contribution should serve to dissipate some of the misconceptions that have impeded progress in the American business scene." G. R. E.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 21 '49 550w

"There can be little disagreement with Moulton's emphasis on the importance of increased productivity and on the fact that mass purchasing power must grow as productivity grows, preferably by reduction of prices, if there is to be sufficient incentive to investment. Yet his book makes little contribution to the problem of how policy may further this objective. The conclusions always seem to fall on the side of refraining from anything that may offend big business, no matter what business may do or not do." George Soule
Nation 169:305 S 24 '49 450w

Reviewed by Palmer Harman
N Y Times p29 O 2 '49 400w

MOULTON, H. G.—Continued
Reviewed by Robert Cousins and S. T. Williamson
Sat R of Lit 33:33 Ja 28 '50 70w

"Most general treatises nowadays emphasize either production or demand, and on the demand side emphasize either the balance of savings and investment or the behavior of prices. Harold G. Moulton's volume is unusual in giving balanced emphasis to all these aspects. And it may be unique in treating a far-flung array of topics briefly but with a competence growing out of specialized study including substantial pioneering contributions by the Brookings Institution and by Moulton personally." J. M. Clark
+ Survey 85:685 D '49 800w

MUENCH, MRS JOYCE (ROCKWOOD). Along Yellowstone and Grand Teton trails [phot. by] Josef Muench. 101p $2.75 Hastings house
917.87 Yellowstone national park. Grand Teton national park 49-9637

Nearly 100 photographs of scenes, and flora and fauna to be found in Yellowstone and Grand Teton National Parks.

Booklist 45:391 Jl 15 '49
Reviewed by Horace Sutton
Sat R of Lit 32:35 Jl 2 '49 90w

MULLAHY, PATRICK. Oedipus: myth and complex; a review of psychoanalytic theory; introd. by Erich Fromm. 538p $5 Hermitage
131.34123 Psychoanalysis 49-530

"A study of the most important myth in psychotherapy—the fable of Oedipus, who killed his father and married his mother. Mr. Mullahy, a young psychiatrist and teacher of philosophy, presents the myth and its application in psychotherapy in a series of analytical chapters that take up, one by one, the sometimes conflicting theories of Freud, Otto Rank, Karen Horney, Eric Fromm (who has written an introduction to the book), Harry Stack Sullivan, Jung, and Adler." New Yorker

"Mr. Mullahy has done a very great service to all students of human nature in providing this exposition of contemporary psychoanalytic thinking. His philosophical background contributes mightily to the discernment and order which he brings to this tangled field. In the pressing task of synthesis between ancient wisdom and modern technique, further contributions from the pen of Mr. Mullahy should be eagerly welcomed." Harry McNeill
+ Commonweal 50:154 My 20 '49 650w

"I cannot imagine anyone interested in psychoanalysis, whether as participant or as spectator, to whom this soundly conceived, lucidly written book will not prove invaluable." Lloyd Frankenberg
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 13 '49 850w

"A clearly written and scholarly contribution to the literature of this subject."
+ New Yorker 25:107 Mr 19 '49 120w
Reviewed by B. D. Lewin
Sat R of Lit 32:20 Jl 9 '49 450w

"It is written with a thorough knowledge of and a real respect for the specific contributions of various theories in this field."
+ School & Society 69:215 Mr 19 '49 60w

MULLAHY, PATRICK, ed. Study of interpersonal relations; new contributions to psychiatry. 507p $6.50 Hermitage
616.8 Psychology, Pathological 49-9719

"An inquiry undertaken by a group of writers, all of them associated with the William Alanson White Psychiatric Foundation, and all of them more or less upholding two connected points of view, which, boiled down to axiom length, are that the frustration of purely biological impulses does not entirely account for human maladjustment and that the psychiatrist must seek enlightenment on mental illness in the relation of the individual to the existing social order. Thus, in effect, the symposium becomes a criticism of Western society." New Yorker

Current Hist 17:98 Ag '49 30w

"Not for popular use in general collections. Useful in special collections in psychiatry, the social sciences." R. E. Kingery
Library J 74:660 Ap 15 '49 150w
New Yorker 25:66 Jl 9 '49 160w
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 7 '49 210w

MUMBY, FRANK ARTHUR. Publishing and bookselling; a history from the earliest times to the present day; with a bibliography by W. H. Peet. new rev ed 439p $7.50 Bowker
655.442 Publishers and publishing. Booksellers and bookselling [49-6278]

"This survey of British publishing history (and incidentally of literature) began as The Romance of Bookselling (1910), and the title would still be apt, except that romantic is rather too mild a word for Paternoster Row's ordeal by fire in 1940, when twenty million volumes were destroyed in air raids. Other chapters on events and personalities bring the 1930 edition [Book Review Digest 1931] (which was 50 pages longer) up to date. So does the 40-page bibliography." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 46:67 O 15 '49
"Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 74:1027 Jl '49 110w
Reviewed by C. W. Mixer
+ Library J 74:1308 S 15 '49 220w

"Of the new material now first printed it may be said that . . . it is overcrowded with the names of individuals, and therefore more subject to the limitations of discretion and courtesy than if general publishing developments had been summarised without such lavish mention of the beings involved in them. . . Publishing and Bookselling, as befits a major historical work, is not provocative. Throughout judicious and impartial (though occasionally indulging in quiet irony), it records, and gives coherence to, a mass of disconnected and often contradictory facts. For pungency, for crusading, for the stimulus of outspoken personal opinion we must turn to the category of publishing literature of which Stanley Unwin's classic book, 'The Truth About Publishing' is the undisputed head; and to this category belongs The Adventure of Publishing by Mr. Michael Joseph." Michael Sadleir
Spec 182:764 Je 3 '49 950w

"He is at his best when discussing without fear or favour the activities and reputations of men long dead. His modern chapters inevitably, like any 'history of our own times,' have required a more tactful perspective. The most modern chapters of all, written since the book was last issued in 1934, are very up-to-date: the chapter called 'The Six Years' War' is a model of sober reporting, and as such, incidentally, a contrast, if not a corrective, to Mr. Joseph's more exuberant treatment of those years."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p430 Jl 1 '49 300w

MUNCE, RUTH LIVINGSTON (HILL). See Hill, R. L.

MUNRO, THOMAS. Arts and their interrelations. 559p $7.50 Liberal arts press, 153 W. 72d st, N.Y. 23
700 Art. Esthetics 49-5350

"This book presents a reformulation of the definitions of the arts and their reclassification. Special attention is given to the nature of art in general, together with a critical survey of various philosophies of art. . . In addition to the theoretical discussions, the author also deals with some of the practical problems in art education and administration." San Francisco Chronicle

"Professor Munro's approach helps to dispel much of the vaporization about art in our time. He provides an intelligent basis of criticism and appreciation." Dorothy Adlow
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 6 '49 420w

"Munro is a man of admirable knowledge, insight, and critique, who has a much wider horizon than other esthetic philosophers and has kept abreast of the latest developments. Hence he makes perfectly clear that any short definition is defective and that even longer, complex definitions must needs be incomplete and contradictory. . . We had hoped the captain would take us for a long cruise around the world of art. The cruise was long; but I suspect we never left port, because the captain, too familiar with weather and sea, saw dangers in every direction." Curt Sachs
Music Lib Assn Notes 7:103 D '49 1200w

"Mr. Munro has given here an outstanding contribution to aesthetic theory and philosophy in general." R. H. U.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 2 '49 150w

"Teachers and college students will find this lucid presentation of comparative aesthetics, slanted for the art educator, a valuable part of their personal library that in its turn reflects in their presentation of a more meaningful curriculum."
+ School Arts 49:2a O '49 150w

MUNSON, GORHAM BERT. The written word; how to write readable prose. 285p $2.95 Creative age
808 Authorship 49-7763

"Gorham Munson, himself the author of eight books, [was] for many years an editor in book publishing circles, and conductor of a course called 'Professional Writing' at New York's New School for Social Research. Professional writers attend Mr. Munson's course; over the years he has had dozens of them in his classes. And his book is an expansion of his lectures, arranged in an ascending scale of difficulty, and worked out in step-by-step style." (San Francisco Chronicle) Dictionary of prose forms. Index.

Booklist 45:258 Ap 1 '49

"Anyone who writes, tries to write, or is interested in the writer's problems, mechanics and pitfalls can hardly fail to find The Written Word both useful and interesting." Allan Sangster
+ Canadian Forum 29:120 Ag '49 170w
Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '49

"Final chapter on author-publisher relations is pointed and sensible. Some cheap and dishonest books have been written for amateur authors but this one is recommended." G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 74:380 Mr 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by Angus Burrell
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Je 19 '49 500w

"Its basic premise is severely practical: writing should not be a form of narcissism, but a public performance. Ways and means are then suggested for stimulating the novice's desire to write, his ability to test subjects, his will to maintain steady production. Most responsible writers would claim these methods their own. There is a sensitive chapter on approach and style. . . The only trouble with the book, and the highest praise one can give it, is that if it is read as widely and carefully as it deserves, the author-teacher may lack students." K. P. Kempton
+ N Y Times p13 My 29 '49 360w

"Seems to me the best book yet written for the individual who wants to write, in the sense of writing for publication, and who is willing to work hard." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 24 '49 850w

"'The Written Word' can be recommended. Munson has been a writer, teacher, and editor. . . Most useful is the last section, which provides an immense store of compact information about getting started in writing." J. A. Michener
+ Sat R of Lit 32:7 Ap 30 '49 500w

MUNTZ, HOPE. Golden warrior; the story of Harold and William; with a foreword by G. M. Trevelyan. 354p $3 Scribner
49-7690

Historical novel about the Norman conquest of Britain and the events which led up to it. "Miss Muntz has chosen to write mainly narrative and dialogue which reflect the greater emotions of the period—the feudal loyalties, the ties of love and hate between warriors, the immediacy of religion, its miracles and devotions. Her characters are heroic, animated by simple but intense passions; and they are seen in a multitude of episodes which, though not connected with one another, are all preludes to the climax of the Battle of Hastings." (Times [London] Lit Sup)

Booklist 45:225 Mr 1 '49

Reviewed by C. W. Dunn
Canadian Forum 29:46 My '49 420w

"Hope Muntz has mounted the story in a literary technicolor that retains all the true historical values, even to the authentic flavor of the period." Louis Zara
+ Chicago Sun Mr 14 '49 450w

"Whoever has seen the Bayeux Tapestry will not fail to understand this astounding novel. As to those who have never visited that humble room in the French town of Bayeux, who have never studied the still vivid needlework which belongs to the eleventh century, they may just need to bring a little more imagination to bear. Because here is a book far out of the ordinary—a breath-takingly authentic, glowing, majestic story of actual happenings enacted by authentic personages who lived immediately before the Norman Conquest of England." Margaret Williamson
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 10 '49 600w

"With an introduction by G. M. Trevelyan, this story of the events leading up to the Norman conquest of England in 1066 is given caste and distinction. The leading figures of this era, and particularly Harold, are portrayed with individuality and sympathy, but more than that, there is a sense of history that pervades the whole, overwhelming the men, making them appear as part of the unfolding of historical events rather than as directing the course of history."
+ Kirkus 16:581 N 1 '48 190w

"A scholarly work, keeping close to the historical record. . . Noteworthy and recommended. As a novel: in spite of some fine characterization, the intricate details, innumerable characters and over-simplification of style handicap otherwise pleasurable reading." R. W. Henderson
+ — Library J 74:312 F 15 '49 130w

"The Golden Warrior, as Professor Trevelyan says in his introduction, is a remarkable book. I read it with continually increasing fascination. For Miss Muntz subjects herself wholly to her material; she is not concerned with interpreting Harold or William in terms of modern theories of history and psychology, or with seeking to draw parallels between past and present; her novel is entirely free from the faintest smell of symbolism. She has tried simply to recreate the eleventh century in its own terms, and she has succeeded in the most masterly fashion." Walter Allen
+ New Statesman & Nation 36:444 N 20 '48 330w

"A restrained, human and powerful book. . . Miss Muntz has given these figures human stature, heroic stature, and life." Gouverneur Paulding
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 F 27 '49 650w

"Miss Muntz has given sixteen years to the preparation of 'The Golden Warrior' and achieved something that is at once an ambitious work of love and a rarely distinguished work of historical fiction—something very near a prose epic of the English people." Richard Match

MUNTZ, HOPE—Continued

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 6 '49 280w

"Miss Muntz's style, a marvel of epical matter-of-factness, resembles that of the chronicles that were her sources. On the bare bones of these old accounts she has put the flesh of real life, and her book takes on some of the pity and terror of Greek tragedy."

+ New Yorker 25:112 Mr 26 '49 140w

"Readers of 'The Golden Warrior' have a wonderful experience before them. Here is a novel as brilliant and beautiful as its dust-jacket which, designed by Thomas D. Greenley Jr., is based on the famous Bayeux Tapestry. Here, both in the novel and on the jacket, is a glowing company of knights and nobles, heroes and villains, kings and princes and bishops. Here is an historical novel in the grand tradition." E. D. D.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 15 '49 400w

"For one thing [Miss Muntz's] book is a minor miracle of taste, of good taste; for another, she writes of great historical characters as her principals. She does not cheaply traffic on their presence around some stereotyped mannikins or puppets whose melodramatic adventures are flawed jewels set in the ring of history. Harold and William the Conqueror and Edward the Confessor are not incidental to this bardic history; they are central. And Miss Muntz has exercised genuine discipline in imaginatively evoking these myth-making types." Lon Tinkle

+ Sat R of Lit 32:27 Mr 19 '49 700w

"When one has got used to the affectation of style . . . one settles down to a very good story, packed with information and incident and possessing, in spite of everything, real vitality. Harold, William and the other persons depicted here are rather too large to convince us of their humanity, but they emerge as living creatures of a sort and the tragedy of Harold's defeat stirs us more than we would have thought possible when first starting upon this long and complex saga." Olivia Manning

+ Spec 181:642 N 12 '48 360w

"Miss Muntz writes completely within her historical period, and presents her novel in a scholarly and self-restrained manner, developing a neglected period of history well and dramatically." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p9C Ap 10 '49 300w

"The Golden Warrior is without the faults which such a book might seem to invite. In spite of its deliberate archaism, it is not at all a literary exercise nor, in any sense, a sham; the author refrains from tedious description both of landscape and architecture, and from modern parallels and allusions; and although there is perhaps a Pre-Raphaelite taint in the romantic passages which tell of Harold's first wife, such passages are brief."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p609 O 30 '48 210w

"Avoiding the subtle technique of the modern novelist in order to achieve an eleventh-century atmosphere, Miss Muntz has yet managed to create superb characterizations of her two protagonists. . . In the course of her story she brings to life as well a host of interesting minor characters. Her accounts of the battles of Stamford Bridge and Hastings are little masterpieces in themselves." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 38:764 summer '49 360w

MURDOCK, GEORGE PETER. Social structure. 387p $6 Macmillan

392 Sociology. Anthropology. Family. Marriage 49-9317

"Application of cultural anthropology, sociology, psychology, and psychoanalysis to the study of some 250 different cultures." (Survey) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Bernard Mishkin

N Y Times p18 N 27 '49 470w

"For advanced students of social science 'Social Structure' can be a reliable and authoritative text book. It is profusely footnoted and annotated and contains many charts and appendices, a bibliography, and an index, which will make it possible to do research in any of its several fields quickly and easily." J. F. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C Je 12 '49 420w

Survey 85:408 Jl '49 20w

MURDOCK, KENNETH BALLARD. Literature and theology in colonial New England. 235p $4 Harvard univ. press

810.9 Religion in literature. Puritans. American literature—History and criticism 49-10048

"This book attempts to outline the relation between the New England Puritans' fundamental theological ideas and their literary theory and practice. . . It is primarily an essay on some of the ways in which ardent supporters of a particular set of doctrines sought in an important historical period in literature to express them; it deals with the colonial Puritans' successes and failures as, to use the word in its most general sense, artists. . . The substance of this book was presented in a course of lectures given for the Lowell Institute in King's Chapel, Boston, in March and April 1944, as one of the Institute's annual series on 'Current Topics in Theology.'" (Pref) Index.

Christian Century 66:1394 N 23 '49 450w

Reviewed by E. W. Harris

Churchman 163:18 N 1 '49 90w

"Admirable little book." Mason Wade

+ Commonweal 50:608 S 30 '49 900w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge

Library J 74:1090 Ag '49 100w

"Professor Murdock's work, which shows the successes and failures of Puritan authors, is of necessarily limited interest, but it is a scholarly, well-planned work, thoroughly documented and of principal importance to students of religious literature, and American literary history." C. W. W.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 25 '49 360w

Reviewed by Robert Halsband

Sat R of Lit 33:25 Ja 7 '50 150w

Times [London] Lit Sup p861 D 30 '49 750w

MURPHY, AUDIE. To hell and back. 274p $3 Holt

940.548173 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 49-7648

"The most decorated soldier of World War II recounts, in diary form, his harrowing experiences, which lend the title more than merely a piquant justification. The son of sharecroppers and an orphan at sixteen, this young Texas infantryman blazed a trail of glory from Sicily to Germany. . . No mention is made of his many honors, but reverent, sometimes irreverent, attention is given to his fallen comrades." Library J

Booklist 45:185; 223 F 1 '49; Mr 1 '49

"The characterization and the dialogue of his dogface companions are competent and natural. . . Murphy recounts his own exploits objectively." Frank Smith

+ Chicago Sun Mr 3 '49 500w

"Here is one of the most arresting literary products of World War II, a book meriting special attention. . . The book is written to show the price the infantry soldier paid—paid in all ways—for the actions demanded of him. . . Herein lies the danger that the uninitiated, inexperienced reader may not venture beyond the first few pages. Failing to realize, perhaps, that the soldier maintained his balance in combat only after a long, graded, and intensified training, such a reader may fail to recognize that the first 50 pages must be his own training in microcosm." H. B. Ellis

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 3 '49 1000w

Kirkus 17:42 Ja 15 '49 160w

"The metamorphosis from the immature, brash recruit of eighteen to the hardened, aged beyond years veteran, is one of the most interesting aspects of this work. Recommended." A. J. Gaines

+ Library J 74:307 F 15 '49 150w

"Murphy fought at Salerno and Anzio, participated in the invasion of southern France, and made the final drive across the Rhine. His account of these actions is told in the unadorned and authentic style of a battle report and he spares no detail of the death and disease which dogged the foot soldier's every step. He also reveals his own thoughts and feelings while under the law of kill or be killed so that the reader is given a complete case history of a combat man. He is not so successful, however, in describing the men with whom he served or in reporting their GI humor. The former seem overdrawn and the latter sounds strained."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 F 27 '49 290w

"A vivid, gripping, mature picture of combat in Italy, France and Germany. . . A writing man has obviously given the soldier's recollections a polish job, but the vitals of the book, along with a wealth of trenchant detail, manifestly could only come from one who has experienced the ugliness of war with exceptional sensitivity and balance." Gladwin Hill

+ N Y Times p10 F 27 '49 450w

New Yorker 25:95 Mr 5 '49 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 15 '49 950w

"A fighter's story of a fighter's war. Stark, grim, straight from the shoulder, 'To Hell and Back' is a terrible, powerful book." A. C. Fields

+ Sat R of Lit 32:18 Mr 26 '49 1250w

Wis Lib Bul 45:65 Ap '49

MURPHY, GARDNER. Historical introduction to modern psychology. rev ed 466p $6; text ed $4.50 Harcourt

150 Psychology 49-1297

"First published in 1929 [Book Review Digest 1929] and now revised and enlarged to cover recent years. Little change in the first half of the book, but the second half uses a different approach, with several chapters devoted to theoretical systems of psychology, and a new section on research areas." Booklist

"Murphy's style is lucid and his presentation logical. Despite some incompleteness, the book should be a very successful text." R. H. Turner

+ Am J Soc 55:428 Ja '50 1100w

Booklist 45:316 My 15 '49

"Written in comparatively simple language, this scholarly yet readable book offers a rewarding storehouse of exciting information. Particularly stimulating are the summaries of the principal recent trends in psychology: behaviorism, gestalt, Freudianism and others. This treatise makes a splendid refutation to the scoffing views of those who still hold that psychology is mere 'pseudo-science.'" D. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 5 '49 150w

MURPHY, MARY ELLEN, and others, eds. Treasury of Brooklyn. 435p $5 Sloane

917.4723 Brooklyn. American literature—New York (state) 49-9553

An anthology composed of excerpts from writings, both fact and fiction about Brooklyn. The period covered is from the seventeenth century to the present.

Booklist 45:373 Jl 1 '49

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Chicago Sun Jl 6 '49 500w

"This collection will give pleasure to many people from Brooklyn and from beyond Brooklyn. To the old-timers the mere listing of names—Henry Street, Clinton Street, the Hook, Williamsburg—will be enough to start wonderful memories and prompt the re-telling of old stories." George Miles

+ Commonweal 50:371 Jl 22 '49 460w

"Brooklyn has a staunch claque. This may get a boosting from them, but it is good reading—if specialized in background—in any case."

+ Kirkus 17:199 Ap 1 '49 150w

"One is grateful for what has been omitted —the miles of verbiage presumably read and rejected. But surely a more comprehensive anthology should have emerged. . . Editors are coy over their tidbits, lack knowledge or breadth to make unity of them. Pleasant but not important." E. L. Lewis

+ — Library J 74:816 My 15 '49 130w

Nation 169:66 Jl 16 '49 50w

"In point of accuracy, the 'Treasury's' editors have done right by my town. I noticed only one serious error: Jimmy Outlaw, on page 233 of the selection from Frank Graham's 'The Brooklyn Dodgers,' is not a catcher, as alleged. Mr. Outlaw is a third baseman and utility outfielder." Richard Match

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je 26 '49 900w

"Trying to explain a city is a little like trying to explain humanity. But this anthology is a useful and altogether amusing aid to the fascinating process." Morris Markey

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 3 '49 600w

New Yorker 25:60 Jl 2 '49 80w

Reviewed by William German

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 30 '49 700w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

Sat R of Lit 32:31 Jl 16 '49 370w

Springf'd Republican p21A Jl 10 '49 400w

MURRAY, MAX. Queen and the corpse. 232p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

49-9512

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Jl 8 '49 140w

Kirkus 17:219 Ap 15 '49 70w

"Mr. Murray's charm is less evident than it was in 'The King and the Corpse,' where the critters took their troubles more casually, but they will do in a pinch." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Jl 24 '49 160w

"A satisfactory mystery, with a pleasantly glossy overlay of sophistication." E. B.

+ N Y Times p24 Je 26 '49 150w

"All in all, a foolproof combination of circumstances, set down in a skillful and suitably glossy manner."

+ New Yorker 25:87 Je 25 '49 80w

MURRAY, PAUL. Heart is a stranger. 367p $3 Harper

49-8985

A novel of an international marriage in the Europe of the 1880's. Viktoria Lorien-Enzenfeld of Vienna married the Florentine Count Cesare Malaforza and soon found herself involved in a net of intrigue as her husband was working for an Italian-French alliance in opposition to Austria and Germany. Viktoria acts with courage and finally returns to her rightful place in Vienna.

"An involved and highly improbable story—the characters are two dimensional—the motivation confused."

— Kirkus 17:120 Mr 1 '49 180w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 My 22 '49 270w

MURRAY, PAUL—Continued

"Mr. Murray proves his ability to achieve suspense, tightening the net so skillfully that the reader almost gets caught in it too. . . In choosing as background for his story the Europe of Bismarck, he possesses once more the advantage of a stormy scene. But probably he could create trouble for his characters anywhere. If they seem to move less by their own will than by the choice of Mr. Murray, it is not too disappointing to the well-diverted reader." Joan Andrews
+ — N Y Times p6 My 15 '49 500w

"There are good pictorial views of Florence, Rome, and Vienna, plus full data on the international currents of the day, and not too many of the laboriously contrived social events that usually mar such costume pieces."
+ New Yorker 25:112 My 14 '49 120w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 32:26 Jl 23 '49 130w

Springf'd Republican p6D Je 19 '49 230w

MUSSELMAN, MORRIS MCNEIL. I married a redhead; il. by Paul Galdone. 244p $3 Crowell 818

The author describes the first ten years (1926-36) of his marriage to a redheaded actress, Milly June. Together they braved a Chautauqua tour, summer stock, and days of unemployment. The book ends with their departure for Hollywood after completing successful careers in radio.

Booklist 46:4; 61 S 1 '49; O 15 '49

"A pleasantly giddy account."
+ Kirkus 17:413 Ag 1 '49 140w

"Gay, amusing, should be popular." E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 74:1197 S 1 '49 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 2 '49 140w

"Mr. Musselman's latest is glib and amusing, but as spontaneous as a breakfast broadcast. It would be nice to read memoirs sometime in which the home brew doesn't explode, the horse came in and the publisher stayed solvent until after publication." Nancy Ladd
N Y Times p23 D 11 '49 220w

MYERS, ALEXANDER JOHN WILLIAM, ed. Enriching worship. 398p $3.50 Harper
242 Religious literature—Collections 49-9181

Collection of poetry and prose designed to enrich man's worship of God. Book is divided into five sections: Poetry; Psalms for Christian worship; Prose; Prayers; Aphorisms. Indexes.

"Most of the material is of a sort that would not fit very naturally into a conventional Sunday morning service, and there is little of it (except the psalms and prayers) in which a liturgical quality can be recognized. But the individual worshiper will find much for his edification, the minister will get helpful sermon suggestions, and almost anything in the collection may have its uses in special services of one kind or another for either youth or adults." W. E. G.
Christian Century 66:1107 S 21 '49 160w

"The organization of the volume leaves something to be desired, but the compiler has brought together between the covers of a single book a great deal of material that is useful for purposes of worship. It is a superior volume and will be a valuable aid to those who wish to enrich their programs of worship." J. D. Morrison
+ — Crozer Q 26:379 O '49 200w

"This is a volume that should be a valuable addition to the libraries of Protestant ministers, religious educators and others interested in the enrichment of worship services."
+ Kirkus 17:295 Je 15 '49 110w

Wis Lib Bul p6 D '49

MYERS, JOHN MYERS. Silverlock. 349p $3 Dutton
49-5070

A fantastic, allegorical, picaresque tale which follows the adventures of a young man from Chicago in a strange land inhabited by famous and infamous characters in literature and legend—from Circe and Lars Porsena to Pathfinder and Isaak Walton.

Booklist 46:48 O 1 '49

Reviewed by Feike Feikema
Chicago Sun S 1 '49 350w

"To come off successfully, this should sparkle with wit and approach its ends with subtlety. Actually, it is heavy footed and hard going."
— Kirkus 17:310 Je 15 '49 180w

"Sullied by sex and slang, the book itself is far from being a work of literary merit. Despite all its shortcomings, the uniqueness of the book may cause it to be rather widely read and talked about as a curiosity piece." Clarence Gorchels
— + Library J 74:1095 Ag '49 70w

"This steadily ebullient tale is no mere 'Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court.' It is as seriously purposed as it is salty. The top barrel is targeted on the audience which likes an adventure-packed action story for straight action-story's sake. The other is designed to catch the literate and aware." E. B. Davis
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Ag 28 '49 650w

"It is true that in the opening pages there are reminders of T. H. White and Branch Cabell but in the end they only remind us that 'Silverlock' has neither the charm of the former nor the wit of the latter. Once we have survived a few escapades, the pattern of adventure becomes so clear that we can see the end before we come to the middle. The trouble with 'Silverlock' is that it finishes long before it ends." Thomas Lask
— + N Y Times p6 S 4 '49 240w

"Resembling an enormous Coney Island peep-show of figures from mythology, folklore, and classical literature, Mr. Myers' book is something of a refreshing novelty, if not exactly a novel. . . The indigestibly large array of literary allusion will probably entertain or irritate the reader in proportion to his intellectual purism."
+ — New Yorker 25:109 S 17 '49 140w

"Whatever one gets from a book of this kind, one has to work for. The publishers are inclined to find Mr. Myers's novel 'a meaningful commentary on man's search for a satisfying vision of life,' but although it is certainly a saucy performance, amusing as much for its impudence as for its incident, I find it in no part profound, and about as meaningful as it would be had Mr. Myers contrived its writing by farming out the individual episodes to freshmen in English at Arizona State." D. L. Morgan
— + Sat R of Lit 32:28 S 3 '49 410w

MYERS, RICHMOND E. Long crooked river (the Susquehanna). 380p maps $4 Christopher 974 Susquehanna river 49-3669

A study of the Susquehanna river "in which history, geography and folklore are drawn upon to tell the story of a river and the valley through which it flows. Pennsylvania matters dominate, but the headwaters in New York state and the 12-mile flow in Maryland bring these states into the narrative. Author is a geologist and chapters on geological pageant of river and on coal and iron mines are written with notable authority." (Library J)

"The book is informative rather than interpretive; its achievement lies in the bringing together of much information, which is presented accurately in illuminating sequence and relationship. It is a book, however, for the lay reader rather than for the professional historian. The work, especially in its historical aspects, is based largely on secondary sources; but the author, through his many contacts, knows the Susquehanna country and its people; he writes simply but enthusiastically about his subject. A fairly good bibliography for further reading is given at the end of the book and the index is well done." A. C. Bining

+ Am Hist R 55:234 O '49 180w

"Style of writing, on the whole, is somewhat prosaic. Although it does not belong to the series, libraries that have acquired 'Rivers of America' will want it." G. D. McDonald
Library J 74:734 My 1 '49 100w
School & Society 69:375 My 21 '49 20w

MYERS, ROLLO H. Debussy. (Great musicians ser) 125p $1.50 Wyn
B or 92 Debussy, Claude 49-8161

A brief biography of Claude Debussy, in which the author also examines his music. Bibliography. List of Debussy's works. No index.

Reviewed by C. K. Miller
Library J 74:664 Ap 15 '49 40w

"Until a really first-rate comprehensive biographical study of the great Frenchman appears in English, this will serve as the best brief survey of his fruitful and fascinating career." Herbert Weinstock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ag 28 '49 140w

Reviewed by H. G. Lawrence
N Y Times p34 My 8 '49 120w

"The lack of biographical substance is partially offset by a musical emphasis greater than these volumes usually allow. Mr. Myers works tentatively toward a definition of the three distinct styles which contemporary criticism belatedly accords a composer once dismissed easily, and mistakenly, as an 'impressionist.' But here, again, the author never quite succeeds in coming to grips with his material." Roland Gelatt
Sat R of Lit 32:60 Mr 26 '49 320w
Spec 183:278 Ag 26 '49 180w

"There may be differences of opinion on small points—Mr. Myers reduces the influence of Boris Godunov on Debussy to a minimum and he finds more good words than many have found for Le Martyre de Saint Sébastien—but these are the personal reactions which give the book its character. His spirited plea for the later works of Debussy, so unjustly neglected in this country, should receive attention. His presentation of Debussy's character is frank and fair: he neither varnishes nor excuses the less attractive, more feline characteristics of a man of whom very much the best went into music."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p139 F 26 '49 230w

MYINT, HLA. Theories of welfare economics. 240p $4 Harvard univ. press
330.1 Economics 48-9307

"This book traces the development of welfare economic thought from Adam Smith to the present day. It is not, however, merely an historical study. It also attempts to find out what types of welfare analysis are likely to prove most useful for the purpose of practical economic policy." (Introd) The author is Professor of Economics at the University of Rangoon, Burma. The book has been published for the London school of economics and political science, University of London. Select bibliography. Index of authors.

"The reader is almost certain to agree with Myint that much of his book is 'uncommonly like a tour round a dilapidated old building.' It is likely to be of greater interest to the historian of economic thought than to the theorist. . . One is left with the impression that if welfare economics is to be 'useful for the purpose of practical economic policy,' the economist must be equipped with more than a proficiency with mathematical techniques and a statement of the problem; but the reader will probably not be convinced that what has yet been done in this field is likely to influence policy makers in the real world of pressure groups and conflicting ideologies." C. L. Allen
Ann Am Acad 263:255 My '49 440w

"Professor Myint is not only concerned to state the various theories as they have been developed but criticises their theoretical and logical soundness, and, what is equally important but so often overlooked by many economists, their usefulness as guides in economic policy. And since he is not afraid to express his own views the book has a liveliness which is not often found in histories of doctrine." E. D.
Manchester Guardian p3 O 15 '48 270w

N

NACHOD, FREDERICK C., ed. Ion exchange: theory and application. 411p il $8.50 Academic press
541.39 Ions. Adsorption 49-9845

"The phenomenon of ion exchange has been recognized since about 1850, but it is only in comparatively recent years that the theory of its action and possible applications have received much attention. Now it is the basis of widely-used water-softening processes, sugar-refining processes; and other important applications are under development. This volume is essentially a symposium, prepared by experts, on present-day applications of ion exchange in various branches of research and industry. Theoretical aspects of the subject are discussed at some length but the emphasis is upon methods, techniques and equipment." N Y New Tech Bks

"This book is practically indispensable to the chemist or chemical engineer who intends to apply ion exchange. The book is also highly recommended to chemists unfamiliar with ion exchange, because the suggested and implied applications of this tool cut a wide swath through the chemical field."
+ Chem & Eng N 27:3440 N 14 '49 200w

"Dr. Nachod was well qualified to corral and lead his experts. . . A good many chemical engineers are going to skip over the first three 'Ion exchange now takes its place. . .' chapters. They will promise themselves, however, to come back to the complex mathematical background material. They will pass right to chapter four where Permutit's Gilwood holds forth on equipment design—well written, well illustrated. . . Engineers in industrial fields—water, organics, metallurgy, and pharmaceuticals especially—will find many facets directly applicable to their problems. Maybe they'll even find their problems solved, either by the book or one of the literature references with which it is copiously sprinkled. As a minor quibble, the editor is wrong in calling distillation and filtration unit processes. He's on safer ground when he classifies ion exchange as a unit process." + — Chem Eng 56:239 N '49 800w
N Y New Tech Bks 34:70 S '49

NADEAU, REMI A. City-makers; the men who transformed Los Angeles from village to metropolis during the first great boom, 1868-76. 270p $3.50 Doubleday
979.494 Los Angeles—History. Los Angeles—Biography 48-9042

Historical study of southern California during the years of its first boom, 1868 to 1876. The author, himself a descendant of a leading southern California freighter, describes the sudden influx of farmers in 1868, and the lives of the men who transformed Los Angeles from a small settlement into a great metropolis. Bibliography. Index.

"Mainly reference value, in a field largely untouched."
Kirkus 16:496 S 15 '48 180w

NADEAU, R. A.—Continued

"While he writes of many fascinating characters and dramatic episodes, Mr. Nadeau is essentially concerned with the development of the Inyo silver trade which, more than any other factor, was responsible for the first Los Angeles 'boom.' Incredible as it may sound, this fascinating and crucially important chapter in the early history of the city remained practically lost—so swift has been the tempo of the city's development . . . until Mr. Nadeau brought it to light. . . It is an exciting book for the general reader, full of dramatic stories, immensely readable, well written, and accurate in every detail." Carey McWilliams

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ap 3 '49 1050w

"This is an enormously readable book. The general public will make that discovery for itself, just as students of California's past will find that Mr. Nadeau has done a solid and scholarly job of digging in the early files for his material. I don't know what he'll be up to for his next book, but I hope it will be something to do with California history. 'The City-Makers' is a fine demonstration that he possesses an authentic talent for combining history, good story telling, and human interest, and for making that combination come alive." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 3 '48 850w

NADER, SAM, ed. Sermons for the new age. 209p $3 Morehouse

252 Sermons 48-9568

A collection of sermons for the present age of crisis. Partial contents: Can the American venture survive? by J. G. Gilkey; Deep river, by J. R. Sizoo; The new song, by Raymond Calkins; Right and left vs. right and wrong, by J. H. Holmes; The stubborn Christ, by G. B. Oxnam; The understanding heart, by S. M. Cavert; What manner of child shall this be? by P. A. Wolfe.

"A very distinguished collection of modern sermons." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 66:48 Ja 12 '49 50w

"This volume of sermons for today is full of meat. Some of the meat is tough, in that the reader has to pin his thoughts down to the dish and do some mental digesting, if he is to get the full content and intent of the sermon. . . This book ought to have extensive reading at the hands of laymen and it would immensely profit a number of the clergy, especially those who still tie up with formal religion and hark back to mediaevalism, instead of telling us how to live courageously and constructively as Christians of today." T. F. Opie

+ Churchman 163:15 Ap 15 '49 210w

NAGY, FERENC. Struggle behind the iron curtain; tr. from the Hungarian by Stephen K. Swift. 471p $6 Macmillan

943.91 Hungary—Politics and government 48-11003

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"Originally written in Hungarian, this book comes to us in an English version which seems to be accurate and idiomatic. The work reflects the qualities of the author, an experienced newspaper editor and a man whose strong personality is evidently tinged with the engaging credulity of the peasant that was, at least in part, the undoing of the political leader. When Mr. Nagy left Hungary on the short vacation which was to end in exile, he took with him no papers or documents (p. 407), which doubtless accounts for the somewhat discontinuous effect of the narrative in some parts of the book but makes it no less readable. This fact may also account for superficial treatment of important aspects of Hungary's international situation, especially with reference to the United States." H. F. A. Schoenfeld

+ — Am Hist R 54:605 Ap '49 1000w

Reviewed by Emil Lengyel

Ann Am Acad 263:218 My '49 440w

Reviewed by Geza Takaro

Churchman 163:17 F 15 '49 360w

Current Hist 16:100 F '49 60w

Foreign Affairs 27:515 Ap '49 40w

Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 15 '49 480w

"Despite its considerable interest . . . the book is a disappointment to the student in search of facts rather than opinions. Emotionalism, color-words and vagueness leave the reader's questions unanswered. During the period after liberation, for instance, when political life was slowly getting under way again, and the parties began once more to organize and to recruit members, it is of crucial interest to know their relative strength. Nagy must know the details with regard to the Smallholders, but all we hear is that 'the Smallholders also started active organization and gained a number of members within a short time' (p.115). This book is a sad, moving, revealing and significant personal history. It is not history." R. L. Wolff

Pol Sci Q 64:137 Mr '49 1050w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Wiskemann

Spec 182:370 Mr 18 '49 450w

NALL, TORNEY OTTO, and DAVIS, BERT HENRY. Young Christians at work. 116p $1.75 Assn. press

248 Christian life. Youth—Religious life 49-5125

"The YMCA Press offers a sort of case history, compiled by T. Otto Nall, managing editor of The Christian Advocate, and Bert Davis, in which fifteen young business and professional people of varying denominational faiths, tell how they apply Christian teaching in their daily jobs. In most instances it appears to be a simple use of the Golden Rule." Christian Science Monitor

"In all of the testimonies there is a high sense of social responsibility and service, a righteous purpose, and an indication of rewarding satisfaction. But one glimpses in none of them any very clear understanding of true spiritual values as distinguished from ethical and moral ones. Christians though these young people are, there seems to one to be nothing in their thinking or conduct which might not be found in the thinking and conduct of any high-minded young people, whether Jew or Japanese, Moslem or Hindu." Neil Martin

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 4 '49 180w

Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich

Springf'd Republican p4D My 29 '49 230w

NANO, FREDERIC C. Land and people of Sweden. (Portraits of the nations ser) 116p il $2.50 Lippincott

948.5 Sweden 49-11898

Survey of the history, people, and customs of Sweden. Includes photographs, a map, and an index.

Booklist 46:160 Ja 1 '50

+ Bookmark 9:83 Ja '50 20w

NANSEN, ODD. From day to day; tr. by Katherine John. 485p il $5 Putnam

940.547243 World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, German 49-7431

"The author, an architect, son of the famous Arctic explorer, was a court hostage of Norway, and through his diary, kept from 1942 to 1945, details the long grim years of hopes and despairs, the changing routines following the phases of the war, the quality of the German guards and commandants, the tests of the patriotism and integrity of the prisoners. From concentration camps in Norway, to those in Germany, he writes for his wife of the happenings, how he is getting on, the means by which he hides, and saves, his diary, and how his writing gives him strength. From inside the barbed wire this reports on the lax early days to those of the vicious frenzy of the New Order and the increasing hardness of the life as outrages, tortures, shootings and hangings mount . . on the tense following of the Allied offensive and the final return home, via Denmark." Kirkus

Booklist 45:169; 208 Ja 15 '49; F 15 '49

"This diary is long, in parts overly detailed. But for dramatic reading, for sheer sustained terror, it cannot be surpassed. You will never know what things hate makes possible until you have read this book." Emmett Dedmon
+ — Chicago Sun p8X F 6 '49 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '49

Reviewed by E. S. Skillin
Commonweal 49:427 F 4 '49 1000w

"A warm humanity and an unassuming belief gives this a quality to be remembered from all other bitter and/or violent books of similar experiences, for this prisoner of war diary is of moral rather than sheerly physical courage. . . Some unforgettable incidents and characters, a personal honesty and unshrinking observation, make this a plea for humanitarianism and understanding sympathy for all fellow men and should keep it from being classed with other war prisoner books."
+ Kirkus 16:613 N 15 '48 280w

"His diaries add in many subtle ways to our understanding of Nazi psychology and of Hitler's methods of terror. Volume well translated by Katherine John, is heartily recommended for public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 74:56 Ja 1 '49 110w

"This diary . . . is one of the great documents to come out of the war—great because of its humanity, its integrity, its insight, its courage, and even its humor. Don't pass this book by because you've long since been surfeited with horrors. There are horrors in it, plenty of them, but they are not overemphasized, and the narrative characteristically ends with a plea to the victors to eschew hate and revenge and to give the Germans a fair chance to recover. An extraordinary piece of creative reporting."
+ Nation 168:253 F 26 '49 130w

"This book is extraordinary on several levels. It is the personal testament of a remarkable man and, at the same time, the best realization that I have seen, in either print or film, of the ultimate horror and end product of our civilization: the Nazi concentration camps. Finally, it is a statement of faith in the power of the individual. It might well be put into the hands of every person who can read in every country in the world as part of our universal postwar reëducation." A. L. Goodman
+ New Repub 120:24 Mr 28 '49 1150w

Reviewed by Walter Marsden
New Statesman & Nation 38:78 Jl 16 '49 700w

Reviewed by W. L. Shirer
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 F 6 '49 900w

"Profoundly moving concentration-camp diary. . . The reader will, unquestionably, find himself drawn to the author. Though perhaps some will approach the book with reluctance, since there are dozens of volumes about concentration camps. What distinguishes this diary from many other books in the same category are the author's keen observation and humanity." Alfred Werner
+ N Y Times p3 Ja 23 '49 1650w

+ New Yorker 24:90 F 12 '49 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 7 '49 750w

Reviewed by H. B. Kranz
Sat R of Lit 32:19 F 12 '49 800w

Spec 183:444 S 30 '49 270w

"Nansen's diary, in its excellent translation by Katherine John, deserves attention as an example of a particular kind of good reporting. Perhaps because of the obvious necessity of saving paper, the writing is succinct. Yet, economy is achieved not by generalization but by a seemingly unstudied selection of small revealing facts, character sketches, even humorous incidents." Bruno Lasker
+ Survey 85:177 Mr '49 650w

"Slowly out of the writhing horror, Nansen himself emerges as a formidable figure: a man of high culture and sensibility, a magnificent observer, a skillful writer, an illustrator of considerable power who sketched as well as wrote what he saw. But what is most astonishing is his oceanic serenity at Sachsenhausen. He rarely lost himself to the horror, frequently found even hell an amusing place. When he came back to the world he was a little surprised and disturbed at having forgotten his home telephone number."
Time 53:74 Ja 31 '49 950w

"There is little in Day after Day that cannot be found in a hundred other books. The one difference is that it is a masterpiece. The secret of its artistry is easy to trace, and nowhere easier than in the few short passages added as retrospective supplements, in which the story descends from the sublime to the merely excellent. The secret lies, in fact, in the accomplished use of the diary form."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p483 Jl 29 '49 1250w

NASH, OGDEN. Versus. 169p $2.50 Little 811 49-7579

The first book of new verse by this author since Good Intentions (Book Review Digest 1942). There are poems about marriage, rainy week-ends, taxes, the middle-aged spread, hotel room service, and allied subjects, all set down with wry humor. Index.

"In the new book there are jingles not quite as deft as A. P. Herbert's, there are sentimental poems which seem to me rather small potatoes, but there is also the unconfined Nash whose style may by now be familiar but whose bright and most devastating lines have a wit and compression hard to beat." Edward Weeks
+ — Atlantic 183:82 My '49 300w

Booklist 45:207 F 15 '49

Reviewed by Rod Nordell
Christian Science Monitor p12 F 28 '49 400w

Kirkus 16:635 D 1 '48 50w

"His wit is charitable and no one within the range of his target really gets hurt. . . Language to [Nash] is so much putty for the formation of audacious rimes. Versus is up to his best standards." Gerald MacDonald
+ Library J 73:819 D 15 '48 70w

Manchester Guardian p4 N 29 '49 230w

Reviewed by Simon Harcourt-Smith
New Statesman & Nation 38:708 D 10 '49 360w

"Opening a book by Ogden Nash is something like opening a bottle of champagne: (1) it makes a pleasant noise, and (2) it is highly charged with volatile stuff. . . I am mildly disappointed in one or two things. The Limick, a little a-a-b-a briefcase invention for overnight conceits, doesn't sparkle as it should. And I miss the generous handful of quatrains I had somehow hoped for. . . I am a little disappointed, likewise, that with all Mr. Nash's versatility and brilliance within the several verse forms which he uses there is not more—not much—evidence of any new experimentation. 'Versus' does not offer the reader enough stanzaic variety." David McCord
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Mr 20 '49 1300w

"Like all space-writers and similar blighters he's sometimes more lengthy than laughable, but all in all he doesn't pall and he's still remarkably affable. Oh, now the world is staid and grayed and we're good without admonishment. How things have changed! But Nash's lines still fill us with pleased astonishment." Charles Poore
+ N Y Times p4 F 6 '49 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 15 '49 600w

NASH, OGDEN—Continued

"The only intelligent comment to be made about any new book from this austere fabulist is, get it at once and invite a few intelligible friends for fireside reading." Christopher Morley

+ Sat R of Lit 32:17 Mr 19 '49 650w

"Mr. Nash's English readers will be delighted by it, for once again he proves himself to be a most ingenious and amusing critic of human frailty and absurdity. It would be a mistake, however, to think of him merely as a funny man; like Mr. Thurber, he has a Democritean streak which entitles him to the respect due to a philosopher, albeit a laughing one. His philosophy is that of the ironist rather than that of the satirist."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p811 D 9 '49 750w

Wis Lib Bul 45:86 My '49

NASH, VERNON. World must be governed. 206p $2.50 Harper

341.1 International federation 49-8579

"A vice president of United World Federalists, has prepared a popular statement of the ways in which this group think we may create an effective world federation and what individuals may do to help." (Booklist) Index.

"Mr. Nash deserves credit for honest, informed arguments on the nature of government and of federalism, and on American implication in world affairs. He sweeps out the rubbish of isolationism in terms that have meaning at every village corner. When he comes to remedies, Mr. Nash lets down his audience through negligence rather than intent. His 'limited world government' is for peoples possessing like cultures, economic conditions, morals, and law. The three hundrd million or so diverse people living in dependent, colonial areas are dismissed with unrealistic clichés concerning self-government and trusteeship." T. R. Adam

+ — Ann Am Acad 265:215 S '49 360w

Booklist 45:328 Je 1 '49

Chicago Sun p8X My 1 '49 20w

Christian Century 66:1139 S 28 '49 320w

"It is a candid and vigorous presentation of the issues."

+ Current Hist 16:344 Je '49 30w

Foreign Affairs 28:157 O '49 20w

Kirkus 17:80 F 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by Harry Baehr

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Je 12 '49 450w

Reviewed by John Desmond

N Y Times p11 Jl 3 '49 390w

Reviewed by J. H. E. Fried

Pol Sci Q 64:473 S '49 650w

"This is a good book that fully vindicates its ambitious title. Its virtues are clarity, order, conciseness, imagination, and good temper. Its defects are the defects of the audience to whom it is addressed—us Americans." Stringfellow Barr

Sat R of Lit 32:14 Je 4 '49 650w

Reviewed by Weston La Barre

Survey 85:558 O '49 800w

NATHAN, GEORGE JEAN. Theatre book of the year, 1948-49; a record and an interpretation. (V7) 363p $4 Knopf

792 Theater—U.S. Drama—History and criticism (43-51298)

"The seventy-eight exercises which, for weal or woe, found a platform in New York between May 1, 1948, and April 25, 1949, are variously appraised, cudgeled and condoned in the latest edition of George Jean Nathan's 'Theatre Book of the Year.' . . This is the seventh of these annuals and again Mr. Nathan eloquently demonstrates that he is, at once, the theatre's best friend and severest critic." N Y Times

Booklist 46:93 N 15 '49

"With an amazing list of writings on the theatre to his credit, this, the seventh of his annuals, still provides provocative, stimulating reading."

+ Kirkus 17:454 Ag 15 '49 100w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 74:1605 O 15 '49 30w

Reviewed by John Lardner

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 18 '49 600w

"Anyone who would like to have a vigorous and honest report of last season's products in the theatre will profit from reading 'The Theatre Book of the Year,' and will, to use one of the critical clichés, be vastly entertained." Richard Maney

+ N Y Times p18 O 16 '49 500w

"It is probably safe to estimate that, in the course of forty-three years as a critic, George Jean Nathan has witnessed and reviewed rather more than six thousand theatrical offerings of one kind or another. . . It is the everlasting miracle of Mr. Nathan that he has survived this crushing program, not only with all his faculties still intact but also with his first, fatal passion for the stage quite undiminished, and, most remarkable of all, with his capacity for expressing it as fresh, antic, and peculiar as it ever was, if not more so." Wolcott Gibbs

+ New Yorker 25:117 O 22 '49 2000w

"The latest offering is, as vigorous, vital, hilarious, maddening, provocative, thoughtful, heedless, exciting, and infuriating as all of his works. It can be completely unfair and studiously blind. . . But it is always a brilliant show and, at its best, it is an installment of the most knowing and incisive criticism of the drama that has been written in America." Richard Watts

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:11 D 31 '49 750w

NATHAN, ROBERT. River journey. 196p $2.50 Knopf

49-10410

A fantasy on life, death and love. When Minnie Parkinson is told that she will die soon, she persuades her husband to go with her on his long-desired river journey by houseboat to New Orleans. Along the way they pick up two strangers, Mr. Mortimer (Death) and Nora, a frail blonde. The journey is never completed, for in a Missouri circus tent, Minnie and Nora meet their predestined ends with Death.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 184:76 O '49 420w

"Readers will be reminded of On Borrowed Time, but there is less humor here."

Booklist 46:4; 34 S 1 '49; S 15 '49

"A philosophical fantasy which will please Nathan devotees."

+ Bookmark 9:30 N '49 60w

"Unfortunately, The River Journey lacks the substance found even in Nathan's most pallidly robust pieces. . . Fine for those who enjoy Nathan's reedy piping but others are apt to find it a hollow tune." Mary Sandrock

— + Cath World 170:159 N '49 200w

"The way to take the book is not too seriously; rather, with pleasure in Mr. Nathan's precise use of words, shapely sentences, delicate touch, and grave humor." W. K. Rugg

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 S 15 '49 220w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '49

Kirkus 17:368 Jl 15 '49 160w

"Fantasy with touches of philosophy and sentiment that only occasionally ring true. Nathan fans will read it." M. E. Monroe

Library J 74:1203 S 1 '49 80w

"'The River Journey,' Robert Nathan's latest novel, is written with the author's customary narrative grace, simplicity, and skill. As a novel it is slighter than many of Mr. Nathan's earlier books, and its plot and theme are developed with less originality. Nonetheless, the picture which Mr. Nathan paints in his new book emerges with the familiar aquatint coloring." Blythe Morley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 8 '50 430w

"Fantasy draws a fine line between charm and confusion, and Mr. Nathan has been walking that fine line expertly for a long time. So it's hardly fair to complain when he teeters a bit in an effort to relieve the monotony. However, if he had scratched Mr. Mortimer from the passenger list he would have made 'The River Journey' even more enjoyable." Florence Crowther
N Y Times p8 S 11 '49 400w

New Yorker 25:105 S 17 '49 100w

"This is pure Nathan: smooth, unpretentious, dove-colored writing, the satire gentle, the fantasy controlled. It has a valentine quality, but if it has the grace and delicacy suggested by the image, it is also frankly vulnerable, as is the valentine, on the grounds of sentimentality. Mr. Nathan's satire is not always tart enough to sustain the added sweetness, and Mr. Nathan's clear prose is sometimes put to something of a strain." John Woodburn
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:13 S 17 '49 750w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p7C N 6 '49 360w

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES, WASHINGTON, D.C. Chemistry of penicillin; report on a collaborative investigation by American and British chemists under the joint sponsorship of the Office of scientific research and development, Washington, D.C, and the Medical research council, London; comp. under the auspices of the Academy, pursuant to a contract with the Office of scientific research and development; editorial bds: Hans T. Clarke [and others]. 1094p il $36 Princeton univ. press

612.3292411 Penicillin 49-7715

"'This monograph,' states its Preface, 'represents an attempt to record in detail results of experimental and theoretical studies carried out in a unique, internationally collaborative effort to ascertain the chemical constitution of penicillin and to devise methods for its synthesis.' The monumental volume is a collection of reports on investigations by American and British chemists in industries, governmental laboratories, private foundations, and universities, acting under the sponsorship of government agencies in Washington and London." U S Quarterly Bkl

"Aside from its major and fundamental significance in chemotherapy, the work is a monument to a large-scale international collaboration on a scientific problem such as had never been attempted before."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 34:100 N '49

"For the worker in this field or related ones, and for the reader who takes pleasure in evidences of the cooperative and humane spirit of man, this book is indispensable."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:270 Je '49 280w

NATIONAL HEALTH ASSEMBLY, WASHINGTON, D.C., 1948. America's health; a report to the nation; official report [introd. by Oscar R. Ewing]. 395p $4.50 Harper

614.0973 Public health—U.S. 49-4679

"Official findings of the Assembly convened at the request of President Truman, in Washington, May, 1948, plus the assembly's recommendations on public health policy for the next decade. Divided into 14 sections, each concerned with a key problem of national health, mental and physical. Source material of a technical nature (most of it startling), thoroughly organized and clearly presented. Introduction by Oscar Ewing, Federal Security Administrator." (Library J) Index.

"This is truly a remarkable record of fact and opinion. The print, format, and bookmaking are good, the index sufficient. Colleges will use this book for many years as source and reference, and it is excellent lively reading for as many courses as there are chapters." Haven Emerson
+ Am J Pub Health 39:1356 O '49 550w

Reviewed by H. F. Dorn
Am Soc R 14:817 D '49 400w

"The book is readable and serviceable, and forms a good point of departure for any thoughtful persons venturing into this field." A. W. Stearns
+ Ann Am Acad 266:238 N '49 550w

Booklist 46:29 S 15 '49

Kirkus 17:249 My 1 '49 150w

"Recommended for appropriate special and large general collections. Not 'popular.'" R. E. Kingery
Library J 74:1022 Jl '49 100w

Reviewed by M. M. Davis
Nation 169:524 N 26 '49 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 11 '49 240w

"The long awaited official report of the National Health Assembly is admirable in manner, enduring in value for a host of responsible people, competent and authoritative, satisfying in its thoroughness, impersonal and objective in its composite authorship." Haven Emerson
+ Survey 85:497 S '49 450w

NATIONAL PRESS CLUB OF WASHINGTON. Dateline: Washington. See Phillips, C. B. H., and others, eds.

NATIONAL SOCIETY OF SALES TRAINING EXECUTIVES. Handbook of sales training. 415p $5.35; to schools $4 Prentice-Hall

658.85 Salesmanship. Employees, Training of

"A cooperative work, developed from the experience of the eighty-five members of the society, executives in charge of sales training in large manufacturing corporations. Designed for those responsible for training as well as for course instructors, it covers principles, practices and techniques of training in the home office, on the job, by correspondence, by meetings and conferences, evaluation and follow-up; selection of salesmen, maintaining enthusiasm, how to gain the cooperation of the sales force and of management." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:387 Jl 15 '49

"Clear, concise, practical. A valuable addition to the basic bookshelf." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 74:1463 O 1 '49 130w

"Constitutes a most substantial contribution to the literature and art of salesman training. Into its pages have gone the experience and thinking of 85 highly-qualified experts and observers, members of the National Society of Sales Training Executives." Saul Poliak
+ Management R 38:578 O '49 500w

NEAGOE, PETER. Time to keep. 281p $3 Coward-McCann

818 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Rumania—Social life and customs 49-10829

Reminiscences of the author's boyhood spent in a village in Transylvania, where his father was the notary, and one of the "four wheels" who carried the weight of responsibility for the village.

Booklist 46:121 D 1 '49

"The style is fresh and natural like the material, which is simple but by no means naive, rooted in the tolerance and slowly accumulated wisdom of generations. Mr. Neagoë has lived chiefly in America since he was 20 and time must have smoothed out the rough places in his memories, so that his Transylvanian youth, in spite of the government, sounds like a time of halcyon days, a time to keep. Perhaps much still remains as it was, for peasants are hard to change." W. K. Rugg
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 O 12 '49 420w

"An unassuming memoir which has the charm of gentle simplicity."
+ Kirkus 17:453 Ag 15 '49 150w

NEAGOE, PETER—Continued

"Here is fine writing with humor and tender feeling for the people and countryside. Some chapters would be excellent to read aloud."

+ Library J 74:1560 O 15 '49 40w

Nation 169:449 N 5 '49 30w

"Written with the naturalness, freshness and gentle beauty of his earlier stories, 'A Time to Keep' offers experience that others will likewise cherish." David Tilden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 O 23 '49 600w

"Peter Neagoe's story concerns his childhood among the peasants of Transylvania, and one can only envy him the experience. The people he writes of are interesting and entertaining; they had an affinity for life and the soil, and Mr. Neagoe has written a beautiful book about them." Jane Cobb

+ N Y Times p56 D 4 '49 320w

"Affectionately written, but quite obviously overlaid with a thick patina of time, distance, and family feeling."

+ — New Yorker 25:125 O 22 '49 100w

"This is not a run-of-the-mill autobiography: childhood is seen as an end in itself and not as some grim preparation for a successful career, for Mr. Neagoe lets his adulthood intrude as little as possible into what is a charming account of the way the world looked to a boy growing up with a feeling of economic and emotional security. . . Any reader will find the book a delightful and refreshing experience." I. T. Sanders

+ Sat R of Lit 32:14 D 10 '49 700w

NEAL, ROBERT MILLER. News gathering and news writing. 2d ed 580p $6; to schools $4.50 Prentice-Hall

070.4 Journalism. Reporters and reporting. Newspapers 49-1520

"The introduction to the revised and enlarged edition says the new issue is a 'genuine rebuilding of the book rather than a smattering of minor changings and amendings.' Definite changes in reporting since World War II made the revision imperative, though much of the original is still valid—the slant, and particularized procedures governing news gathering and news writing." (Springf'd Republican) Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1940.

Booklist 45:358 Je 15 '48

Springf'd Republican p5D Ap 24 '49 180w

NEIHARDT, JOHN GNEISENAU. Cycle of the West. [656p] $5 Macmillan

811 West—Poetry 49-8578

Five heroic songs "designed to celebrate the great mood of courage that was developed west of the Missouri river" during the period 1822-1890. These poems were originally published as separate volumes. Contents: The Song of Three Friends; The Song of Hugh Glass; The Song of Jed Smith; The Song of the Indian Wars; The Song of the Messiah.

Booklist 45:316 My 15 '49

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun Jl 11 '49 450w

"These are great American documents. If we were as far from the events here narrated as we are from the exploits of Charlemagne and his paladins, we could see clearly enough that these 19th century gestes are superior as material for poetry. The verse is vigorous, eloquent and stirring. The author proves that it is possible to be imaginative and historical at the same time, and to be both without being obscure." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 66:686 Je 1 '49 350w

"As a story of the opening of the west, told with narrative power and heroic overtones, they make a noteworthy contribution to Americana." Gerald McDonald

+ Library J 74:958 Je 15 '49 100w

"This is old-fashioned, shall we say nineteenth-century, verse. . . Yet with all this the stories move, carrying not only weight but excitement. . . The effect is authentic and genuine." Rolfe Humphries

+ Nation 168:589 My 21 '49 270w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Je 5 '49 190w

"He is an unfinished and unpolished writer and, worst of all, falls into dreadful archaisms. But he is a writer of immense vitality, who, at the same time, has a quite precise feeling about the frontier and the frontiersmen he considers and records." Harvey Breit

+ — N Y Times p20 Je 19 '49 100w

New Yorker 25:119 My 21 '49 100w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril

San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 18 '49 110w

"While Neihardt's honest, straightforward and unassuming poetry may seem a trifle out of step in these days of tortured graspings for uncertain and possibly invalid meanings, his work is the classic telling of a great story that will never be outdated. . . Mr. Neihardt's epic is a splendid monument in literature." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p8C My 15 '49 260w

NEILL, ALEXANDER SUTHERLAND. Problem family; an investigation of human relations; introd. by Goodwin Watson. 224p $2.75 Hermitage

392 Family 49-7964

"Here is a British educator who believes that a child should never know fear or feel inferior, should always be told the truth. He discusses the failure of both doctors and parents, the shortcomings of religion and communism in easing the tensions of childhood." Library J

"Provocative, startling, progressive views on children's freedom and rights. . . Stimulating, compelling reading—a child's Bill of Rights. Recommended for liberal libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 74:375 Mr 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by M. R. Sapirstein

Nation 169:43 Jl 9 '49 190w

Reviewed by Montagu Slater

New Statesman & Nation 37:286 Ap 16 '49 750w

Reviewed by C. C. Zimmerman

Sat R of Lit 32:11 My 7 '49 230w

School & Society 69:215 Mr 19 '49 40w

"This is a chaotic strident sermon on the education of children, saying the same thing again and again, fulminating against present society and traditional school methods. . . Although Mr. Neill tends to over-state, and gives sometimes, a ludicrous account of the way 'anti-life' families are brought up, he has a great deal sensible to say. . . Some readers who will not go the whole way with Mr. Neill, and dislike his truculent manner of writing, may yet find the book stimulating and, in many directions, wise."

Spec 182:526 Ap 15 '49 130w

NEILL, THOMAS PATRICK. Makers of the modern mind. (Science and culture ser) 391p il $3.75 Bruce pub.

921 Philosophy, Modern. Philosophers 49-8643

Critical studies of Luther, Calvin, Descartes, Locke, Newton, Rousseau, Kant, Bentham, Darwin, Marx, and Freud. Index.

"True his list of eleven names might not completely satisfy another scholar no less competent than himself, yet no reasonable person could call Dr. Neill's list anything but excellent, nor could anyone deny that his comments are the fruit of wide reading, calm analysis, and an open mind." Joseph McSorley

+ Cath World 170:76 O '49 420w

Reviewed by J. A. Correia

Commonweal 50:634 O 7 '49 600w

"A well presented, argued thesis book of primary interest to students and class work."

+ Kirkus 17:194 Ap 1 '49 110w

NEILSON, MRS FRANCES FULLERTON (JONES), and NEILSON, WINTHROP. Bruce Benson: thirty fathoms deep; il. by John C. Wonsetler. 179p $2.50 Dutton
49-11008

Sequel to Bruce Benson, Son of Fame (Book Review Digest 1948). In this story for ages eight to twelve Bruce and a schoolmate he dislikes go on an expedition to the West Indies to recover diamonds lost during the war. During their exciting adventures Bruce learns to know Roscoe better.

"Good yarn."
+ Kirkus 17:552 O 1 '49 90w

"Plot seems contrived and characters never come alive. Not recommended." R. O. Bostwick
— Library J 75:52 Ja 1 '50 80w

"Swift-moving, packed with action, recommended for boys 10-12." G. E. Cartmell
+ Library J 75:52 Ja 1 '50 70w

"Despite some doubtful seamanship this is a moving yarn certain to hold the attention of 8 to 11-year-old boys. Striking illustrations add to the interest of the story." Felix Riesenberg, jr.
+ — N Y Times p11 D 25 '49 150w

NELSON, CHOLMONDELEY M. Barren harvest. 188p $2.25 Doubleday 49-4431

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Jl 1 '49 130w

"Sustained, if sober."
Kirkus 17:219 Ap 15 '49 90w

"This example of the suspense technique is hardly for advanced students, since its points are telegraphed far ahead. What remains is a peculiar sort of pother reminiscent of Stephen Leacock in top form, if you see what we mean. But we don't think it was written for laughs." Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Jl 3 '49 140w

"The London scene is drab and the story is grim, but there is a horrible fascination about it all." Elizabeth Bullock
N Y Times p14 Jl 10 '49 90w

NELSON, HUGH LAWRENCE. Dark echo. 216p $2.50 Rinehart
49-7559

Detective story.

"The manner of this is ingratiating but its effect as a story is intermittent and talkative. Its characters have so temporary a vitality that separating them is unreasonable exercise." James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Mr 4 '49 50w
Kirkus 17:15 Ja 1 '49 70w

"Three-barreled Mr. Nelson swings a readable enough puzzle, goofy in spots." Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Mr 6 '49 140w
N Y Times p32 F 27 '49 50w

NELSON, HUGH LAWRENCE. Ring the bell at zero. 245p $2.50 Rinehart 49-5741

Detective story.

"Trying pretty hard, all this proves is that A for effort is not enough."
Kirkus 17:376 Jl 15 '49 60w
N Y Times p39 O 2 '49 240w
— Sat R of Lit 32:61 N 19 '49 40w

NELSON, JOSEPH. Backwoods teacher. 288p $3 Lippincott

B or 92 Teachers—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 49-10524

"Joseph Nelson got the school at Big Piney in the days of plowed-under cotton and murdered little pigs. . . In the Ozark hills, where the Nelsons spent the year of which he writes, the old cradles with which men had cut wheat in little patches and the looms on which cotton had been spun had been relegated to the barns. . . The people and their ways and the hills in which they lived are the substance of this tranquil story of months in which the Nelsons found contentment, 'at least for a few moments at a time, and that is perhaps as much as man can hope for in this existence.' "
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Booklist 46:24; 62 S 15 '49; O 15 '49
Bookmark 9:28 N '49 30w

"How Joseph Nelson and his wife become a part of Big Piney is a lively story, full of warmth and adventure; written in the vernacular, it carries with it the racy flavor of a remote countryside." Elizabeth Yates
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 29 '49 550w

" 'Backwoods Teacher' is a quietly satisfying book, both as a picture of a place and a way of life and as an account of teaching that people far from the backwoods might be happy to have for their children." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 O 16 '49 500w

"Mr. Nelson neither distorts nor ridicules; he sees the world around him not with the eyes of a social worker or the hasty note-taking glances of a rubberneck writer in search of storybook material, but as one man looking at other men. . . Not the least of the characters are the Nelsons themselves; we hear a lot about the author's wonderful wife, Sally, and are always with the author when he is teaching or performing some one of his many duties such as decorating the schoolhouse for the box supper or taking his cow to the 'brute,' but so skilfully are they kept in the background that after finishing the book it is hard to believe it was told in the first person." H. S. Arnow
+ Sat R of Lit 32:15 D 10 '49 850w
Springf'd Republican p8C O 30 '49 210w

"Interesting all the way, would be good reading for rural teachers especially. Recommended."
+ Wis Lib Bul p9 D '49

NELSON, LOWRY. Rural sociology. 567p il maps $4.75 Am. bk.
323.354 Sociology, Rural 48-1404

"In developing this introductory text, the author, who is professor of sociology at the University of Minnesota, views rural sociology 'as the description and analysis of rural institutions and groups.' He eschews the interpretation of rural sociology as 'applied sociology,' and considers the field as a science in itself, not simply the application of social science to the improvement of rural life. As a scientist, the rural sociologist 'is interested only in understanding.' It is 'as a member of society' that he 'is interested in human betterment and therefore in the application of his scientific research to the welfare of the community.' " Ann Am Acad

"This adequate text in rural sociology covers the field as traditionally outlined in similar works and is properly illustrated; footnoted, and supplied with supplementary questions and a classified bibliography for further reading. It will sell well and redound to the credit of its distinguished author and its publisher." C. C. Zimmerman
+ Am J Soc 54:574 My '49 750w

"In the opinion of the reviewer, the author presents one of the very best texts yet written for a beginning course in rural sociology. The treatment strives for objectivity; the style is readable and interesting; the format is attractive; and statistics are usually held in subordination to description and analysis. The contents are well balanced in proportionate emphasis, and the fundamental things that should be in an introductory rural sociological text are pretty well all there. It would seem safe to predict that the book will meet with the wide and favorable reception it well deserves." Wilson Gee

NELSON, LOWRY—Continued
+ Ann Am Acad 262:244 Mr '49 360w
Social Studies 40:144 Mr '49 20w

NELSON, WILBUR LUNDINE. Petroleum refinery engineering. 3d ed 830p $9 McGraw 665.5 Petroleum refining 49-5152

"The author says this edition is completely rewritten; new methods and processes developed during the war have been added. Chapters on basic chemical engineering have been omitted." (Booklist) For earlier editions see Book Review Digest 1936, 1942.

Booklist 46:67 O 15 '49

"The book is highly recommended as the sole manual in the book market covering the field of petroleum chemical engineering." V. L. Shipp
+ Chem & Eng N 27:3440 N 14 '49 300w

"The new third edition is recommended as a text in the study of refinery engineering and as a reference book for engineers in the refining industry. From the textbook standpoint the organization of the book for the logical development of the subject for students can not be considered ideal. However, this becomes a minor consideration in the light of the quantity and value of subject material contained." M. Van Winkle
+ Chem Eng 56:244 N '49 260w
N Y New Tech Bks 34:74 S '49

NEMEROV, HOWARD. The melodramatists. 338p $3 Random house
49-8180

"The Boyne family, consisting of a father and mother, two daughters and a son, represents a group unable to face reality, and this weakness is the cause of their sad undoing. Father loses his mind, the son escapes his wife by joining the RCAF, one daughter dabbles in sex and her sister dabbles in religion." (Library J) The scene is Boston.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 183:89 Je '49 750w

"A generally unattractive account which might—in its cerebral cleverness—qualify for a few."
Kirkus 17:67 F 1 '49 160w

"Apparently an attempt to contrast the empirical with the pragmatic in modern life, the whole wordy story is unwholesome, unreal and confused. Not recommended." Donald Wasson
— Library J 74:377 Mr 1 '49 80w

"After a poor start, whose shallow and mechanical humor seems designed to capture an easy audience, 'The Melodramatists' develops into a considerable first novel—literate and entertaining, with a nice satiric barb." Diana Trilling
+ — Nation 168:537 My 7 '49 1000w

"The Melodramatists combines religion and sexual promiscuity in a bizarre plot involving bishops, psychiatrists and prostitutes. It is lively, here and there, but at the cost of excessive demands on the reader's credulity." John Farrelly
New Repub 120:26 My 9 '49 140w

"If Mr. Nemerov had accepted the invitation to satire which he so temptingly extends to himself in the first thirty-odd witty pages of his 'The Melodramatists' we might have had a ribald, rib-tickling, satirical novel about decadence among the modern Boston Brahmins. But very shortly Mr. Nemerov kicks anything so sedate as satire out from under, and goes off the deep end into an extravaganza which in its giddy lubricity has all the flamboyance of Suetonius's 'Lives of the Caesars' " F. H. Bullock
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ap 3 '49 600w

" 'The Melodramatists' differs from the run-of-the-mill first novel in being quite perfectly written and in being managed (after a slow start) with technical assurance. . . The novel depends on amusing concatenation of circumstances, on shock and surprise, as much as it depends on the somber theme. Mr. Nemerov's verbal wit is always satisfactory, and it is pleasant to find a satirist in an early state, with his faculty for irreverence not yet impaired by his immersion in the Ghagavad-Gita." Herbert Barrows
+ N Y Times p4 Ap 3 '49 440w

"The writing is sometimes witty, sometimes densely cryptic, and sometimes warmed-over Huxley. The characters, however, lack the sprightliness of that master's."
New Yorker 25:120 Ap 6 '49 150w
San Francisco Chronicle p24 Je 5 '49 250w

" 'The Melodramatists' is true satire, written in the spirit of comedy, and it deals with sacred and profane love in terms that are not unfamiliar to the readers of many modern novels. Mr. Nemerov perhaps discourses sometimes at too great length on his store of knowledge of almost everything from music to religious literature and black magic. But his display of verbal fireworks, or mental gymnastics, if you please, cannot disguise the essential humanity and brilliance of this book." Harrison Smith
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:17 Ap 2 '49 750w

NEMMERS, ERWIN ESSER. Twenty centuries of Catholic church music. 213p il $4 Bruce pub.
783 Church music—Roman Catholic church 49-1798

"Gives the history and principles of Catholic liturgical music from the fourth century A.D. Assumes no particular knowledge of music and no greater information about the liturgy than the average Catholic has. Includes early, modern, organ, and American church music, Gregorian chant, and polyphony. Scholarly bibliographies; Catholic point of view." Booklist

Booklist 45:278 Ap 15 '49

"Here is a useful summary of a subject of wide interest, the work of a musically trained lay enthusiast. Not scholarly survey but a brief resume of the facts as presented by some of the standard literature. . . On the level of the reader to whom it is addressed, it is a fine work." Leonard Burkat
+ Library J 74:498 Mr 15 '49 70w

"Written by a young lawyer of Milwaukee with an array of bachelor's and master's degrees in aeronautical engineering, arts, law, and music, this book is a waste of money to the purchaser, of time to the reader." Leonard Ellinwood
— Music Lib Assn Notes 6:470 Je '49 550w

Reviewed by Roland Gelatt
Sat R of Lit 32:31 Je 25 '49 70w

NESS, FRED C. Practical dope on the big bores. 436p il $5 Stackpole & Heck 623.442 Rifles. Cartridges 49-7163

Handbook on large caliber rifles and ammunition. The information includes history, development, and general characteristics. Parts of the material appeared in the American Rifleman. Indexes.

Booklist 45:222 Mr 1 '49
Kirkus 17:20 Ja 1 '49 130w

"An excellent, technical handbook." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:379 Mr 1 '49 10w

"There are people in every community who will find this book valuable." Julian Sohon
+ Library J 74:553 Ap 1 '49 30w

NETTL, PAUL. Book of musical documents. 381p il $5 Philosophical lib.

780.82 Music 48-9520

"A collection of small snatches from the literature of music history, with emphasis on the period from 1750 on, and arranged in more or less chronological order. There are quotations from both early and modern writers on music, from composers' letters and diaries, and from various contemporary accounts of historic events and personages." (Music Lib Assn Notes) Indexes.

"The idea is a good one and we owe the author a small debt of gratitude for making this body of material available in fair English. . . Good though there is in the book and excellent as is its idea, this unfortunately is not 'the' book of musical documents for which we've been waiting—the book which would be to the history of music what the Norton Readers are to the literatures of the composers they document." Leonard Burkat

+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 6:312 Mr '49 900w

"The selection of material would seem a bit too flighty for standard reference purposes, but for idle reading it is excellently contrived. A book designed for browsing, however, should be typographically appetizing. This one is quite the opposite." Roland Gelatt

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:62 Ja 29 '49 60w

NETTL, PAUL. The violet; the history of a song. $7.50 Storm

784 Mozart, Johann Chrysostom Wolfgang Amadeus

"A tiny masterpiece, isolated from the vast panorama of Mozart's creative life, is placed under the microscope in this book. The poem, 'Das Veilchen,' written by Goethe in 1775 for one of his dramatic works, the Singspiel 'Erwin und Elmire,' attracted the efforts of a score of composers before Mozart provided it with his musical setting a decade later. . . The book contains a text of the poem in German and English; an actual-size facsimile of the original manuscript of 1785; silhouettes of Goethe and Mozart against a violet background. Everything concerning the poem and its many settings is painstakingly recorded by Dr. Nettl." N Y Times

"For most libraries, a luxury item." C. K. Miller

Library J 74:498 Mr 15 '49 60w

"The editor, has amassed an abundance of materials toward the history of Goethe's poem and Mozart's setting. The best and most original contribution is the paragraph on the development of German song in Vienna. A welcome addition is the facsimile of the first edition, which allows comparison with Mozart's manuscript. Certain changes indicate that Mozart himself corrected Artaria's publication—but very carelessly, as usual. . . The edition is not without slight slips from beauty." Alfred Einstein

+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 6:462 Je '49 650w

Reviewed by B. H. Haggin

Nation 169:68 Jl 16 '49 90w

"At first, one might question the wisdom of devoting an entire book to such a miniature. This impression is quickly dispelled. The author has brought us closer to Mozart, the man and artist." H. G. Lawrence

+ N Y Times p13 Je 12 '49 360w

"One of the handsomest volumes to have come our way in some time. . . The typography, the paper, the binding—everything is sumptuous and of exquisite taste. If anything, the largess is a bit too bountiful for so minute a subject." Roland Gelatt

Sat R of Lit 32:32 Je 25 '49 110w

NEUGASS, JAMES. Rain of ashes. 327p $3 Harper

49-9440

A story of the gradual disintegration and ultimate failure of a once powerful New Orleans family. The time is just before and during the first World war.

Kirkus 17:217 Ap 15 '49 150w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor

Library J 74:956 Je 15 '49 80w

"Only when the author moves Charles and household north to New York, shaking his heels free of marinated artichokes and dynastic hokum, does the story begin to take on recognizable human proportions. James Neugass is gifted with a rich and distinctive style, but he has written the story of a family; and families are interesting only if the people who compose them are interesting." Richard Match

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 3 '49 850w

"Apparently a first novel, 'Rain of Ashes' has a ripely cynical flavor, a tart contrast to the perfumed romance prevalent in most fiction about New Orleans gentry. The author, born in New Orleans, has followed so many trades and professions—including short-story writing—that he can pour on piquant detail to enliven any facet of his story—from the Blue Book of New Orleans bordellos to the elaborate practical joking of members of the New York Stock Exchange. An entertaining book and a satiric one, 'Rain of Ashes' showers no magnolias on the Deep South." Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p5 Jl 3 '49 500w

"The plot is diffuse and the style often as ornate as a Bourbon Street façade, but they serve as fitting embellishment for the tolerant, complete characterizations."

New Yorker 25:84 Je 25 '49 160w

"Mr. Neugass has, unfortunately, more descriptive skill than restraint, more gusto than precision. Often his words leap into pyrotechnic displays of virtuosity which are sometimes—but not always—wonderful. One feels, however, that these are manifestations of self-indulgence rather than good craftsmanship." Ruth Teiser

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 27 '49 900w

"It is not a pretty spectacle, very much like some lush and overripe plant, uprooted, shriveling, strangling itself in a last violent display. There is action, excitement, a constant seething—and yet the whole effect is one of spottiness, probably because there is no pattern either visible or revealed. We pass through this history as through a room of horrors in a wax museum. . . I think the writer had something like 'The Little Foxes' in mind. He has more than matched that drama's atmosphere, without making its point." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 32:22 Je 25 '49 470w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p9B Ag 21 '49 180w

NEUMEYER, MARTIN HENRY. Juvenile delinquency in modern society. 335p $3.75 Van Nostrand

364.36 Juvenile delinquency 49-1199

"[This book] represents an effort to coordinate the literature on delinquency in recent years with earlier materials which, in the author's judgment, have contemporary relevance. The author states in his prefatory remarks that he makes no attempt to issue a 'system' of juvenile delinquency. Rather he employs the usual conceptional framework. Part I is devoted to juvenile delinquency in the general context of social problems. . . Part II presents the etiology and correlations of the problem, and Part III is a discussion of delinquency control." (Am Soc R) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"If the instructor can compensate for [certain] limitations, he will find that the book meets his students' basic reading needs in a delinquency course." M. L. Barron

+ — Am Soc R 14:697 O '49 300w

NEUMEYER, M. H.—Continued

"This volume should serve as a healthy corrective to some of the popular and oversimplified conceptions of delinquency which have blocked progress in finding a solution of the problem." L. H. Blumenthal

+ Survey 85:339 Je '49 300w

NEUMEYER, MARTIN HENRY, and NEUMEYER, MRS ESTHER (STERNBERG). Leisure and recreation; a study of leisure and recreation in their sociological aspects. rev ed 411p $4.50 Barnes, A.S.

790 Leisure. Recreation 49-8054

"In this revision, the material has been brought up to date; the order of chapters has been changed to follow a more logical sequence of topics; the discussions of the development of leisure, the recreation movement, and the conditioning factors have been brought together and are presented in the early part of the book; and the materials of the other chapters have been organized in a more systematic way, with more attention given to the group aspects of leisure and recreation and less space devoted to the theories of play and recreation than in the earlier edition [Book Review Digest 1936]." (Pref) Index.

"A valuable discussion of war and post-war developments in leisure and recreation has been added, as well as new material concerning the development of social group work. The book concludes with an expanded chapter concerning research in this field."

+ Am Soc R 14:702 O '49 100w

Booklist 45:358 Je 15 '49

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 74:379 Mr 1 '49 30w

School & Society 70:16 Jl 2 '49 20w

NEURATH, MARIE. If you could see inside. 32p 32il $1.50 Chanticleer

500 Science—Juvenile literature 49-10542

Simple illustrations and brief text describe the insides of such things as volcanoes, coal mines, windmills, houses, lighthouses, wasps nests, and eggs. For ages six to eight.

"Simple explanations of unseen wonders of everyday, well done in understandable text and diagram-like drawings in 3 colors. But it is a difficult book to use with just any child, as there is no real focus of thought, and the interest levels are so different that the whole seems a bit haphazard."

+ — Kirkus 17:357 Jl 15 '49 90w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

Library J 74:1106 Ag '49 30w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 7 '49 100w

"A fascinating collection of cross-sections. . . The illustrations are diagrammatic in their clarity, fascinating in detail and appealing in their crisp modern style." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p19 Jl 31 '49 70w

NEURATH, MARIE. I'll show you how it happens. 32p 32il $1.50 Chanticleer

500 Science—Juvenile literature 49-10543

Answers to questions often asked by young children: about steam locomotives, canal locks, flower bulbs, water that springs from the earth, etc.

"The presentations are good, but there seems no central thought, no core to the idea, and the result seems a hodgepodge."

Kirkus 17:357 Jl 15 '49 90w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

Library J 74:1106 Ag '49 40w

"In both books, the big pictures are uncluttered, in spite of their many details, and the reproduction is excellent. Their dignity and economy of line will appeal to the eyes of the not so very young. Sturdy cloth bindings will be a help, for in the many homes where that eternally questioning age has arrived, they will have hard use." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 7 '49 100w

N Y Times p19 Jl 31 '49 90w

NEVILLE, MARGOT, pseud. of MARGOT GOYDER and NEVILLE (GOYDER) JOSKE. Murder in a blue moon. 188p $2.25 Doubleday

49-8966

Detective story.

"A succession of corpses and an infusion of mild eccentricity lend neither credibility nor vitality to the proceedings or to the people engaged in them. When they bleed they bleed ink." James Sandoe

— Chicago Sun Je 10 '49 80w

Kirkus 17:161 My 15 '49 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Je 26 '49 90w

— N Y Times p9 My 29 '49 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

— San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 17 '49 60w

NEVIN, CHARLES MERRICK. Principles of structural geology. 4th ed 410p il maps $6 Wiley

551.8 Geology 49-3677

"A standard college textbook which is noted for its discussions of the deformations of the earth which form the subject matter of dynamic and structural geology. Because it is brief and because the language is semi-technical, the book is also suitable for some general readers who are more than superficially interested in the subject. The most prominent change in the present edition is the addition of the section of laboratory exercises near the end of the book, but the whole work has been revised and the type has been reset." (N Y New Tech Bks) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1932.

"The subject of structural geology is immense; and entirely adequate descriptions and discussions of every subject would expand a textbook so much that its cost would be prohibitive. Within the limitations drawn by cost and scope, Nevin's book, we believe, is one of the best." R. B.

+ J Geol 58:89 Ja '50 1400w

"It is a good book to have around when readers want to know, for example, how mountains were formed, or what causes earthquakes. There are significant changes in this edition but not enough to justify the discarding of the third edition if the main use of the book in the library is occasional reference." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 74:1331 S 15 '49 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:55 Jl '49

NEW HAMPSHIRE. University. Writers' conference. See Writers' conference, University of New Hampshire

NEW YORK (city). Public library. Stories: a list of stories to tell and to read aloud; alphabetically arranged, followed by a subject index; comp. by Eulalie Steinmetz. 4th ed 99p pa 75c The library

028.5 Children's stories—Bibliography

"This newly revised list now contains titles of 730 stories. It is based on the work of storytelling in the New York City library, . . The large number of stories is presented alphabetically by title, with reference to the book from which each is taken and a very brief description. Complete books are included as well as separate stories, many books being of a sort to be read aloud, or to be introduced for home reading. Picture books also are included. But the main part of the list consists of titles of single tales selected for their value in oral telling. These are reclassified at the end under: Folk tales, by their countries; Heroes; and Festivals and Fête Days. The list is obviously chiefly intended for use by professionals." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"This is a revision of earlier editions of a splendid list. It has an excellent subject index. . . A very useful leaflet." F. C. Darling
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 14 '49 110w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 S 11 '49 250w

Wis Lib Bul 45:109 Je '49

NEW YORK ACADEMY OF MEDICINE. Perspectives in medicine; the march of medicine, 1948. (Lectures to the laity) 163p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

610.4 Medicine (40-13017)

Contents: The atom in civil life, by L. L. Strauss; Food and civilization, by Raphael Cilento; On being old too young, by E. J. Stieglitz; Perspectives in cancer research, by C. P. Rhoads; Psychiatry for everyday needs, by W. C. Menninger; The inter-relation of pure and applied science in the field of medicine, by J. B. Conant. Index.

"On the whole, these lectures represent a very good adjustment of the story in these technical fields to the vocabulary of the intelligent reader. The Academy is to be congratulated on this edition of the series." R. M. Atwater
+ Am J Pub Health 39:942 Jl '49 190w

"Unusually stimulating for a book of lectures."
+ Nation 169:190 Ag 20 '49 90w

Reviewed by L. J. Warshaw
N Y Times p23 Ap 24 '49 230w

Survey 85:287 My '49 40w

NEW YORK SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK. Social work as human relations; anniversary papers of the New York school of social work and the Community service society of New York. 288p $3.75 Columbia univ. press

361 Social work 49-9714

"Divided into two general categories of 'planning and training,' the papers in this 2d anniversary volume draw the broad outlines of ways and means of helping people in today's world." (School & Society) Index of articles and contributing authors.

"Educators, practitioners, board members, and administrators may well give heed to this volume, as it marks a broader way in the century that lies ahead." A. E. Fink
+ Ann Am Acad 266:242 N '49 550w

Reviewed by Oscar Handlin
N Y Times p25 Ag 21 '49 300w

School & Society 70:16 Jl 2 '49 50w

NEW YORKER (periodical). 55 short stories [1940-1950]. 480p $4 Simon & Schuster

Short stories—Collections 49-11777

"A twenty-fifth anniversary volume of stories that have appeared in the magazine during the past decade 1940 to 1950. . . It is a companion volume to Short Stories from The New Yorker [Book Review Digest 1940], a similar collection published in 1940, covering the first fifteen years of The New Yorker." (Publisher's note) Index.

Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 N 20 '49 240w

"I can think of no single volume of short stories which could better satisfy for both reading pleasure and literary quality."
+ Kirkus 17:408 Ag 1 '49 190w

"In an ideal anniversary volume, the cartoons and regular features, not the stories, would represent the New Yorker's achievement. Insofar as they do represent it, the stories are its weakest element. A high standard of excellence is claimed for them; a high surface polish they generally achieve. A few of the most accomplished of American writers do publish in its pages, but their best work consistently finds its way somewhere else."
— New Repub 121:20 N 7 '49 270w

"'55 Short Stories from the New Yorker' can be recommended not only for value and entertainment but for its apt solution of a problem which even in the atomic age (thank goodness) has always to be faced as December approaches." James Hilton
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 20 '49 800w

"Where are the best short stories appearing today? The answer would be, I think, that they are appearing in the pages of Thursday's child, The New Yorker." Charles Poore
+ N Y Times p4 O 23 '49 800w

"If one quality were to dominate them all I think it would be that of a kind of impeccable taste. Each is a well groomed, a finished and appropriate thing for what it is. They have no jarring notes. There is not a New Yorker style, but it does seem true that there is a kind of New Yorker polish." Hollis Alpert
+ Sat R of Lit 32:15 N 12 '49 800w

Springf'd Republican p8C N 27 '49 190w

"A generous and highly entertaining sample of the fiction which has appeared in the New Yorker over the last ten years. The reader's first reaction is that the volume has much greater variety than he might have supposed, considering the fact that for many people The New Yorker has come to represent a particular way of looking at the world. But as one reads and rereads these stories, one realizes that the variety lies within fairly narrow limits, and that after all a rather special flavor permeates the collection, if not every story in it. It is easier to recognize the flavor than to describe it." Paul Pickrel
+ — Yale R n s 39:381 winter '50 650w

NEWBIGIN, J. E. LESSLIE, bp. Reunion of the church; a defence of the South India scheme. 192p $3 Harper

280 Church of South India. Church unity 49-8657

"The author, well known in the circles of ecumenical thought and action, sets before himself two distinct though related objectives; first, to depict the nature of the church and of its unity and continuity, and to make clear the basis upon which actual union must be achieved; second, to explain and defend the South India scheme, which is now more than a 'scheme,' since the Church of South India (embracing Anglican, Lutheran, Methodist, Presbyterian, Congregational, Baptist and Syrian elements) formally came into existence on September 27, 1947." (Christian Century) Index.

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 66:528 Ap 27 '49 1500w

"The book is most heartening in that it shows what men of Christian heart and mind can accomplish if they have the will. It is also of supreme value as a guide to those who in other parts of the world are groping towards the same goal." J. H. Titus
+ Churchman 163:18 S 1 '49 150w

Reviewed by G. W. Briggs
Churchman 164:16 Ja 1 '50 550w

Reviewed by H. P. Van Dusen
Crozer Q 27:66 Ja '50 1100w

"This is a volume which needs to be widely read and pondered in this country where the need of a comparable movement is so potent and often so desperate. To be recommended to clergymen and other church leaders of all denominations. With India still newsworthy, there is an added market to be explored."
+ Kirkus 17:295 Je 15 '49 190w

NEWHALL, BEAUMONT. History of photography from 1839 to the present day. 256p il $5 Museum of modern art

770.9 Photography—History 49-9566

"Begun as an illustrated catalog of the exhibition Photography, 1839-1937 . . . organized for the Museum of Modern Art in 1937. In 1938 the text and illustrations were reprinted, with minor revisions, as Photography: A Short Critical History. The present text . . . based on this earlier research, has been entirely rewritten and a new selection of illustrations has been made." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

"Beaumont Newhall has done an excellent job of telescoping what is really a very large subject into a complete and compact volume. 'The History of Photography' is a surprising book and a wonderfully exciting one, which gives the esthetic as well as the factual side of photography's development. It's a 'must' for my own bookshelf." Margaret Bourke-White

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 10 '49 950w

"Newhall's work was done on a Guggenheim fellowship, and handsomely produced by The Museum of Modern Art. With such non-commercial sponsorship, he might easily have written a volume of esoteric criticism of no great value to the general reader. Instead he has succeeded in making his text both interesting and easily absorbed. Supported by 163 plates it should convince a great many skeptical people that photography is an art, after all." Vance Bourjaily

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 4 '49 650w

"So much beauty, so much solid (as well as curious) information, so much intelligence in the arrangement of essential facts have gone into the making of this book that it would be difficult to praise it too highly. It takes its place at once as the best compact history of photography in existence, for Mr. Newhall, who was formerly curator of photography at the Museum of Modern Art in New York and is now in charge of the collections at Eastman House in Rochester, knows this subject as well as any man living. . . It is customary, in reviewing books about photography, to remark that the pictures are wonderful. The ones in this book are, but the text is even better." Roger Butterfield

+ Sat R of Lit 32:30 S 3 '49 800w

NEWHOUSE, EDWARD. Hollow of the wave. 318p $3.50 Sloane

49-7021

"New York, and the publishing house of Larry Holland (largely given over to the left bank) backgrounds the experiences of Neil Miller, another young man of good will and lost bearings." Kirkus

"The Hollow of the Wave is written with feeling, restraint, and a pleasing integrity. It has no comment of great consequence to make—the theme is reported, not really explored—but what it does say is intelligent and very readable. The author's publisher has given him the benefit of an outstanding job of bookmaking." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 183:86 F '49 650w

"The author handles his material with such authority and enunciates some of the problems facing the world today with such mature perspective that readers may be tempted to put up with the unsavory characters to learn what if any solution he has to offer. This would be a mistake. By the end of the book the two fighting liberal 'heroes' (courtesy title), apparently with the author's blessing, have renounced all further efforts to bring order out of chaos and have reenlisted in the Army which attracts them as being the one place where a man can evade responsibility without feeling a sense of guilt."

— Cath World 168:495 Mr '49 210w

"In reading 'The Hollow of the Wave' one is tempted to remind the author that to talk casually of Picasso, Matisse, Kuniyoshi or 'War and Peace' is hardly a proof of intellectualism. It often can be, and appears to be in this case, mere 'name dropping.' If this book is accepted as a romantic novel, sprinkled with the brittle witticisms of New York-type characters, it can be considered rather entertaining. But it cannot seriously be accepted as a study of today's world. Its characters are too superficial and its solution. . . Well, were you ever in the army?" F. M.

— + Chicago Sun p8X F 6 '49 230w

"Technically and artistically, this is an expert and intelligent book. But as a statement of intrinsic values, it is a sick commentary and has none of the healing catharsis for which, one suspects, Mr. Newhouse was searching."

— + Christian Science Monitor p11 F 10 '49 330w

"The Hollow of the Wave would appear, at first, to be another un-smart 'Huckster' novel, but actually Edward Newhouse has done more than just maneuver types; he has given his drinking, wenching, soap-boxing characters a certain three-dimensional validity, weak and/or rotten as they may be. Anyhow, everyone has a dream of belonging to someone or to some place. Like many another Manhattan-set novel, The Hollow of the Wave is a bit of a phony because it trumpets the same old moan on the same worn note—the hopeless rot of the cosmopolitan way of life." Elizabeth Johnson

— + Commonweal 49:330 Ja 7 '49 420w

"Even in the face of particular publisher enthusiasm, this is still for more sophisticated, selective tastes."

Kirkus 16:643 D 15 '48 180w

"As a story it has little to offer of novelty or entertainment. Not recommended." J. E. Cross

— Library J 74:60 Ja 1 '49 80w

"Because Edward Newhouse's 'The Hollow of the Wave' wears no air of importance but only an air of decent pride, is entirely understandable and even lively, it must be singled out from the run of current fiction: these are rare, if relative, virtues. I can add that it is some time since I have read a novel whose author comes through his prose and his people so attractively. Even where Mr. Newhouse's manner is less than salient and his characters far less dimensional than they should be, we see the former fault as a defect of modesty and the latter as a defect of kindliness. . . Despite its oversimplified thinking, his novel is such nice civilized company." Diana Trilling

+ — Nation 168:162 F 5 '49 700w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

— New Repub 120:26 Mr 7 '49 260w

" 'The Hollow of the Wave' is not so extravagantly contemporary as to deal with the leaks into microfilm of our State Department's secret documents. But it does offer an excellent and interestingly circumstantial account of the precise process by which one New York publishing house was quietly taken over by the Communists and fellow travelers during the war and made a perfect tool for the dissemination of books propagandizing the party line. . . A puzzling and unusual novel. Written with that ease of style which conceals great skill, and apparently purposeful, it nevertheless leaves the reader—or at least this reader—somewhat baffled concerning its intent." F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ja 23 '49 750w

"Mr. Newhouse, who has done some good stories for The New Yorker, writes his novel in the style of the middle-brow novelists—a style, he implies, that can be called 'tough and sensitive.' Important and unimportant themes are handled with equal glibness, pathos and condescension." I. A. Sanes

N Y Times p14 Ja 23 '49 700w

New Yorker 24:66 Ja 29 '49 230w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 8 '49 750w

"This new book is a disappointment." John Woodburn

— Sat R of Lit 32:28 Mr 12 '49 650w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p18A Mr 27 '49 180w

"The Hollow of the Wave fails to explain the social dilemma of its drifting characters and falls equally short of lighting up the sources of their individual despair. Even the Communists' victory over a bewildered liberal seems of no more interest to Author Newhouse than it does to his hero, who acts as if he expected defeat all along and manages to shrug it off. Having dived from his old Marxist crest, Novelist Newhouse himself seems still to be washing about in the hollow of the wave."
— Time 53:76 Ja 31 '49 400w

NEWMAN, ERNEST. Wagner operas [Eng title: Wagner nights]. 724p $5.85 Knopf

782.2 Wagner, Richard 49-11607

"Studies in detail not only the scores, but the folklore and legends upon which Wagner drew for his librettos. It contains 550 musical examples covering the principal works of his maturity, from 'The Flying Dutchman' to 'Parsifal.' It sheds light upon many dark corners of the Mythical Wagnerian realms. . . What we have is a thorough investigation and report on Wagner's sources and his method of composition. The legends of 'The Flying Dutchman,' 'Tristan,' and the 'Meistersinger' are traced from their remote origins and their wide variations. It is the same with 'Lohengrin,' 'Tannhäuser,' and the 'Ring.'" (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

Booklist 46:139 D 15 '49

Reviewed by Edward Barry
Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 Ja 15 '50 250w

"A compendium of vast learning. . . It may be that the results of the research will seem to some to offer a plethora of information. But Wagner enthusiasts perhaps will read every line. Certainly they will pay close attention to the growth of his musical conceptions as Newman presents them." L. A. Sloper
+ Christian Science Monitor p15 N 10 '49 350w

"A book for close students of the scores, for listeners who want to share Newman's own determination to get from the operas that last ounce of what went into their creation. Special market."
Kirkus 17:455 Ag 15 '49 130w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller
Library J 74:1907 D 15 '49 100w

"Mr. Newman, being human, seems occasionally to err on the side of Wagner worship while striving to be wholly objective, but it is equally true that few biographers examine their subjects as critically as he. His contributions are substantial and inimitable. . . The author and publisher together will be rendering a real service, both to Wagner and to operatic scholarship, if they will agree to ignore practicality for about 100 pages and produce at least a modest brochure on the composer's first three stage works. Then Wagnerians will owe even more gratitude to Ernest Newman than they do now." E. N. Waters
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 7:102 D '49 1300w

"The present work surveys the masterpieces of Wagner from 'The Flying Dutchman' to 'Parsifal,' and does so with the same unfailing comprehension, generosity and wisdom." Vincent Sheean
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ja 1 '50 850w

"The profuse thematic illustrations are very useful, as also Newman's caution to readers not to take literally and exactly the names which officious commentators have given these various themes, or the explanations they have furnished of their 'meanings.' All this, to the Wagnerite, perfect or imperfect, is most informing and suggestive reading." Olin Downes
+ N Y Times p44 N 13 '49 1150w

"The great Wagnerian authority and music critic of the London Sunday Times, has produced another definitive and highly readable work that is certain to share in the enthusiastic critical acclaim which greeted his monumental biography of Richard Wagner."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p30 N 27 '49 480w

"With the recent publication in Germany of Wagner's complete prose sketches for the 'Ring,' the need of a fresh appraisal arose. This is fulfilled in Ernest Newman's latest addition to the vast body of critical writing on the tetralogy. Though the final volume of his 'Life of Richard Wagner' aroused the fear that his flair for sifting wheat from chaff might have dulled, 'The Wagner Operas'—which includes his rewritten studies of the rest of the Wagnerian oeuvre—gives complete reassurance on that account." K. O. Hoover
+ Sat R of Lit 32:64 N 26 '49 750w

NEWMAN, JOHN HENRY, cardinal. Essay on the development of Christian doctrine. 456p $3.50 Longmans

230 Theology. Roman Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works 49-10655

"New edition of work having final form in 1878, edited by Charles Frederick Harrold. Considered one of the most influential of Newman's works. In addition to being a treatise on Church history and theology it explained to himself and to the world why he was on the eve of joining the Catholic Church." Library J

"One of the most important volumes of a definitive new edition of the works of Cardinal Newman."
+ Commonweal 51:248 D 2 '49 20w

"A great classic for Protestant and Catholic readers but of special interest to theologians." O. G. Lawson
+ Library J 74:1197 S 1 '49 130w

NEWMAN, JOHN HENRY, cardinal. Sermons and discourses; new ed, ed. with a pref. and introd. by Charles Frederick Harrold. 2v 348;382p ea $3.50 Longmans

252 Sermons 49-7580

"These two volumes represent the latest additions to 'The Works of John Henry Newman' which is being published under the editorship of Professor Harrold of Ohio State University. . . [They] not only enable the reader to trace the development of Newman's religious thought from Anglicanism to Roman Catholicism, they also reveal Newman's greatness of mind and soul, which have led Protestants and Catholics alike to regard him as the greatest religious figure of the last four centuries. The sermons, themselves, are carefully selected so as to reveal not only the progress of Newman's religious thinking, but the timeless depth and beauty of his messages. . . Volume II gives sermons preached during the time of his great soul struggle and after he became a Catholic." (Kirkus) Indexes.

Christian Century 66:498 Ap 20 '49 210w

"Every library that reserves space for religious books should have the complete set of Newman's works (20 volumes, when completed). For those to whom the entire set is out of reach, these two volumes, plus his Apologia Pro Vita Sua, should have top priority."
+ Kirkus 17:140 Mr 15 '49 220w

"There are no changes in text except in obvious cases of misprint. Greater than the tribute of having his sermons published or reprinted during his lifetime is the honor paid to a man when sermons are reprinted many years after his death. . . Those who appreciate Newman's writing will welcome this new edition." O. G. Lawson
+ Library J 74:125 Ja 15 '49 130w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 32:38 Mr 26 '49 140w

NEWTON, EARLE WILLIAMS. Vermont story; a history of the people of the Green Mountain state, 1749-1949; with a foreword by Allan Nevins, and an introd. by Dorothy Canfield Fisher. (American states ser) 281p il col pl maps $7.50 Vt. hist. soc.

974.3 Vermont—History 49-9803

Pictorial history of the state of Vermont by the director of the Vermont historical society.

NEWTON, E. W.—Continued
The volume is the first in a series of state histories. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Thomas Bassett
Am Hist R 55:232 O '49 320w

"That the pictures are drawn from many sources, including national magazines and national advertisers, does not detract from their effectiveness; surely never before have so many and on the whole such good pictures of Vermont appeared in one volume, and Mr. Newton's fine running text is in danger of being ignored. Let him who looks also read, and he will have learned a great deal about Vermont and had an enjoyable time of it. If the other forty-seven states can hold to the standard set by this volume then the series will be a notable one indeed." Stewart Holbrook
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Jl 10 '49 650w

"Mr. Newton covers all this ground and more, packing his State's early history into the first section of his book and then moving on down to what amounts to an interpretation of Vermont today. His interpretation does succeed in holding the mirror up to Vermont in its manifold activities, from maple sugar to tool-making, from marble to lumber, from its woolen industry to the tourist business, which today is an enormously significant factor in Vermont's solid wealth." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 26 '49 850w

"The text is no mere padding for the pictures, but a vivid, readable, well-documented expository and descriptive narrative. There is an admirable bibliography with helpful critical and explanatory comment, and a really comprehensive index. . . This excellent and handsome manual is a worthy initiatory volume to what should prove a fascinating and useful series." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 32:32 O 1 '49 180w

NEWTON, ERIC. Introduction to European painting. 221p pl $2.50 Longmans
750.94 Painting [49-6150]

This is an enlarged and revised edition of a work first published in England in the Pelican series in 1941, under the title European Painting and Sculpture. Contents: The nature of the arts; The representational arts; East and west; The development of European art; The stone age; Egypt and Mesopotamia; The Aegean and Athens; Byzantine, Romanesque, and Gothic; Florence, Siena and Venice; Flanders, Germany, Spain, Holland; Paris; The art of the twentieth century; Note on the diagram; Appreciation; Appendix.

"Probably the best book of its kind on the market." Stephen Bone
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 17 '49 90w

"It remains about the best short work—admirably organized, astute and packed with the considered and condensed opinions of a man of taste. It is modestly personal, vivid, unawed, but respectful of intention in various periods. A provocative chapter on art appreciation has been added; the plates are good." Lincoln Kirstein
+ New Repub 121:25 D 12 '49 60w

"There is much neatly condensed and useful information in this book, even if the style and the frequent analogies are a shade too perky."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p580 S 9 '49 1050w

NEWTON, JOSEPH FORT. Life victorious; a testament of faith. 111p $1.25 Revell
922 Saints 49-7061

"These studies first appeared, in shorter form, under the title What Have The Saints To Teach Us? in 1914. . . They are here revised, retouched and extended in response to many requests, chiefly by readers of my autobiography, River of Years, which laid emphasis upon immediate religion, going beyond religion mediated through symbol and sacrament." (Foreword) In it the two outstanding problems considered are What is a saint? and Who are the saints?

"A quiet little book, meditative, serene in its confident faith, but eloquent and stirring, too. . . The chapter on 'What is a Saint?' is particularly good." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 66:336 Mr 16 '49 50w

"While many will no doubt take issue with him in his argument, there can be no question as to the sincerity of his reasoning and his ability in presenting his case."
+ Springf'd Republican p5D Ap 17 '49 120w

NICHOLAS, EDWARD. Hours and the ages; a sequence of Americans. 304p $3.50 Sloane 973 U.S.—History. U.S.—Biography
49-10411

"This highlights individuals who typified certain trends and developments of America's creative energies from the mid-18th century to the middle of the 19th. Mr. Nicholas' philosophy of history, implicit here, is that creative energy receives its expression through individuals, and yet through the course of history it is something above and beyond them. He takes for his study Elizabeth Lucas Pinckney, who managed her father's Carolina plantations; George Whitefield, revivalist awakener; the Rev. Charles Chauncy whose theories gave birth to Unitarianism; often misunderstood Thomas Hutchinson, Massachusetts governor; Sam Adams, political boss and rabble rouser; the great democratic statesman, Thomas Jefferson; fighting man and democrat, Andrew Jackson; the transcendentalist, Margaret Fuller; imperialists and republicans, Senator Thomas Benton, his daughter Jessie, his son-in-law John Frémont, explorer and dreamer." (Kirkus) A note on authorities. Index.

Booklist 46:96 N 15 '49
Christian Science Monitor p11 O 6 '49 800w

"He has been remarkably successful in depicting personalities vividly, but the basic historical processes are more frequently than not veiled in an irritatingly pretentious fog of neo-Transcendental theorizing." Mason Wade
Commonweal 51:76 O 28 '49 390w

"A somewhat different slant on history and trends of the century covered, and good reading."
+ Kirkus 17:447 Ag 15 '49 180w

"This rosary is strung on a thread of rather cloudy and pretentious mystique; the prose style is curiously unreal and frequently harsh and grating, suggesting that the author's English has been acquired. A high-minded but rather trying volume of historical biography." E. F. Walbridge
+ — Library J 74:1197 S 1 '49 80w
Library J 74:1559 O 15 '49 30w

"A very striking group of historical portraits, admirably fresh in conception and finished in execution." Howard Doughty
+ Nation 169:352 O 8 '49 700w

"His book is general in a sense more precise than that usually given the term. The particular man, the particular event, even the particular movement, he seeks to merge in a general picture of the current. His method cannot be accounted altogether successful; but it is still further from being altogether a failure, and it affords what the camera men call an 'angle shot' that reveals new and interesting qualities in familiar scenes." G. W. Johnson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 S 18 '49 950w

"Mr. Nicholas writes with brilliance and vigor, endowing his subjects with a realistic lifelike quality. His account is interspersed by such contrasting episodes as the charming description of Betsey Lucas and her South Carolina plantations and the violent action of Andrew Jackson's support of the code of honor. The book maintains a surprising cohesiveness by the remarkable qualities of American genealogy. However, in the author's selection of persons and events there is a noticeable deficiency that results from devoting merely passing comments to the important developments in business and economic activities." W. G. Tyrrell

+ — N Y Times p14 S 18 '49 450w
New Yorker 25:107 S 24 '49 140w
San Francisco Chronicle p32 N 20 '49 450w

"Blessed with a notable talent for the light personal sketch, Mr. Nicholas has produced an exceptionally readable book of popular history. He is at his best writing about women; the portraits of Elizabeth Lucas, Rachel Jackson, Margaret Fuller, and Jessie Benton Frémont are his happiest. When he deals with larger political themes he is much less at ease; he treats such events as Jackson's war on the bank with a careless haste that suggests a fundamental lack of interest." Richard Hofstadter
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:22 S 10 '49 450w
Springf'd Republican p8C N 13 '49 550w

NICHOLS, BOB. Shotgunner. 373p $5 Putnam
799.21 Shooting. Shotguns 49-2842

"How to make forward allowance, how to determine gun fit, where to put the hands and feet, the kind of gun a beginner should choose, and rules for carrying, sighting and handling the gun. Mr. Nichols recommends that beginners take up trapshooting and skeet if they can't find any fowl to bang away at; for oldtimers his book is filled with data from the du Pont ballistics lab concerning initial velocity, pellet diameter and shot-load." N Y Times

"His hope that his book will be of value to beginners would seem unlikely, as the book is exceedingly technical and much of it is closely linked with mathematical measurements done by the du Pont ballistic laboratory technicians. . . The most interesting part—for this neophyte—is that dealing with his boyhood and youthful experiences."
+ — Kirkus 17:132 Mr 1 '49 190w

"An authoritative and comprehensive work. . . Basic in sporting collection." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:737 My 1 '49 20w

"A one-word description of 'The Shotgunner' might be 'definitive.' " Rex Lardner
+ N Y Times p14 My 22 '49 180w

"The most exhaustive, technically competent work on scatter-gunning ever put between covers. It is rather hard reading, though, in some spots." C. H. F.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 8 '49 200w

NICOLAY, HELEN. Lincoln's secretary; a biography of John G. Nicolay. 363p il $5 Longmans
B or 92 Nicolay, John George 49-1598

"Written by the daughter of John G. Nicolay, this biography spans his life (1832-1901) but the great majority of chapters are concerned with the years from 1860-1865 during which he served as private secretary to Lincoln. An affectionate study of a man who was very close to Lincoln during the days of the Civil War, it traces Nicolay's life-long friendship with John Hay and describes their close collaboration in writing the ten-volume, monumental biography of Lincoln." (Library J) Index.

"The portrait which emerges from these pages is altogether admirable and appealing, but there is no impression that authenticity has been impaired for sentiment's sake. . . If there are lapses of strictest accuracy in this account, they are few and inconspicuous and unimportant. . . A more serious criticism can be leveled at the index, which is skimpy, uninformative, and apparently the work of a publishers' hack. . . But these shortcomings are, in terms of the achievement, of minor consequence. The book itself deserves to be accepted as an animate contribution to our knowledge of a stirring period." D. C. Mearns
+ — Am Hist R 54:890 Jl '49 750w
Booklist 45:280 Ap 15 '49

Reviewed by Ralph Newman
Chicago Sun Mr 21 '49 400w

"A warm, intimate picture from the day when Nicolay first heard Lincoln speak at the Bloomington convention in 1856 until the day of the war President's death." James van Zandt
+ Churchman 163:15 Ap 15 '49 180w

"Book may not contain new material but it helps to round out the story of Lincoln's official family and gives an interesting picture of Washington in war time." J. H. Berthel
Library J 74:197 F 1 '49 100w
Nation 168:424 Ap 9 '49 40w

Reviewed by D. C. Mearns
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Mr 27 '49 2150w

"The volume is not overlong, is not annotated, does not draw largely from the Robert T. Lincoln Collection, and does not give (nor would this be expected) a critical analysis of the Nicolay and Hay biography. It is enough that a worthy record of Nicolay is given by the one who knew him best. The book is a delight to read. It takes its place in that select category that Paul Angle has designated as 'Basic Lincolniana.' " J. G. Randall
+ N Y Times p5 Mr 13 '49 950w
New Yorker 25:115 Mr 26 '49 170w

"John George Nicolay has been one of the neglected figures in the Lincoln story. Not witty like John Hay, nor rampant like Ward Hill Lamon, nor humanly appealing like William H. Herndon, Nicolay has seldom been given his rightful credit as an important Lincoln associate and biographer. In 'Lincoln's Secretary' Helen Nicolay rights the balance by presenting a warmly written, sympathetic life of her father." David Donald
+ Sat R of Lit 32:18 Ap 9 '49 800w
Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 3 '49 360w
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:184 Je '49 300w

NICOLSON, HAROLD GEORGE. Benjamin Constant. 331p pl $4 Doubleday
B or 92 Constant de Rebecque, Henri Benjamin 49-10807

A biography, presented in detail and with sympathy, of a controversial figure in French politics and social life during the Revolutionary and Napoleonic era. Index.

Reviewed by Harvey Breit
Atlantic 184:84 O '49 1100w

Reviewed by S. R. Davis
Christian Science Monitor p11 O 27 '49 600w

Reviewed by Serge Hughes
Commonweal 51:276 D 9 '49 550w
Kirkus 17:384 Jl 15 '49 160w

"Mr. Nicolson does not make it plain enough that Constant was after all an historic figure of the first importance. This is the sole defect of his admirable book. This is, in fact, Mr. Nicholson's best book. It has no pretensions to research or originality; it tells the story in a plain way without psychological frills. Mr. Nicolson admires Constant without defending him; as a result he presents the reader with the true portrait of a man in which every intellectual will catch a reflection of himself." A. J. P. Taylor
+ Manchester Guardian p4 Je 21 '49 600w

"The book gets slowly under way: the first hundred pages read like a conscientious epitome of Rudler rather than an original composition. But when Nicolson gets into his stride, his work is admirable. He has long been a student of private frailties and public follies: he could understand Constant, and rise above the facile level of irony and pity." Albert Guerard
+ — Nation 169:379 O 15 '49 750w

NICOLSON, H. G.—Continued

"This is a gossipy memoir in a comfortably traditional vein. A soft spot in the middle of it is Constant himself; the inconsequence of his character and career seems to prevent any substantial portrait or consecutive narrative. . . The best passages in the book are quotations." J. F.

+ — New Repub 121:19 O 24 '49 240w

Reviewed by Peter Quennell

New Statesman & Nation 38:150 Ag 6 '49 2100w

Reviewed by Marvin Lowenthal

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29 S 25 '49 1700w

"In one respect Constant triumphs over his biographer. This is an interesting book and it handles a vast amount of material with great skill. But not even Mr. Nicolson's passion for order and clarity can give much shape to the shapeless or much direction to the story of a career which had none. So cluttered a life makes inevitably for a somewhat cluttered book." J. W. Krutch

+ — N Y Times p5 S 25 '49 1000w

"A sympathetic and very well-written biography."

+ New Yorker 25:107 S 24 '49 200w

"Mr. Nicolson writes straightforwardly and well. His biographical method is solidly based on authority, his interpretation on common sense. He allows himself neither fictional license nor scholastic dryness. If the reader finds himself unable to subscribe to the estimate of Constant contained in the jacket slogan, that means no disparagement of Mr. Nicolson's achievement. On the contrary, it is a tribute to a biographer who can present his subject so justly and honestly." M. L. M.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 6 '49 400w

"The checkered story in many of its details, including the almost incredible narrative of his fourteen-year-long tug of war and love with Mme. de Stael, fills Nicolson's pages. But it is always Constant himself who holds the center of the stage in an outstanding biography that gives meaning and a measure of dignity to the career of the twisted, talented, weak, egoistic, fascinatingly brilliant and belatedly responsible libertine and writer." Leo Gershoy

+ Sat R of Lit 32:25 O 22 '49 850w

"Mr. Harold Nicolson's book must be unreservedly praised; it is elegantly, indeed often charmingly, written. No novel can pretend to rival this story—unless it be the whole of Balzac put together; there are enough subjects here for fifty novels. Yet Mr. Nicolson tells each successive story with enough detail to make it entrancing, and enough rapidity to give a very clear view. I have no doubt that Mr. Nicolson has done wisely by refraining from all moral condemnation of his heroes and heroines; the book would have become dull from constant reiteration of moral principles; every page would have contained a sermon. But neither does Mr. Nicolson palliate the offences. The readers can pronounce the verdict." Denis Saurat

+ Spec 182:828 Je 17 '49 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p428 Jl 1 '49 3200w

NIEBUHR, REINHOLD. Faith and history; a comparison of Christian and modern views of history. 257p $3.50 Scribner

901 History—Philosophy. Christianity—Philosophy 49-8484

"The book gives evidence of having been prompted, at least in part, by Toynbee's interpretation of history with which Niebuhr is at many points in sharp disagreement. The book also gives the historical as well as philosophical background of the realistic theology of which Niebuhr is the chief exponent in this country. Niebuhr is at pains in this volume to distinguish between the classical, the Biblical (or Christian) and the modern interpretation of history. He is particularly concerned to point out the fundamental errors of the point of view current in the eighteenth, nineteenth and early twentieth century, which sees history as the record of inevitable progress onward and upward which progress has within itself the power to redeem mankind from all of the evils which beset mankind. He repudiates entirely the idea of evolutionary perfectionism and asserts that we must return to the Christian belief in the innate evil of man from which he can be redeemed only by the power of God." (Kirkus) Index.

Booklist 45:352 Je 15 '49

Reviewed by Northrop Frye

Canadian Forum 29:138 S '49 1450w

"As a criticism of Catholicism, his observations are neither fundamental nor well conducted. They completely overlook the spiritual authority claimed by the Church as a divine institution. Catholicism is not, however, the main issue of this book. Its concern is with basic Christianity and basic attitudes of Christian believers. Within this topic Professor Niebuhr has many fine things to say about sin, grace, humility and repentance." Francis Glimm

+ — Cath World 169:476 S '49 600w

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Chicago Sun Ap 18 '49 700w

"Dr. Niebuhr's new book will be read by those familiar with his theology as an important summary of it. Those who have not read him before will find it an excellent introduction to the work of one of the outstanding thinkers of our time." D. D. Williams

+ Christian Century 66:821 Jl 6 '49 2450w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 4 '49 800w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller

Churchman 163:15 Je 15 '49 90w

"Brilliant and paradoxical volume. Those who are smugly content or who are asleep in Zion may well leave it alone. Those who are willing to learn, whether through agreement or disagreement, will be stirred to thought by every chapter of this provocative—and sometimes provoking—book." E. S. Brightman

+ Crozer Q 26:249 Jl '49 2050w

Current Hist 17:227 O '49 30w

"Such is the stature attained by Reinhold Niebuhr as a theologian and prophetic interpreter of the current scene that the appearance of a major work of his pen must be regarded as a significant event in the religious world. . . This is a book which will command wide attention from the clergy, theologians and philosophers and other serious minded Protestant Christians."

+ Kirkus 17:144 Mr 15 '49 290w

"All libraries frequented by thoughtful readers searching for practical scholarly Christian solutions to modern turmoil will want this latest book by our best-known English speaking theologian. . . Here again Niebuhr reveals his brilliance as both thinker and writer; his profound understanding of human beings and nations, his assimilated knowledge of Biblical history as the progressively developing disclosure of divine grace; his extraordinary penetration to the heart of sociological problems; and his intense yet simple personal convictions so stirring that his followers are legion." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 74:660 Ap 15 '49 210w

"As a lifelong student of history, I found the present book of particular appeal. It will remain within easy reach, by the side of Toynbee, Berdyaev and Kahler (not Spengler and Ortega y Gasset). My previous reviews have voiced consistent dissent. This will be no exception. But dissent is not disparagement. I prize a vigorous opponent far above a flabby sympathizer. Some of the best elements in this treatise cannot be conveyed at secondhand; the cogency of thought (within its self-appointed limits), the richness of illustration, the purity of style. To read Niebuhr is like climbing a mountain: it is strenuous and rewarding." Albert Guerard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 My 22 '49 700w

"Dr. Niebuhr asks his readers to travel with him the hard way. But he gets where he intends to go. In this book, in effect, he serves notice on churches as well as society. The notice is politely worded. But it penetrates." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 17 '49 700w

"Rich and stimulating book. . . Although the book is ostensibly written about one subject, it contains the essence of the philosophy of the whole New Testament (particularly in a powerful essay on the true meaning of the Crucifixion), set forth in clear and vigorous terms."

+ New Yorker 25:94 Je 4 '49 120w

Reviewed by W. L. Sperry
Sat R of Lit 32:17 Je 11 '49 700w

Reviewed by E. R. Goodenough
Yale R n s 39:162 autumn '49 2600w

NIEDERLAND, WILLIAM GUGLIELMO. Man-made plague; a primer on neurosis. 304p $3.50 Renbayle house

616.85 Neuroses. Mental hygiene 48-9889

Written for the layman, this is a discussion of the symptoms, types and treatment of neuroses. The author, European born and educated, is now an American citizen, a member of the psychiatric staff of the Mount Sinai Hospital, New York. Index.

Booklist 45:237 Mr 15 '49

Reviewed by Julian Sohon
Library J 74:823 My 15 '49 40w
School & Society 69:182 Mr 5 '49 50w
Springf'd Republican p7B Ja 2 '49 120w

NIGG, WALTER. Great saints. 286p il $4.75 Regnery

922 Saints 49-3528

"Walter Nigg, a Protestant professor of church history at Zurich, has written a book which has already been translated into the principal European languages. . . He has chapters on nine saints: Francis of Assisi, Joan of Arc, Nicholas von Flüe (Swiss, 1417-87), Theresa of Avila, John of the Cross, Francis de Sales, Gerhard Tersteegen (German Protestant, 1697-1769), Vianney of Ars, and Theresa of Lisieux. On some of these it is impossible to say much that is new. The most significant contribution is made with the less known figures." Christian Century

"A book which shows much sound scholarship and spiritual insight. It is a book worth buying, reading, studying and keeping. This said, I add that in my judgment it needs to be read a good deal more critically than it was written. The author has an inordinate fear of 'rationalism,' and he sees in the saints a spearhead in the battle against it."

+ — Christian Century 65:1337 D 8 '48 950w

"On several scores this is a remarkable book. It is remarkable, surely, that a Swiss Protestant should have seen so clearly that the result of the 'gradual fading away of the world of the Saints . . . has been to make the Christian world the poorer' and that 'the setting of the sun on the grandiose world of the Saints must be deemed to be a tragic fate which has no parallel in history.' And it is remarkable, too, how in the light of such a view, this Zurich professor of church history has been able to redraw the saints as authentic heroes and how accurately he has gotten at the true source of their greatness." H. G. J. Beck

+ Commonweal 49:405 Ja 28 '49 450w

NIKHILANANDA, swami. Essence of Hinduism. [new ed] 118p $1.75 Beacon press

294.5 Hinduism 49-5545

Brief statement of the essential doctrines of Hinduism. The three sections are: Faith for today; Transformation of western culture into a spiritual culture; and Immortality. They are based on three lectures.

"This interesting volume should meet the need of those who will be satisfied with so little and whet the appetite of those who want more." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 66:368 Mr 23 '49 350w

"Many passages in one lecture are repeated, virtually verbatim, in the next. The information given, however, is of great interest, well presented, and, so far as I am able to judge, authoritative. The results of seven thousand years of tradition and thought are made surprisingly clear in so short a work; and there are some passages which will arrest any thoughtful reader's attention. Particularly valuable are the comparisons which the author makes between varying concepts of God, and of good and evil, in the several major religions of the world. I recommend this book to anyone interested in the study of the growth of religion as a whole." T. V. Enslin

+ — Crozer Q 26:188 Ap '49 200w

NILES, MRS MARY CUSHING (HOWARD). Middle management; the job of the junior administrator. rev ed 274p $3.50 Harper

658.3124 Business management 49-7341

New edition of a work first published in 1941 (Book Review Digest 1941). In her preface to the new edition the author says: "Revisions in this second edition reflect to some extent my own broader experience. During the last few years I have been thrown with people eminent in the management movement and have been part of an active laboratory in policy development called the Federal Personnel Council. In that organization the directors of personnel of the Federal Government frame and evaluate policies for the personnel responsibilities of the country's largest employer." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 45:226 Mr 1 '49

Reviewed by Julian Sohon
Library J 74:824 My 15 '49 40w

Reviewed by D. C. Coyle
+ Survey 85:336 Je '49 220w

NILSON, ARTHUR REINHOLD, and HORNUNG, JULIUS LAWRENCE. Radio operating questions and answers. 9th ed 524p $4.50; text ed $3.60 McGraw

621.384 Radio—Examinations, questions, etc. 48-9567

"Since its first appearance in 1921, this book has been widely used as a review of radio theory and practice by persons studying for Government examinations for radio operator licenses. The new material in this edition is in the Addenda, an 87-page section devoted to questions and answers that relate chiefly to FM radio and television and cover topics recently added as supplementary to Elements 2, 3, and 4 of the Federal Communications Commission examinations." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 45:244 Mr 15 '49

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1518 O 15 '48 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:93 N '48

NOCK, ALBERT JAY. Journal of forgotten days, May 1934-October 1935. 145p $3.50 Regnery

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-9698

The one-time editor of the Freeman (1921-1924) died in 1945 at the age of seventy-two. Sometime before he died he destroyed all his manuscripts and papers, except some letters and this small journal. The diary covers from May 1934 to January 1935, and August, September, and October of 1935. A biographical appendix contains brief information about people mentioned in the text.

"For those who enjoyed [Nock's] public writing and the tang of his opinions, this private journal, full of prejudices and insights and remarks with the sound of the human voice still in them, will stimulate admiration for Nock's conversational finesse. . . . Those who relish the letters of Horace Walpole will like these of Nock's." Ernestine Evans

NOCK, A. J.—Continued
Commonweal 50:470 Ag 19 '49 190w

Current Hist 16:231 Ap '49 30w

New Yorker 24:111 D 18 '48 70w

Reviewed by H. L. Varley
Springf'd Republican p9B Mr 6 '49 210w

"Reviewers did not always like Nock's books, and it is easy to see why. They nodded respectfully to his fine style, but belabored his single-tax theories. What he had to say was said merely with increasing stridency as he grew older. Albert Jay Nock was persuaded that his civilization was creaking badly and in sore need of repair, but all he chose to do about it was to utter the graceful melancholies of an innate Tory who does not care to bring his own talents to the aid of a program."
Time 53:78 Ja 31 '49 550w

NOCK, ALBERT JAY. Letters, 1924-1945 [ed. by Frank W. Garrison]. 224p $3 Caxton printers

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 49-50382

"Nock (1873-1945), editor and essayist, wrote these letters to friends: Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Evans, Miss Ellen Winsor. They discuss his antipathies (President Roosevelt and the New Deal, World War II, 'the State') and his admirations (Henry George, Jefferson, Rabelais)." (Library J) Index.

"One questions whether more than a very few today still remember Nock with sufficient interest to give this a reading, rather than testimonial, value."
Kirkus 17:597 O 15 '49 100w

"Readers who do not find his principles objectionable, who remember with pleasure his essays in the Atlantic and the American Mercury, and his autobiography, Memoirs of a Superfluous Man, will want to see the letters." H. W. Hart
Library J 74:1817 D 1 '49 100w

"The letters are spiced with critical comment and characteristic expressions of opinion on social tendencies and political developments, on books and dwelling places and travel in between. And they are informed with a Platonic urbanity which won A. J. many disciples on the distaff side but [which] is of less importance to the general reader." H. I. Brock
N Y Times p5 Ja 29 '50 450w

"His admiration for Jefferson, which constantly crops up in his correspondence, was matched only by his detestation of the state, bureaucracy, and Franklin D. Roosevelt. This consuming and fanatical hatred of the late President makes some of the letters of the author's old age rather unseemly—as when he jubilantly asks one of his correspondents to join him in a celebration of 'Franklin's demise'—and robs them of the urbanity he prized so highly."
New Yorker 25:60 D 31 '49 150w

NOLAN, JEANNETTE (COVERT) (MRS VAL NOLAN). Andrew Jackson; il. by Leej Ames. 178p $2.75 Messner

B or 92 Jackson, Andrew—Juvenile literature 49-8105

Portrays the life of Andrew Jackson from the age of nine to his death in 1845, with emphasis on his education, political activities, and military career. For grades seven to nine. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:285 Ap 15 '49

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p7 Ag 11 '49 270w

"This is the best all round biography of Old Hickory, written for young people. . . It reads like fiction, and the biographer has avoided letting his story sag in unnecessary details."
+ Kirkus 17:113 Mr 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Burr
Library J 74:739 My 1 '49 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 17 '49 250w

"Old Hickory has always been a fascinating figure to young people. The present volume, with its anecdotal style, lavish use of dialogue and extreme simplification of political issues, should fit nicely into the reading schedule of junior high school students." N. B. Baker
+ N Y Times p10 Jl 3 '49 140w

"Jeanette Nolan has written a biography of our seventh President that is outstanding among American biographies for boys and girls. It emphasizes the action and color that young people desire in their heroes without sacrificing accuracy in matter and presentation." R. A. B.
+ Sat R of Lit 32:35 Ag 13 '49 200w

Wis Lib Bul 45:69 Ap '49

NOLAND, EDWARD WILLIAM, and BAKKE, EDWARD WIGHT. Workers wanted; a study of employers' hiring policies, preferences, and practices in New Haven and Charlotte. 233p $3 Harper

658.3 Employment management 49-8068

"This is a report on employers' hiring preferences in New Haven, Connecticut, and Charlotte, North Carolina. It is based on interviews with representatives of 135 establishments in New Haven in late 1945 and similar interviews in 105 establishments in Charlotte in early 1946. In each of the cities, establishments included in the survey employ about 80 per cent of the local industrial labor force." Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by Dale Yoder
Ann Am Acad 264:170 Jl '49 440w

"Just another study for the researcher on personnel. Of little practical value."
Kirkus 17:76 F 1 '49 90w

Reviewed by H. R. Northrup
Sat R of Lit 32:34 Je 4 '49 550w

NORDYKE, LEWIS. Cattle empire; the fabulous story of the 3,000,000 acre XIT. 273p il maps $4 Morrow

976.4 XIT ranch. Cattle trade 49-10830

"The story of the huge tract given to a group of Chicago businessmen in exchange for building the Texas capitol has interest as the account of a financial enterprise with far-reaching tie-ups as well as the picture of the operation of the largest ranch in the U.S." (Booklist) No Index.

Booklist 46:80 N 1 '49

"A definite masculine interest here."
+ Kirkus 17:383 Jl 15 '49 150w

"The story of the ranch . . . is told by Lewis Nordyke, a Texas newspaper man and magazine writer of long experience and first-rate reputation. He writes well and clearly, although somewhat sparsely, and his humor, fortunately, is considerably more on the pianissimo side than that of many of his Southwestern colleagues. . . However, one does not, somehow, get the feel of the country and the minutiae of life as it was lived on the XIT ranges back in the roaring 1880s and 1890s. Moreover, Mr. Nordyke neglected to bring his story up to date. . . One should not get the idea that Nordyke's book for all its imperfections, is not full of pretty good stuff, for it is." Stanley Walker
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 O 23 '49 1200w

"In 'Cattle Empire' Mr. Nordyke has made a noteworthy contribution to the annals of the West." Hoffman Birney
+ N Y Times p29 N 27 '49 450w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 6 '49 130w

NORLING, MRS JOSEPHINE (STEARNS). Pogo's sea trip; a story of boats [pictures by Ernest Norling]. 50p $1.50 Holt 49-11273

In three eventful days Pogo's master goes for a sail, becomes acquainted with a tugboat captain when Pogo falls overboard, visits a lighthouse, and learns how to be a tugboat worker. For ages 7-9.

Booklist 46:145 D 15 '49

"This author-artist team do a consistently good job of merging facts in a story framework with John and his dog Pogo as a likeable, credible pair."
+ Kirkus 17:585 O 15 '49 130w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Sussdorff
Library J 74:1918 D 15 '49 60w

"The brief story is in big type, with many fine adventurous pictures. The end-papers are crammed full of small factual details, which many a grubby finger will trace out with joy." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 13 '49 130w

Wis Lib Bul p12 D '49

NORMAN, CARL ADOLPH, and ZIMMERMAN, RICHARD H. Introduction to gas-turbine and jet-propulsion design. 294p il $5 Harper
621.4 Jet propulsion 49-859

"Elementary treatment and introduction to the technical theory and design of gas turbines and jet propulsion apparatus. Deals with gas turbines for stationary, aircraft, marine, and locomotive plants, and with rockets. It emphasizes performance and design of details of gas turbines and compressors. Avoids mathematical complexities." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 74:200 F 1 '49 60w

"Excellent textbook."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 33:86 N '48

NORMAN, CHARLES. Playmaker of Avon. 155p $3 McKay
822.33 Shakespeare, William. 49-9308

A biography of Shakespeare for young people. The author relates the known facts of Shakespeare's life and combines these with a picture of London life in Shakespeare's time and also with interpretations of bits from the plays that may be in some degree autobiographical.

"An excellent life of Shakespeare, not too long or inclusive to bore young people who are just seeing his plays in the film versions." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:291 Jl '49 90w

"This is the kind of intelligent and well-written biographical analysis to which young people are too seldom exposed. It is a book anyone over twelve could read with pleasure and deep interest, while Junior High and High School libraries would find it invaluable as supplementary reading for Shakespeare study."
+ Kirkus 17:270 Je 1 '49 170w

"Excellent for atmosphere and background. High school and adult readers." Siri Andrews
+ Library J 74:1036 Jl '49 80w

"Such a book will inevitably be of use to high school English students. But none of them should miss the charming book which came from England this spring, 'Shakespeare and the Players' by C. Walter Hodges. Mr. Norman's book is rather dull by comparison; his pages are informative but not compelling as literature. Unfortunately also, the pictures are negligible. His book points the way to a better doing of the same task." L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 6 '49 230w

"Written in colorful style, with many quotations falling smoothly into the story, this first part of the book is admirably done. In later chapters, however, the events of Shakespeare's life are so interwoven with the affairs of other men . . . that the author has difficulty in keeping the spotlight on his central figure. This fact, coupled with Mr. Norman's tendency to allow scholarship to intrude on the narrative (he is an instructor at New York University), will make difficult reading for young people. It is, nevertheless, the best juvenile biography of Shakespeare yet to appear. For teen-agers." Elizabeth Hodges
+ N Y Times p22 Ag 7 '49 180w

"It recreates vividly the contemporary life of London and Stratford. A readable book and an invaluable one for schools and junior colleges." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:40 N 12 '49 40w

NORMAN, CHARLES. Well of the past. 221p $2.75 Doubleday
49-7965

Novel about a New York boy with a middle class background. He went to New York University, sailed to South America and back on a freighter, wrote poetry, and experimented with love in Greenwich Village and in Paris.

Kirkus 17:94 F 15 '49 120w

"Through most of its length, this new book is a model of compact, beautiful, and, yes, poetic expression. It is filled with entertaining, fork-tongued sallies. But it is not a particularly good novel, because the author has defaulted on the first obligation of the novelist, which is to create people, not images." Richard Match
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 My 1 '49 500w

"In this elegiac testament to the past, Mr. Norman, the author of six books of verse, might have done better by his material if he had written a poem instead of a novel. It is not that he is an incompetent writer; he can occasionally capture a nostalgic mood with tenderness and warmth. His secondary characters are largely drawn with a naturalism that is refreshing amid so much hyperbole. If only Mr. Norman had not been so doggedly determined to write a beautiful book! There is nothing that bogs down more than prose that is self-consciously poetic." Richard McLaughlin
— + N Y Times p24 My 22 '49 340w

"A young poet remembers his soul's search for wisdom and for accomplishment. From New York to South America and finally to Paris the mirage beckons. Nothing in love or in art is gained, but the reader is wonderfully well served by these fancies. . . Clearly conceived, unashamedly dedicated, ringing with satire."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:32 Je 18 '49 180w

"Author Norman writes so carefully of the quiet life of David Gerald, and follows his simple and unpretentious thoughts with such detached sympathy, that the portrait ends by being impressive. . . Probably Novelist Norman's hero also had reserves of character somewhere, but nothing ever quite happens to prove the point, one way or the other. In this, as in the effectively drawn picture of David Gerald in love, the book may be true to its time and place; the result, nonetheless, is of David Gerald in a partial vacuum."
+ — Time 53:98 My 2 '49 330w

NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). High holiday. 253p $2.50 Doubleday 49-7405

Chronicles the daily lives of the various members of a large San Francisco family, the Throckmortons. The story begins in the 1890's and spans a generation.

Booklist 45:263 Ap 1 '49

"All the better soap opera ingredients for just that audience."
Kirkus 17:9 Ja 1 '49 150w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Mr 13 '49 140w

NORRIS, KATHLEEN—Continued

"The trick is to make us care what happens to these rather run-of-the-mill men and women. Mrs. Norris deftly pulls off that trick. Honestly, directly and simply, we share these lives. The level may be unrelieved, but it is sturdily maintained. There is a kind of satisfaction in knowing exactly what happens to every branch of this tree." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 32:31 Mr 26 '49 150w

NORTH, CHRISTOPHER RICHARD. Suffering servant in Deutero-Isaiah; an historical and critical study. 256p $4.50 Oxford

224.1 Bible. Old Testament—Isaiah [50-2157]

"There are four passages in the Book of Isaiah . . . known as 'The Servant Poems.' They provide the most living among Old Testament problems and they are of crucial interest for the New Testament, too. They underlie Jesus's own conception of his messianic mission, and they shaped the Church's Christological ideas from earliest days. . . The first half of Professor North's book is a lucid survey of the efforts, extending over more than 20 centuries, to understand this figure of the Servant—a survey which ranges from the later stages of the Old Testament itself, covering early Christian and early and medieval Jewish interpretation, and the views held during the last century by scholars of many varieties of religious allegiance, down to the theories put out within the past two or three years. In the second half Professor North gives his own exposition of the text and meaning of the poems, with an attempt to sift out the impossible theories and to balance the merits of the possible ones." Times [London] Lit Sup

"The labor required to assemble and organize the mass of material on the subject must have been arduous in the extreme. Professor North has done it with clarity and objectivity." H. N. Bream

+ J Religion 29:238 Jl '49 700w

"Professor North has produced one of those desirable works which take a subject of formidable bulk and complexity, sweep together all that has been written about it, sort out the muddle of conflicting views, and present the whole afresh in a balanced and comprehensible form, leaving the reader happy in the belief that he has now a competent grasp of the subject and smoothing the way for the next scholar who wishes to carry on with the work."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p205 Mr 26 '49 900w

NORTH, ROBERT CARVER. Revolt in San Marcos. 433p $3.95 Houghton

49-9718

The saga of a Central American Indian, Carlos Chicahayan. Carlos fled his native village because he had killed his stepbrother. In the city he became a gatekeeper; he studied to be a priest but realized in time that he had no vocation; he studied law; he joined an anti-fascist movement. The time covers the last thirty years.

Booklist 45:383; 393 Jl 15 '49

"This novel begins very well indeed. The reader rejoices in the straightforward prose, and becomes interested in the sensitive Indian lad, Carlos. . . As the long story progresses, however . . . there is a sense of disappointment. In the author's almost morbid preoccupation with the purely animal aspects of human existence, he does little justice to the Indian mind and spirit. . . Mr. North, a Stanford University Phi Beta Kappa, is earnest and well-informed. He can also write. Since this is his first book, we may hope for something better from him." B. J. Thompson

+ — Cath World 170:73 O '49 350w

Reviewed by Feike Feikema

Chicago Sun Ag 2 '49 450w

"Mr. North has undisputed narrative power; his evocations of place are effective; his characters are for the most part credible. But some characters are too familiar to be pleasing and are too firmly grounded on assumptions no longer tenable." Denham Sutcliffe

+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 31 '49 500w

"I liked this story. That is about as simple and unmistakable a statement as a reviewer can make. I liked it because of the skilled craftsmanship of the author; Mr. North tells a story well; he rises to moments of genuine beauty. . . I liked it because it is realistic without being obscene; the author uses four-letter words sparingly, and only when the flow of the narrative actually calls for them do the facts of nature have place. I liked it because, through the slow mental maturing of Carlos, through his breaking down of jargon into his own simple thought-patterns, I got a glimmering, for the first time, of the appeal of Communism to the good-pagan's mind. . . What I did not like was the uncomfortable stirring up of my own consciousness that Mr. North's picture was not overdrawn; that the poverty, the ignorance, the unformed Christianity that borders on the pagan, actually do exist in a great part of Latin America." L. J. Trese

+ Commonweal 50:417 Ag 5 '49 750w

"A thoughtful, inquiring novel of motivations, of trends and persuasions, and the pressures and forces molding and conditioning modern man, this time exemplified in Carlos, a mountain boy of a Latin American country. . . There is a strong feel of Latin American character as well as country, of individual as well as national psychology, and the ideological arguments are sounded in detail."

+ Kirkus 17:218 Ap 15 '49 260w

"Well written novel. . . But it ends suddenly, at a crucial moment, and leaves the reader quite without a sense of satisfaction." Joseph Borome

+ — Library J 74:956 Je 15 '49 80w

"A remarkable first novel. For that matter, we can leave out the word 'first' and simply say 'a remarkable novel.' " B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 7 '49 700w

"Mr. North is at great pains to show his more than casual knowledge of Spanish-American customs, phrases and landscapes, but it is in just this respect that his book ultimately fails. Hispanic America, and especially indiada, is—by the record—a particularly difficult subject for the English-writing novelist to understand and portray. There is a gulf in sympathy, a 'pathos of distance' between the Anglo-Saxon and the Spanish-American which only a handful of fictional works . . . have succeeded in bridging. Mr. North, despite the best will in the world, remains a gringo, and thus he fails in his larger purpose of making clear the social and political currents of what Waldo Frank recently called the 'dangerous hour' of Latin America." R. C. Lewis

N Y Times p4 Ag 7 '49 550w

"Tracing the process of enlightenment of a Central American Indian from his original state of happy primitive belief to his final one of depressed political sophistication, Mr. North achieves both a well-dimensioned hero and a most effective essay on the reason some of our neighbors to the south regularly blow up in the State Department's face."

+ New Yorker 25:66 Ag 20 '49 160w

"A serious, often moving novel in which the reader has a chance to see how a revolutionist may be made and unmade." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 12 '49 850w

"This remarkable novel, the work of a fine scholar filled with passion, goes straight to the heart of the Latin American problem. . . It is a daring experiment in what Mr. North calls 'the sublimation of actual experiences too real to be forgotten,' and only in the hands of a man whose head and heart are perfectly synchronized could it have been anything like so successful as it is." Herschel Brickell

+ Sat R of Lit 32:13 Ag 13 '49 650w

Springf'd Republican p7B Ag 7 '49 420w

Time 54:66 S 5 '49 500w

NORTHCOTT, WILLIAM CECIL. Religious liberty. 127p $2 Macmillan

261.7 Religious liberty 49-1352

"Religious freedom is considered the fundamental human freedom and the author contends that it must be included in any satisfactory international bill of rights framed by the United Nations. Much of his study is a survey of religious freedom, or the lack of it, in various parts of the world." (Booklist) The author has been a pastor in two British Congregational churches and is now home secretary and literary superintendent of the London missionary society. Index.

Booklist 45:235 Mr 15 '49

Reviewed by J. O. Supple
Chicago Sun Mr 2 '49 200w

"Even a small book by such an experienced student of so vital a theme cannot be a book of small importance. This one will be of special value to those who have not had the time or the fortitude to tackle Searle Bates' rather monumental Religious Liberty, An Inquiry (1945), or who, having studied that, wish to review the subject from a somewhat different point of view and with the inclusion of some more recent data. One could wish that it might have wide circulation not only where English is read but also in French and German and, especially, in Spanish and Italian translations. Despite some defects, it is a good book." W. E. Garrison
+ — Christian Century 66:402 Mr 30 '49 1150w

Reviewed by H. M. Gehr
Crozer Q 26:280 Jl '49 350w

"It is a book which should appeal to all interested in the status of religion here and throughout the world."
+ Kirkus 17:57 F 1 '49 170w

"It is characteristic of Mr. Northcott's fairness of mind that he describes the Roman Catholic attitude as 'logical,' and he even says a word or two in explanation of the Holy Inquisition. Whatever else is to be thought of this somewhat explosive material, one thing is evident. The exposition is a corrective to superficial thinking about reunion of the churches, with attempts to devise a new uniformity out of diversities." P. W. Wilson
N Y Times p21 F 13 '49 550w

NORTHROP, FILMER STUART CUCKOW, ed. Ideological differences and world order; studies in the philosophy and science of the world's cultures. 486p $4.50 Yale univ. press

901 Civilization—Philosophy 49-7977

"Symposium, contributed to by twenty-one thinkers from the various countries of the world, who expose ideological differences which stand in the way of world government, and then examine some of the methods developed by the various social sciences useful in removing such differences. Suggests that fruitful planning for world government begins with these considerations and emphasizes the falseness of concentrating on a single aspect of culture such as the economic." (Library J) Index.

"In his introductory preface, Mr. Northrop notes that, through sad misfortune, the Moslem and Hindu cultures of India are not herein discussed, while Soviet Russia and Latin America are treated less fully than planned. The resultant unbalance is indeed unfortunate. Yet, that said, this book is still one of the most extraordinary and wide-ranging of recent times. The individual essays vary greatly in breadth and depth, in philosophical insight, and in literary style. But the number which may properly be called exceptional in their brilliance and profundity is high, and several are beautifully compressed monographs on their subjects." T. I. Cook
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:1267 D '49 1800w

"While virtually every chapter is scholarly and thoughtful, the volume does not present a systematic picture of the conflicting ideologies of our time. It is not inaccurate to say that only a minority of the chapters conform in a precise and important way to the title of the book. . . On the whole, the volume is more a symposium on general intellectual and cultural history than a definitive and well planned exposition of the ideological conflicts of the mid-twentieth century." H. E. Barnes
Ann Am Acad 264:125 Jl '49 550w

Booklist 45:352 Je 15 '49

"The whole book is a rich mine of both knowledge and wisdom. Those who are in a hurry for solutions of the world's pressing problems, and who want pat formulas for ending the Berlin blockade, heading off deflation (or inflation, as the case may be), or settling the issues between the C.I.O. and the N.A.M., had better skip it. Those who have patience to seek a longer and a wider view of world culture may profitably study it." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 66:560 My 4 '49 1450w

Reviewed by Arthur Child
Ethics 59:301 Jl '49 600w

"Crucial and scholarly volume which is probably of limited usefulness in general collections." R. E. Kingery
Library J 74:548 Ap 1 '49 130w

"Most of the book is concerned with philosophy and art, and there are evidently such things as ideologies which take the form of theories about the universe and theories about what is esthetically satisfying. But it is more than questionable whether such ideologies hinder an ordering of the world. The fact that the 'West' has been brought up on Plato and Aristotle and the 'East' on Confucius and Lao Tze will, I suspect, make East and West continuously more interesting to each other than if both had drawn their cultural sustenance from the same spring." Max Radin
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 27 '49 800w

"There are several very stimulating essays—among them one by Roscoe Pound on the need for a universal legal code, a piece on Unesco, by Julian Huxley, and a fine study of 'ideological man,' by the editor—but some of the eminent authorities are far too long-winded on remarkably minute matters."
+ New Yorker 25:106 Mr 12 '49 120w

"The present volume is a good example of the satisfaction which the ordinary reader can derive from a book which was not written expressly for him, and has not been simplified or thinned. Reading it slowly, he finds his mind being rather rudely stretched, and putting it down from time to time he finds that the experience has been unexpectedly rewarding." August Heckscher
+ Sat R of Lit 32:24 Je 18 '49 550w

"I prophesy that the name of F. S. C. Northrop will come to stand at the top of the list of ranking philosophers in the mid-twentieth century. . . Although Professor Northrop has only one extended and brilliant paper in this symposium, the guiding, unifying hand is his. . . This book seems to me to be basic material in a whole new orientation of thinking and studying about cultures, religions, philosophies of life, and the derivation of values." Ordway Tead
+ Survey 85:693 D '49 650w

"Apparently, these essays are nearly all original contributions to this volume rather than reprints or reworkings of articles already published. About one-third of them may be classed as material for the intelligent general reader; the remainder will be of interest only to the specialist in philosophy or one of its subdivisions. It is, therefore, the philosopher rather than the political scientist who will use to advantage this collection of significant essays."
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:173 Je '49 300w

NORTHROP AERONAUTICAL INSTITUTE, HAWTHORNE, CALIFORNIA. Aircraft power plants, by the Technical development staff; Charles Edward Chapel, chief editor. 378p il $6 McGraw

629.13435 Airplane engines 48-10691

"Explanation of the operation of aircraft engines describing in detail all basic principles. Many good illustrations; simple, nontechnical NORTHROP AERONAUTICAL INST.—Cont. language. Includes the operation of basic jet and gas turbine engines." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 45:189 F 1 '49

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1518 O 15 '48 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:81 N '48

NORTON, ALICE MARY (ANDRE NORTON, pseud). Sword in sheath; il. by Lorence Bjorklund. 246p $2.50 Harcourt
49-10979

"The story of two young Americans who served as OSS agents in the Second World War. They are commissioned to go down through the little-known smaller islands of the East Indies to trace an American aviator who crashed there during the war. Their quest takes them on a Dutch freighter to an island that has never even been mapped, and there they find a group of German and Japanese renegades who are organizing a resistance movement against Allied authorities." Sat R of Lit

---

"The story is breath-taking. The dialogue, too, is exceptionally good." Jane Cobb
+ Atlantic 184:104 D '49 50w

Booklist 46:102 N 15 '49

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 170:211 D '49 30w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p13 Ja 26 '50 90w

Kirkus 17:556 O 1 '49 70w

"Boys looking for thrilling adventure will find this story of two ex-soldiers grand reading." A. M. Wetherell
+ Library J 75:52 Ja 1 '50 70w

Reviewed by H. B. Lent
N Y Times p20 D 11 '49 140w

"We find in this an adventure story exciting and dramatic enough to satisfy anyone, from sons and daughters right up to the head of the family. . . The description of the island is fascinating, the action is fast and furious, and the people are all believable, if a bit melodramatic on the whole." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:28 N 12 '49 180w

Springf'd Republican p8C O 30 '49 110w

NOURSE, MARY AUGUSTA. Ferment in the Far East; an historical interpretation. 336p maps $3.75 Bobbs

950 East (Far East)—History 49-10429

"Survey of the relations of the various countries of the Far East with each other. Emphasis is largely on China and her influence upon the civilization and history of this area. Period covered is from the earliest times to the present day." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 46:46 O 1 '49

Bookmark 9:28 N '49 40w

"To make her book attractive to readers other than students of the Far East she has limited its length. And limitation of space has led her inevitably to generalization and condensation. And the only persons fitted to fill in the blank spaces—and thus gain a relatively true picture—are the very students for whom the book is not intended. This is not to say, in any respect, that the author is not well qualified. Mary Nourse knows the Orient as do few other American women. Thus, the only sin she commits in this book is one of omission. If the average reader can remember, and appreciate, the fact that neither this history nor this interpretation is complete, he will be perfectly safe. And with this reservation, Ferment in the Far East is well worth recommending." J. O. Frederick
+ — Commonweal 50:563 S 16 '49 390w

"As is to be expected in a short work of this type, sections are sometimes over-simplified. Political interpretations of events of the past two decades may be considered naive by some, and there are minor inaccuracies of fact, but in general, this is a useful, popular volume." Donald Wasson
+ — Library J 74:1090 Ag '49 100w

Nation 169:333 O 1 '49 20w

"When a few concessions are made because of the magnitude of what this author has attempted, she must be given credit for an exceptionally good job. Her historical interpretation is a reasonably sound primer for an intelligent and interested reader—perhaps the best primer covering the whole subject that he could find." Floyd Taylor
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 S 4 '49 500w

"Miss Nourse, an educator, historian and geographer, spent more than a decade in the Far East before Pearl Harbor. . . The present volume is obviously not intended for the specialist, and it includes few startlingly new thoughts. . . Miss Nourse does not ignore the many other factors in the fermenting Far East. With clarity and commendable economy of detail she describes the intrusion of the West, the rise of nationalism, and the decay of colonialism. She has excellent chapters on Indo-China, Siam, Malaya, Indonesia, Burma and the Philippines. But primary emphasis is on China's tremendous influence throughout eastern Asia." Stuart Lillico
+ N Y Times p25 S 18 '49 450w

"In her handling of the past Miss Nourse has skilfully put together the essential background for a vast area virtually unknown in the United States. The unobtrusive style, with its lack of color, helps to take the age-old mystery out of the Orient. This reviewer agrees with Alice Tisdale Hobart who writes in a foreword to 'Ferment in the Far East' that 'no other book . . . weaves together the history of all these countries of Eastern Asia. . . ' As such it is a useful, informative primer and a valuable contribution." R. E. Lauterbach
+ Sat R of Lit 32:42 O 8 '49 550w

NOVICK, DAVID, and others. Wartime production controls. 441p $6 Columbia univ. press

355.26 U.S. War production board. World war, 1939-1945—Economic aspects 49-8280

"The story of industrial production control in the last war, with mistakes pointed out and specific recommendations made for the future." (Management R) Index.

Reviewed by H. M. Gray
Ann Am Acad 264:169 Jl '49 420w

Current Hist 16:345 Je '49 50w

"The insight of the authors into the shortcomings of WPB regulatory efforts during World War II and their well-reasoned conclusions and recommendations make this volume a substantial addition to the literature on war economics." S. M. Robbins
+ J Pol Econ 57:365 Ag '49 800w

Management R 38:236 Ap '49 20w

"This volume is a timely, though over-technical, reminder of our persistent neglect of the crucial problems of industrial mobilization. . . The experts, for whom this book is written, will be interested in the pointed judgments on the relative effectiveness—or should one say ineffectiveness—of the various wartime production controls which were used. For the general public the chief value of this study lies in its being an irrefutable argument for a permanent mobilization agency." Samuel Lubell
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 17 '49 800w

"It is this reviewer's opinion that much more of the real flavor of W.P.B. development is to be found in the official published history of that agency than here. Yet this volume has an important administrative story to tell. Top officials in the W.P.B. were surprisingly indifferent to the detailed procedures whereby their basic purposes were to be achieved. It is no occasion for surprise, it seems to me, that materials-control practices had to evolve out of experience. This reviewer has little faith in planning done in a vacuum. But planning done in the stratosphere which ignores the mundane issues of how in practice to carry out basic intentions results in administrative failure. And that is the real lesson this volume is devoted to demonstrating." J. D. Millett

Pol Sci Q 64:453 S '49 1000w

NURNBERG, MAXWELL W., and ROSENBLUM, MORRIS (W. T. RHODES, pseud). How to build a better vocabulary. 388p il $2.95 Prentice-Hall

422 Vocabulary. English language—Glossaries, vocabularies, etc. 49-9203

A manual on vocabulary building written with humor and informality, and illustrated with cartoons culled from the Saturday Review of Literature, Collier's, etc. Index.

Booklist 46:8 S 1 '49

Kirkus 17:170 Mr 15 '49 180w

"The most delightful vocabulary book on the market." W. R. White

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 20 '49 800w

Springf'd Republican p6D Je 26 '49 170w

NYE, DOROTHY. Your aches; what to do about them; il. by Mamie Harmon. 180p $2.50 Funk

613.71 Exercise 49-11405

Practical handbook on the art of systematic exercises to eliminate aching muscles, which arise from misuse. Illustrated with small black and white drawings to show exercises in progress. Index.

Booklist 46:117 D 1 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '49

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p8 Ja 14 '50 150w

Springf'd Republican p7B Ag 7 '49 210w

NYE, RUSSEL BLAINE. Fettered freedom; civil liberties and the slavery controversy, 1830-1860. 273p il $4 Mich. state college press, 318c Adm. bldg, Mich. state college, East Lansing, Mich.

323.4 Civil rights. Slavery in the U.S. 49-3656

"Freedom of thought and teaching, freedom of the press and the struggle for civil liberties in general, as they were related to the slavery controversy from 1830 to 1860, is the theme of this book by Prof. Nye, author of the 1945 Pulitzer Prize biography of George Bancroft [Book Review Digest 1944]. . . Nye has carefully analyzed the records and presented a valuable analysis of the impact of the slavery controversy not only on academic freedom and freedom of the press but also on the right of petition, the right to use the mails, the Constitution, and the growth of vigilance committees and the rule of mob law." Chicago Sun

"Professor Nye is to be thanked for a valuable investigation into the role and content of antislavery, and for a thesis which those interested in its civil liberties phase will find stimulating and suggestive. It is to be hoped that other studies on aspects of the antislavery question will be made available which will further a revaluation of its national significance independent of partisan viewpoints expressed in primary and secondary sources." Louis Fuller

+ Am Hist R 55:162 O '49 950w

Reviewed by Walter Johnson

+ Chicago Sun Je 15 '49 400w

NYGAARD, NORMAN EUGENE. Lew Reese and his Scio pottery; the story of a business with a heart. 176p il $2.50 Greenberg

666.6 Reese, Lewis Paul. Scio-Ohio pottery company, Scio, Ohio 49-358

A popular account of the Scio-Ohio pottery bought by the hero of the tale, Lew Reese, in the early 1930s and built up by him and his co-workers into a successful business. When a fire destroyed the plant in 1947, not only Lew's employees, but also the townspeople and his business associates helped out in the rebuilding, thereby focusing nationwide attention on the man, the pottery, and the methods used there.

Booklist 45:257 Ap 1 '49

Management R 38:235 Ap '49 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 O 30 '49 150w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p10B F 13 '49 350w

O

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD. Prize stories of 1949; sel. and ed. by Herschel Brickell. 323p $3.50 Doubleday

Short stories—Collections (21-9372)

Contents: A courtship, by William Faulkner; The watchman, by Mark Van Doren; The white hound, by Ward Dorrance; High diver, by John Ashworth; Pastor Dowe at Tacaté, by Paul Bowles; The middle drawer, by Hortense Calisher; Bremen's, by Elizabeth Coatsworth; I'll take you to Tennessee, by E. S. Connell; Cayetano the perfect, by Barnaby Conrad; The boy next door, by A. C. Cramer; The Mulhausen girls, by Harris Downey; The trumpeter swan, by Elizabeth Enright; Evening and morning prayer, by J. M. Goss; The lottery, by Shirley Jackson; Single lady, by Mary Lavin; The season of Miss Maggie Reginald, by Phoebe Pierce; The best bread, by Bentz Plagemann; You can get just so much justice, by J. A. Rice; Just before the war with the Eskimos, by J. D. Salinger; A summer day, by Jean Stafford; Meeting time, by J. D. Weaver; Public address system, by Jessamyn West; Six months is no long time, by Leon Wilson.

"Here is one of the best collections of short stories to appear in this annual series. There are no failures, and each story, however it may wander into weakness now and then, pushes into being some valid reading of experience." Paul Engle

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 20 '49 750w

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 14 '49 240w

Kirkus 17:481 S 1 '49 180w

New Repub 121:21 D 5 '49 110w

"The fruit of Herschel Brickell's annual labor in the vineyards of the American short story has been gathered, distilled and bottled, and the only question now remaining is whether or not this will prove a vintage year. Mr. Brickell thinks it will. One is inclined to agree with him." J. J. Maloney

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 27 '49 550w

"Among some other admirable things in this volume are: the poetic quality of Mark Van Doren's 'The Watchman' (second prize winner); Phoebe Pierce's delightful portrait of 'the fattest woman in the world'; and Elizabeth Enright's incredible detachment in her story of the end of the world." Nona Balakian

+ N Y Times p34 O 23 '49 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 30 '49 950w

Reviewed by Hollis Alpert

Sat R of Lit 32:58 N 12 '49 460w

Springf'd Republican p8C N 27 '49 130w

OAKES, VANYA. See Oakes, V. A.

OAKES, VIRGINIA ARMSTRONG. Footprints of the dragon; il. by Tyrus Wong. (Land of the free ser) 240p $2.50 Winston 49-11406

"The story of Hip Wo who came to the Pacific Coast from China to work with the Chinese gangs who helped to build the railroad from Sacramento to Utah. One of The Land of the Free Series." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 46:129 D 1 '49

+ Kirkus 17:474 S 1 '49 110w

"Well-written story with an exciting plot and a flesh-and-blood hero. Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 75:52 Ja 1 '50 80w

"A surprising amount of engineering detail is worked into the fast-moving, thrill-packed story. The life in the Chinese labor camps is well drawn. Hip Wo himself, cheerful, resourceful, earnestly giving his best to the job, is a lovable figure not soon to be forgotten." W. B. B.

+ N Y Times p34 N 13 '49 140w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:29 N 12 '49 50w

OATES, WHITNEY JENNINGS, ed. See Augustine, Saint. Basic writings

OBERNDORF, CLARENCE PAUL. Which way out; stories based on the experience of a psychiatrist. 236p $3.25 Int. univs. press
49-7258

Using a fictional character called Dr Benjamin Ford, the author relates in story form composite episodes from private, clinic and hospital cases.

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 27 '49 50w

"Well-told tales." B. D. Lewin, M.D.

+ Sat R of Lit 32:32 F 5 '49 700w

"The stories and the psychoanalytic meaning behind them are as varied as the characters. Anyone who is interested in human beings or in the art of writing will want to read this book. Dr. Oberndorf has made a contribution both to literature and to psychiatry." A. L. Brush

+ Survey 85:285 My '49 450w

OBERT, EDWARD FREDERIC. Thermodynamics. 571p $5.50 McGraw 536.7 Thermodynamics 48-4365

"Fundamental text in thermodynamics for engineering students with data on air conditioning, refrigeration and gas turbines. Emphasizes theoretical aspects and stress is placed upon real machines, flow processes and properties of fluids. One chapter is devoted to reversibility. Problems. Tables. Charts." (Library J) Chapter references. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1670 N 15 '48 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:94 N '48

OBOLENSKY, DMITRI. Bogomils; a study in Balkan Neo-Manichaeism. 317p map $6.50 Cambridge
273.2 Bogomiles. Manicheism

A history of the Manichaean sect, known as the Bogomils, in the Balkans. This book specializes in tracing the role of Bogomilism in the Bulgarian Empire from the tenth to the fourteenth century. The author is university lecturer in Slavonic studies at Cambridge, England. Bibliography. Index.

"A thorough study of this Christian heresy is a valuable contribution to Church history and the history of Southeastern Europe. The careful research of Dr. Obolensky fails to give a complete picture of the movement. . . The story of the Bogomils in Bosnia, Herzegovina, and Dalmatia is only very scantily treated in one of the appendices of the book. In spite of this limitation Dr. Obolensky's study will prove most useful because of his use of rich Bulgarian source material and his clear differentiation of Bogomilism from other neo-Manichaean sects." Max Fischer

+ — Commonweal 50:348 Jl 15 '49 390w

"Prince Obolensky was already recognized as a Slavonic scholar of much distinction. It is now clear that he is also among the most competent of living Byzantinists. He is in complete command of Byzantine as well as of Slavonic sources. He combines a power of scientific assessment and wide survey with a meticulous accuracy in detail. . . In the main it is probable that his study of early Bogomilism will prove to be definitive. The last third of his volume is more open to criticism."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p237 Ap 9 '49 850w

O'BRIEN, JOHN ANTHONY, ed. Road to Damascus. 248p $2.50 Doubleday
922.2 Roman Catholic church—Converts
49-9069

"The spiritual pilgrimage of fifteen converts to Catholicism." (Subtitle) Contents: Come inside, by Evelyn Waugh; The greatest thing in my life, by Fulton Oursler; Escaping from an atheist's cell, by Gretta Palmer; An invitation heeded, by F. P. Keyes; The verdict of history, by R. J. S. Hoffman; My easy road to Rome, by Theodore Maynard; To church and cloister, by M. R. Simon; Finding life and light, by Rosalind Murray; What I found, by O. F. Dudley; Growing into Catholicism, by R. F. Wagner; From Marx to Christ, by Douglas Hyde; What I gained, by W. D. Nutting; Finding a way of life, by G. B. Harrison; Only one thing to do, by Sheila Kaye-Smith; Under the fig tree, by C. B. Luce; Torches to light our way, by J. A. O'Brien. Suggestions for further reading.

Booklist 45:392 Jl 15 '49

"The excellence of this book comes chiefly from its interesting selection of persons who tell the stories of their own conversion and from the supplementary brief, closely packed, enlightening biographical sketches. In both respects the volume may well be taken as a standard for similar works which we trust will continue to be published from time to time."

+ Cath World 170:81 O '49 100w

Reviewed by W. S. Hudson
Christian Century 66:1452 D '49 2400w

"The prominence of the individuals concerned should assure a wide reading among Protestants as well as Catholics."

+ Kirkus 17:139 Mr 15 '49 180w

"It is an array of changing outlook, which scintillates with side-lights on an era of profound uncertainty in which the individual seeks to find some foothold in the realm of faith. So regarded, the book is a contribution to an understanding of a changing world." P. W. Wilson

+ N Y Times p28 N 20 '49 320w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 3 '49 170w

"This symposium may not have the classic stature of an autobiography by Eric Gill, another famous Catholic convert, or the paradoxical charm of the even better known Gilbert Chesterton; but it is a highly readable collection of spiritual travelogues by noteworthy and newsworthy individuals. In it some will find example and all will find interest." W. S. Lynch

+ Sat R of Lit 32:14 Jl 16 '49 700w

O'CASEY, SEAN. Inishfallen, fare thee well. 396p $4.75 Macmillan
B or 92 49-7561

The fourth part of the author's autobiography describes the death of his beloved mother in the Dublin slums, and carries his life story along thru the troubles with the

Black and Tans, up to the time of his departure from Ireland to take up his life in England.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 183:83 Ap '49 800w

Booklist 45:261 Ap 1 '49

"Few of those mentioned in this memoir will relish the distinction. Few so mentioned have escaped detraction. It is sufficient that most, so mentioned, are tainted as bourgeois or religious or both. Morbid hatred of Catholicity pushes into every chapter like the head of King Charles in the narrative of Mr. Dick. . . Elsewhere, [O'Casey] declares that he was educated in the streets of Dublin. The execrative idiom of his university flows freely and frequently from his pen. To his 'Sweet Inishfallen, fare thee well! Forever!' (p. 396) Ireland surely responded a fervent Amen."
— Cath World 169:152 My '49 400w

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun Mr 17 '49 430w

"In this volume, the slum-born, slum-reared, self-educated dramatist says farewell to Ireland and sails to make his home in England. One can understand the bitterness with which he went away. . . But there is more than bitterness here. Flowing through these pages are the lilt of Irish speech, hidden humor, poetic imagery and mysterious melancholy." Marshall Wingfield
Christian Century 66:562 My 4 '49 1100w

Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 24 '49 1100w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears
Churchman 163:15 Je 15 '49 110w

"A moving and marvelously well-written story. . . For those who remember nostalgically the days of the Irish movement, and for those who honor O'Casey for his rare literary gift, his sparkling pen portraits, his bits alike of honest appreciation and distaste, this book is memorable reading."
+ Kirkus 16:655 D 15 '48 240w

"As in the earlier volumes the writing is at times powerful and exhilarating, but too often it is depressing and dull to the point of exhaustion." M. H. Zipprich
Library J 74:125 Ja 15 '49 130w

"Inishfallen Fare Thee Well is notable for a long passage which is not only as good as anything he has ever written but is good enough for inclusion in the most selective anthology of modern prose. It is about his mother, who died in the miserable Dublin tenement which was O'Casey's home. . . There is also a typical piece of O'Casey tragi-comedy describing love-making interrupted by a Black and Tan raid, but these are the only parts of the book which are not sickeningly disappointing. It is a tragedy that a writer of such talent should waste his time, and his readers' in waging private wars against the Roman Catholic Church, the Abbey Theatre, the De Valera Government, and Irish society in general." G. F.
— + Manchester Guardian p3 F 1 '49 330w

Reviewed by Louis MacNeice
New Statesman & Nation 37:184 F 19 '49 1250w

"For those who are seriously interested in what the Abbey Theatre of Dublin accomplished in the generation from Synge to O'Casey, and O'Casey was the last of the Abbey's important young men, 'Inishfallen, Fare Thee Well' is invaluable. . . And those who will read the book for less scholarly reasons will be charmed by the transformation of what was once a fearful and difficult hour into what now seems a romantic and youthfully hopeful past." Horace Gregory
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 F 20 '49 1100w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
N Y Times p30 Mr 27 '49 1050w

"There is humor in the book, most of it bitter, and there are humanity and awareness, too, but above all there is the ever-new magic of the author's language."
+ New Yorker 25:98 F 26 '49 210w

"There are weak and sentimental pages in this book but there are strong and dramatic ones to seesaw them up. As usual O'Casey's style is melodious with song and saying, his constant drafts on that part of verse which belongs to the common memory giving his writing a quasi-folk flavor. In this volume, however, he writes more simply, but no less eloquently, than in some of the previous ones; there is less verbal counterpoint here, more realism, less fantasy. Occasionally his great gift for words leads him to use them carelessly, less for meaning than for the sound and fury in them." Horace Reynolds
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:18 Mr 5 '49 950w

Reviewed by Una Pope-Hennessy
Spec 182:160 F 4 '49 700w

Reviewed by J. W. Bogan
Springf'd Republican p5D Ap 24 '49 300w

Time 53:100 F 28 '49 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p115 F 19 '49 850w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
Yale R n s 39:169 autumn '49 350w

O'CONNELL, CHARLES. Victor book of symphonies. rev. & enl ed 556p $3.95 Simon & Schuster

785.11 Symphonies 49-7234

"A revision of the original Victor Book of the Symphony which has now been divided into four volumes, each dealing with a different type of music. This book is now devoted entirely to information on symphonies." (Publisher's Weekly) Glossary. Discography. For earlier edition see Book Review Digest 1935.

Booklist 45:397 Jl 15 '49

Chicago Sun p8X F 6 '49 30w

"There is an interesting and valuable introductory section dealing with the modern orchestra and component instruments."
+ Kirkus 16:472 S 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by C. K. Miller
Library J 74:498 Mr 15 '49 70w

"The original work was admittedly written for the layman, and this new volume, while not so described, continues that policy. . . Were a bibliography added suggesting material for further reading, the value of the whole would be increased. It is in the biographical and descriptive content that the best features of the book are displayed; there is much solid writing with few attempts at flowery phrasing. . . The discography is misleading because it does not acknowledge the limited selection represented. The user must refer to other lists for advice as to recordings preferable from the standpoints of interpretation and performance." D. E. McDaniel
+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 6:308 Mr '49 750w

"The newly revised 'Victor Book of Symphonies' successfully steers a middle course between the erudite and the patronizing. Mr. O'Connell has much to say that will interest the intelligent reader, whilst always taking care never to lapse into jargon. The book maintains a happy medium in another sense, too. Musical analysis is often surfeited either with subjective esthetic interpretation or with dry parsing of musical form. O'Connell's writing nicely balances these antithetical qualities." Roland Gelatt
+ Sat R of Lit 32:60 Mr 26 '49 180w

Springf'd Republican p7B Ja 2 '49 210w

O'CONNOR, JACK. Rifle book. 332p il $5.95 Knopf

623.442 Rifles 49-11608

Comprehensive book on rifles, which covers actions, powders, trigger control, stocks, sights, techniques of shooting, etc., all of interest to big game hunters. Index.

O'CONNOR, JACK—Continued

"Just about as complete a guide for the rifle enthusiasts as any gunner could ask." Bob Becker

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p18 D 4 '49 50w

Kirkus 17:502 S 1 '49 110w

"Well organized, clearly written, well illustrated, comprehensive book, in excellent format." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 75:49 Ja 1 '50 40w

O'CONNOR, JOSEPH. The Norwayman. 352p $3.50 Macmillan

49-7828

A tiny island off the west coast of Ireland is the scene of this novel. It chronicles the way of life of two fine young people, Mike McGillicuddy and his wife Maire. The Norwayman was Knut Ollsen whom the couple found near death in an abandoned boat. They took Knut to their island, resuscitated him, and for a year he lived with them as their friend and helper. When tragedy seemed about to end their placid lives, Knut made a last gallant gesture, to help his friends.

Booklist 45:186; 225 F 1 '49; Mr 1 '49

"There is a canniness in the telling here, and a disarming naïveté, almost an absence, of technique that go far toward making the critical reader overlook a certain unevenness and all too frequent episodic effect in given chapters." C. A. Brady

+ — Cath World 169:315 Jl '49 320w

"You'll like this book. Though it isn't a whodunit, you'll keep wanting to see what-happens-next. Perhaps there is something detective-like about some of our motions. And perhaps there are more criminals than are dreamt of in Scotland Yard." M. H. Ley

+ Commonweal 49:641 Ap 8 '49 600w

"A big, healthy Irish novel."

+ Kirkus 17:37 Ja 15 '49 150w

"Characters are alive, descriptions vivid, and many of the adventures breathtaking. Story is pleasantly free of politics and dissension with something of a Robinson Crusoe quality in the telling... Recommended." M. H. Zipprich

Library J 74:313 F 15 '49 80w

"If your mind is clogged with doleful tidings and dire predictions, weary of novels that have a loud tick to prove that they are timely or a bad smell to prove that they are organic, there is healing in Joseph O'Connor's 'The Norwayman.' A joyous and moving affirmation of human dignity and faith, it has the glow and story magic that only the genuinely creative writer can attain. In its shifting moods—rollicking, lyrical, exalted—there is a complete harmony." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Mr 20 '49 550w

Reviewed by Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p31 Mr 27 '49 290w

"Lots of appealing detail on an unhurried and uncomplicated community, but Mr. O'Connor's prose sometimes has the plain uniformity of a large herring net."

New Yorker 25:121 Ap 9 '49 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Je 5 '49 300w

Reviewed by Ruth Moore

+ Sat R of Lit 32:33 Ap 30 '49 750w

Reviewed by Stevie Smith

Spec 183:586 O 28 '49 90w

Times [London] Lit Sup p613 S 23 '49 90w

Wis Lib Bul 45:66 Ap '49

O'CONNOR, RICHARD. Hood: cavalier general. 316p $4 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Hood, John Bell. U.S.—History—Civil war 49-50271

A full-scale biography of John Bell Hood, Confederate general. Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by Jay Monaghan

Chicago Sun p66 Ja 2 '50 480w

Reviewed by Avery Craven

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 25 '49 370w

"The study is sympathetic but by no means is it an attempt to cover up the shortcomings of this ambitious military man who continued in active combat despite a useless arm and lacking a leg. An excellent index and battle maps of Hood's campaigns add to the book's recommendations." H. L. Roth

+ Library J 74:1903 D 15 '49 130w

"Mr. O'Connor lists the Official Records of the Rebellion as his basic source, but as he does not give us any references, we are not in position to check his statements. He relies heavily on the charming reminiscences of J. B. Polley, but these were published in 1910 and are not wholly trustworthy. Sometimes he draws on his own imagination: thus we read that Lee's army invaded the North to the tune of 'Maryland, My Maryland,' but on the retreat 'the bandsmen played a more sorrowful air—'Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny.' As this song was composed in 1878, it sounds improbable." H. S. Commager

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 Ja 1 '50 1440w

"Mr. O'Connor has made the most of his highly picturesque material, and he writes so engagingly, with so much sympathy for all concerned, that his book gets a high place, not only among Civil War biographies but also among those which trace the development of a man. There is some legendary material, to be sure; an apparent belief in the long-exploded idea that McClellan was an able soldier. But the defects are never serious, and disappear altogether in the latter part of the book. One may also be grateful for some acute remarks on over-all Confederate strategy and for a general fairness altogether rare among authors of specialized biographies." Fletcher Pratt

+ — N Y Times p30 N 20 '49 360w

Springf'd Republican p3D Ja 22 '50 360w

O'CONNOR, RICHARD. Thomas: Rock of Chickamauga. 385p maps $4 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Thomas, George Henry. U.S.—History—Civil war 48-9515

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

Current Hist 16:101 F '49 40w

"No citizen with even one red corpuscle in his veins can fail to have it stirred by the heroic and tragic events of this book. O'Connor [is] a veteran newspaperman with a crisp, sure style." Luther Nichols

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ja 30 '49 430w

"It is, of course, nothing new for Americans to remember the noisiest men and forget the capable ones, but it is also happily an American trait to realize when a mistake has been made and try to rectify it. Gen. Thomas never has had the fame he deserved, and Mr. O'Connor's book goes far to even things up a bit. And while giving Thomas the credit he should have, Mr. O'Connor also has brought back to us for a thrilling hour or so the great memories of the Civil War."

+ Springf'd Republican p9B F 6 '49 500w

"The introduction proves a happy one, for the reader is quickly oriented, and provided with an understanding of the self-effacing general's strength of character that enhances the interest of the rest of the story. The remainder of the book, constituting about seven-eighths of it, deals in sequence with the occurrences of Thomas' life prior to and after his great day as savior of Burnside at Chickamauga. Especially notable is Mr. O'Connor's skill at placing Thomas and the events of the Civil War with which he was associated in proper relationship to the larger national and theater strategy."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:50 Mr '49 320w

O'CONNOR, WILLIAM VAN. Sense and sensibility in modern poetry. 279p $4 Univ. of Chicago press
808.1 Poetry 48-9231

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

Booklist 45:239 Mr 15 '49

"A book of this kind is bound to be largely a report on the views of others, views which must be already familiar to any reader interested enough in the subject to take up Mr. O'Connor's volume. . . The final chapters, where Mr. O'Connor gives us his own interpretation of some of the characteristic modern problems, are more lively and more interesting than the more historical portions, and among the earlier chapters his discussion of image and symbol stands out. But surely accuracy above all things is necessary in discussing the poetic effect of color words. . . Let me end by praising the book's utility, and recommending it as a thorough presentation of the more important aspects of the modern poetic mind written by an informed and sensitive critic." David Daiches

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 F 6 '49 1000w

"We might find something to recommend in Mr. O'Connor's pages were it not for the limitations imposed by his dogmas. Unfortunately, the self-styled 'new criticism,' to which this book is a modest contribution, has set up fanatical taboos and hysterical idolatries. . . Those who do not believe that T. S. Eliot is the final and almost the single authority, who distrust terminology as such, and who insist on a perspective extending beyond a few decades, will find the book pretentious and shallow. Those in the family circle of the new criticism will find it one of the most enchanting gifts of their perpetual Christmas. Yet one should remember that mistletoe, though pleasant to kiss under, is, after all, a parasite." Robert Hillyer

Sat R of Lit 32:19 Mr 19 '49 1350w

"From the position taken, Professor O'Connor writes cogently on the influence of the symbolists, the metaphysicals, and the 'pre-Modern Americans,' and on such subjects as myth, verism, tension, and obscurity. His chapters on The Isolation of the Poet, Tradition and Regionalism, Forms of Dehumanization, and The Political Emphasis are well done. . . The book belongs definitely to the history of ideas. . . Professor O'Connor's readers know the modern poets and critics already, and therefore have small need for this book, or they do not know them, and therefore require a more elementary introduction which does not assume so much."

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:17 Mr '49 340w

ODELL, GEORGE CLINTON DENSMORE. Annals of the New York stage; v. 15 (1891-1894). 1010p pl $12.50 Columbia univ. press
792 Theater—New York (city)—History. New York (city)—Social life and customs (27-5965)

"The fifteenth volume of this magnificent account of theatrical entertainment in New York City rolls towards its 1900 goal. This 1010-page volume covers the years 1891-94." Library J

"The most interesting and enjoyable of the long series. No first class theatre or drama collection can be without this. Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 74:1100 Ag '49 60w

"In no other volume has he injected so many amusing comments and critical remarks as in this one. The reason may be that the years covered coincided with his early years of teaching at Columbia and his personal contact with the performances listed. . . All lovers of our stage, all students of theatrical history, or for that matter of social history, will pray that Mr. Odell completes his Annals through the Nineties, and reaches the goal he set himself 29 years ago. No other capital city in the world will have such a record, or one even remotely comparable, and few men will have left so useful and abiding a monument of devotion to the playhouse." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 14 '49 800w

"These impressive volumes express their author's sympathetic concern for all theatrical research, grandly planned or niggling. In a work designed for such a purpose readable qualities ought not to be looked for, but when read leisurely by any playgoer content to take his pleasure where he finds it, this fifteenth volume of a monumental labour of love radiates the enthusiasm which has gone unstintedly into its making."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p764 N 25 '49 850w

ODETS, CLIFFORD. The big knife. 147p $2.50 Random house
812 49-5900

In this play a Hollywood movie star, in a vain attempt to reconcile his inner honesty with the compromises demanded of him in his career, finally reaches the inevitable conclusion in suicide.

Booklist 46:61 O 15 '49

"One cannot avoid feeling a little sorry for Clifford Odets. . . All the reader is sure of is that Odets doesn't think much of Hollywood. When he was pounding social injustice he seemed a fine dramatist. When he pounds Hollywood he takes on something of the character of the dummy he is flailing." W. P. Eaton

— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 O 23 '49 230w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 O 30 '49 160w

Reviewed by Rochelle Gibson

— Sat R of Lit 32:31 D 31 '49 230w

ODOEVTSEVA, MME IRINA. All hope abandon; tr. from the French by F. K. Reed. 282p $3 Pantheon bks.
49-5357

"This novel deals with artistic and political life in Soviet Russia. Written by a Russian now in France, it describes the lack of freedom and the general cynicism and fear in which the privileged classes of Russia live. The contrast between those who are in favor with the Kremlin and those who are not is portrayed here in the lives of a poet, a ballet dancer and a general."

Reviewed by Keith Wheeler

Chicago Sun O 5 '49 90w

"The scenes are wonderfully well-composed: the party where Vera entertains alone, the touching tête à tête with Ronald, the visiting American, who 'did not believe in evil, does not want evil to exist, and when he finds it turns away,' and the last party where Volkov meets Vera again, and she touches Andrei's watch, and listens to it tick, and warns Volkov that she will have him killed, as she had Strohm, who was her lover, killed. And the effortless writing, that begins so slowly, as if time were no matter, and ends, taut and terrible, as though it were the only matter, matches everywhere the rhythm of this very adult and evolved romance." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 51:20 O 14 '49 390w

"The hopelessness of the vicious circle in which [the characters] live is well conveyed, and the story is holding reading."

+ Kirkus 17:438 Ag 15 '49 180w

"While the characters do not seem alive, the situation they typify is only too realistic." Donald Wasson

Library J 74:1203 S 1 '49 90w

New Repub 121:36 N 14 '49 180w

"The whole story is told with a striking economy of means. No gesture is wasted, no tiny detail mentioned that does not grow in the course of their brief novel until it becomes an essential element of fate. . . More than a shelf

ODOEVTSEVA, IRINA—Continued
of treatises and travelers' accounts, this simple and terrifying novel will carry the reader into the heart of life in the land where the 'revolution in permanence' has become a permanent purge." B. D. Wolfe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 O 9 '49 500w

Reviewed by Elena Zuradnaya
N Y Times p36 O 16 '49 270w

New Yorker 25:133 O 15 '49 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p34 N 20 '49 600w

"The ending of the book is rather sentiental. . . Mlle Odoevzev's story is far from being a successful novel. Characterization and plot are frequently delayed or even as good as abandoned for the sake of conveying the author's ideas. Yet this is a readable book. It has moments of suspense, some dramatically constructed scenes, and—above all—it makes a sincere attempt to probe beneath the surface of Soviet phenomena." Robert Pick
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:43 N 19 '49 600w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
Springf'd Republican p17A Ja 8 '50 300w

OEHSER, PAUL HENRY. Sons of science; the story of the Smithsonian institution and its leaders. (Life of science lib) 220p il $4 Schuman

506 Scientists. Smithsonian institution
49-526

A history of the Smithsonian institution of Washington, D.C. told largely thru biographies of men who have been connected with it. Partial contents: James Smithson and his will; Joseph Henry builds an Institution; Baird and the National museum; George Brown Goode, the young genius; Samuel Pierpont Langley. Selected bibliography. Index.

"The author has very wisely chosen to tell this history through the lives of the several secretaries of the Institution, and, in doing so, has given a very readable and lively account of the first century of its existence and avoided what might easily have been a dreary chronicle." H. S. Harned
+ Ann Am Acad 264:160 Jl '49 450w

Booklist 45:222 Mr 1 '49

Chicago Sun p8X F 6 '49 50w

"For the student of science, or for the general reader who is interested in learning more about the less publicized activities of his government, 'Sons of Science' is good reading. Short, concise, and well written, it informs without effort." J. B. Kelley
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 31 '49 500w

"Recommended." Julian Sohon
+ Library J 74:553 Ap 1 '49 20w

"Written in a simple, factual style, 'Sons of Science' performs a notable service in providing in convenient form, the absorbing, but rarely told story of our great national scientific center." C. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ap 17 '49 300w

Reviewed by Marshall Clagett
Sat R of Lit 32:29 Ap 2 '49 230w

School & Society 69:303 Ap 23 '49 60w

"It is a readable and useful contribution to the history of science in the United States."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:216 Je '49 320w

OELLRICHS, INEZ HILDAGARD. Death of a white witch. 220p $2.25 Doubleday 49-50119

Detective story.

"The matriarch and her carefully erratic family who take up most of the author's time are all familiar puppets from the mystery stage and none of them has any vitality left. Too, Inez Oellrich's conversation for them swings from derived-slang and that sort of formal diction which says 'surmise' when it means 'guess.' The consequence is earnest but ill-advised." James Sandoe
— Chicago Sun p67 D 16 '49 150w

Kirkus 17:591 O 15 '49 70w

"There are a great many complications in the telling of this mystery, but the situation itself is disappointingly simple."
— N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p13 D 11 '49 150w

— N Y Times p10 D 25 '49 170w

"A routine kind of story, hard to follow with much interest."
— New Yorker 25:132 D 17 '49 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p27 Ja 8 '50 70w

O'FAOLAIN, SEAN. The Irish; a character study. 180p $2.75 Devin-Adair

914.15 National characteristics, Irish. Ireland—History
49-9827

This essay "presents and explains the historic influences which have molded the character of the Irish down through the centuries." (Publisher's note)

"Books such as this are the most heartening sign of Irishmen's emergence from the long struggle for emancipation as a free people—a struggle which imposed upon them certain restrictive and narrowing thought patterns. There are, as yet, too few such books and they will draw some anguished expostulations for—to quote one of the late eighteenth-century bards whom the author slights—we are still 'in the strong grip of the years, drawing violently on the days of greyness.'" B. M. O'Reilly
+ Cath World 169:473 S '49 420w

Chicago Sun p10X N 27 '49 50w

"This is a salutary book. It is written calmly and kindly. Sean O'Faolain is a genuine patriot; that's mainly why he's in Ireland, not in England or America. He knows his fellow countrymen, particularly their tendency to react to life emotionally rather than intellectually. He wants to awaken them to thought, to self-appraisal, to self-improvement. This book puts them greatly in his debt." R. M. H.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 29 '49 1500w

"The Irish—A Character Study is a very interesting thing of its kind, but it is not a history. What will impress the reader is its candor, which is almost gleeful. When Mr. O'Faolain sets about the myths with which Irishmen warm their hearts at patriotic gatherings, he reminds you a little of a strong-armed boy at a country fair, throwing balls at the target and hitting the crockery, too. The fact that he scores some palpable hits does not quite redeem his effort. It is roaring good fun; it quickened the pulses of this part-time Celt, in whom five generations removed from Ireland have bred detachment. But it must also be written on the score that it is the purely destructive portions of this book which have appealed generally to American critics. Most of these have liked O'Faolain's Irish character study but I vow they have liked it for the wrong reasons." Walter O'Hearn
Commonweal 51:64 O 28 '49 3050w

"In the absence of any non-emotional Irish history at the popular level, recommend this for the controversial curiosity it may stir." E. L. Lewis
+ Library J 74:1022 Jl '49 110w

"Sean O'Faolain's essay is a bright light on the landscape of Irish thought." Thomas Sugrue
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Jl 17 '49 850w

Reviewed by James Stern
N Y Times p3 Jl 17 '49 800w

"A 'character study' that is really a condensed and subjective social history of the Irish nation from the Celtic invasion of Ireland to the present day. It is written with insight and good humor but with a strong disrespect for the traditions of the Irish people."
+ New Yorker 25:67 Ag 27 '49 200w

"'The Irish' offers as clear a picture of a people—their background, their history as it relates to their culture, their culture itself, their socio-economic life, their personality—as it is possible for a book to do." W. R. White
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ag 14 '49 550w

"In his own scholarly and provocative fashion Mr. O'Faolain discusses Ireland's new peasantry, her rebel leaders, her priests, and her writers. He explores the Puritanism that is germinal to Ireland's literary censorship. Provincialism and nationalism, he feels, are the big problems that confront the modern Irish writer. Making due allowance for healthy iconoclasm, I wonder if Mr. O'Faolain does not lean backwards in his treatment of England's politico-religious barbarism. Certainly he is, at times, over-hard on the Irish." A. F. Wolfe
+ Sat R of Lit 32:12 Ag 13 '49 500w

Springf'd Republican p7B Jl 31 '49 280w

Time 54:72 Ag 8 '49 650w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
Yale R n s 39:169 autumn '49 350w

O'FARRELL, WILLIAM. Thin edge of violence. 255p $2.50 Duell
49-4673

Mystery story.

"The book is a muddled matter which, rather than falling between two stools, comes a cropper in a roomful." James Sandoe
— Chicago Sun Ag 12 '49 170w

Kirkus 17:243 My 1 '49 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 S 18 '49 90w

"Readers and writers of mystery fiction have long debated, and not always temperately, whether political content is desirable in fictional melodrama. William O'Farrell gives us the definitive answer: it's not only desirable, it's ideal—when it is as admirably integrated into the personal, emotional plot as it is in 'Thin Edge of Violence.'" A. B.
+ N Y Times p13 Jl 24 '49 220w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 17 '49 150w

OFFORD, MRS LENORE (GLEN). Smiling tiger. 223p $2.50 Duell
49-11204

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
+ Chicago Sun p40 O 21 '49 250w

Kirkus 17:409 Ag 1 '49 90w

"Old Chloe is one of the better characters in this year's crop of detective stories, but the plot of this mystery is so complicated that the denouement comes as something of an anticlimax."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 O 23 '49 180w

"The solution, to be sure, seems somewhat unedited and apt to leave a query or two in the mind of the problem-loving reader. But the body of the book is a delightful specimen of Mrs. Offord's all but unique ability to write a 'feminine' mystery novel which a man can read with relish; and the life of the McKinnons remains one of the few convincing fictional portrayals of an unglamorized but believably good marriage. Long life to them." A. B.
+ N Y Times p35 O 16 '49 220w

"A little too drawn-out, perhaps, but exciting enough for all but those addicted to the very toughest in crime fiction."
+ New Yorker 25:116 O 29 '49 100w

"Highly agreeable." E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 O 30 '49 160w

OGBURN, WILLIAM FIELDING, ed. Technology and international relations [by] Bernard Brodie [and others]. 201p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

609 Technology. International relations
49-8410

The contents of this book are the outcome of the twenty-fourth annual Institute of the Norman Wait Harris Memorial Foundation held May 7, 8, and 9, 1948, at the Shoreland Hotel, Chicago, Illinois. Contents: Introductory ideas on inventions and the state, by W. F. Ogburn; The process of adjustment to new inventions, by W. F. Ogburn; Technology and the growth of political areas, by Hornell Hart; The steam and steel complex and international relations, by A. P. Usher; Aviation and international relations, by W. F. Ogburn; Atomic energy and international relations, by W. T. R. Fox; The mass-communications inventions and international relations, by Robert Leigh; New techniques of war and national policies, by Bernard Brodie; Modern technology and the world order, by Quincy Wright. Index.

Reviewed by J. W. Oliver
Am Hist R 55:98 O '49 750w

"Though the expert will find much that is familiar to him, and despite its admitted limitations, this book is welcomed not only for its wealth of interesting and stimulating opinion, conjecture, and information, but because it points to our still limited knowledge of the field and reminds us of the great and pressing need to study those interrelationships which affect world peace. It is further to be commended for its honest probing into the important and relatively unexplored area of technology and international affairs." E. O. Smigel
+ Am Soc R 14:440 Je '49 650w

Reviewed by W. R. Crawford
Ann Am Acad 264:127 Jl '49 600w

Reviewed by Ernest Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p16 My 10 '49 450w

Current Hist 16:289 My '49 40w

Foreign Affairs 28:159 O '49 30w

"'Technology and International Relations' is fairly hard reading. It is also worth reading." C. E. Noyes
+ Nation 169:185 Ag 20 '49 1100w

"Offering no simple solutions, 'Technology and International Relations' brings a fund of clear thinking, clearly expressed, to some of the basic problems of world politics." P. E. Mosely
+ N Y Times p21 Ag 7 '49 700w

"Though, as in any symposium of this kind, the quality of the various contributions is uneven, this book is an important contribution to basic thinking on an important and neglected topic." L. M. Goodrich
+ Pol Sci Q 64:437 S '49 700w

"Limitation of the treatment to a single determinant, technology, on such a large and complex sphere necessarily leaves many gaps. The subject matter is broad and relatively unexplored, and these essays subsequently reflect subjective and inconclusive hypotheses. They are valuable in suggesting the need for acceleration in governmental and independent inquiry into the social impact of technological developments." R. H. U.
San Francisco Chronicle p2 My 8 '49 150w

OGG, ELIZABETH. Decorating the small apartment. 141p il $2.95 Womans press

645 House decoration 49-50088

"Offers practical advice on how to furnish a one- or two-room apartment without spending a great deal of money. It is not concerned with the needs of families with children, . . . but rather addresses itself to the single man and woman and the young married couple who are setting up housekeeping, perhaps for the first time." (Pref) Lists suggested places for buying furniture, draperies, etc. Brief bibliography. No index.

Booklist 46:139 D 15 '49

Bookmark 9:80 Ja '50 40w

OGG, OSCAR. 26 letters. 254p il $3.50 Crowell
411 Alphabet—History. Writing—History 48-9445

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

Current Hist 16:230 Ap '49 30w

"There is fascination on every page of this beautiful book. . . Letters are discussed here for their art value rather than as symbols, and the result will be most illuminating to young people and to the non-professional adult." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 25:142 Mr '49 90w

"This history of writing characters happily manages to combine qualities that seldom get together. Though written for laymen, professionals will admire it. Its language is simple enough for any one who reads English to understand, its style so natural an outsider finds himself inside the exclusive company of typophiles before he knows where he is. . . The 'art preservative of all arts' has a history of its own bearing so directly upon its own present development that such a book as this can give us not only the background but the principles of good printing." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 F 6 '49 400w

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:34 Mr '49 160w

OGILVIE, ELISABETH. Rowan Head. (Whittlesey house publication) 301p $3 McGraw 49-10325

The scene is the coast of Maine. Miriam Chase, nurse-companion to Felice Cameron, whose mind has been clouded by her husband's desertion, is the central character. The three red-headed Cameron sons provide most of the drama of this novel of family pride and clashing temperaments.

Booklist 46:4; 14 S 1 '49

"You will find Rowan Head entertaining and, strangely enough, because of the author's skillful handling, not depressing." M. E. Brennan

+ Cath World 170:160 N '49 160w

Chicago Sun p11X O 23 '49 160w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 12 '50 240w

"The pitch here, psychological, romantic is high but never suspect, and there's a strong narrative drive which makes this continually holding."

+ Kirkus 17:402 Ag 1 '49 210w

Reviewed by George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 S 11 '49 600w

"Sky and ocean again come vividly to view, fog creeps in, and the cry of gulls is heard. Somewhat less convincing are the events that occur in this setting. . . While the author persuades us to enjoy the story and ignore contrivance, it is somewhat hard to believe that an incident of desertion, twenty-two years past, could charge the present with so much electricity. Yet warmth and vitality are not lacking in this novel." Joan Andrews

+ — N Y Times p36 S 11 '49 270w

Reviewed by Marc Rivette

San Francisco Chronicle p28 O 23 '49 170w

"It is long since American writing has had so Brontë-like a novel. This romance is one with 'Jane Eyre' and 'Wuthering Heights,' and, like its predecessors, displays the same power to keep the drama in full suspense. The life within the house, moreover, and the life outside it are both presented with a realism which is only heightened by the romantic qualities of the plot. The scenes between the brothers are particularly well done. Elisabeth Ogilvie has given us another most interesting study of our world." Henry Beston

+ Sat R of Lit 32:36 S 17 '49 450w

"Miss Ogilvie, author of several stories of Maine which have been applauded for their faultless presentation of the atmosphere and characters of the 'down Easters,' presents here another strong novel. However, the characters seem somewhat overdrawn. Repeated use of the superlative in describing good and bad traits and emotions, even scenery, tends to make them unreal. Places and persons aren't entirely good or bad." J. F. S.

+ — Springf'd Republican p8B S 18 '49 300w

OGRIZEK, DORE, ed. Great Britain: England, Scotland, and Wales [text by John Booth, and others]. (Whittlesey house publication) 459p il col maps $6 McGraw 914.2 Great Britain—Description and travel 49-9946

Illustrated, informal guidebook to England, Scotland and Wales, which attempts to convey the atmosphere and customs of the various sections of each country. Historical background is sketched, but the usual guidebook data is not given. Companion volume to France: Paris and the Provinces (Book Review Digest 1948) and Switzerland (Book Review Digest 1949). Index of towns and places.

Booklist 46:31 S 15 '49

"This is a guidebook apparently written on the admirable principle that the day of the traditional Baedeker, in which formal knowledge was dished up solely for improvement's sake, is eminently past. The present visitor to a country wants not architectural achievements alone, but the total feel of a place and its people. Any book which lays the groundwork for this sense of place, as this book does, must be welcomed with open hands." Ruth Chapin

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 21 '49 650w

"By all odds this is the best volume so far in the World in Color Series. For the first time the writing matches the brightness of the illustrations, perhaps because this is the first time Mr. Ogrizek has used writers who are totally familiar with English and impatient of pedantry."

+ Sat R of Lit 32:33 Ag 13 '49 130w

OGRIZEK, DORE, and RUFENACHT, JEAN GODEFROY, eds. Switzerland [adapted and tr. by Mary Bancroft]. (Whittlesey house publication) 272p il maps $5 McGraw 914.94 Switzerland—Description and travel 49-4286

"Thirteen writers, seventeen artists, two coordinators, a translator, and two editors have combined talents to produce this book. . . The text deals agreeably with the historical and geographical background of the land, depending upon fine color illustrations and an occasional anecdote to keep things light. The local gastronomy is dealt with rather carefully, and there is some news of the winter sports situation, alpinism, and fishing." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 45:391 Jl 15 '49

"A wealth of sprightly illustrations gives the latest addition to The World In Color Series the charm and fascination of an entertaining animated cartoon. . . The text compares favorably with the pictures. The old and the new in Switzerland are in proper perspective, and you zip through the twenty-two Swiss cantons with the same ease that the electric trains show as they cross the rugged terrain." Robert Meyer

+ N Y Times p23 Jl 17 '49 180w

"About all that is left out is specific data about restaurants and hotels, rather significant intelligence, it seems to me."

+ Sat R of Lit 32:37 Je 18 '49 120w

O'HARA, CHARLES E., and OSTERBURG, JAMES WILLIAM. Introduction to criminalistics; the application of the physical sciences to the detection of crime. 705p il $10 Macmillan
351.74 Criminal investigation 49-11434

"Two New York City detectives, members of the Police Department's famed 'crime laboratory,' are presenting, probably for the first time, a composite picture of the vast field of crime detection. . . Photographs, diagrams and tables of reference data are used to delineate the advanced scientific methods by which criminals can be apprehended and convicted. The writers reveal that in the last decade the law-enforcement mind has come forward with nothing more revolutionary than the increased use of the two-way radio." (N Y Times) Bibliographies. Index.

"This book is, on the whole, a successful attempt to incorporate under one cover the applications of the physical sciences to crime detection." H. C. Freimath
+ Chem & Eng N 28:126 Ja 9 '50 230w

"This thoroughly scientific volume in eminently practical field is intended as textbook and reference work. Richly documented, with an abundance of excellent illustrations and diagrams it is probably one of the best and certainly the most up to date source book for criminalistic techniques. Appeal limited to students of law and sociology, judges, attorneys and possibly writers of detective stories. But for those a must." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 74:1677 N 1 '49 140w

"The book should arouse the interest and concern of all who seek more effective methods to combat the rising crime rate." Alfred Clark
+ N Y Times p26 N 20 '49 130w

O'HARA, JOHN. Rage to live. 590p $3.75 Random house
49-10363

Novel describing a wealthy woman who had "a rage to live." Eventually it destroyed her marriage and made her an exile from her Pennsylvania town.

"Mr. O'Hara has written a truly imperfect novel: it is flawed, disproportionate, and obsessively erotic. But let it immediately thereafter be said that Mr. O'Hara has written a tumultuous, powerful, and in parts deeply moving novel." Harvey Breit
— + Atlantic 184:84 S '49 1050w

"O'Hara would not be so sentimental as to dub Grace a heroine but he has chosen to headline her and, to the detriment of the novel, she is a shallow, rather dull character. The parts are better than the whole in this book. There are some quick, interesting personality sketches and O'Hara dialogue is often trenchant. But these good points are not enough to redeem a disappointing novel." Mary Sandrock
— + Cath World 170:76 O '49 300w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p8X Ag 14 '49 600w

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 22 '49 90w

Reviewed by Henry Rago
Commonweal 50:562 S 16 '49 650w

"Not a book for any conservative market, and the freedom of the language is a warning to Public Libraries; but a book of definite masculine appeal, and of absorbing interest in the minute details of its believable characters."
Kirkus 17:307 Je 15 '49 220w

"Not recommended because of frank language and extreme emphasis on sex." H. G. Kelley
— Library J 74:1025 Jl '49 80w

"In addition to being pretentious and dull, 'A Rage to Live' is a kind of backhanded praise of the culture its author professes to excoriate." Ernest Jones
— Nation 169:231 S 3 '49 650w

"The astonishing thing about A Rage to Live is that O'Hara, who has almost always written with such insight that I had begun to think that no one was safe from him, could have done such a thin job on his heroine. . . There is a lot of good writing in this book. It is set in O'Hara's country; he came from there, and at times he can be brilliantly homesick. He can use the straight, brutal, board-fence sexual idiom with such honesty that, while it shocks, it is not offensive. There are a great many minor characters; some of them are wonderful and all of them are better than the heroine." John Woodburn
+ — New Repub 121:18 O 31 '49 750w

"The amount of revelatory action packed into the six hundred pages of 'A Rage to Live' is easily enough to make it O'Hara's richest work and one of the most convincing fictional studies of upperclass life in America." Milton Rugoff
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ag 21 '49 1250w

"A thorough and unselective portrait of a town and its people, a portrait with no apparent purpose, no special depth, and no discoverable literary or artistic function. There are several scenes of solid, dramatic, meaningful writing in 'A Rage to Live.' But the best of the balance is brilliantly competent, and the worst engenders in the reader a rage to leave." A. C. Spectorsky
— + N Y Times p4 Ag 21 '49 850w

"A sprawling book, discursive, and prolix, ranging in time from 1877 to 1947, and full of a multitude of semi-detached characters and subplots, what 'A Rage to Live' does resemble is one of those 'panoramic,' three-or-four-generation novels that writers of the third and fourth magnitude turn out in such disheartening abundance. Dr. O'Hara's handy guide to healthy sex practices has been tucked inside the disarming wrapper of the formula family novel, and one result of this odd combination is the loss of the old sure-fire, ice-cold O'Hara dialogue. . . It is hard to understand how one of our best writers could have written this book, and it is because of O'Hara's distinction that his failure here seems in the nature of a catastrophe." Brandan Gill
— New Yorker 25:64 Ag 20 '49 1100w

"It is utterly frank, especially in sex matters, and will shock many. But it goes down as an important contribution to the list of novels in which American writers have examined the American scene and tried to be absolutely honest about what they saw." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 16 '49 1000w

"O'Hara's dependable X-ray vision has failed him in the case of this woman [Grace Caldwell Tate]. His inability to see clearly what she is and why she operates as she does is half the basic flaw of the book. The other half is his attempt to tell her story against a large-canvas chronicle of the social, political, and sexual give-and-take of Fort Penn in the years immediately before and after America's entrance into the First World War. This has made for a sprawling and untidy work, full of trivial incident, superfluous flashbacks, pointless conversations—so different from the well-pruned, highly charged prose which has been O'Hara's trade-mark. . . O'Hara can never be completely unrewarding; he's just got too much. There is in him great sadness laced with delightful wit." Lee Rogow
— + Sat R of Lit 32:11 Ag 20 '49 950w

"A Rage to Live is peppered with evidences of O'Hara's technical writing skill. He still has an ear for dialogue that makes his characters' conversation as credible as if it were overheard. . . But Novelist O'Hara seems satisfied with only a casual-meeting knowledge of his people. Reading A Rage to Live is almost like exchanging slightly malicious gossip about one's home town over a drink in a bar. Everyone is discussed but no one is really understood. Like all hot gossip, it is oddly exciting, strangely unsatisfying. The major defect of A Rage to Live is the lack of final meaning, of implicit comment on human experience by which the reader subconsciously finds the true measure of all fiction. . . A Rage to Live makes swift, frequently exciting reading. Even in their disappointment, readers will know they have been in the company of a writer."
— + Time 54:81 Ag 29 '49 600w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 39:191 autumn '49 500w

OLDENBERG, OTTO. Introduction to atomic physics. 373p il $5 McGraw 541.2 Nuclear physics. Atoms 49-723

"A relatively simple treatment of fundamental atomic theory. It is designed for college students who have not studied calculus and have had only one year of introductory physics. Its outstanding quality derives from the care

OLDENBERG, OTTO—Continued
the author has taken to describe the experiments and observations upon which modern knowledge of the atom is based. It has been developed from material used in an introductory course in atomic physics which the author has given at Harvard University for many years." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 45:350 Je 15 '49
N Y New Tech Bks 34:27 Mr '49

OLIVER, MRS MARJORIE MARY. Riding days; il. by Stanley Lloyd [Eng title: Riding days in Hook's Hollow]. 125p $2.50 Presbyterian bd.
48-7947

Catherine, a shy twelve-year-old English girl, was sent to spend the summer with her grandmother whom she scarcely knew. Nearby lived a family of children who helped Catherine thru the trying days when she was learning to swim, ride, and to get used to other children. For grades four to seven.

Booklist 45:196 F 1 '49

"One of those pleasant books about animals and English-Irish children, with horses a sure passport to popularity."
+ Kirkus 16:399 Ag 15 '48 80w

"Contains many ingredients of a good children's book. Boys and girls in fifth and sixth grades are likely to enjoy it. Recommended." Eileen Van Dyke
+ Library J 74:204 F 1 '49 80w

OLIVIA, pseud. Olivia. 135p $2.75 Sloane
49-2752

The anonymous author tells of her "schoolgirl crush" on a headmistress of a French finishing school.

"A first novel which will find considerable appreciation for the fine finish of its styling, the discretion and delicacy of its handling of a first love remembered many years later. . . For a fastidious following, the sensitivity, tenderness and restraint here give this a literary as well as emotional charm."
+ Kirkus 17:92 F 15 '49 170w

"Restraint, sense of form and, above all, respect for the traditions of great literature are behind the whole range of the story, creating an effect of disciplined facility and highly developed technique. As in the tragedies of Racine, the juxtaposition of the principal characters follows a set design. They stand out in high relief against the style of book, which is informal: the writer seems to be talking to herself; but every now and then she lets fall one or two carefully selected fragments of self-revelation, and these set off the passages of dramatic power. . . The author of Olivia, precedes her story with this sentence: 'Love has always been the chief business of my life, the only thing I have thought—no, felt—supremely worth while. . .' It is this conviction, not only strongly felt but deeply pondered and skillfully manipulated, that gives her book force and life." H. W. Chapman
+ New Statesman & Nation 38:131 Jl 30 '49 700w

"The book should be warmly commended to the attention of parents and teachers who so often must face, with no matter how much delicacy and discretion, somewhat similar experiences on the part of the young people under their care. The candor and limpidity of this little text renders it most illuminating. Those with literary tastes will think of 'Olivia' in connection with other, more imposing texts: such, for instance, as one peculiarly enchanting theme in Walter Savage Landor's 'Pericles and Aspasia.' " Iris Barry
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ap 3 '49 450w

"In formal structure, in creation of feeling by the naming of an emotion, rather than the suggestion of it by situation, sensations, or imagery, 'Olivia' achieves the purity of classic tragedy. Enriched by classical allusions and long passages of direct quotation from Racine, Lamartine and Victor Hugo, the prose itself takes on the stately cadence of French. The style is occasionally marred by pedantism and sentimentality. . . These are, however, minor flaws. 'Olivia' remains a work of art; intensely controlled within a compact structure." Hilda Osterhout
+ — N Y Times p4 Mr 27 '49 650w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Je 5 '49 400w

"No reader, young or old, need hesitate to fall a victim to the charm and intensity of 'Olivia,' as it is essentially the story of a woman who compassionately attempts to shield another from the results of an inflammable emotion to which she herself has set the torch. Human nature is the villain of the drama and not lust or depravity. This is about pure love drawn innocently to the wrong source." Harrison Smith
Sat R of Lit 32:15 Ap 9 '49 800w

"The book cannot be satisfactorily discussed on psychological lines. It must be accepted, in the manner its author evidently intends, as a tale pierced through with truth and beauty, not a little strangeness and the kind of wonder seen by Desdemona in a handkerchief, foreshadowing catastrophe and betrayal."
Times [London] Lit Sup p325 My 20 '49 750w

OLSCHKI, LEONARDO. Genius of Italy. 481p $5 Oxford
914.5 Italy—Civilization 49-8897

"A series of essays on various aspects of Italian cultural and political life by a liberal Italian scholar who is well known in American and European academic circles. In the story of Italy from the tenth to the twentieth century, Mr. Olschki discerns not so much a swing between great creative periods and dark periods of retrogression as the continuous flowering of the energies of a people who went from building a state to inventing political and religious institutions to new discoveries in art and literature." New Yorker

Booklist 46:32 S 15 '49

"Certain sweeping generalizations and simplifications are inevitable, but the author's erudition and keen understanding renders them invariably original, usually convincing and always stimulating. He is at his best in the period of the Renanscence, from Dante, to whom he devotes an admirable essay, to Galileo." G. Bagnani
+ Canadian Forum 29:141 S '49 280w

Reviewed by G. S. Hooker
Chicago Sun Je 1 '49 20w

"The chapters on the literature, arts, and crafts of Italian tradition are especially well done."
+ Current Hist 16:345 Je '49 50w

"A competent job, but the market will be primarily college libraries, and student reference shelves."
+ Kirkus 17:250 My 1 '49 320w

"Such a complex subject cannot but provoke discussions at every step, even with those who, like this reviewer, agree with Olschki's basic theories. But even readers who dissent will not fail to admire the strength and originality of this splendid historical synthesis." Gaetano Salvemini
N Y Times p3 S 4 '49 650w

"A book of considerable value and interest, but not one for the idleminded reader."
+ New Yorker 25:115 My 21 '49 110w

"It is an excellent book that can be highly recommended. The author's background—chiefly Italian and German, but broadly continental European—and his earlier studies qualify him eminently for the task he has set himself: with deep understanding and sympathy, yet with unsentimental dispassionateness and the breadth of a cosmopolitan outlook, to trace the course of Italy's development." René Albrecht-Carrié
+ Pol Sci Q 64:610 D '49 850w

"Two caveats should be entered before the average reader settles down to this book—as I hope he will. Since there is a vast amount of material to be covered, the writing, admirable though it is, is tightly packed and never easy reading. . . Further, intense condensation and some ellipses, inevitable and perhaps unconscious on the part of the author, lead occasionally to apparent ambiguities. . . A third objection might be made by some on the score of this very confident and categorical approach; the author uses black and white freely and has his own theories of history, too, somewhat discounting the importance of purely economic forces. But history is what the historian makes it and Mr. Olschki makes it alive and significant; we can hardly ask more." T. G. Bergin

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:25 Jl 16 '49 850w

OLSEN, D. B., pseud. See Hitchens, D. B.

O'MALLEY, MARY DOLLING (SANDERS). See Bridge, A., pseud.

OMMANNEY, FRANCIS DOWNES. The ocean. (Home univ. lib) 238p $2 Oxford

551.46 Ocean. Marine biology [49-8898]

"In this book the author . . . describes the physical characters of the ocean basin and seawater. He gives an outline of the life in the sea, both in the open ocean, in the great deeps and on the seashore; and he has much to say on the fishing industry and whales and whaling. There is a final chapter on the instruments and methods which scientists have used in the discovery of these matters." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"Although this book can be described as a textbook, it is as one expects of a volume in the Home University Library, a textbook meant for the ordinary reader; and in this case it provides the most fascinating reading. It is written simply, but with much literary grace and to those who know very little more about the ocean than they have discovered for themselves on a sea trip, or the seashore, the book should prove a genuine thriller, while those who are more knowledgeable will appreciate a study that gives them so concisely and entertainingly the very latest facts and theories." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 My 4 '49 480w

"The chapter on the seashore should be reprinted as a holiday guide by the more intelligent seaside resorts; they have rarely told their visitors so effectively what fun their sands and rocks have to offer." H. D. N.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 22 '49 170w

"This book makes the reader think; what is more important, it stirs him to wonder."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Mr 19 '49 750w

O'NEAL, CHARLES. Three wishes of Jamie McRuin. 248p $2.75 Messner

49-10831

Tale of two Irishmen who left Ireland under something of a cloud, and sailed for America. In Georgia they joined the Irish Travellers, a notorious band of horse dealers. And there Jamie McRuin, "the flahooly one," gained all of his three wishes.

Booklist 46:83 N 1 '49

"A smooth, entertaining story with plenty of romance and adventure, the scenes among the old Irish horse traders in Georgia being particularly interesting. If the author's Irish idiom lacks something of the authenticity of a Michael McLaverty, his style is nonetheless poetic, imaginative, rich with Irish lore, and plentifully enlivened with humor." B. J. Thompson

+ — Cath World 170:160 N '49 220w

"Mr. O'Neal has the virtue of being able to write in a polished, effortless prose and knows how to tell a story without trying to make it seem more important than it is. Just the thing for Irish grandmothers to pass a rainy afternoon." J. J. Wey

+ Commonweal 51:302 D 16 '49 290w

Kirkus 17:403 Ag 1 '49 150w

"Though highly improbable and so mixed with Irish lore and fantasy that the reader hardly knows when it is one or the other, it is all pleasant reading and a good escape literature. Recommended as such." M. H. Zipprich

+ — Library J 74:1203 S 1 '49 70w

Library J 74:1558 O 15 '49 40w

Reviewed by George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 O 2 '49 290w

"This book, which received one of the recent Christopher awards, is self-conscious, strained. It cannot be called altogether successful." J. W. Chase

N Y Times p36 O 16 '49 320w

San Francisco Chronicle p36 D 4 '49 150w

"As a novel, this book . . . is a mildly entertaining, capably written example of what the publishing world calls 'light fiction.' As a Christopher Award, on the other hand, it is an interesting, at times fascinating document since it represents what five American Catholics . . . consider to be an outstanding example of Christian literature." Thomas Sugrue

+ Sat R of Lit 33:15 Ja 7 '50 360w

"Recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul p9 N '49

O'NEILL, CHARLES KENDALL. Morning time. 392p $2.95 Simon & Schuster

49-10772

Historical novel about life in New England and Pennsylvania in the post-Revolutionary period. The Wilkinson conspiracy plays an important part in development of the plot.

"Morning Time briskly avoids being a run-of-the-mill historical novel by reason of its swift pace and high color. Amusing, inconsequential reading." Mary Sandrock

Cath World 170:315 Ja '50 150w

Reviewed by V. P. Hass

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 20 '49 450w

Christian Science Monitor p11 N 3 '49 240w

"The book is overlong and involved, but this is a competent handling of a rather novel facet."

+ — Kirkus 17:340 Jl 1 '49 240w

"Well-written, but long and involved novel. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 74:1322 S 15 '49 70w

"Mr. O'Neill has got it all in. Six pages of close print at his story's end recite the scope of his research. It includes pretty nearly everything pertinent to his argument from Humphrey Marshall's 'History of Kentucky' and four biographies of Wilkinson and what the scholarly journals have published about him since the general's traffic with Spain was discovered to historians in 1904, to a book about Connecticut's saltbox houses, and he has made good use of it all. Unfortunately, Mr. O'Neill did not include the University of Chicago's Dictionary of American English among his reference books. Anachronisms stick out of his character's talk like the spurs on barbed wire." E. B. Davis

— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 O 16 '49 1250w

"Mr. O'Neill's achievement is double: he tells a good story and he tells it well; and in tracing the slow, painful emergence of One America, he gives heart and muscle to today's believers in One World." M. H. Ley

+ N Y Times p33 O 23 '49 500w

New Yorker 25:154 N 12 '49 160w

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller

Sat R of Lit 32:28 O 29 '49 700w

Springf'd Republican p10B D 25 '49 210w

O'NEILL, JAMES MILTON. Religion and education under the Constitution. 338p $4 Harper

377.1 Church and state in the U.S. Church and education 49-8342

A discussion of the meaning of the First Amendment of the Constitution in regard to the separation of church and state. Bibliography. Index. The author has been the Chairman of the Committee on academic freedom of the American civil liberties union.

Booklist 46:7 S 1 '49

"This timely book is also permanently valuable. Any intelligent reader who glances at the table of contents should feel impelled to read the following 300 pages; if he looks over the index the impulse may well become irresistible." Joseph McSorley
+ Cath World 170:153 N '49 300w

Reviewed by Tully Nettleton
Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 16 '49 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Titus
Churchman 163:15 D 1 '49 180w

"Here is a work of demolition and exposure to be read by those interested in the substitution of clear thinking for muddy slogans, in proper relations between church and state and in the restoration of sound Constitutional law." B. W. Palmer
+ Commonweal 50:299 Jl 1 '49 500w

"Essential for those who will inevitably have to take sides on educational issues." Nathaniel Stewart
Library J 74:663 Ap 15 '49 100w

Reviewed by B. F. Wright
N Y Times p16 Jl 10 '49 750w

School & Society 69:237 Mr 26 '49 100w

O'NEILL, JOHN JOSEPH. Engineering the new age. 320p $3.50 Washburn

620.9 Technology—Philosophy. Civilization 49-7638

"John O'Neill is science editor of the New York Herald Tribune. His new book is a positive and aggressive demand for an engineering approach to the future on a vast and challenging scale. It is a plea for planning—but planning far ahead, rather than on the basis of one or two Presidential terms. . . Tomorrow's planning would include the building of new and better cities. . . O'Neill [also] covers a host of further problems in flood control, education, agriculture, and highway planning." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

Ann Am Acad 264:180 Jl '49

Booklist 45:237 Mr 15 '49

Reviewed by H. C. Parmelee
Chem Eng 56:279 Ag '49 650w

Eng N 143:80 Jl 7 '49 330w

Kirkus 16:638 D 1 '48 120w

"This book, despite its specific and forward looking title, is a somewhat rambling commentary on mankind's stupidity, interlaced with facts from many sciences and with lessons from man's long history. It is pervaded by a quiet faith in the ultimate power of human intelligence to organize a better world. It is less a challenge to mankind, as the jacket states, than a challenge to engineers to take over this muddled world and rebuild it." Gerald Wendt
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 F 27 '49 400w

"This book includes so many suggestions and criticisms about so many vital matters that some points will inevitably be contested by experts in various specialized fields. Also, certain sections . . . would have made easier reading if someone at the publisher's office had done a bit of cutting. . . But the spirit of every chapter is forward-looking and hopeful—and sound. No one can argue with the book's basic premise, that the world needs more scientific, long-term planning." J. E. Pfeiffer
+ Sat R of Lit 32:27 Ap 2 '49 750w

ONRAET, ANTHONY. Sixty below; with an introd. by Thomas Wood; il. by Eugene A. Beinert [Eng title: Down North]. 191p $3 Didier pubs.

917.12 Northwest, Canadian. Trapping 49-7765

True stories of hunting, trapping and fishing in the Canadian Northwest, by a French-Canadian trapper. Contains a chapter on the author's dog team, and much incidental material on living in the northern wilderness.

Booklist 45:246 Mr 15 '49

"Outdoor adventures in North West Canada which besides being autobiographical have a full quota of wilderness lore."
+ Kirkus 16:591 N 1 '48 110w

Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 3 '49 250w

OPDYCKE, JOHN BAKER. Mark my words; a guide to modern usage and expression. 687p $5 Harper

424 English language—Words 49-9309

A combination of dictionary and thesaurus. The author has selected about ten thousand words of often confused meanings; from these he has chosen several hundred key words. These are considered in alphabetical order, in paragraphs of fifty to a thousand words, explaining the several distinctions between the key-word and its similar terms. Index.

Booklist 46:8 S 1 '49

"For anyone fascinated with words and their meaning, this book is a must."
+ Kirkus 17:203 Ap 1 '49 180w

"No jester, John B. Opdycke, a veteran grammarian, news correspondent, committeeman, and lecturer, can coax a chuckle from his reader. His neat title, his own precision, his little quips when the going is rough, take the bombast from the exhorter's usual manner, the scowl from the pedantic brow. . . Execution, however, falls short of the plan. True, the key words are well chosen, the index is complete and accurate. But it is hard to believe the author's statement that the introductory sentences were taken from books, magazines and newspapers. They sound fusty, made up—sentences nobody would ever speak or write." K. P. Kempton
+ — N Y Times p23 Ag 7 '49 460w

OPPE, ADOLF PAUL, ed. See Hogarth, W. Drawings

ORD, LEWIS CRAVEN. Politics and poverty; with a foreword by Sir P. Malcolm Stewart. 188p $3 Funk

338.91 Industry and state. Great Britain—Industries and resources. U.S.—Industries and resources 49-7060

"Exposition of the reasons for the decline of British industry, with a study of the subject in other areas, including the United States. The author's theory calls for American methods of production to be adopted for England, plus the benefits of industrial management, rather than political interference." Current Hist

Reviewed by George Terborgh
Am Econ R 39:1046 S '49 550w

Am Soc R 14:331 Ap '49 120w

"When the author relates facts from his own direct experience, he points to problems the theoretical writer may overlook. On the other hand, when he suggests, for example, that American anti-trust laws actually resulted in breaking monopolistic management, his entire thinking must be discounted heavily. . . A dismissal of governmental planning and nationalization without considering a development such as the Tennessee Valley Authority must inevitably be shallow. Mr. Ord deals with some hard realities. It would be distressing, however, if readers accepted his theorizing as proven." Dale Pontius

Ann Am Acad 262:210 Mr '49 400w

Current Hist 16:231 Ap '49 50w

Foreign Affairs 28:158 O '49 20w

Reviewed by Herbert von Beckerath

J Pol Econ 57:272 Je '49 550w

ORGANIC reactions; editorial bd: Roger Adams, ed-in-chief, Werner E. Bachmann [and others]. v4 428p $6 Wiley

547 Chemical reactions. Chemistry, Organic (42-20265)

"In this volume of a work which has come to be regarded as a standard reference series the following topics are treated: the Diels-Alder reaction with maleic anhydride, the Diels-Alder reaction with Ethylenic and acetylenic dienophiles, the preparation of amines by reductive alkylation, the acyloins, the synthesis of benzoins, synthesis of benzoquinones by oxidation, the Rosenmund reduction of acid chlorides to aldehydes, and the Wolff-Kishner reduction." (Chem & Eng N) Index.

Reviewed by R. C. Elderfield

Chem & Eng N 27:178 Ja 17 '49 500w

"This is a brilliantly planned and executed work. It is complete, succinct, and clear. It is invaluable both for study and laboratory application." R. L. Clarke

+ Chem Eng 56:319 Mr '49 200w

"The high standard of excellence characteristic of the previous volumes is maintained in this one. The topics have been carefully chosen with regard to importance and timeliness; the writing is good; and the editing is first-rate." L. I. Smith

+ J Phys Chem 53:595 Ap '49 200w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:182 D 15 '48 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:83 N '48

"The wealth of information, critically treated, collected here in text and tables will be of great value to students of organic chemistry as well as to those concerned with the synthesis of specific compounds."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:118 Mr '49 360w

ORIGO, IRIS (CUTTING) marchesa. Last attachment; the story of Byron and Teresa Guiccioli as told in their unpublished letters and other family papers. 533p il $5 Scribner

B or 92 Byron, George Gordon Noël Byron, 6th baron. Guiccioli, Teresa (Gamba) contessa 49-10980

"The Contessa Teresa Guiccioli [was] the object of the poet's last, longest and perhaps deepest attachment. . . Teresa's papers and treasures have at last come to light. . . The papers in this collection . . . include, not only 149 of Byron's love-letters, mostly in Italian to Teresa, and some of her answers, but Teresa's Vie de Lord Byron,—her unpublished account of his life in Italy, which she wrote in her old age and thought too intimate to be published during her lifetime. In addition there are the documents of the Guiccioli lawsuits . . . and there are Pietro Gamba's letters to his sister from Greece, besides many other letters to her from Shelley, Lady Blessington, Lamartine, John Murray and others. In short, we have at last . . . the full story of Byron and Teresa Guiccioli." (Introd) Index.

Booklist 46:96 N 15 '49

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun N 28 '49 100w

Kirkus 17:566 O 1 '49 240w

"Well documented for scholars, this book also presents a warm and living human drama. Recommended." Shirley Barker

+ Library J 74:1601 O 15 '49 110w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 38:360 O 1 '49 2000w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 6 '49 2250w

Reviewed by Carlos Baker

N Y Times p48 O 23 '49 900w

"A highly satisfactory work, particularly noteworthy for its abundance of new material, including some from the Contessa's own hitherto unpublished 'Vie de Lord Byron en Etalie.' "

+ New Yorker 25:126 O 22 '49 200w

"It is safe to say that no previous biographer, of the host who have had something to say about Byron, has probed so deeply into the period of his Italian residence, and few have written with the detachment and the very real ability of this lady. . . This is a first-rate piece of literary and biographical analysis." C. W. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p37 N 20 '49 400w

"The Marchesa Origo is sensitive to the inconsistencies, to the mixed motives and impulses, in both Teresa and Byron. Her book is that rara avis—a study which uncovers original materials and treats them with thorough and impeccable scholarship and which at the same time presents a story of great human interest." Robert Halsband

+ Sat R of Lit 33:9 Ja 7 '50 750w

"Here is a fascinating book: I use the much abused word deliberately. Byron 'fans' will tumble over each other to buy or borrow it; and the common reader—anyone, that is, who cares for first-rate biography with a dash of mystery—may be advised to follow suit. For my part, I could not have believed that so much material of value remained unpublished and, seemingly, unexplored almost." Clive Bell

+ Spec 183:360 S 16 '49 750w

"How to make the best use of new material is a problem that has always to be faced. The Marchesa Origo, whose scholarly work includes annotations of all quoted documents and the entire Italian text of Byron's letters, has built up a narrative overcrowded by its embodiment of old and new. A briefer view of the known story would have left more latitude for the author's fine imaginative and interpretative talent."

Times [London] Lit Sup p600 S 16 '49 3250w

ORLIAC, ANTOINE. Veronese. See Veronese, P.C.

ORNE, JERROLD. Language of the foreign book trade; abbreviations, terms and phrases. 88p $2.25 A.L.A.

655.5 Book industries and trade—Terminology

"Separate alphabetical lists of currently used book-trade terms in French, German, Italian, Portuguese, Spanish, Dano-Norwegian, Dutch, and Swedish. Gives words, including ones too new to have found their way into the dictionary, abbreviations, and phrases commonly used in foreign book catalogs." Booklist

Booklist 45:350 Je 15 '49

"Considerable linguistic skill is necessary to handle a job of this sort, and the pitfalls are numerous. The compiler had the collaboration of an expert in each language except Swedish, a fact obvious from the deficiencies of that section (incorrect spelling; antiquated orthography, probably traceable to some one dealer's cataloger, unreconstructed individualist that he is likely to be; incorrect definitions; unidiomatic and incorrect definitions or those which are not the specific ones most common in the book trade; and some confusion of singular and plural). Some of these deficiencies appear in other sections, but with considerably less frequency. . . As the compiler suggests in his preface, this is only a beginning; but it is a challenging beginning, and those of us who use it should pay our debt to the compiler by submitting to him emendations and suggestions for additions." L. S. Thompson

+ — Library J 74:1308 S 15 '49 420w

O'ROURKE, FRANK. The team. 237p $2.50 Barnes, A.S.
49-11084

A baseball story for older boys. It follows the course of a team's season from spring training to the fall series, and is told from the point of view of the team manager.

Booklist 46:102 N 15 '49

Kirkus 17:559 O 1 '49 130w

"A fine story."
+ Library J 74:1680 N 1 '49 30w

"The first part is handled with competence. No youngster could read this book without gaining real understanding of the complex nature of bigtime baseball. . . The story, however, is thin and sometimes unrealistic." R. A. Brown
+ — N Y Times p20 Ja 29 '50 230w

Reviewed by W. R. White
San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 13 '49 40w

ORSBORNE, DOD, pseud. See Orsborne, G. B.

ORSBORNE, GEORGE BLACK. Master of the Girl Pat; ed. by Joe McCarthy. 278p $3 Doubleday
B or 92 Adventure and adventurers 49-7194

The adventurous career of a Scotsman who began his career by enlisting in the British navy during World war I. He narrates his experiences and narrow escapes thru the two World wars and the years between.

Booklist 45:190 F 1 '49

Chicago Sun p8X Ja 23 '49 180w

"Good yarns, constant risks and exciting moments should make this of special interest to men."
+ Kirkus 16:586 N 1 '48 170w

Reviewed by H. G. Kelley
Library J 73:1817 D 15 '48 100w

N Y Times p30 F 6 '49 500w

New Yorker 24:85 Ja 22 '49 160w

"Tells of a life fantastic almost beyond belief. In fact, most people will find their credulity stretched somewhat beyond the breaking-point, I think. The yarn is said to have been sold to Hollywood for a reputed $55,000. For the purchaser's sake, one hopes it doesn't turn out to be another of those 'Trader Horn' things, though perhaps it would make no difference anyway." J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 12 '49 850w

Discussion by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 21 '49 650w

"Since the book contains, in all its leagues and fathoms, not one sentence of a literary nature, and makes no pretension to the persuasive arts, for instance, of Defoe, it seems that the best way to report its content would be to catalogue the troubles that the author has set down. . . Since there are hints of other books to come, I should like to point out as an old India hand (by means of Jim Corbett's 'Man-Eaters of Kumaon') that we do not call a tiger's pug marks 'paw marks'; and, as an old Sargasso hand, I must say I was troubled by the aftermast being dismasted." Edmund Gilligan
Sat R of Lit 32:17 Ja 8 '49 700w

ORTON, MRS HELEN (FULLER). Mystery in the pirate oak; il. by Robert Doremus. 120p $1.75 Lippincott 49-9989

Mystery story for younger boys and girls.

Reviewed by Margaret Miller
Library J 74:1465 O 1 '49 70w

"There is not as much excitement as the title hints at, but it is pleasant reading, with a good atmosphere and enough mystery for ages eight to ten." L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 S 18 '49 180w

ORWELL, GEORGE. Nineteen eighty-four. 314p $3 Harcourt
49-9278

A satirical novel about a future time when people living in a collectivist society are persuaded by Thought Police into thinking that ignorance is strength and war is peace. The chief character is an average man, Winston Smith, whose work in the Ministry of Truth consists of falsifying records when state policy changes. "The novel depicts his heroic search for an underground movement in revolt against the nightmare that is the State. It also tells of the sad course of his attempt to escape the frustrated conception of sex and to carry on a love affair that bears some resemblance to romance, some relation to physical joy." (Sat R of Lit)

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 184:83 Jl '49 900w

Booklist 45:326; 336 Je 1 '49

Bookmark 9:6 O '49 40w

Reviewed by R. L. Weaver
Canadian Forum 29:117 Ag '49 1700w

"Mr. Orwell wastes no time in describing possible gadgets of the new era, nor in being satirical or funny or purely fantastic. His is a rapt concern for the plight of the human race, and in calm prose of high excellence, he directs his diatribes chiefly at Soviet Communism and English Socialism, but also, for the rest of us, living perhaps too smugly under the aegis of Democracy, he sounds a liberal and rational note of warning that we examine our motives and study the meaning of our shibboleths." M. P. Corcoran
+ Cath World 169:393 Ag '49 480w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun Je 13 '49 550w

"It is pointless either to praise or blame Orwell for using the satirical method, since that is his natural medium. He is, in fact, the only first-rate satirist of our time. One can be glad he uses this method, for it probably gains him more readers for what he has to say than any other method would. But satire has one serious limitation: it is the least persuasive form of literature." H. S. Tigner
+ — Christian Century 66:1042 S 7 '49 1000w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '49

"Brilliantly as he depicts and dramatizes the assault upon the individual will, Mr. Orwell is less successful when he tackles emotional relationships. The love affair which furnishes the fictional fillip of the book is shallow and unconvincing; one has the feeling that it bored the author as much as it does oneself. Mr. Orwell is very thoroughly an intellectual. He has, however, in '1984,' proved his ability to communicate his ideas in a manner calculated to rob many hours of sleep from every thinking reader." David Burnham
+ — Commonweal 50:324 Jl 8 '49 550w

"Certain to create interest, comment, and consideration."
+ Kirkus 17:255 My 15 '49 250w

"No one will read Nineteen Eighty-Four for pleasure but it should be read! It is almost as intense an experience as the first reading of a great Russian novel." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 74:892 Je 1 '49 70w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield
Manchester Guardian p3 Je 10 '49 390w

"A brilliant and fascinating novel." Diana Trilling
+ Nation 168:716 Je 25 '49 1200w

Reviewed by Robert Hatch
New Repub 121:23 Ag 1 '49 2350w

"A book that goes through the reader like an east wind, cracking the skin, opening the sores; hope has died in Mr. Orwell's wintry mind, and only pain is known. I do not think I have ever read a novel more frightening and depressing; and yet, such are the originality, the suspense, the speed of writing and withering indignation that it is impossible to put the book down. The faults of Orwell as a writer—monotony, nagging, the lonely schoolboy shambling down the one dispiriting track—are transformed now he rises to a large subject." V. S. Pritchett

New Statesman & Nation 37:646 Je 18 '49 2050w

"'Nineteen Eighty-four' is a remarkable book; as a virtuoso literary performance it has a sustained brilliance that has rarely been matched in other works of its genre. But what gives it importance is its timeliness; it is as timely as the label on a poison bottle." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Je 12 '49 1700w

"'Nineteen Eighty-Four,' the most contemporary novel of this year and who knows of how many past and to come, is a great examination into and dramatization of Lord Acton's famous apothegm, 'Power tends to corrupt and absolute power corrupts absolutely.'" Mark Schorer

+ N Y Times p1 Je 12 '49 1900w

"'Nineteen Eighty-four' confirms its author in the special, honorable place he holds in our intellectual life. . . [It] is a profound, terrifying, and wholly fascinating book. . . Orwell's theory of power is developed brilliantly, at considerable length. And the social system that it postulates is described with magnificent circumstantiality." Lionel Trilling

+ New Yorker 25:78 Je 18 '49 2250w

Reviewed by Vance Bourjaily

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 12 '49 950w

"George Orwell's novel escorts us so quietly, so directly, and so dramatically from our own day to the fate which may be ours in the future, that the experience is a blood-chilling one. . . The story of official pursuit has all the suspense and melodrama of a super-detective novel, but instead of an exercise in criminal chase we are confronted with the grim pursuit that hangs over the head of every modern man." William Soskin

+ Sat R of Lit 32:12 Je 11 '49 1000w

"The book has many qualities as a thriller. The first half is as exciting as one could wish. But there is a flaw here. Just at the point where the excitement becomes excruciating and Winston and Julia launch out into their revolt against the Party, Mr. Orwell maddeningly reminds us that all he's really interested in is the political implication of his story. He suspends the plot for thirty pages of Trotsky-Goldstein-Orwell analysis of contemporary political trends. And for the rest of the book he is concerned only with establishing the fact that no refinement of horror is beyond the Party's reach, not even that of making a man wholly love and believe in something which he knows is false and hateful." Robert Kee

+ — Spec 182:834 Je 17 '49 650w

Springf'd Republican p21A Jl 10 '49 900w

Time 53:91 Je 20 '49 1900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p380 Je 10 '49 2250w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel

Yale R n s 39:189 autumn '49 410w

OSBORN, FAIRFIELD. Our plundered planet. 217p $2.50 Little

631.45 Conservation of resources 48-6167

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

Reviewed by J. L. Fisher

Am Econ R 39:822 Je '49 750w

Foreign Affairs 27:154 O '48 30w

Reviewed by P. F. Sears

J Geol 58:87 Ja '50 650w

Reviewed by Eric Ashby

Manchester Guardian p3 F 8 '49 150w

Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad

New Statesman & Nation 37:256 Mr 12 '49 950w

"Where forests and grasslands are mined and raided and ravaged for the benefit of an immediately profitable urban market, the curse of Leviticus is eventually invoked upon the destroyers. Just how that curse works . . . Mr. Osborn explains in a style no less convincing for its occasional naïveté; and his closing plea for a radical change of attitude, a concentration of common human effort on the task of conservation and rehabilitation, is virtually unanswerable. . . Our Plundered Planet is an urgent warning, not a prophecy. Though far along the wrong road, mankind can turn back; though science gives no short-cut solution (hydroponics, artificial fertilisers, chemical pest-control and 'marine farming' offer variously but equally delusive hopes), yet patience, co-operative self-restraint and humility towards Nature can halt the damage and even slowly restore it." Honor Croome

Spec 182:228 F 18 '49 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p158 Mr 5 '49 650w

"Clearly and readably, the President of the New York Zoological Society sets forth the basic philosophy of conservation and the essential facts upon which that philosophy rests. He has expressly avoided the esthetics and ethics of the situation. This leaves the reader to draw his own inescapable conclusions, and adds greatly to the force of the presentation."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:372 S '48 180w

OSBORNE, LETITIA PRESTON (MRS G. H. LAISER). Little voyage. 254p $2.75 Lippincott

49-9379

On a banana plantation in Honduras Nancy Leslie lived with her sister and brother-in-law, happy and contented tho she sometimes wondered about love. Then Steve Brent, middle-aged novelist and philanderer, came into her life and tho Nancy thought she had learned about love from him, fortunately he passed on before it was too late for her to fall in love with the right man.

Booklist 45:346; 376 Je 15 '49; Jl 1 '49

Reviewed by Bruce Taylor

Chicago Sun p8X Jl 17 '49 120w

"Not soul-stirring, but not superficial, the story maintains its sparkle from cover to cover, though a few incidents seem attached rather than integrated." W. K. Rugg

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 14 '49 230w

"Recommended for escapist reading." J. L. Ross

Library J 74:956 Je 15 '49 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Jl 31 '49 190w

"Rather thin on plot, the novel compensates by giving much entertaining information about weather, wild life and vegetation in Honduras, as well as odd expatriate characters. But the most amusing and best written parts deal with the Ames' native servants. There is a childlike dignity in their sorrows and an innocent bravado in their boasting. This reviewer found the romance of Vicente, the illiterate yardboy, far more moving and tender than pretty Nancy's affairs." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p16 Jl 17 '49 340w

"Around a novelist's search for local color, a young girl's dream of a devastating love, and young man's patient devotion, Miss Osborne has written an amusing, light-hearted romance." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 32:15 S 3 '49 450w

OSTENSO, MARTHA. Sunset tree. 255p $3 Dodd

49-11313

In flashbacks and reminiscences of friends, this novel tells the story of Esther Clarke, who became Ronda Southflagg, from her girlhood to the age of fifty, when the strange relationship between mother and daughter is finally resolved.

OSTENSO, MARTHA—Continued

"'The Sunset Tree' is dramatic and diverting."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 N 6 '49 130w

Reviewed by M. S. Hurst

N Y Times p28 N 6 '49 90w

"It is a fruitful theme, one that has been explored many times within recent memory. There are, however, several things wrong with Miss Ostenso's version of it. For one thing, she seems to have done a hasty and shallow job of writing. The novel reads too often like a series of notes, with scraps of dialogue ideas, for a book she might have been planning to work out at greater length. . . Finally, there is an overall effect of contrivance quite unlifelike—everything falling into place according to plan, and never a real vital voice raised to assert the unpredictable quality of character. There's nobody there but Miss Ostenso." N. L. Rothman

— Sat R of Lit 32:27 D 17 '49 320w

Springf'd Republican p8C N 20 '49 80w

OSTERWEIS, ROLLIN GUSTAV. Romanticism and nationalism in the old South. 275p $3.75 Yale univ. press

917.6 Romanticism. South—Civilization 49-7620

"Romanticism is quite generally held to be the central theme of southern history and literature. In this [study] . . . the romantic theme had four patterns which were identified with four cultural areas. There was the Upper South with its intellectual center at Richmond, the Coastal South with its political philosophy of nationalism for the South centered at Charleston, the Gulf South with its commercial center at New Orleans, and the southwestern frontier with no center anywhere but with a rough version of the other three patterns everywhere. There were many other expressions of romanticism, but the cult of chivalry was common to all four patterns." (Christian Century) Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by Ella Lonn

Am Hist R 54:950 Jl '49 320w

"If one allows for the pardonable enthusiasm of the monograph writer, his book is a suggestive, if mildly repetitious, study." H. M. Jones

Ann Am Acad 264:154 Jl '49 330w

"Scholarly yet readable study." Marshall Wingfield

+ Christian Century 66:270 Mr 2 '49 800w

Current Hist 16:231 Ap '49 50w

"Mr. Osterweis has confined himself pretty much to the obvious. We find here neither a substantial body of original material, nor original interpretation. What we do have is a somewhat labored rehearsal of what such historians as Dodd, Phillips, Gaines and Parrington have already set forth." H. S. Commager

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 S 4 '49 900w

"The parts of the survey perhaps most interesting to this reviewer are the chapters which examine the periodicals of the Old South, especially those from three main centers: the Southern Literary Messenger at Richmond, the Charleston Quarterly, De Bow's Review at New Orleans. Mr. Osterweis has spared himself no pains, and the result makes good reading. The footnotes at the back of the book are unusually provocative. Quotations, like raisins in a cake, fatten and enrich the text throughout. The author defines romanticism and minutely evaluates his varied sources in his exhaustive indices." Frances Gaither

+ N Y Times p6 F 20 '49 800w

"The material, though not new, is newly arranged to give fresh insight, and the book will be valuable to all those interested in the complexities of American history. There is an excellent index, and a useful, lengthy bibliographical section."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:216 Je '49 280w

OTTLEY, ROI. Black odyssey; the story of the Negro in America. 340p $3.50 Scribner

325.26 Negroes—History 48-9099

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"As a popularization of a difficult subject, Roi Ottley's Black Odyssey is at least partially successful. Telling the story of the American Negro in brief and unaffected prose, this book should appeal to the interested reader seeking only to glean the major highlights. The author has approached his task with a journalistic background rather than as a trained historian." L. P. Stavisky

+ — Am Hist R 54:689 Ap '49 480w

Reviewed by A. M. Rose

Am Soc R 14:437 Je '49 750w

"Told through anecdotes and personality sketches. The light touch thus brought to a frequently weighty subject was, to this reviewer, most welcome. Yet it would be exaggerating to say that Ottley has drawn on the vast canvas supplied by all of American Negro history a picture as successful as, say, his own smaller portrait of Harlem, 'New World A-Coming.' The new book lacks clarity, unity, and smoothness. Nevertheless, individually, its many sequences leap with life." Daniel James

+ — Nation 168:422 Ap 9 '49 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 F 6 '49 150w

Reviewed by D. W. Brogan

Spec 183:209 Ag 12 '49 700w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:78 Mr '49 190w

OTTO, HENRY JOHN. Principles of elementary education. 430p il $4 Rinehart

372 Education, Elementary 49-8607

"In preparing this book the author tried to integrate his thinking about the essential features of a good elementary school of today and his ideas about effective ways of educating teachers and prospective teachers in the professional field of teaching in elementary schools." (School & Society) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"Although the book is designed to meet the needs of students in an introductory course in elementary education, it will be read with profit by teachers in service, administrators, and supervisors, and those persons who wish to refresh themselves by additional study. . . The author has structured his book to meet the needs of readers. Each chapter is summarized and is supplemented by a listing of basic ideas developed in the content. Suggested student activities and recommended readings also are included. The approach is nontechnical and the treatment sound. The book is a welcome addition to the literature of elementary education and is recommended for teachers in training, teachers in service, and administrators and supervisors who are working with elementary-school children." W. J. Moore

+ El School J 50:53 S '49 950w

School & Society 69:271 Ap 9 '49 40w

OTTO, MRS MARGARET (GLOVER), and OTTO, STUART. Truck book; with phot. by Ellen Conried, and others. 64p $1.50 Sloane

629.224 Motor trucks—Juvenile literature 49-49412

"Pictures and describes: laundry truck, steam shovel, clamshell bucket crane, dump truck, bulldozer, concrete mixers, snow loader, tow truck, telephone-line repair truck, street-light maintenance truck, plate-glass truck, armored truck, horse pullman, refrigerator trailer and about thirty more." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 46:145 D 15 '49

"A concise descriptive text supplements the photographs, will answer the questions, and parents should be eternally grateful. Unfortunately, the book is not indexed."

+ — Kirkus 17:605 N 1 '49 130w

"Recommended for ages 7-10." Juanita Walker
+ Library J 74:1828 D 1 '49 30w

"Boys of the eternal-question age often come to a curiosity about trucks before they begin their passion for freight trains. They will be quiet for quite awhile with a book like this. . . This brief text and photographs are seriously informative, and neither have any imaginative nor artistic allure. But probably boys and their fathers will pore over the pages together, and afterward watch eagerly for kinds they did not know before on the roads." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 20 '49 180w

"A very well-illustrated and planned book." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:35 N 12 '49 30w

OURSLER, FULTON (ANTHONY ABBOT, pseud). Greatest story ever told; a tale of the greatest life ever lived. 299p $2.95 Doubleday

232.9 Jesus Christ—Biography 49-7342

A compilation of stories from the radio program The greatest story ever told. These cover the life story of Jesus from the foretelling of His birth to the Ascension.

Booklist 45:210 F 15 '49

"Association with a popular program lends unusual interest to the book; but it possesses a great interest in its own right too." Joseph McSorley
+ Cath World 168:490 Mr '49 250w

"There can be no question of the fine intentions of Fulton Oursler—'How beautiful are the feet of those who preach the gospel of peace'—and one can only trust The Greatest Story Ever Told reaches the public for whom it may mean something and for whom it was written." E. V. R. Wyatt
+ Commonweal 49:500 F 25 '49 550w
Kirkus 17:52 F 1 '49 90w

"A dramatic presentation of the story, which old and oft repeated, retains intense interest. These scripts, among the most vivid ever given over the air, make it feel as real and contemporary as a newspaper report. Highly recommended for public and school libraries." J. L. Ross
+ Library J 74:57 Ja 1 '49 80w

"A radio listener, moved by the sense of immediacy that came over the air in the screen version, may be glad indeed to have these pages in print, to fix the memory and carry on the inspiration."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 F 27 '49 270w

"The stories are simply written and can be read as entertainment, as introduction to the Gospel story or as commentary. The important thing is that they present in modern form an account of those dramatic, long-past, seemingly obscure events that have somehow changed the world." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times p10 F 6 '49 500w

"In his modern language life story of Jesus, Fulton Oursler follows closely and reverently the chronicles of the four apostles, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. The narrative moves at a good pace and the reader is caught up and carried along with complete assurance that nothing has been said to which any denomination can take offense." Edgar Blake
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 17 '49 190w

"The battle of idiom, that pitfall of so many an historical novelist, plagues Mr. Oursler and is responsible for more than one unsure touch. . . Yet the book contains many passages of quiet conviction and rightness of phrase and tone. There are not a few moments of firm outline and vivid color, reminiscent of the qualities of real life in the painting of Georges de La Tour." Riley Hughes
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:29 F 19 '49 600w
Wis Lib Bul 45:63 Ap '49

OURSLER, FULTON (ANTHONY ABBOT, pseud), and OURSLER, WILLIAM CHARLES. Father Flanagan of Boys town. 302p il $3 Doubleday

B or 92 Flanagan, Edward Joseph. Boys town, Omaha, Nebraska 49-10638

A biography of Father Edward Joseph Flanagan, the Irish-American priest, founder of the famous Boys Town for young delinquents and other unfortunate children.

Booklist 46:96 N 15 '49
Bookmark 9:54 D '49 30w

Reviewed by Roman Pucinski
Chicago Sun O 13 '49 700w

Reviewed by E. S. Skillin
Commonweal 50:635 O 7 '49 450w
+ Commonweal 51:244 D 2 '49 70w

"Written with warmth, humor, and marked popular appeal, this should sell widely and well."
+ Kirkus 17:419 Ag 1 '49 150w

"Recommended." A. J. Gaines
+ Library J 74:1462 O 1 '49 140w

"It is a highly readable, affectionate, warm book, full of quotation and anecdote, written in a popular style that should gain it a wide audience. Especially, of course, it should be in the hands of those who work professionally with boys; but there is no lay or clerical social worker who cannot learn tremendously from it." E. H. Smith
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 N 6 '49 600w

"The Ourslers frequently interrupt their narrative with case histories of waifs who excited Father Flanagan's pity. These make some of the best reading, but could certainly have been slipped into their proper places with far neater transition than the authors have achieved. This biography survives the treatment it has received. It will have to serve until the day when a more painstaking biographer shall come through with the story of the really great man." Meyer Berger
+ — N Y Times p12 O 9 '49 360w

" 'Father Flanagan of Boys' Town' is more than just a good biography of a great humanitarian—it is an eye-opening textbook of tolerance." E. J. A.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 27 '49 320w

OVERSEAS PRESS CLUB OF AMERICA. Men who make your world. 319p $3.50 Dutton

920 49-11702

Character sketches of twenty-five political, religious, and economic leaders of today. Those included are Harry S. Truman, Dean Acheson, Douglas MacArthur, Robert Oppenheimer, Paul Hoffman, Walter Reuther, Josef Stalin, Viacheslav Molotov, Lavrenti Beria, Paul-Henri Spaak, Clement Attlee, Winston Churchill, Charles De Gaulle, Thorez and Duclos, Tito of Yugoslavia, Pope Pius XII, Francisco Franco, Antonio Salazar, Juan Perón, Chaim Weizmann, King Abdullah, Jawaharlal Nehru, Mao Tse-Tung, Jan Christian Smuts.

Booklist 46:158 Ja 1 '50
Kirkus 17:533 S 15 '49 130w

"Style of writing is of uniform excellence, maintaining reader's interest throughout Highly recommended, except to Soviet sympathizers." H. S. Taylor
+ Library J 74:1318 S 15 '49 140w

Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 1 '50 650w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson
N Y Times p50 N 20 '49 450w

Reviewed by J. M. Minifie
Sat R of Lit 33:12 Ja 7 '50 600w
Wis Lib Bul p7 N '49

OVERSTREET, HARRY ALLEN. Mature mind. 295p $2.95 Norton

136.52 Psychology, Applied. Mental discipline 49-984

This book by the author of About Ourselves and Influencing Human Behavior contains "First a review of the 'psychological foundations' which now allow us to define maturity in men, then a discussion of the how and how-not of maturity, and finally a review of 'forces that shape us' (economics, politics, family life, education and religion) and provide the complex in which we exercise whatever degree of maturity we have reached." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 184:86 Ag '49 700w

Booklist 45:381; 384 Jl 15 '49

Bookmark 9:4 O '49 30w

"The theme is hammered home so relentlessly that at times you get the feeling Overstreet has simply substituted the terms 'mature' and 'immature' for 'good' and 'bad'. But there is a legitimate idea here, and Overstreet has presented it in highly readable form." Robert Lasch
+ — Chicago Sun Ag 10 '49 500w

"The style is most readable. It will tickle the palate of almost any reader, and for that reason a very wide sale for the book may be predicted. A good by-product will be the secular reader's unwitting perusal of something which is like the best contemporary preaching, for here is a Luccockian sermon." K. B. Cully
+ Christian Century 66:1038 S 7 '49 1600w

"Thoughtful, stimulating."
+ Kirkus 17:313 Je 15 '49 180w

"Exciting because it takes an important but technical idea and develops it on the level of general understanding. High potential of usefulness. Emphatically recommended." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 74:1022 Jl '49 130w

"Mr. Overstreet sets down in simple, easily understood terms what the concept and lesson mean concretely in every-day life. He brings together the ideas of psychological age, arrested development, conditioned response, aptitude uniqueness and adult capacity to learn, weaving them into a unified view of human nature and of its possible fulfillment." Albert Hofstadter
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ag 14 '49 800w

"The philosophy of 'Rabbi Ben Ezra' expanded to nearly three hundred pages is the substance of this suave, mannerly, yet occasionally disconcerting and even alarming, book by the sometime Professor of Philosophy in the College of the City of New York. A lifetime devoted to study of the mentality of the human race, and specifically of the American branch, has him frankly depressed; but if he sings tit-willow, it is not for the criminality, but for the massive, the monumental, the colossal puerility of mankind. . . One suspects that from an otherwise excellent treatise Dr. Overstreet has omitted one important constituent of the completely mature mind, to wit: humor, which, like experience, is the gift of time. Youth may have wit, but humor is the slow distillation of the years. Nevertheless, he has written a charming and salubrious book, which should be an excellent prophylactic against the pandemic hysteria of the times." G. W. Johnson
+ — N Y Times p4 Ag 14 '49 1200w

"An inspirational work that, for a change, appeals to the mind."
+ New Yorker 25:67 Ag 20 '49 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 14 '49 440w

"A man who cares about his human brethren enough to learn all he can about them in a lifetime, and pass it back to them with humility and love, exhibits the important usages of maturity. Every page of his book reveals that Harry Overstreet is this man, and the reader's growing realization of it takes the book out of the theoretical world and gives it validity and reality." R. M. Brickner
+ Sat R of Lit 32:8 Ag 13 '49 1150w

Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich
Springf'd Republican p7B Ag 14 '49 300w

"The book as a whole is popular, in that it is written for people rather than for the scholar, yet it is based on sound scholarship. Its outlook is sane, its message significant." C. M. Washburne
+ Survey 85:447 Ag '49 550w

OWEN, FRANK, ed. Teen-age winter sports stories; il. by Richard Osborne. 256p $2.50 Lantern press (N Y)

49-8941

Sixteen stories (seven basketball, four skiing, three hockey, and two track), many of them reprinted from Open Road for Boys and Boys' Life magazines. Contents: The fall guy, by B. J. Chute; The freeze-out, by David Larsen; Lesson for Flying Goat, by Roger Verran; Four-ring circus, by B. J. Chute; Rattlesnake trail, by H. K. Fitts; Left-hand stuff, by John Gartner; Sophomore forward, by G. M. Peterson; The puck-eater, by K. P. Kempton; Record-breaker, by W. H. Temple; The hat trick, by C. G. Muller; Jug Leg Kelley, by John Gartner; Captain Kidder, by H. W. Sandberg; A leap for two lives, by C. W. Whittemore; "I play basketball," by W. T. Person; Headwall tempo, by J. E. Dodge; Long-shot Porter, by W. T. Person.

Booklist 45:340 Je 1 '49

"There's humor and adventure, good dialogue, with authentic prep school, high school and undergraduate college wisecracks; there's not much about school other than sports, but a general feel of bull sessions and comradeship, school and team intrigue, and the sense of being on the inside looking out. Sure market among boys—and having been a Ralph Henry Barbour fan in my early teens, I don't think the market is limited to boys."
+ Kirkus 17:179 Ap 1 '49 180w

"Stories are rather slight and have the usual pat and satisfying endings. Most of them have action, a few have humor. Suitable for boys 11-15 and poor readers 14-16 who don't want long stories." Lillian Morrison
Library J 74:897 Je 1 '49 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 10 '49 30w

Springf'd Republican p8C My 15 '49 60w

OWEN, RUTH (BRYAN) (MRS BORGE ROHDE). Caribbean caravel; il. by Leon Helguera. 222p $2.75 Dodd

49-8755

Travel story for ages 10-14. Donnie and Ken, ages 11 and 13, made a Caribbean voyage with their uncle, a freighter captain. They learned much about the West Indies and even found some buried treasure. The places visited were: Bermuda, St. Thomas, St. Croix, Martinique, Barbados, Trinidad, British Guiana, Surinam, Grenada, St. Vincent, Puerto Rico, Dominican Republic, Cape Haitien, Port au Prince, Jamaica.

"Recommended where travel books are popular." Sonja Wennerblad
Library J 74:1034 Jl '49 60w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 My 22 '49 230w

Reviewed by Irene Smith
N Y Times p24 Je 12 '49 150w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:46 N 12 '49 50w

OWEN, WILFRED, 1893-1918. Poems; with a memoir and notes by Edmund Blunden. (New classics ser) 135p $1.50 New directions

821 49-11997

"Only twenty-three poems were printed in the first edition of Wilfred Owen's work, but that small collection, prepared by Siegfried Sassoon with the assistance of Edith Sitwell, was enough to give him the highest rank as a war poet and to place him among the best English poets of his time. . . In 1931 Edmund Blunden assembled a complete edition of Owen and included a memoir which quoted extensively from his letters and the more tentative poems of his youth. It is this edition, with later revisions, which is now available in the New Classics Series." Library J

"Not the least interesting part of this little book are his letters home, quoted by Blunden, which are brilliant and very moving. A republication which will be welcome to all poetry lovers."
+ Kirkus 17:644 N 15 '49 180w

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald
Library J 74:1909 D 15 '49 110w

"There are some flabby lyrics here. There is poetry that delights by its sheer technical virtuosity. Mainly, this book is a testament—the testament of a sensitive, unblinking, compassionate participant—to the evil of war. The craftsmanship is apparent in what Owen wrote about poetry in his letters, quoted in Blunden's Memoir, and in the interesting variorum readings that are appended to the text, as well as in the poems themselves." Babette Deutsch
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 1 '50 1000w

OWSLEY, FRANK LAWRENCE. Plain folk of the old South. 235p $3.50 La. state univ. press

917.5 South—Social life and customs 49-11743

Study of the middle class Southern whites, based on census lists of 1850 and 1860 and tax lists. Delivered in shorter form as lectures at Louisiana State University in 1948. Index.

Booklist 46:157 Ja 1 '50

Reviewed by Allan Taylor
N Y Times p13 D 25 '49 60w

OXENHAM, JOHN. Selected poems; ed. by Charles L. Wallis, with a biographical sketch by Erica Oxenham. 178p $2 Harper

821 48-9382

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton
+ Crozer Q 26:189 Ap '49 140w

Reviewed by Peter Viereck
N Y Times p16 F 13 '49 360w

"There's something refreshing about the candor of John Oxenham in an age of sophistication and doubt. As a poet he rises above his chosen limitations as a religious teacher by the quality of his images and richness of his experiences in life. . . Many of Oxenham's poems read with the majesty of a hymn, and in that category he would stand high with John of Celano, with Watts, Wesley, Faber." A. M. Sullivan
+ Sat R of Lit 32:30 F 12 '49 270w
Wis Lib Bul 45:28 F '49

OXFORD classical dictionary; ed. by M. Cary [and others]. 971p $17.50 Oxford

913.38 Classical dictionaries 49-7954

"The range of the dictionary is a broad one, including art and archaeology, geography, history, literature, mythology, philosophy, religion, and science. While the majority of articles are concerned with individual persons and things, an especially laudable feature is the number of longer articles (commerce, medicine, music, law, tragedy, etc.) designed to give a comprehensive survey of the larger aspects of ancient life. Short bibliographies follow the principal articles and refer the reader to the best works, in English and foreign languages, on the various subjects. Almost all aspects of ancient Greek and Roman civilization have been dealt with." N Y Times

---

"The appearance of this dictionary is an important publishing event, representing as it does fifteen years of the work of compilation by a total of 171 contributors, whose names comprise what is almost a complete roster of modern English and American classical scholarship. It is the first work of its kind to appear in English for many years, and it will obviously remain a standard authority for many to come." J. E. Walsh
+ N Y Times p5 Ap 3 '49 500w

"This work has its shortcomings. There is, for example, no indication of the English pronunciation of Greek and Latin proper names, and in spite of the assertion in the preface that special attention has been paid to literature, literary productions are not listed except under the names of the authors. . . The dictionary is, however, concise and up-to-date."
+ — New Yorker 25:112 Ap 30 '49 140w

"Here is a volume which has been long awaited by everyone with an interest either in Greek and Latin studies, or in history, or in things which continue ancient tradition within Western civilisation; and of those who have patiently waited none will be disappointed. . . The new volume, produced with that perfection which we have come to expect from the Oxford University Press, will afford pleasure to men and women of three groups—to the cultivated reader who enjoys dictionary-browsing in moments of leisure; to the student researcher; and to the specialist seeking that information which other specialists can supply. So great is its range, and so many are the scholars who have helped to build it, that it seems almost hubris for anyone to attempt a review." Charles Seltman
+ Spec 182:416 Mr 25 '49 800w

"The Oxford Classical Dictionary will not become, like Smith, a household word. But classical learning and education have never, in their long history, been in the hands of scholars better equipped with learning, judgment and good taste."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p219 Ap 2 '49 1450w

OXFORD junior encyclopaedia; general editors, Laura E. Salt & Geoffrey Boumphrey; il. ed: Helen Mary Petter; 12v; v. 1, Mankind. 496p il col pl maps $10 Oxford

032 Encyclopedias and dictionaries (49 1381)

"The first of twelve projected volumes to appear at six-month intervals, 'intended to provide a basic book of reference for school libraries.' . . Volume 1 provides reading on: Pre-history, Early Civilization, Religion, Mythology and Primitive Beliefs, Folklore, Races and Peoples." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Kirkus 17:30 Ja 15 '49 300w

"Only through use can the real value of this first volume and of those which will follow be determined. However, this volume, since it does not add materially to information already in the basic encyclopaedia and book collection, is not recommended for the small school library with limited budget. The somewhat larger library will find it an attractive supplementary source of information." M. B. Snow
Library J 74:559 Ap 1 '49 270w

"Intended to provide a 'basic book of reference for school libraries' [the book] deserves a wider public. The only accommodation made to youth by the contributors is clarity and richness of language; the information and interpretation are not debased. A wise parent buying it for his children, would be doubly rewarded. Its writers are authorities on their subjects, its binding and format is in the best tradition of the Oxford Press, and its numerous illustrations are a delight." R. F. I. B.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 1 '48 210w

"The fact that it is thoroughly English does not detract from that superb scholarship which made the eleventh edition of the Britannica

OXFORD junior encyclopaedia—Continued
outstanding. In display value given the pictures and in color plates it cannot stand comparison with our American output. But the choice of the picture material is superb." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 6 '49 320w

"Many topics emphasized in American schools are either omitted altogether or are buried in articles under entirely different headings. For example, the article on witchcraft fails to mention the Salem witchhunts. . . The authority of the work cannot be clearly established, since articles are unsigned and less than half of the fifty or more contributors are identified. Sources of statistics are not cited, nor are bibliographies included. Opinion is often injected into articles which should be purely factual, as in the article on Christian Science. British usage is evident in spelling, terminology and emphasis. The print is clear, and the illustrations are numerous and well reproduced; but the first volume of the Oxford set gives no promise of proving a serious challenge to the three excellent school encyclopedias already in the field. Despite its shortcomings as a school reference work, 'Mankind' would doubtless prove useful in the home, both as a source of information and as a means of stimulating interest in a wide range of subjects." Elizabeth Hodges

— + N Y Times p20 Ap 17 '49 450w

"These volumes will be published at a rate of two a year. . . This is a fine idea, so far as the cost of obtaining a full set is concerned; but right there the good points stop and a few bad ones raise their heads. If we open the book to 'Tasmanians,' for example, we find a complete description of the people living in this land, their way of life and their language. But nowhere in the article is it stated just where on the globe Tasmania can be found. There is a cross reference, though, that says: 'See Vol III: Tasmania.' As Volume III will not be out for another year, one will have to wait before planning a trip or an essay. . . Once you do put the pieces together, it is a more than adequate publication." Keith Kay

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p12 F 6 '49 400w

"Who is going to read the Junior Encyclopaedia? I should say everyone who does not regard himself as a superior person. Parts of it will be stiff going for people under sixteen; nevertheless it is written for young people, but I fear that, like model railways and aeroplanes, it will get into the hands of parents who won't give their children a chance. I suggest, therefore, that the Ministry of Education, having failed to provide schools and teachers in sufficient numbers for the children of this land [England], might invest immediately in a literary substitute and provide every institution patronised by boys and girls of thirteen to eighteen with at least one full set of this encyclopaedia—forbidding access to it to all parents, teachers and directors of education." E. B. Castle

+ Spec 181:342 S 10 '48 800w

OXFORD junior encyclopedia; general editors, Laura E. Salt & Geoffrey Boumphrey; il. ed: Helen Mary Petter; 12v; v3, The universe. 496p il col pl maps $10 Oxford

032 Encyclopedias and dictionaries (49-1381)

"The third volume in this ambitious new English series takes up these subjects: the heavens, the earth (geology, weather), the earth's surface (climate, vegetation), countries and towns, and more mysteries of the universe, as, sound, heat, motion, radiation, light, electricity, relativity, etc. . . Outstanding British scientists have contributed the articles, under the editorship of Jean F. K. Petrie." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"It contains much less information on the whole than we are accustomed to find in corresponding American encyclopaedias. For instance, the material on the United States is sketchy. . . There are some inaccuracies, as for instance the listing of Vancouver as the capital of British Columbia. One expects more maps in a book of this kind and fuller and more adequate treatment with clearer and better illustrations of such subjects as prehistoric animals. This particular volume of the encyclopaedia can scarcely be recommended for our American schools." M. B. Snow

— Library J 74:1108 Ag '49 290w

"It is the best existing encyclopaedia for the intelligent child."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 My 31 '49 90w

"The English always have done good writing on science for young people; in this volume, the approach is to high-school age and older, including adults." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 S 4 '49 120w

OXNAM, GARFIELD BROMLEY, bp. Stimulus of Christ. 128p $1.50 Revell

252 Radio sermons 49-7059

Twelve addresses on the Christian faith delivered by the Methodist bishop of the New York area over the radio program, National vespers. Contents: The quest for perfection; The aim of Christian discipline; The blessings of uncertainty; The unanswered prayers of Jesus; The stimulus of Christ; Scars that speak; Can we be great?; Vanishing visions (A New Year's meditation); A slender yellow candle (Christmas); The Christ who came too soon; There is no unknown soldier (Armistice Day); A gift no man can take away.

"These sermons are vivid, dramatic, effective, forceful and lively." Sam Nader

+ Churchman 163:15 Mr 1 '49 150w

Springf'd Republican p5D Ap 17 '49 80w

P

PACH, WALTER. Art museum in America. 300p il $6 Pantheon bks.

708.1 Art—Galleries and museums 48-9640

"History of art museums in the U.S. which considers the role of the museum in relation to the American artist, to modern art, the use of reproductions, education, and to trustees, collectors, and audience. Outstanding collections of the most important museums in the U.S. and its possessions are listed by state. Of much wider interest than the title indicates; there is even one chapter on the museums of other American countries." Booklist

Booklist 45:154 Ja 1 '49

Reviewed by Lincoln Kirstein

New Repub 120:28 Ap 18 '49 80w

"Mr. Pach's volume is the best rationale of the American museum, and indeed, of museums generally, that has yet been put forward. . . No one knows anything well unless they have known it a long time, Joubert observed. Mr. Pach's volume is ample evidence of the truth of that dictum. His father was the first photographer of the Metropolitan, and his own life has been spent in the midst of the world of art both here and abroad. His work has an informal richness which can come only from years of first-hand study." Huntington Cairns

+ Sat R of Lit 32:44 Ap 16 '49 800w

PACK, S. W. C. Weather forecasting; il. by diagrams, charts and photographs. 192p $6 Longmans

551.5 Weather forecasting 48-9675

An introduction to the science of weather forecasting for students of meteorology. "Great attention has been paid to the value of visual aids in explanation; quantitative treatment has been explained largely by means of diagrams, and except in a few instances mathematics has been excluded. Subjects such as long range forecasting, upper level charts, and radar wind-finding, have been brought up to date with information which until recently was confidential." (Publisher's note) Index. The author is an instructor commander in the Royal navy.

"The elementary meteorological concepts are presented with unusual clarity, and the importance of considering each phenomenon in relation to all the others is made very plain. . . A useful appendix contains international meteorological codes."

N Y New Tech Bks 33:90 N '48

Times [London] Lit Sup p139 F 26 '49 340w

PACKER, HARRY Q., and HITCHCOCK, LOUISE S. Merchandise information for successful selling. 310p il $2.70; to schools $2.16 Prentice-Hall

658.8 Salesmanship. Retail trade 49-3755

"This book attempts to supply the basic knowledge for thirty departments or major lines of merchandise. Under each department products are discussed briefly as to general characteristics, customers' questions and the answers, appealing selling phrases, and, where called for, technical information and terminology. Lists of films available for training. Bibliography." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 45:370 Jl 1 '49

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 74:1825 D 1 '49 90w

PADEN, MRS IRENE (DAKIN). Prairie schooner detours. 295p il maps $3.75 Macmillan

917.8 Overland journeys to the Pacific. West—Description and travel 49-11483

"This is a firsthand description of two so-called 'short cuts' traveled by the prairie schooners of our pioneer grandfathers on their way to the gold mines of California. They are Lassen's Cutoff and Hastings' Cutoff, the latter made famous by the venturesome Donner Party. Both of them took longer to travel and were more productive of thrills and adventure than the regular Overland Trail from the Missouri River across the plains to the diggings. The volume tells what happened on the cut-offs, how they appeared to the Forty-niners, what they look like today, and how they may be found." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:122 D 1 '49

"Companionable and pleasant history-travel volume."

+ Kirkus 17:501 S 1 '49 150w

"Sometimes the emphasis is too much on the 20th century retracking rather than on the original 'detours'. [However] considerable research has been done in diaries and other source records, and painstaking care has been taken to make this a detailed, accurate work." Clarence Gorchels

+ — Library J 74:1318 S 15 '49 130w

"Mrs. Paden's familiarity with every landmark, born of her own arduous and often uncomfortable expeditions, has enabled her to give, on occasion, uncommonly vivid illumination of the argonauts' ordeal. . . On the other hand, the author's attempt to describe historical and contemporary experience concurrently posed a problem of organization and evaluation which was not satisfactorily solved. The flow of her narrative is irritatingly interrupted by trivial chatter." J. K. Howard

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 N 27 '49 600w

Reviewed by Hoffman Birney

N Y Times p32 N 20 '49 190w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 1 '49 1000w

"Six years ago, with 'The Wake of the Prairie Schooner' [Book Review Digest 1943, 1944] Irene D. Paden discovered for the general reading public the piquant pleasures that lurk in hunting out the vanishing traces of the old immigrant trails. . . Everyone who enjoyed the first book is certain to like this one and, conversely, those who first become acquainted with the breezy wife of Alameda's superintendent of schools through 'Prairie Schooner Detours' will want to enlarge the acquaintanceship. Historically, the new book strikes me as a much better performance than the first." D. L. Morgan

+ Sat R of Lit 32:16 N 26 '49 850w

Springf'd Republican p10B Ja 1 '50 170w

PAHLEN, KURT. Music of the world; a history; tr. from the German by James A. Galston. 422p il $5 Crown

780.9 Music—History and criticism 49-50238

A translation of the author's Musikgeschichte der Welt, published in Zurich in 1947. It is a history of music from ancient times to the present. Illustrated with 400 drawings, musical scores, sketches, photographs, and prints. Indexes.

Booklist 46:169 Ja 15 '50

"With Hendrik van Loon, the author of 'Music of the World: A History' believes that 'it is more important to "feel" history than to master its detail.' This may be true enough for the general reader; but the historian must neither let his 'feel' usurp the role of his details nor offer a mass of detail which only misdirects the 'feel.' For a history of 422 pages to arrive at Beethoven on page 128 rather invalidates its title." R. K.

— + Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 12 '50 550w

"The Pahlen book is extraordinarily good reading for anyone interested in rounding out a background on music that is sketchy. Pahlen is a musicologist of international repute. He shares with his readers a conviction that music is a matter of the heart."

+ Kirkus 17:598 O 15 '49 130w

"Attempts a popular style but ends in being rhetorical, dogmatic, and often sentimental. . . Continental composers, and some of the many illustrations may be useful." C. K. Miller

— + Library J 74:1908 D 15 '49 70w

"Though fully aware of the problems which attend covering so extensive a subject in 400 pages, we cannot take too kindly to any history which devotes two pages to Bruckner and less than one sentence to Satie, which is topical enough to record the death of Richard Strauss but neglects to mention any composition of Stravinsky postdating 1933, and which actually describes the slick Khachaturian as 'a radical composer.' Perhaps we're just allergic to too much Pahlen." Roland Gelatt

— Sat R of Lit 32:56 D 31 '49 120w

PAKINGTON, HUMPHREY. Young William Washbourne. 274p $3 Norton

49-9593

This sequel to The Washbournes of Otterley follows young William thru youth and early love affairs from the turn of the century to Armistice day in 1918.

Booklist 45:376 Jl 1 '49

"'Young William Washbourne' is a lively picture of an era at once halcyon and disturbed, at once simple and complex. In its evocation of scene, it is frankly nostalgic. . . But in its portrayal of character, particularly the feminine variety, the book is humorous and unsparing almost to caricature."

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 21 '49 320w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes

Commonweal 50:395 Jl 29 '49 270w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 74:1027 Jl '49 140w

"Comfortable, amusing and pleasant reading." Blythe Morley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Je 19 '49 430w

PAKINGTON, HUMPHREY—Continued

" 'Young William Washbourne' is a literate novel of manners that is entertaining without being quite frothy, and romantic without being sentimental." Ruth Page
+ N Y Times p5 Jl 3 '49 460w

Reviewed by Hamilton Basso
New Yorker 25:57 Jl 2 '49 200w

"Literate entertainment such as this calls for superlatives. Yet even a temperate superlative could only stand abashed, an uncouth and fumbling bumpkin, in the presence of Mr. Pakington's well-bred Severnshire Tories. Let us bow then to the fitness of things and, with due Edwardian restraint, say that 'Young William Washbourne' is polite and elegant fun." A. F. Wolfe
+ Sat R of Lit 32:13 Jl 9 '49 650w

Springf'd Republican p7B Jl 24 '49 190w

Times [London] Lit Sup p785 D 2 '49 100w

PALAZZO, TONY. Susie the cat [pictures by the author]. 50p $2.50 Viking 49-8393

A picture book for ages 4-8. Susie the cat was contented to perform tricks for her master, Johnny, until she has the idea of joining the circus. Johnny, being a bright boy, sensed her need, took her to the circus, and then arranged an arena for her at home.

Booklist 45:321 My 15 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun My 28 '49 140w

"A gaily imaginative tale." A. T. Eaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 28 '49 240w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '49

Commonweal 51:188 N 18 '49 30w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:209 My '49 50w

Kirkus 17:148 Mr 15 '49 40w

"Recommended." M. A. Webb
+ Library J 74:961 Je 15 '49 60w

"Not too much story for the picture-book age, but plenty of very real, big pictures of the characterful Susie, on pages in alternate two-color combinations. It will surely appeal to young cat-owners, but forebodes hard times for many a family cat who may not love to do tricks." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 8 '49 180w

"Four-to-7-years olds may not catch the full irony of Tony Palazzo's story, but they will find it a highly satisfying one within its scope. They will also enjoy the pictures of Susie and the circus animals." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p20 Ap 17 '49 150w

"It is a satisfying circus book." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:39 Je 11 '49 100w

Wis Lib Bul 45:107 Je '49

PALLIS, MARCO. Peaks and lamas [phot. by the author and others]. rev ed 397p maps $6.50 Knopf

915.15 Tibet—Description and travel. Buddha and Buddhism. Mountaineering 49-7300

A revised edition of a work first published in the United States in 1940 (Book Review Digest 1940). "In his original book, Mr. Pallis gave first place to a description of the pleasures involved in swinging along through the Himalayas, but in this printing the emphasis is on Tibetan thought, evidenced by new chapters, on Tibetan Buddhism, art, and education." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 45:226 Mr 1 '49

"There is a calmness and goodness about the writing which gives it great distinction from a literary as well as an educational standpoint. A profusion of excellent photographs adds to the value of the work. Recommended." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 74:197 F 1 '49 100w

" 'Peaks and Lamas' should be praised for its sympathetic appreciation of the Tibetans of Ladak. The author has studied their little-known language and its teachings, and has watched skilled artisans working in a land without class distinctions or modern machines. Why he fears the westernizing of Tibet is obvious in the four final chapters of this attractive book." R. H. Bates
+ N Y Times p7 Mr 6 '49 470w

New Yorker 24:94 F 19 '49 90w

"The reader interested in mountains and mountaineering, the reader who likes intelligent comment on unfamiliar ways of life, on the arts and the customs and habits of people little known to him—such a reader will enjoy Mr. Pallis's book thoroughly. He never forgets his narrative of the hazards, the interests, the delights of these journeys to the roof of the world, and his book, though by no means as detailed in mountain lore as those of the climbers who have attempted Everest, for example, is a good mountaineering story." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 31 '49 850w

"Originally published in 1939, the book has been revised and completely reset, and remains a definitive study of Buddhism and the manners of Tibet."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:35 Mr 5 '49 100w

PALMA, RAFAEL. Pride of the Malay race; a biography of José Rizal; tr. from the original Spanish by Roman Ozaeta. 385p $3 Prentice-Hall

B or 92 Rizal y Alonzo, José 49-9717

Biography of the Filipino patriot, written by a former president of the University of the Philippines. Rizal's life was dedicated to the rebellion against Spain, and he was executed for his part in the struggle. Index.

Booklist 45:392 Jl 15 '49

"Palma's biography, which won first prize in a contest sponsored by the Philippine Government in 1936, is comprehensive and authoritative. Written to appeal particularly to Filipino youth, its interpretation of the facts is slanted in such a way as to arouse a spirit of national and racial pride. While this is understandable, it is also to be deplored—for such a bias, manifesting itself in excessive eulogy and justification where justification is is unnecessary, makes it unlikely that the book will appeal to the general reader. And a man of the stature of Jose Rizal should be material for a biography of absorbing interest, especially in these days of renewed colonial unrest." T. O.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 N 3 '49 750w

"Rizal was a poignant and curious figure of whom we should know more. This biography, written by a famous Filipino educator who died in 1939, is unfortunately more of a panegyric than a serious study. It suggests far more questions than it answers and is written in a style that is often half-sermon, half-eulogy. It is irritatingly careless about filling in details and too concerned with its subject's reputation to do him real justice." H. R. Isaacs
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ag 21 '49 500w

"Dr. Palma's biography presents some difficulties for readers who are unfamiliar with the Philippines. It does not develop sufficient background concerning the Spanish regime to make the biography take wings. It contains much basic material about Rizal, however, and it should help to establish him in the roster of men of spirit who are immortal." Dale Pontius
N Y Times p24 O 23 '49 550w

PALMER, EPHRAIM LAURENCE. Fieldbook of natural history. 664p il $7; text ed $5 McGraw

574 Natural history 49-8179

"Brief descriptions and small black-and-white illustrations of more than 2000 stars, rocks and minerals, plants, mollusks, reptiles, fish, birds, insects, and animals. Chosen for their general interest. Arranged under the common name, but completely indexed under the scientific one. Does not index every common name." Booklist

---

Booklist 45:292 My 1 '49

School & Society 69:215 Mr 19 '49 80w

"Seldom has so much accurate information been assembled and presented in one volume."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:289 Je '49 140w

PALMER, STUART. Four lost ladies. 245p $2.50 Mill

49-10497

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun S 9 '49 50w

"Tart and trustworthy."

+ Kirkus 17:375 Jl 15 '49 70w

"Madcap—a word that doesn't sit very well on those beyond a fairly tender age—is probably the best way to describe her antics in building, maintaining, and solving her case. Her activities are so highly irregular that sometimes they take on the implausibility but not the humor of farce. However, you may feel that things are more than lively enough to make up for any lack of credibility." Elizabeth Bullock

+ — N Y Times p39 O 2 '49 150w

"Incomparable."

+ Sat R of Lit 32:61 N 19 '49 40w

Springf'd Republican p5D O 2 '49 120w

PANOVA, VERA FEDOROVNA. The train [tr. from the Russian by Marie Budberg]. 281p $3 Knopf

49-8213

Story of a group of men and women on a Russian hospital train during World war II.

Booklist 45:296 My 1 '49

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 11 '49 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '49

"It is, of course, completely pro-Soviet in viewpoint, and American readers may have trouble understanding some of the motivations. But it is a good novel and an interesting one. Translation is by Maria Budberg. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 74:547 Ap 1 '49 100w

"Though nobody could say that the author pretends that all vice and selfishness have been liquidated in Russia, somehow the dreadful things are made to appear insignificant by comparison with the flat worthiness of a society which is flat in tone (or here alleged to be so) like a 'co-ed' community of religious novices. There are touching scenes—and yet . . . the Tolstoyan technique of understatement soon becomes a little boring when used by a writer with more than the master's patriotism and a great deal less than his universal sympathy. This is a readable book, and one for all sorts of reasons worth reading." Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p3 D 20 '48 230w

"A remarkable first novel. You have not read half a page before you realise that you are in the grip of a masterly and masterful craftsman, who knows exactly, to a hair's breadth, where she wants to put you, and who can, and does, put you right there on the dot every time. . . Miss Panova's canvas has a Russian largeness, and she carries on, too, the old Russian classical tradition of writing with a cold objectiveness. . . But what pleases, particularly, is the never-forgotten contrast between the hopes of the individual and the totally unexpected impact of circumstance upon him." Julia Strachey

+ New Statesman & Nation 37:85 Ja 22 '49 330w

"To an American used to such fare as is found, say, in 'The Naked and the Dead' or 'All Thy Conquests,' this Soviet war novel will seem a little naive, puritanical, from the point of view of its prose, and characterizations hopelessly old-fashioned, almost Chekhovvian. But it is these very qualities that have endeared it to the Russians and stirred them with its 'newness.' 'The Train' is a very simple, human and touching story." Joshua Kunitz

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ap 10 '49 850w

"Simple and unpretentious. . . It is told with warm feminine sympathy and gentle humor." Elena Zarudnaya

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 10 '49 330w

"Mme. Panova's novel is quite a good one. To pay it the very highest Western compliment of the moment, it is a novel that, as far as its artistic purpose is concerned, might well have been written outside the Stalin Prize area." John Broderick

+ New Yorker 25:103 Ap 16 '49 800w

"The author treats her 'little people' with sympathy and tenderness. They emerge as true human beings, not mere heroic symbols. 'The Train' was awarded a Stalin prize in 1946. It is well worth reading." D. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 15 '49 350w

"'The Train' is simply a warm, humanistic, occasionally sentimental montage of the lives of a group of ordinary people which could, without a great deal of transposition, have been set in almost any other country during a time of war. . . If it has no great distinction as a novel, it has the virtues of warmth and sincerity, and an unaffected approach to the lives of ordinary people." John Woodburn

+ Sat R of Lit 32:14 Ap 30 '49 800w

Time 53:110 Ap 18 '49 380w

PARISH, HELEN RAND. At the palace gates; il. by Leo Politi. 64p $2 Viking

49-8162

A little orphan boy, an Indian from the mountains of Peru, is stranded in the streets of Lima when his boss-man is injured and carried to the hospital. Fearful of what the Public Welfare people might do to him Paco hides away, becomes a bootblack in disguise, and finally does a great service for his country.

"Much of the charm of this story of a Peruvian Indian boy lies in the illustrations, some of the artist's best. . . The colorful life of the city square is as effectively depicted in the unusual two-color pictures as in the compactly written text. Grades 4-6."

+ Booklist 45:266 Ap 1 '49

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 170:212 D '49 20w

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Ap 23 '49 70w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p4 Je 30 '49 320w

"A story children are sure to enjoy for its humor and excitement." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 25:198 My '49 80w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:215 My '49 120w

"The story will seem exciting and wonderful, rather than improbable, to young readers, and Paco's love for animals and the city of Lima will inspire interest in a faraway country."

+ Kirkus 17:86 F 15 '49 120w

"An absorbing tale, beautifully told and full of humor and action. Numerous two-color illustrations in Leo Politi's unique style are an added delight. Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges

+ Library J 74:666 Ap 15 '49 80w

PARISH, H. R.—Continued
"In such a brief story, it is good writing which can make us feel deeply with the little boot-black. . . We reach the end with a satisfying sense of sharing in an abortive South American revolution. Probably many ages of readers over eight will enjoy it." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 8 '49 270w

"The somewhat wordy manner occasionally overbalances the slight theme, but the story has humor, action and an engaging hero. Leo Politi's illustrations are done with great style in gray, blue and those soft purple reds beloved by ancient Peruvians." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p26 Mr 20 '49 140w

New Yorker 25:174 D 3 '49 80w

"We have very few stories for younger boys and girls about Peru. This one has value for its graceful, fluent writing and its convincing atmosphere." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 32:35 Ag 13 '49 150w

Wis Lib Bul 45:67 Ap '49

PARKER, CHARLES FRANKLIN. Come unto Me; a book for personal devotions; pictorials from the national parks of the United States. 104p $3.50 Rinehart

242 National parks and reserves—U.S. Devotional exercises 49-48847

"Thirty-one pictorials from national parks, with appropriate poetry, spiritual interpretations and prayers. Points out that parks can give men rest, a new purpose, inspiration, and refreshment." Wis Lib Bul

"This is quite obviously a labor of love by one who knows our parks and what their beauty can mean to those who visit them. While the accompanying text is uninspired, the book itself will mean much to the thousands of Americans who know from personal experience the beauty of the parks."

+ — Kirkus 17:546 O 1 '49 130w

+ N Y Times p56 D 1 '49 110w

Wis Lib Bul p6 D '49

PARKER, ELINOR. Cooking for one. 122p $2.50 Crowell

641.5 Cookery 49-8884

In addition to recipes and menus definitely cut to size, the author gives hints on ways to make cooking for one easier and more pleasant, with lists of utensils needed, staples to keep on hand, etc. Index.

"Lots of good ideas and sound advice."

+ Kirkus 17:167 Mr 15 '49 110w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 29 '49 190w

Springf'd Republican p8B Jl 3 '49 90w

Wis Lib Bul 45:104 Je '49

PARKER, HARRY EWING. Simplified design of structural timber. 218p $3.25 Wiley

694 Timber. Building. Strains and stresses 48-10183

"A concise exposition of practical methods of designing wooden structural members. Like the other books in this author's 'Simplified' series, the treatment assumes no previous education in structural design and is aimed at young architects, builders and other persons whose work requires them to design buildings on sound engineering principles." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 45:152 Ja 1 '49

Eng N 142:80 Ja 6 '49 30w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1670 N 15 '48 10w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:82 N '48

PARKES, JAMES WILLIAM. History of Palestine from 135 A.D. to modern times. 391p maps $5 Oxford

956.9 Palestine—History 49-9004

A history of Palestine from the last revolt of the Jews against the Romans until the establishment of the State of Israel in 1948. The author is an English scholar, an authority on this subject, which he relates to world history and to the history of the three religions, Judaism, Christianity and Mohammedanism. Bibliographies. Index.

"This book is a good one and, though written for the general reader rather than the professional historian, contains a wealth of interesting detail. The treatment is objective and controversial topics are handled with insight and understanding." S. H. Zebel

+ Am Hist R 55:99 O '49 440w

Booklist 45:333 Je 1 '49

Reviewed by J. J. Weinstein
Chicago Sun My 21 '49 70w

Current Hist 16:344 Je '49 50w

Foreign Affairs 28:169 O '49 30w

"The objectivity of the author's viewpoint is notable today when politics and emotions instead of justice and reason have been bound and published. It is unfortunate the book was not cut and made more appealing to the average reader. Good bibliography and index. Maps are not adequate." C. W. Roth

+ — Library J 74:816 My 15 '49 130w

Manchester Guardian p3 F 22 '49 330w

Reviewed by Marvin Lowenthal
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Je 19 '49 1400w

"His pages are crammed with valuable information—with so much, indeed, that at times one has to beat one's way through forests of facts. The facts themselves, however, assembled judiciously from many sources and in general sensibly and at times even eloquently appraised, serve as a sober guide to the perennially difficult and endlessly important problems of Palestine." Nelson Glueck

+ N Y Times p25 Je 26 '49 950w

"'A History of Palestine' is not in major part a work of original scholarship; indeed no volume covering so long a period and the manifestations of so many states and cultures is likely to be. It is based, however, upon careful examination of a wide range of general works and special studies in English, French, and German and is equipped with an annotated bibliography which should prove of value to those interested in pursuing further any of the topics discussed. The non-scholarly reader, however, need not be alarmed. There are no footnotes and the volume is written primarily for the general public rather than for the student." P. L. Hanna

+ Sat R of Lit 32:16 Je 25 '49 650w

"It is the quality of one-sidedness which spoils what might have been a better book. The boldness of the undertaking and the skill of so much of its execution are lost in the end in the stream of partisanship. It is a pity—and it raises the wider question, whether any scholar with Dr. Parkes's reading behind him would undertake such a wearisome and perilous, although so potentially useful a task, if he were not driven to do so by an intensity of feeling strong enough to endanger his objectivity."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p317 My 13 '49 3050w

PARKINSON, ALBERT CHARLES, and DAWNEY, W. H. Thread grinding and measurement. 227p il $4.50 Pitman

621.94 Screw threads 49-9655

"The practical production of screw threads by grinding is a fairly new machine shop technique, but it is already an important one. This treatment of the subject is written for production engineers, machine shop foremen, and other persons with practical interests in manufacturing techniques." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 74:1332 S 15 '49 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 34:59 Jl '49

PARKINSON, CYRIL NORTHCOTE, ed. Trade winds; a study of British overseas trade during the French wars, 1793-1815; by C. Ernest Fayle [and others] introd. by Sir William M. James. 336p il maps $4.75 Macmillan (for Allen, G.)

382 Great Britain—Commerce. Shipping—History [49-1749]

A symposium, consisting of a series of essays by specialists on various aspects of British overseas trade during the Napoleonic wars. Partial contents: Shipowning and marine insurance, by C. E. Fayle; London, by C. N. Parkinson; Liverpool, by A. C. Wardle; Bristol, by C. M. MacInnes; Seamen, by Basil Lubbock; Health and sickness, by J. A. Nixon; The East India trade, by C. N. Parkinson; The West Indian trade, by L. F. Horsfall; The American trade, by H. Heaton; The slave trade, by C. M. MacInnes, with appendix by J. A. Nixon; The post office packets, by A. C. Wardle. Glossary. Bibliography and list of authorities. Index.

"The quality of the volume is due to the skillful collaboration of the eight authors. The advantages of wide knowledge have been gained without any loss in unity of presentation." A. P. Usher
+ Am Hist R 55:136 O '49 1150w

"[The essays] vary in quality and balance. (The account of the slave trade for instance, is much overweighted by Bristol). Professor Herbert Heaton's chapter on the American trade is particularly good. The bibliography is extensive but patchy, with some strange omissions."
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 N 29 '48 90w

"It is a fascinating tale, and the size of the field surveyed is illustrated by the fact that the bibliography occupies no fewer than eighteen pages of small print."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p28 Ja 8 '49 500w

PARKS, AILEEN WELLS. Davy Crockett: young rifleman; il. by Charles V. John. 194p $1.75 Bobbs

Crockett, David—Juvenile literature 49-8115

Describes the boyhood of Davy Crockett, Tennessee and Texas hero, and gives a one chapter summary of his adult life. For grades five to seven.

"To lovers of adventure and tall tales in grades five to seven, this lively account of a backwoods boy who became the hero of Tennessee and Texas will appeal." Nelle McCalla
+ Library J 74:667 Ap 15 '49 70w

"An admirable new title in the 'Childhood of Famous Americans' series. . . The very last chapter summarizes his adult career cleverly, but the main part of the book tells how Davy became an expert rifleman. All sorts of interesting details about shooting game come into it. The style of this book, well adapted to younger boys, has at the same time variety and dignity." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 17 '49 150w

Reviewed by R. A. Adams
N Y Times p22 Jl 17 '49 80w

PARMELEE, ALICE. Guidebook to the Bible. 331p $3.50 Harper

220 Bible. Whole—History. Bible. Whole—Introductions 48-9103

"A running commentary on the origins, background and content of all the books of the Bible written so 'that the average reader may see it, not as a forbidding and incomprehensible collection of sacred Scriptures, but as a living record of men's lives and thoughts.'" (Wis Lib Bul) Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:219 Mr 1 '49

"Given the current state of biblical studies, and with a popular audience in view, this is an excellent book. . . Nevertheless, just because the book is so well written, it may give the impression of greater certainty on various matters than actually exists. Also some positive statements are made about things which really are far from positive." Jack Finegan
+ — Christian Century 66:17 Ja 5 '49 550w

Reviewed by M. E. Green
Churchman 163:15 Mr 1 '49 90w
Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '49

"This and every book that recaptures some of the radiance of the old, old story is to be welcomed, read, and enjoyed." E. W. K. Mould
+ Crozer Q 24:167 Ap '49 850w

"This is a well written book which should be very useful to those who are approaching the study of the Bible in a serious way. Miss Parmelee is a teacher and her book has obviously issued from her experience in teaching the Bible. . . The author is an Episcopalian and her Biblical interpretation is based upon an acceptance of the findings of modern scholars. But there is nothing sectarian nor controversial about the presentation."
+ Kirkus 16:595 N 15 '48 130w

"Recommended."
+ Wis Lib Bul 45:26 F '49

PARMELEE, CULLEN WARNER. Ceramic glazes. 321p il $7.50 Industrial publications

666.3 Glazes 49-1121

"A comprehensive summary of basic information regarding glazes and the art of glazing, as based on a review of the literature of the subject and on the author's wide experience as Professor of Ceramic Engineering at the University of Illinois. The volume provides detailed information regarding the sources, analyses of constituent materials, methods of preparation, application, and firing of glazes in modern use. This and the tabulated data relating to composition and formulation will be of value to both professional and amateur ceramicists." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 34:51 Jl '49

"The contribution of this book to ceramic literature is unique in that it is confined strictly to the technology of glazes; that is, to the glass or glassy coating fused on clayware for protective, sanitary, or decorative purposes. . . Somewhat too heavy for the casual hobbyist, the book will be a valuable source of reference for the glaze technologist and a mine of information for the serious amateur and the studio potter."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:282 Je '49 200w

PARMENTER, ROSS. Plant in my window. 148p il $2.50 Crowell

635.93465 Philodendron 49-10364

A series of personal essays relating the story of the author's experiences, first indifference, then slowly awakened interest, intense study, and finally philosophical musings—with a potted vine he found in the furnished one-room apartment when he moved in. Author is a music critic on the New York Times.

"Mr. Parmenter is no Thoreau but his book reveals him as a nice fellow nonetheless. One is given the impression that here is a well adjusted young man who is interested in all the gentler aspects of life and is capable of being perfectly content with or without a plant." Ellen Rogers
+ Canadian Forum 29:240 Ja '50 110w

"A thoughtful and intuitive observer, Mr. Parmenter, in his search through books and in the unfoldment going on under his eyes, found all sorts of other analogies with human life, which he has recorded with a nice balance of humor and reverence. Carrying the reader with him on his voyage of personal discovery, he has written a refreshing and evocative little book, rich in meaning and depth. It should appeal to the professional and amateur gardener alike, and lure the layman to explore one of the easiest and most rewarding of hobbies, the indoor garden." C. B. Burnett

PARMENTER, ROSS—Continued
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 19 '49 600w

"The nature lover at his most loving."
+ Kirkus 17:347 Jl 1 '49 100w

"Book is written with naivete and with the simplicity and implications of a parable. It will be of interest to readers with a philosophical attitude toward nature." B. B. Libaire
Library J 74:1090 Ag '49 140w

"Without any question this is the best book ever written about a young man's adventures with a potted philodendron. And if that sounds as though it might be intended as very mild praise I should hastily add that it is quite a remarkable book indeed—a real tour de force in its own quiet way." J. W. Krutch
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 S 4 '49 1000w

"Even if you're not the potted plant that Parmenter thinks you are, you should still find this book charming, warm and wonderful." R. G. Martin
+ N Y Times p10 Ag 14 '49 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 25 '49 1250w

Reviewed by L. J. Halle
Sat R of Lit 33:23 Ja 7 '50 320w

Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich
Springf'd Republican p8C O 30 '49 360w

PARPART, ARTHUR KEMBLE, ed. Chemistry and physiology of growth [by] J. H. Northrop [and others]. 293p il $4.50 Princeton univ. press

574.134 Growth. Physiological chemistry 49-8368

"In September 1946 there was held, in Princeton University, a conference on 'The Chemistry and Physiology of Growth'; the papers read at that time are presented in this volume after being revised or changed in the light of the comments expressed at that meeting. There are ten papers on: enzymes and protein synthesis, molecular morphology and growth, plant growth hormones, unidentified vitamins and growth factors, kinematics of growth of microorganisms, cellular metabolism, differential growth, organization problems, neoplastic abnormal growth, and the adrenal gland." Library J

Reviewed by Julian Sohon
Library J 74:1102 Ag '49 100w
N Y New Tech Bks 34:36 My '49

PARRISH, MRS MARY FRANCES (KENNEDY) (M. F. K. FISHER, pseud). Alphabet for gourmets; with drawings by Marvin Bileck. 255p $3 Viking

641.01 Gastronomy. Cookery 49-10808

Chapters on cooking and eating good food, arranged alphabetically. Partial contents: A is for dining alone; B is for bachelors; D is for dining out; G is for gluttony; J is for juvenile dining; K is for kosher; Q is for quantity; T is for turbot; Z is for zakuski. Index of recipes.

Booklist 45:365; 46:44 Jl 1 '49; O 1 '49

"Mrs. Fisher's present volume will seem somewhat disappointing, I think, to her long-term public, but it is surely intriguing enough to send any new reader back to the more substantial books. I am thinking especially of How to Cook a Wolf, a manual which must have saved many an American household from the dark stodginess of the conventional schools and certainly from the rainbow horrors of the ordinary magazine stuff." Kappo Phelan
+ — Commonweal 51:165 N 11 '49 450w

"Once again, as always, she is good reading for anyone interested in the fine art of cookery. . . This book is a merry, sometimes biting, often passionate defense of the lover's approach to food—any kind of food. Her likes and dislikes march through the pages; family dinners are given a new slant; her settings take one round the world; her gastronomical creed captures one's imagination. And I defy anyone who likes to cook to refrain from copying some of the recipes. An addition for the specialist's cookery shelf."
+ Kirkus 17:353 Jl 1 '49 170w

Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 D 4 '49 230w

"Though I expect it to go through the tests with a high mark as a manual, as a book there is no question about it. Since Mrs. Fisher wrote it, naturally it is witty, pungent and highly civilized, but also it has a special charm. It tells of the bad as well as the good. It tells how to scramble eggs with love and wisdom, and it also tells how to scramble them with ignorance and rancor. It describes the finest meal the author ever ate, and it also describes the most ghastly one. It not only guides and titillates; it warns." Rex Stout
+ N Y Times p25 O 9 '49 700w

"In spite of an aura of not really unpleasant smugness about the book, it is an entertaining and knowledgeable one, well written whenever the author is not self-consciously turning out a beautiful paragraph."
+ — New Yorker 25:64 D 24 '49 100w

"'An Alphabet for Gourmets' will please the author's wide audience, and will charm equally any reader at all who has a decent regard for what he puts into his mouth. No cookbook, in spite of the recipes it contains, it is a philosophical chat about eating and drinking, now and then a trifle mannered, perhaps, but excusably so, and full of sound counsel, shrewd observation, luscious memories of dinners eaten and wines drunk, and a lot of common sense spiced with personal recollection. It's a good mixture." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 S 16 '49 900w

PARROTT, THOMAS MARC. Shakespearean comedy. 417p $6.50 Oxford

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Criticism and interpretation 49-3197

"In this book Professor Parrott sets out to trace the vein of comedy that runs through all of Shakespeare's plays, the histories and tragedies as well as the comedies themselves. . . After an introduction which deals with the forerunners of Elizabethan drama, he takes each of the plays in order. Proceeding with systematic thoroughness, he summarizes Shakespeare's sources before discussing the transmutation of the base material into the stuff of genius." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

"This is one of the best studies of its subject that I have encountered in some years of reading. Highly recommended for Shakespeare, drama, and theatre collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 74:960 Je 15 '49 30w

"The verve and vigor with which this book is written are admirable, as is the mastery of innumerable details of scholarship and literary history. The personal reference will be pardoned if we remind the reader that the author, one of our most distinguished authorities on English dramatic literature, is now in his eighty-third year." S. C. Chew
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 S 18 '49 700w

Reviewed by Harry Levin
N Y Times p5 Ag 7 '49 290w
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 21 '49 440w

"[The author's] point of view is eminently sensible; and like his style it is homely, judicious, and straightforward. If at times his patient progress through the canon of the plays makes the book sound like a Shakespeare course for upper-classmen, that is no disadvantage. The reader of any or no class gains a (re) view of the plays from one important perspective." Robert Halsband
+ Sat R of Lit 32:11 Je 25 '49 180w

PARSONS, TALCOTT. Essays in sociological theory, pure and applied. 379p $4.50 Free press, Glencoe, Ill.

301 Sociology 49-8061

"This book reprints thirteen of Talcott Parson's occasional papers published during the past decade, mainly in professional journals. One short selection (chapter 3) has not appeared before. . . Arranged somewhat arbitrarily in two groups, the papers focus chiefly upon qualitative and comparative analysis of modern institutional structures, which are the generalized common-value patterns of a social system. . . Part I of the book is called, 'Sociological Theory and Its Historical Roots.'. . . Part II, 'Essays in the Application of Sociological Theory,' deals mainly with our own society. So laden with fruitful analytical leads are these papers that several readings are necessary to apprehend them. . . Bernard Barber's short biography of Parsons and a bibliography of Parsons' writings conclude the volume." Social Forces

"It is possible to overlook the uneven quality of the essays, with their understandable overemphasis on some points, and sketchiness on others; it is impossible to overlook the valuable insights offered here by a top-drawer theorist."

+ — Am Soc R 14:700 O '49 170w

"The collecting of these essays is indeed a welcome event, for it will greatly aid our understanding of a very eminent thinker." A. K. Davis

+ Social Forces 28:90 O '49 1400w

PARTCH, HARRY. Genesis of a music; monophony: the relation of its music to history and contemporary trends; its philosophy, concepts, and principles; its relation to historic and proposed intonations; and its application to musical instruments; with a foreword by Otto Luening. 362p il $10 Univ. of Wis. press

781.22 Musical intervals and scales. Musical instruments. Musical temperament 49-2824

"About twenty-five years ago Harry Partch began to worry about problems of musical intonation; he was then a composer and is still a composer. In this quarter-century he has gradually evolved a scale with 43 tones within an octave, has built instruments with this tuning, has learned to play these instruments, and has composed for them. This book is the story of his own musical problems and the solutions that he has reached. . . The last large part of the book is a history of intonation, constantly enlivened by humorous asides and not-so-sly jabs at conventional musical education. The author has drawn most of his historical material from secondary sources. . . The book closes with two appendices, a bibliography, and an index." Music Lib Assn Notes

"The book represents a rare combination of autobiographical seriousness (as it might be called), agile wit and enthusiasm, technical thought, and a refreshing lack of dogmatism. . . The physical make-up of the volume is excellent." C. W. Fox

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 6:621 S '49 1300w

"Mr. Partch is right in saying that the ear is capable of far more accuracy and complexity of response than has yet been demanded of it in our culture. However, the music to prove that a scale of forty-three tones to the octave is as valuable as twelve has yet to be written. . . What Mr. Partch seems not to realize is that however accurate an instrument may be persuaded to be, the pitch of the voice is actually always a curve, not a fixed point. . . The author's vehemence, a rather special use of familiar terms, and frequent excursions into unexpected byways make really difficult reading." Henry Cowell

Sat R of Lit 32:65 N 26 '49 500w

PARTRIDGE, BELLAMY. Old oaken bucket. 248p $3 Crowell

49-10942

A Connecticut village is the scene of this slightly satirical tale of the garden club set. The Rands had done over an old house, and lived there without friction even though they had inherited two natives with the home. But the arrival of the Rands' two grown children and their families and problems put a strain on the housing accommodations. The story is of the finding of a "genuine old salt-box" and the crises which ensued.

Booklist 46:4; 63 S 1 '49; O 15 '49

"The comedy is deftly accomplished, though the book is a bit of a change of pace for Partridge, whose other works such as the justly popular 'Big Family' and 'January Thaw' depend heavily on nostalgia for their appeal." W. F. Morse

Chicago Sun p9X O 30 '49 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '49

Kirkus 17:405 Ag 1 '49 180w

"Slighter than author's January Thaw, this has the same shrewd and amusing contrasts of country and urban psychologies. Recommended for public library fiction collections." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 74:1203 S 1 '49 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p17 D 11 '49 130w

"Less than hilarious, 'The Old Oaken Bucket' is pleasant reading. In a world beset by shattering conflicts, it is nice to meet the Rands, who struggle only to live in peace and to grow earthworms and flowers on the southern slope of Connecticut." Charlotte Capers

+ N Y Times p36 O 16 '49 400w

New Yorker 25:134 O 15 '49 140w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 13 '49 470w

PASHKO, PEARL, and PASHKO, STANLEY. American girl's omnibus; il. by Frank Rigney [produced under the editorial supervision of Elliott W. McDowell]. 277p $3 Greenberg

790 Amusements 49-9242

Contents: Sports for girls; Camping and outdoor fun; Water fun; Winter fun; Hobbies for girls; Crafts for girls; The arts; Fun with games; Party fun; Handy at home; Your own room; You.

"Good advice on sports, camping, outdoor fun, hobbies, home-making, and charm. Told to girls of today in language they will find up to date. Recommended for older girls." G. E. Cartmell

+ Library J 74:963 Je 15 '49 30w

"The book for a teen-age girl who is shy, lazy, unimaginative, or a bit of all three. Brief introductions to forty kinds of sports, games, hobbies, crafts, water fun, winter fun, parties, etc. From it alone, you couldn't learn to ski or to ride horseback, or to take good photos, but you might be inspired to begin. Too bad there are no book lists. The sections on 'your own room' and 'you' are excellent." L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 10 '49 80w

PASHKO, STANLEY. Boy's book of body building; il. by Frank Rigney. 208p $2.50 Greenberg

796.41 Physical education and training 49-11643

Advice and exercises for developing a sturdy body. Emphasis on homemade exercise equipment. Partial contents: Posture and power; Stunts and tricks; Your portable gym; Two-man training; Muscle-tensing exercises; Working with weights; Building strong legs; Arm and shoulder strength; Strengthening your neck; Building a strong torso; Swimming your way to health; Living the good life.

PASHKO, STANLEY—Continued

Booklist 46:162 Ja 1 '50

Springf'd Republican p8B D 18 '49 180w

PASLEY, MRS VIRGINIA. Christmas cookie book; drawings by Barbara Corrigan. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 146p $2.75 Little

641.5 Cookies 49-11236

Recipes for over sixty kinds of cookies, instructions for packing and advice on tools and ingredients.

Booklist 46:92 N 15 '49

Reviewed by Mary Meade
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p7 D 18 '49 200w

Kirkus 17:456 Ag 15 '49 130w

"Very specialized cookbook that teen-age girls should enjoy."
+ Library J 74:1616 O 15 '49 30w

Reviewed by Mary Poore
+ N Y Times p16 N 6 '49 90w

"A warm, gentle little book that would make a cheerful Christmas gift for anyone unsophisticated enough to catch its spicy flavor—or even for anyone who just wants good cookies."
+ New Yorker 25:155 D 10 '49 70w

PATCHEN, KENNETH. Red wine & yellow hair [verse]. 64p $2 New directions

811 49-7607

"In this collection of poems, Kenneth Patchen has left his recent surrealist experimentation and returned to the individual voice and values notable in such earlier books as 'Before the Brave' and 'First Will and Testament.' And, because Mr. Patchen now builds a poem more surely and solidly from its components, he often achieves the integration, the progressive form, that much of his previous work lacked." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"To those who like their poetry carefully tended in a walled garden, this will sound like ranting. To those who value discipline, the classic tradition, this may seem too free. But for those who welcome, in a cowed age, a voice of honest anarchism, this will have its appeal—though it will be a select one."
Kirkus 17:82 F 1 '49 90w

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald
Library J 74:497 Mr 15 '49 70w

Nation 168:396 Ap 2 '49 90w

"As a whole, despite the misleadingly blatant, posterish colors of its title, 'Red Wine and Yellow Hair' is a volume of emotional honesty and mature significance of intent too rarely found in the poetry of our time." Ruth Lechlitner
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Jl 31 '49 500w

Reviewed by James Hall
Poetry 75:115 N '49 480w

"In his latest book of verse Mr. Patchen gives fresh evidence of the disintegration of what was originally an engaging, though always uncertain, talent. . . One expects these capers from Mr. Patchen, and possibly they do no harm, thin entertainment though they be. What one had almost despaired of seeing again, however, occurs in four or five of the present poems: a faint but distinct recrudescence of the artistic drive and intelligence that characterized his first book." Dudley Fitts
— + Sat R of Lit 32:37 Jl 16 '49 400w

"Kenneth Patchen writes with much more violence, with a Celtic turbulence and humor, and passion for and against. . . His descriptions are accurate, sharp with color, sounds, and tastes; and his anger can cool and the passion turn to a love song of surprising delicacy." Eugene Davidson
Yale R n s 38:725 summer '49 190w

PATER, WALTER HORATIO. Selected works; ed. by Richard Aldington with an introduction. 557p $5 Duell

828 48-28141

"An omnibus of Pater's principal works, with an introduction by the editor." Current Hist

"To what is already known about his life Aldington adds nothing. Neither does the biographical sketch assist in any evaluation of Pater's work. . . The selections from Pater's works have been judiciously made, although to group the excerpts under the headings of the particular country they concern is not entirely felicitous. . . Although any publication of Pater is welcome today, it is regrettable that this volume was not presented in a manner designed to draw a wider circle of readers." J. L. Bradley
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 D 14 '48 480w

Current Hist 16:230 Ap '49 10w

Kirkus 16:615 N 15 '48 180w

Reviewed by Richard Jennings
New Statesman & Nation 36:421 N 13 '48 1850w

"This is an excellent selection, intelligently presented, with the whole of 'Marius the Epicurean' and the best of Pater's shorter reconstructions of the past toward which he turned his eyes away from the present."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 N 21 '48 170w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 32:30 Ja 29 '49 70w

PATERSON, ANNE, pseud. See Einselen, A. F.

PATTERN of the past: can we determine it? by Pieter Geyl, Arnold J. Toynbee and Pitirim A. Sorokin. 130p $2 Beacon press

901 Toynbee, Arnold Joseph. Civilization—Philosophy. History—Philosophy 49-11504

"More than half of this small book consists of a searching critical essay on Toynbee's system of civilizations by Geyl, and the transcript of a B.B.C. debate between Geyl and Toynbee. The last part of the book is a shorter critical essay by Sorokin." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 46:156 Ja 1 '50

Reviewed by T. V. Smith
N Y Times p3 O 16 '49 950w

"All of these have been published before, but Toynbee students will be glad to have them in this form. The book should be salutary reading for the many uncritical purchasers of the vest pocket Toynbee. . . No one, of course, denies that Toynbee is worth reading or that his stimulating analysis of history is a real contribution, but it is well to realize that there are a few short circuits here and there, and to have the defects pointed out by competent scholars." J. W. H.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 27 '49 160w

PATTERSON, CHARLES HENRY. Moral standards; an introduction to ethics. 514p $4 Ronald

170 Ethics 49-2957

"This textbook was written for use in college courses in ethics, particularly those given at the elementary level. The author's intention is to aid students in clarifying their ideas about right and wrong and to emphasize the particular importance of the study of ethics in a democratic country." (Pref) Supplementary readings at end of each chapter. Indexes.

Booklist 45:347 Je 15 '49

"This is a work in the spirit of liberalism at its best. There is never a shadow of doubt that a rational grasp of problems will guarantee the realization of self-perfection and ultimately the Christian social order. Perhaps that is what a philosophical approach to ethics should be, and Patterson probably knows that college students today do not need to be exhorted to irrationalism. But I cannot avoid the feeling that his liberalism is an unrealistic facing of the problem of evil." A. R. King
+ — Christian Century 66:684 Je 1 '49 900w

Reviewed by R. G. Stephens
Ethics 60:69 O '49 190w

Survey 85:408 Jl '49 20w

PATTERSON, EMMA LILLIE. Midnight patriot; decorations by Millard McGee. 304p $2.75 Longmans 49-9716

A historical novel of the American Revolution for young people. The scene of the story is the vicinity of Peekskill, New York, and under a thin guise of fiction the author has related several incidents that actually did occur thereabouts.

Bookmark 9:7 O '49 40w

"The conflicting loyalties of Tory and Colonial groups are well portrayed and the local setting made clear in this excellent book." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:419 S '49 90w

"Good historical fiction, which boys and girls will like equally."
+ Kirkus 17:325 Jl 1 '49 150w

"Clear and readable story of the Revolution with a hero who is neither a superman nor a philanderer and a heroine who is delightfully human." R. M. McEvoy
+ Library J 74:1107 Ag '49 70w

Reviewed by Esther Gorey
Library J 74:1553 O 15 '49 50w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 O 9 '49 220w

"This is a superb story. The organization and plot, the dramatic timing, the characterization are all excellent and will appeal to adults as well as to their teen-age children. The historical background is carefully drawn. The few deviations from actual events and persons are explained in a postscript—a feature that will arouse the confidence of young readers. This will rank with the very best of junior historical fiction." R. A. Brown
+ N Y Times p34 S 18 '49 190w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:30 N 12 '49 30w

School & Society 69:456 Je 25 '49 50w

Springf'd Republican p5D O 2 '49 90w

PATTY, FRANK ARTHUR, ed. Industrial hygiene and toxicology; contributors: J. Brozek [and others]. 2v v 1 559p il $10 Interscience

331.822 Hygiene, Industrial. Poisons
(49-7158)

"A comprehensive survey of the philosophy, basic knowledge, and techniques of present-day industrial hygiene. Much information of permanent reference value is included. Each paper is prepared by a specialist and essentially a résumé of the knowledge that is currently useful. Footnote references are given to pertinent literature, but comprehensive bibliographies have not been attempted. The work is addressed to active workers in the field, particularly to men in charge of safeguarding the health and welfare of workers in factories and other industrial establishments. The second volume will contain mainly papers on specific groups of hazardous chemicals." N Y New Tech Bks

"The stress in industrial hygiene work has changed from inquiry into causes of ill health to interest in anticipating and avoiding harmful situations before they have time to cause injury. This book should serve this objective adequately." M. B. Jacobs
+ Chem Eng 56:282 Ap '49 350w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:6 Ja '49

PAUL, ELLIOT HAROLD (BRETT RUTLEDGE, pseud). My old Kentucky home. 438p $3.75 Random house

818 Louisville, Kentucky. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 49-10498

"Diffuse memories of the author's year spent in the Louisville of 1909-1910, when, at eighteen, fresh from the University of Maine, he journeyed there with a gang of engineers to install a sewer system for the city. From the boarding house to which a casual train encounter led him, the lives of his fellow occupants take him out into the varied and colorful life of the city, its politics, its culture, the fringes of its society—high and low, white and colored." (Library J) This is the fifth in the autobiographical series: Items on the grand account.

Booklist 46:31 S 15 '49

Reviewed by Ben Kartman
Chicago Sun S 19 '49 270w

"The reader will not find in this book either a portrait of Louisville or Mr. Paul. This is fiction fronting for autobiography as often—perhaps too often—autobiography fronts for fiction. . . There are flashes of good storytelling here which cause the reader to wonder if Mr. Paul is not writing down to himself as well as to his reader, if he is not capable of fiction more distinguished than he purveys here in 'My Old Kentucky Home.'" R. M. H.
— + Christian Science Monitor p14 S 28 '49 450w

+ — Kirkus 17:351 Jl 1 '49 220w

"Vivid characterization. Recommended with reserve." J. E. Cross
Library J 74:1090 Ag '49 80w

"As autobiography, 'My Old Kentucky Home' is much too stiff a dose; but considered as fiction slightly adulterated with fact, it takes on a different aspect. . . The result is that one finishes the book with the impression that in 1909 life in Louisville might have been perilous to purse, body and soul, but it couldn't possibly have been dull." G. W. Johnson
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S 11 '49 1100w

"There are some rocky moments in the prose of this installment, and Mr. Paul continues to have unbounded confidence in the powers of the comma as a punctuation mark. These minor defects, however, never get in the way of the author's large talent for getting people on paper and bringing them into happy, rowdy and healthful existence." Thomas Sugrue
+ — N Y Times p26 S 11 '49 850w

New Yorker 25:111 S 17 '49 200w

"You'd better read 'My Old Kentucky Home,' although if you've encountered Mr. Paul's earlier autobiographical books you won't need to be told. You'll laugh and you'll be moved to plain old-fashioned sentiment, and you'll wind up knowing that you have been in the hands of an expert at his job, and you'll be glad of it." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 20 '49 1000w

"Clearly, the passage of forty years has played havoc with Mr. Paul's memory. He carelessly mixes up place names. . . Elliot Paul's well-established ability to reminisce is keen. His ability to write is equally as able, but in this more recent segment of his autobiography, it is too bad that he has failed to use his talents in giving a more faithful and analytical account of his Louisville." T. D. Clark
Sat R of Lit 32:22 O 22 '49 800w

Time 54:113 S 19 '49 350w

PAUL, LOUIS. Summer storm. 253p $3 Crown
49-9182

Novel of a long week-end houseparty at a Hudson river summer home. The climax of the story comes when the men of the party return to the city and the women are left to combat a sudden summer storm which eventually threatens the safety of the house.

PAUL, LOUIS—Continued

Kirkus 17:214 Ap 15 '49 150w

"The storm, a major character in the novel, is vividly and excitingly described. . . The style in which Louis Paul has written 'Summer Storm' has a deft objectivity that is illuminated by sympathetic understanding of the strengths and weaknesses of his characters. . . One only regrets that the story is finished off with a rather unsatisfying abruptness; the book's excellent crescendo of suspense deserves a somewhat smoother diminuendo than the writer has given it." Blythe Morley
+ - N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 22 '49 550w

Reviewed by Joan Andrews
N Y Times p10 My 29 '49 180w

"Fascinating though unimportant reading. Yet on its own level 'Summer Storm' possesses many positive virtues. It has, for one thing, a happy ending. Happy endings are somewhat out of vogue and it's nice to have one pop up now and then. For another, it has within it a fund of miscellaneous information—information of the kind that one can get only from reading novels of its type." W. R. White
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 7 '49 550w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 32:26 Jl 23 '49 140w

PAULI, HERTHA ERNESTINE. The golden door; a story of Liberty's children; pictures by Kurt Wiese. 155p $2.50 Knopf 49-11085

The story of the erecting of the Statue of Liberty in 1885, and the part played by a group of children of different races and countries. Twelve-year-old Sam, whose father was a typesetter on The World, is the leader of the group.

Booklist 46:129 D 1 '49

"I would not have believed this could be made into such an interesting book, but Sam the newsboy, Abraham the bootblack, Angelina, whose father worked on the island, are all well characterized, the little pictures by Kurt Wiese help us enjoy the story and to visualize the life of New York sixty years ago, and the book is a pleasure to read." F. C. Darling
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 8 '49 260w

"A good book for supplementary reading, and a good story as well."
+ Kirkus 17:553 O 1 '49 190w

"A very sincere and timely little book." Mary Strang
+ Library J 74:1918 D 15 '49 80w

"The children of 1885 come to life easily and convincingly by means of Miss Pauli's skill. . . The story of how children of different nations once united to work toward a common goal is told with sympathy and with enough movement and action to appeal to readers between 9 and 12. Kurt Wiese's pictures capture the feeling of the text."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 13 '49 200w

"The author has succeeded in making the collaboration of children of various races plausible. She has brought in the facts unobstrusively and has put into her book much of the emotion and gratitude which she and others have felt when arriving on these shores. The story moves swiftly. . . The book should appeal to children for its story value and to grown-ups for its history of the famous statue. Kurt Wiese's drawings are strong and often humorous." B. W. S.
+ Sat R of Lit 32:44 N 12 '49 220w
Wis Lib Bul p13 D '49

PAULI, HERTHA ERNESTINE. Most beautiful house, and other stories; il. by Kurt Wiese. 114p $2.50 Knopf 49-8471

"Five tales all of which are built around the theme that 'a thing is not worth what you pay for it but what it means to you.' The stories tell about a mangy Paris alley cat that helped stock a zoo, a tumbledown shack that became the most beautiful house in the world, a cow that was responsible for the discovery of the Polish oil fields, a bagful of rocks that brought prosperity to a settlement, and a camel that discovered a spa in the desert. Grades 4-7." Booklist

---

Booklist 45:340 Je 1 '49

"Five stories of originality, freshness and humor which give even seven and eight year olds something to think about."
+ Kirkus 17:207 Ap 15 '49 150w

"This collection of well-written stories will enhance any folk-tale shelf." M. J. Meade
+ Library J 74:895 Je 1 '49 60w

"These stories are humorous and worldly in tone and lack any trace of moralization. . . The black and buff drawings richly express the sophistication, subtlety, and international flavor of these stories for readers of 8 to 12 years old." I. S. Green
+ N Y Times p28 Je 5 '49 150w

"One does not expect to find an item of universal truth embedded in stories for children, but here it is in each of the five tales that make up 'The Most Beautiful House.' Along with it is sensitive writing and an individual quality in characterization." M. C. Dodd
+ Sat R of Lit 33:45 Ja 21 '50 230w

PAULI, WOLFGANG. Meson theory of nuclear forces. 2d ed 69p $2 Interscience
539.2 Nuclear physics. Mesotrons 48-11115

"The lectures that make up this volume were delivered in substantially their present form at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1944. In them the author critically examines various problems and hypotheses that bear on the meson theory of nuclear forces. The discussion is largely in mathematical terms and is intended for persons with an advanced knowledge of physics. The second edition is the same as the first (1946) except for the revision of about three pages that deal with recent work on neutron-proton scattering and the strong coupling theory." N Y New Tech Bks

---

"An adequate understanding of this book requires a detailed knowledge of quantum mechanics such as that possessed by an experienced theoretical physicist. Hence, it will not be useful to chemists, except for the minority who have the requisite background to evaluate its contents." F. H. Spedding
Chem & Eng N 27:102 Ja 10 '49 270w

Reviewed by Julian Sohon
Library J 74:553 Ap 1 '49 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 34:11 Ja '49

PAULL, GRACE. Horse to ride [il. by the author]. [32p] $1.25 Doubleday
49-11897

Terry was a small boy who very much wanted a horse to ride. This picture-story book describes how Terry's longing for a horse came true thru the kindness of his Aunt Mary, who also wanted a horse to ride.

Booklist 46:176 Ja 15 '50
Chicago Sun p6X N 13 '49 60w

"Viewing this as a first reader, using as content material a topic that seems never failing in interest, the acquisition of a horse to ride, this meets the needs on several scores. . . But, viewing the book as a story, it is pretty conventional and slight, curiously casual and lacking in incident."
+ — Kirkus 17:625 N 15 '49 100w

"Though lacking in incident, the story is one that a second- or third-grader can read for himself. Boards with cloth backstrip. Recommended." M. F. Cox
+ Library J 74:1918 D 15 '49 70w

Reviewed by A. N. Fedder
N Y Times p12 Ja 1 '50 150w

"Illustrations in blue and palomino-yellow make an attractive book for the younger children and those just beginning to read."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 13 '49 50w

+ Sat R of Lit 32:37 D 10 '49 90w

"Not only for the picture book age with the beauty of its lithographed drawings but 2d and 3d graders will find it a satisfying horse story that they can read."
+ Wis Lib Bul p9 N '49

PAVLOVSKY, MICHEL N. Chinese-Russian relations. 194p maps $3.75 Philosophical lib.

327.51 Russia—Foreign relations—China. China—Foreign relations—Russia 49-1878

"The history of diplomatic relations between the two countries through 300 years of empire. The author's theme is the peaceful development of economic and political friendliness, despite each country's own growth and ambitions." (Current Hist) Index.

"Pavlovsky's work, translated into adequate English from the original French, is modest in aim, but of definite usefulness for both specialists and general readers." Sidney Harcave
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:855 Ag '49 260w

Reviewed by E. H. Pritchard
Ann Am Acad 266:213 N '49 500w

Current Hist 16:343 Je '49 40w

"Concise and learned volume." D. H.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 12 '49 60w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. Report on America. 279p $3.50 Day

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—Relations (general) with foreign countries 49-7783

"Thoughtfully written portraits of America as seen through the highly observant eyes of an Englishman who has roamed over the world. Payne touches on politics, housing, education, praises us for our machines and production, condemns us for our treatment of minority groups, for our 'trafficking with social injustice in China, Japan and the Philippines.' Referring to the Marshall Plan, he states that 'dollars cannot buy liberty, democracy or peace.'" Library J

Reviewed by Rowland Egger
Am Hist R 55:228 O '49 240w

Booklist 45:260 Ap 1 '49

"Mr. Payne reports on America in much the same way that Herman Melville reports on whaling. His subject broadens out to embrace the universe. His picture of the fabulous, machine-driven American giant—groping uncertainly around to find his destiny in a distraught world that looks to him for salvation—is reporting with true poetic insight. If he takes the unsteady giant by the hand and points out the path to his destiny, he is still the poet-wayshower rather than the practical guide, and, at this stage, probably the more valuable in his contribution." Henry Sowerby
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 10 '49 850w

"This book can be read for information—for it contains a fascinating amount on foundations for peace—or for the smoothly flowing prose which is a joy to read. Substantial reading for thinking Americans. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 74:375 Mr 1 '49 100w

"The report, it must be said, is confused and opinionated, and the recommendations at the end include such empty gestures as a second bill of rights for people everywhere, a 'peace army,' a standing conference on freedom, a department of peace, etc."
— Nation 168:368 Mr 26 '49 60w

Reviewed by Gerald Johnson
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 My 1 '49 950w

"An important and high-minded book."
+ New Yorker 25:114 Mr 26 '49 220w

"In 'Report on America,' Payne writes with great passion, with firm conviction, and with beautiful simplicity." A. P.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 17 '49 470w

"With [his] admirable objectives, no man of good will will find fault. Unfortunately, however, Mr. Payne's statement of these objectives is such as to convince none but the converted and to confirm not even those in their faith. His argument is wrapped up in an involved, cushiony prose that only the most persistent reader will penetrate. . . These stylistic difficulties are directly related to a fundamental gap in Mr. Payne's thinking. In this book, he deals entirely with the realm of what should be done, as if that were altogether independent of considerations of feasibility and probability. . . Mr. Payne can argue the effectiveness of an army of several million 'peace men' sent to live and work in Europe and Asia without troubling himself over questions of how. That he seriously sets forth the scheme as if it were capable of immediate realization is evidence enough that his is not thinking, but day-dreaming. And day-dreams, even well intentioned ones, are not reliable guides in these troubled times." Oscar Handlin
Sat R of Lit 32:17 Mr 5 '49 750w

Reviewed by Irving Dilliard
Survey 85:393 Jl '49 750w

PEACE on earth [by] Trygve Lie [and others]; introd. by Robert E. Sherwood. 251p $3 Hermitage

341.13 United nations (organization). International cooperation 49-11998

These articles by men and women closely associated with the work of the United States, attempt to set forth some of the hopes and achievements of that organization. Contents: The Charter, by Trygve Lie; The General assembly, by H. V. Evatt; The Economic and Social council, by Charles Malik; Human rights, by Eleanor Roosevelt; UNESCO, by J. T. Bodet; World health, by Brock Chisholm; Freedom from want, by John Boyd-Orr; The International trusteeship system, by Ralph Bunche; Of the people, by the people, for the people, by Benjamin Cohen; What is UNICEF? by Ludwik Rajchman; New aspects of peace, by C. P. Romulo; Appendix I: The Charter of the United Nations; Appendix II: The Statute of the International court of justice; Appendix III: The Declaration of Human rights; Biographical notes.

Booklist 46:136 D 15 '49

Bookmark 9:80 Ja '50 50w

Chicago Sun p10 D 4 '49 250w

Reviewed by Neil Martin
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 5 '50 800w

Reviewed by H. W. Baehr
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 4 '49 550w

"Their essays do not add up to a genuinely critical account of the United Nations. It is an official volume, copyright of the United Nations. It has all the advantages of experience and knowledge: it lacks independent objectivity. Somebody else will have to tell us what was done wrong, and what was not done at all, and what else might have been done, even under all the existing handicaps." E. D. Canham
N Y Times p4 N 20 '49 1450w

New Yorker 25:151 D 10 '49 200w

PEALE, NORMAN VINCENT, ed. Guideposts; personal messages of inspiration and faith. 255p $1.95 Prentice-Hall

248 Christian life 48-11437

True stories of how faith works in everyday life. Partial contents: Your faith can knock out fear, by Gene Tunney; I believe in prayer, by Eddie Rickenbacker; What's so difficult about faith? by H. I. Phillips; They call me "Success story," by Lane Bryant; Message to the bereaved, by Natalie Kalmus; Confession of faith, by Faith Baldwin; Disaster can lead to victory, by Harold Russell; God keeps score, by DeWitt (Tex) Coulter; There are no atheists in laboratories, by G. J. Esselen; Technique for making a decision, by R. W. Babson; Parents are not enough, by J. E. Hoover; Let's rout the devil with love, by Dorothy Canfield. All of the articles appeared originally in Guideposts magazine.

PEALE, N. V.—Continued

"Inspiring reading for the person who ordinarily ignores this subject."
Booklist 45:171 Ja 15 '49

"This is a book to be recommended for 'devotional reading' to those who would shy away from ordinary devotional literature, but would find that these up-to-date tracts 'speak their language.'"
+ Kirkus 16:513 O 1 '48 220w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 My 8 '49 140w

PEARE, CATHERINE OWENS. Albert Einstein; a biography for young people [phot. by Lotte Jacobi and others]. 152p $2.50 Holt

B or 92 Einstein, Albert—Juvenile literature 49-8279

A short biography of Albert Einstein for the layman and young people. Bibliography. No index.

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Ag 5 '49 30w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 S 8 '49 210w

"Excellent handling of Einstein's theory of relativity in so far as is possible for understanding by the layman."
+ Kirkus 17:114 Mr 1 '49 130w

"Highly recommended for students finding Garbedian or Frank biographies long and too scientific." F. L. Morrison
+ Library J 74:558 Ap 1 '49 100w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 29 '49 230w

"Miss Peare has written a book that is marked by understanding of her subject and a realization of his relationship to scientific and political developments. Her descriptive passages are excellent and her interpretation of the central character strong. It is unfortunate that the author is not always accurate in sketching the historical background." R. A. Brown
+ — N Y Times p14 My 29 '49 90w

Reviewed by W. G. Tyrrell
+ Sat R of Lit 32:35 Ag 13 '49 100w

"A better understanding of the man may be had by anyone who reads this book. Here is the background for the marvels in science which have been revealed in a lifetime of study and experimentation." J. W. C.
+ Springf'd Republican p18A Mr 27 '49 210w

PEARSON, GERALD HAMILTON JEFFREY. Emotional disorders of children; a case book of child psychiatry. 368p $5 Norton

618.92 Child study. Children, Abnormal and backward. Psychology, Pathological 49-11663

"This book aims at better understanding of the clinical problems of children who suffer from neuroses, character disturbances and psychoses. It discusses the various categories into which such problems fall, the procedures for their management, and some of the difficulties likely to arise." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Of more interest to doctors, educators and social service workers than to parents."
Booklist 46:153 Ja 1 '50

"Dr. Pearson is director of the Philadelphia Psychoanalysis Institute and follows closely the teachings of Sigmund Freud. In his discussion of the emotional disorders of children he not only explains the clinical approach to behavior problems, character disturbances and the psychoses, but clarifies the underlying causes, the method of treatment and the reasoning used by the psychiatrist or analyst." M. R. Brown
+ N Y Times p10 Ja 8 '50 340w

PEARSON, HAYDN SANBORN. Countryman's year; introd. by Dorothy Canfield Fisher. (Whittlesey house publication) 193p il $3.50 McGraw

630.1 Country life—New England 49-10903

"Mr. Pearson is the author of the nostalgic nature editorials in the Times, and this book contains a selection of them, along with some he has written for other newspapers, arranged to form a year's sequence and illustrated with twenty-eight sepia photographs that perfectly fit the prose. The tiny essays cover every topic from family albums to the Saturday-night bath, with particular emphasis on Gargantuan country meals, and the scene, though actually New England, very readily generalizes into everyone's idealized countryside." New Yorker

"Delightful essays for random reading."
+ Bookmark 9:28 N '49 30w

"The writing style is not the best in the world—too many adjectives in front of nouns—but it is not a bad style either and there is so much humor in the man, so much curiosity, so much information, so much life and so much joy in life that all in all 'Countryman's Year' is about as good as living on a farm for a year yourself, missing all the drudgery and boredom and just hitting the highspots of beauty, interest and enjoyment. The photos, showing the different seasons and occupations on a farm, are unusually good." J. C. Cort
+ Commonweal 51:21 O 14 '49 500w

"Mr. Haydn's style is matter-of-fact, genial but not witty, without poetic graces, and he lacks much subtlety of observation." W. P. Eaton
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 O 16 '49 600w

"You may not like all the essays but if you care for country life you are almost sure to like some. And if Pearson is not a graceful writer, at least he leaves you alone with the sights and sounds and smells he evokes from the countryside, past and present. . . Here is a pretty book as well as a highly agreeable one." W. M. Teller
+ N Y Times p31 O 2 '49 360w

New Yorker 25:125 O 22 '49 120w

"A pleasantly discursive volume, in which you find the author in many moods and talking about many things—from birds to bees, from snow to silos, from crickets to kerosene lamps. It's frankly a mixture, but a very tasty one in its way." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 5 '49 800w

"So rich in minute observation are these brief bits, and so pleasantly presented, that two or three at a time are enough to take, like sampling a box of delectable confections. At that rate, they can be made to last a long time." D. B. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p5D O 2 '49 250w

PEARSON, HAYDN SANBORN. Fifteen ways to make money in the country. 210p $2 Grosset

630 Agriculture—Economic aspects. Occupations 49-2843

Partial contents: Running a top-notch roadside stand; The one-man poultry farm; One-man nursery business; Success with apples—peaches—pears; Tourist homes and the cabin business; Custom work with power machinery; Opportunity in retail stores in the country; Running a dairy goat farm; Fur farming; Running a fishpond.

Booklist 45:291 My 1 '49

Reviewed by David Tilden
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 O 16 '49 270w

"Probably none of these things is impossible. Probably each enterprise is being handled successfully by someone somewhere—someone who has got a lot of stuff that isn't in the book. But for us everyday people I think the author has made it all appear much simpler than it is." W. M. Teller
N Y Times p31 Je 19 '49 360w

PEARSON, HESKETH. Dickens; his character, comedy, and career. 361p $4 Harper
B or 92 Dickens, Charles 49-8867

A life of Charles Dickens, which makes no claim to new material, and describes Dickens as inherently an actor in all his actions. The novels are discussed chiefly for their autobiographical elements. Bibliography. Index.

"Though not a searching study, is engrossing from first page to last." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 183:84 Je '49 800w
Booklist 45:312 My 15 '49

"One has only to think of what certain other currently popular biographers would make of Dickens to be grateful that Hesketh Pearson chose the subject. . . As his desperately needed biography of Wilde proved, Pearson is no worker in straw. If his Dickens 'reads like a novel' (precious few recent novels have been as interesting), it is not because he has tried to write it like one. No trumped-up dialogue, then, no big 'scenes.' So no glittery dullness." Paul Dinkins
+ Cath World 169:477 S '49 450w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p8X My 15 '49 470w

"We of today read Dickens biographies, but we do not normally read Dickens. The novels seem to us Victorian period pieces, but a biographer like Hesketh Pearson has the faculty of translating their author into our own idiom. There is a dynamic, irrepressible quality about Mr. Pearson's pen that transmits itself to a Dickens, as to a Shaw or a Wilde, and makes a whole career effervesce with excitement. In comparison, the standard three-volume biography of Dickens's Boswellian friend, Forster, seems pedestrian indeed." Henry Sowerby
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 My 10 '49 900w

Reviewed by MacAlister Coleman
Churchman 163:17 O 1 '49 550w

"Mr. Pearson has had considerable experience in portraying literary figures at some length. This time, aside from a few quiet remarks, he lets the hectic Dickens career tell its own prolix story. The figure which emerges is an appealing if pathetic one." E. S. S.
+ Commonweal 50:206 Je 3 '49 390w

"A sympathetic, well-written biography, richly illustrated with Dickens' own wit; a biography which ranks with Hesketh Pearson's best work."
+ Kirkus 17:198 Ap 1 '49 190w

"A swift dispassionate, and thoroughly readable book. . . Libraries will certainly want this, though Dame Una Pope-Hennessy's Charles Dickens (1946)—oddly omitted from the Pearson bibliography—is still the most generally useful." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 74:734 My 1 '49 130w

"Mr. Pearson's brisk but elaborate sketch brings out strongly the turbulence, the restless energy, the violent changes of mood and even character. . . The parts showing the writer at work or preparing for work are the best." N. S.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 23 '49 420w

Reviewed by M. D. Zabel
Nation 169:280 S 17 '49 1200w

Reviewed by David Daiches
New Repub 121:17 Jl 18 '49 1150w

"Within the limits he has set himself, which were to write a popular biography, Mr. Pearson has done his work well. He has assimilated the recently discovered biographical information, is livelier and more opinionated than Dame Una Pope-Hennessy (at times, too lively, too opinionated), but rather less detailed and much less well-documented. To anyone who wants the story of Dickens' life—and a fantastic enough story it is—Mr. Pearson's book can be recommended. . . The author who is going to write the book we are all waiting for on the character and work of the greatest imaginative genius who has written in English since Shakespeare will need, in addition to his own literary ability, sure judgment and intuitive understanding, all the help that contemporary criticism, historical studies and modern depth psychology can give him." Walter Allen
+ — New Statesman & Nation 38:306 S 17 '49 1250w

"Mr. Pearson has fashioned in this latest work a key which, if it doesn't fit every one else's, neatly unlocks his own Dickens. Those who more or less know the career of Boz will meet again the old landscape, the familiar figure. . . Those who do not will have a luxurious treat in store for them: the letters and talk, which the biographer draws upon bountifully, as good as constitute another book by Dickens. And both will relish the vivacity, humor and sparkling insights Mr. Pearson lavishes upon the tale. He has not written the last word, or even the wisest word—one is an impossibility and the other always a matter of debate; but, throughout, his biography informs and delights." Marvin Lowenthal
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 My 15 '49 2100w

"There has never been a completely satisfactory life of Dickens. Forster's 'official' biography is unreadable and leaves out important facts; Dame Una Pope-Hennessy's is very full and fairminded, but is spoiled by an unsuccessful effort to summarize all the novels in turn. Hugh Kingsmill's book is perhaps the most brilliant ever written on Dickens, but it is so unremittingly 'against' that it might give a misleading impression to anyone not acquainted with Dickens' work. Mr. Pearson's book, more 'popular' than any of these, keeps the story in perspective and is fairly successful in relating the changes in Dickens' work to the changing circumstances of his life. . . But in general this is a well-balanced, as well as a very readable, book, which will be of interest to anyone with even a partial knowledge of the novels." George Orwell
+ — N Y Times p1 My 15 '49 1400w

"A solid, unpretentious, readable book that gives us an admirable portrait of Dickens in all moods, meditations, and merriments. . . What is new in this book is the author's approach to his subject. Before Mr. Pearson became a writer, he was an actor (rather a successful one, apparently), and because of his theatrical experience he is able to see Dickens in the one way he must be seen in order to be fully comprehended—as a born actor who, finding that he had a literary gift, took to writing novels." Hamilton Basso
+ New Yorker 25:107 My 14 '49 1200w

"The Dickens enthusiast had better read this for himself. He will go a long way before finding a better rounded, more thoroughly enthralling, more sympathetic or more beautifully handled biography. He may even go so far as to take 'Pickwick' down from the shelf and lose himself once more in that greatest of all Dickens' books. There could be worse occupations, too." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 10 '49 1000w

"This is an admirable and thoroughly satisfying job." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 32:14 My 21 '49 850w

Reviewed by Derek Hudson
Spec 183:240 Ag 19 '49 1200w
Time 53:108 My 16 '49 1400w
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p584 S 9 '49 3250w

PEATTIE, DONALD CULROSS. American heartwood; decorations by David Hendrickson. 307p $3.50 Houghton

973 Forests and forestry—U.S. U.S.—History 49-11285

"A famous naturalist . . . shows how 'the history of the country . . . has been deeply shaded by the facts of its forests,' from the time of the amazed discoverers to the conservation policies of the Forest Service. Describing in nonscientific terms the growth of trees and especially the formation of the hard, central 'heartwood,' author glides smoothly into little, revealing essays on the human timber and heartwood, the men and women who have made America." Library J

Booklist 46:94 N 15 '49

Bookmark 9:54 D '49 40w

"This is a noble book, a joyous and a heartening book. The wind of the forests blows through its pages along with the wind of time." Elizabeth Yates

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 26 '49 650w

"A very allegorical and essayish mixture, in throaty style. Neither the personages nor trees nor readers are likely to feel comfortable."

— Commonweal 51:198 N 18 '49 50w

"The glamor of the book lies in its looking into a past, the molding of traditions in which our trees played their part."

+ Kirkus 17:453 Ag 15 '49 450w

"Heartily recommended for all libraries; ideal for young people." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 74:1459 O 1 '49 110w

Library J 74:1616 O 15 '49 70w

"Mr. Peattie's book is a chant. It is an almost metrical celebration of the stronghearted qualities of the men who grew to tower great and tall under the beneficence of our spiritual and political sun and air, and from the economic chemistry of our soil; and of how like and renewably lasting (if we are conservationists of the American tradition as we should be of our forest wealth) in their variety and usefullness and inspirational beauty such men are." E. B. Davis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 O 23 '49 800w

"The core of the book is sound as the heartwood of his beloved hickory trees, and when his words sing, as they often do, it is with the voice of the singing wind in the bright, green leaves." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p52 D 4 '49 320w

New Yorker 25:167 N 19 '49 120w

"There are thousands who will like every bit of this highly personal book, simply for its reflection of the author's mind and his deep and serious interest in nature. All these readers, too, will like his excursions into America's past." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 28 '49 700w

Reviewed by D. L. Morgan

Sat R of Lit 32:17 D 31 '49 650w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p3D Ja 22 '50 210w

"A famous naturalist, in simple splendid prose, shows how the history of the country has been deeply shaded by the facts of its forests."

+ Wis Lib Bul p6 N '49

PEATTIE, RODERICK, ed. Cascades; mountains of the Pacific Northwest. (American mountain ser) 417p il map $5 Vanguard

917.951 Cascade range 49-49473

Contents: The last frontier, by M. B. Callahan; The Cascade range, by Grant McConnell; Cascade holiday, by W. F. Heald; Logging and mining, by James Stevens; The Cascade forest, by W. F. McCulloch; The flowers in our bit of paradise, by H. W. Hagen; The birds of the Cascades, by E. D. Lumley; Where the dry fly is queen, by Herbert Lundy; Mountaineering, by Grant McConnell; Skis on the Cascades, by C. D. Hessey; Appendix, by W. F. Heald. Index.

Booklist 46:171 Ja 15 '50

Kirkus 17:533 S 15 '49 100w

"Two chapters are especially outstanding: the one by James Stevens on lumbering (a piece of very informative, yet dramatic writing), and the one by Harry W. Hagen on the flowers (written from a very personal point of view with keen sensitiveness). The few short narratives are also good. The whole is highly recommended for all libraries." Clarence Gorchels

+ Library J 74:1459 O 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by Stewart Holbrook

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 27 '49 800w

Reviewed by H. I. Brock

N Y Times p6 Ja 1 '50 110w

Wis Lib Bul p9 D '49

PEATTIE, RODERICK, ed. Inverted mountains; canyons of the West; contributors, Weldon F. Heald [and others]. (American mountain ser) 390p il maps $5 Vanguard

917.91 Canyons. Southwest 49-7162

"The latest book in the American Mountain Series, this volume is written by three experts in their fields: Weldon F. Heald, alpinist; Edwin D. McKee, Associate Professor of Geology at the University of Arizona; and Harold S. Colton, Director of the Museum of Northern Arizona. It is a symposium of every phase of the Canyon Country—history, geology, people, flora, fauna. Each writer has spent much time in the country, has learned the secrets of the rocks and is a master of the technique of canyon travel." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 45:209 F 15 '49

"This promises to be one of the most interesting and most beautiful of the American Mountain Series, with superb photographs and text based on the experienced and expert knowledge of the canyon country."

+ Kirkus 16:497 S 15 '48 130w

"A good book to have along on any trip to the Southwest. Recommended to any lover of the Southwest, and to the traveler, armchair or active." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 73:1593 N 1 '48 130w

"A good and readable book." Edwin Corle

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Ja 23 '49 1000w

"Although, as Roderick Peattie observes in his introduction to 'The Inverted Mountains,' there is already an extensive literature on the Canyon Country and 'the earlier writers have used all the appropriate superlatives,' the experts who wrote this book have managed to bring freshness and interest to their accounts." R. D. Dinsmore

+ N Y Times p33 Ja 16 '49 290w

Sat R of Lit 32:37 Ja 15 '49 110w

PECKHAM, VIRGINIA. Proud Angela. 409p $3.50 Duell

49-48291

"The story of Angela Medicini, who is possessed by the Devil. At first, her demon nature is expressed only in such childish naughtinesses as biting her little brother and drinking his blood, but later she embarks on a confused career that includes organizing for a Communist union, strikebreaking, and inciting her fellow factory workers to riot. In the course of all this, she gets herself beaten up several times, and she finally vanishes from earth after a severe course of exorcism at the hands of a Jesuit priest and a community of nuns." New Yorker

---

"An interesting, diagnostic account of demoniac inhabitation, this is occasionally over-written, often strikingly deep in its knowledge, and effective in its harsh melodrama."

+ — Kirkus 17:483 S 1 '49 190w

"Virginia Peckham's first novel packs into its lurid pages a tale that will confound, yet possibly fascinate, many of its readers. It is a bold experiment, carried out with rather terrifying vigor. There is some comfort, however, in that Angela had disappeared by the end of the book and old Anna carried the baby off to Italy, never to return." Mary Ross
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 20 '49 600w

"At the finish, one is impressed by the author's unmistakable creative force, and looks forward to future work with the same force more securely harnessed." James Kelly
+ — N Y Times p36 O 23 '49 140w

"Miss Peckham's prose is slow and heavy-hearted, beating a muffled drum to the unfolding of her melancholy tale."
New Yorker 25:153 N 12 '49 110w

— Sat R of Lit 33:19 Ja 21 '50 270w

PEEPLES, SAMUEL ANTHONY. Dream ends in fury. 240p $2.75 Harper

Murrieta, Joaquin—Fiction 49-9970

A novel of revenge, based on the life and adventures of Joaquin Murrieta. A young Mexican came to California at the time of the gold rush in 1849, and found himself the victim of race prejudice. His brother was murdered, and his beloved young wife raped and murdered. In anguish and fury Murrieta swore vengeance and embarked on a life of banditry and murder, the course of which is followed in this story.

Booklist 46:35 S 15 '49

"A spirited portrayal, which holds an appeal as well for the western market."
+ Kirkus 17:306 Je 15 '49 120w

"Recommended." Joseph Borome
+ Library J 74:1025 Jl '49 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 N 13 '49 110w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry
N Y Times p14 Jl 31 '49 140w

"Mr. Peeples' fiction, as such, is all right enough for those who enjoy a highly flavored dish. But I'm sorry he included 'facts' in his introductory note. Taken together with his disclaimer, they leave him astraddle a rather rickety fence." J. H. Jackson
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 1 '49 1000w

"The story moves swiftly from one violence to another, from loves to hatreds until it reaches a startling climax. Truly an exciting, lusty, adventurous tale of the Old West, 'The Dream Ends in Fury' compels your interest to the last page." J. F. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p7B Ag 14 '49 300w

PEET, MRS LOUISE (JENISON), and THYE, MRS LENORE ESTELINE (SATER). Household equipment. 3d ed 418p il $5 Wiley

643.3 Home economics 49-11010

"Completely revised description of equipment and appliances common to the modern American home. A useful introductory chapter discusses the materials used in the construction of household accessories." (Cleveland Open Shelf) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1935.

Booklist 46:100 N 15 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '49

"This classic text on the principles of construction, use, and care of household equipment by two of the foremost authorities in the field has been attractively modernized in layout and brought up to date in content. While much of the basic information it contains has not been radically changed, important new information on such subjects as home freezers, automatic clothes washers, tumbler clothes dryers, and steam irons has been added." E. S. Herbert
+ J Home Econ 42:48 Ja '50 150w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:93 N '49

PEGIS, ANTON CHARLES, ed. Wisdom of Catholicism. 988p $6 Random house

208.2 Roman Catholic literature—Collections. Theology 49-9822

"This book is a compilation of the writings of Catholic authors throughout the ages beginning with pertinent chapters from St. Augustine's The City of God, and ending with G. K. Chesterton's The World Inside Out (from The Catholic Church and Conversion). The writings, selected by the distinguished scholar Anton C. Pegis of the Pontifical Institute of Mediaeval Studies at Toronto, bring out the tenets, doctrines and the dogmas of Catholicism." (Library J) Bibliography. No index.

"The Wisdom of Catholicism belongs on the reading table or at the bedside of all who wish to share with the great thinkers of Christendom, their spiritual experiences and their clear vision of the truth that makes men free." J. T. Clune
+ Cath World 170:154 N '49 450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '49

"When you get a book that contains masterpieces of the greatest writers of Western Christianity from Apostolic times down to Sigrid Undset and Jacques Maritain, when this book shows a masterful choice of the most significant and interesting pieces, not little morsels but sizable sections, when this book has an introduction that throws in bold strokes a visible image on the canvas, and when this book is well printed and carefully edited, the reviewer cannot say much more than 'Thank you' Dr. Pegis and Random House. . . It is a fine Catholic library all by itself." H. A. Reinhold
+ Commonweal 50:466 Ag 19 '49 290w

"The anthology offers great variety—religious experience, inspiration, teaching, learned theological treatises, simple, candid expressions of faith. It is astonishing that such a compilation has not previously been available."
+ Kirkus 17:143 Mr 15 '49 190w

"The compiler has performed an added service by bringing together in English and within the covers of one book many Catholic authors whose works are hard to come by except in the largest of reference libraries. Recommended for all general libraries." R. P. Breaden
+ Library J 74:375 Mr 1 '49 130w

"This is a useful volume, not only for Catholics, but for any reader interested in religious or philosophical writing." N. K. B.
+ N Y Times p44 O 30 '49 180w

PEI, MARIO ANDREW. Story of language. 493p $5 Lippincott

400 Language and languages 49-11484

"Mr. Pei deals with the family relationship of languages, with dialects, place names, personal names, slang, cant, jargon, with the sounds and structure of languages. He describes all the modern spoken tongues and discusses problems of language learning. He notes the growth of English from a language spoken by 5,000,000 people at the end of the sixteenth century, to its position today as a great imperial language, with 250 million speakers; also that Spanish has more speakers than either German or French. He writes of the tremendous influence of radio and talking pictures on language, one effect of which is to bring English and American together again." (N Y Times) The author is associate professor of romance languages at Columbia university. Indexes.

Booklist 46:184 F 1 '50

Bookmark 9:80 Ja '50 50w

"There are many introductions to linguistic studies, some of them signed by illustrious names. I do not hesitate to rank Mario Pei's among the most comprehensive and the best balanced. It is also the most accessible to the educated layman, the freest from pedantry and jargon. Its courteous simplicity shows no trace of that condescension which mars so many 'popular' books." Albert Guerard
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 N 6 '49 1000w

PEI, M. A.—Continued

"As is only too common in comprehensive works written largely out of secondary sources, many theories here masquerade as facts. The origins of so long and ballyhoo, for instance, are not so clear and certain as Mr. Pei makes them out to be. But this is a book good for both reading and reference." Horace Reynolds
+ — N Y Times p10 N 6 '49 470w

PELTON, B. W. Furniture making and cabinet work; a handbook. 596p il $6.95 Van Nostrand

684 Furniture. Cabinet work 49-8391

"This book furnishes the information to enable any man having ordinary manual dexterity and possessing a few essential woodworking tools to make a wide variety of useful articles of furniture. Clear and complete instructions are provided for constructing new outdoor furniture, indoor furniture, built-in-pieces, and, in addition, methods are presented for the repair, rebuilding and restoration of old pieces of furniture. Home remodeling operations are presented also." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 46:29 S 15 '49
Bookmark 9:10 O '49 30w
Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '49
Springf'd Republican p9C Ap 10 '49 210w

PENTECOST, HUGH, pseud. See Philips, J. P.

PEPPER, STEPHEN COBURN. Principles of art appreciation. 326p pl $4.75; text ed $3.50 Harcourt

701.18 Art criticism. Art—Study and teaching 49-9075

"Stephen C. Pepper, chairman of the Department of art at the University of California, has undertaken an analysis of art appreciation which is based upon psychological and philosophical, as well as aesthetic, considerations. . . He expounds the principles of design: contrast, gradation, theme and variation, and restraint, all four of which are combined in mutual cooperation in any significant work of art. He analyzes pattern, its elements, and organization; discusses the manner of stimulating emotion in art—finding that 'positive aesthetic values consist in experiences of release of tension'; and treats the visual materials, color, line, mass, volume, as the artist operates with each toward artistic expression. There is also a section of the various media: painting, sculpture and architecture." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 45:388 Jl 15 '49

"Professor Pepper operates in the broadest latitude, providing a concept which embraces arts of various periods, of seemingly diverse objectives. He is a critic of art in the highest sense of the word." Dorothy Adlow
+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Je 2 '49 360w

"The material is well organized, though perhaps a trifle pedagogical in presentation. Of more interest to the student than to the general reader."
Kirkus 17:265 My 15 '49 260w

Reviewed by Lincoln Kirstein
New Repub 121:26 D 12 '49 90w

"One suspects that Professor Pepper's primary interest lies in painting. To this reviewer, at least, the chapter on architecture is less effective than the rest. Functional and structural requirements, quite properly stressed, differentiate the art of building from painting and sculpture, but design, pattern, mass, and volume are less clearly applied here than elsewhere. Furthermore, the relation of material to design, though not ignored, calls for more explanation; though of comparatively slight bearing on painting, the physical properties of materials have, in our opinion, a profound, if not formative, influence on architecture. Nevertheless, where so much to applaud has been provided, it is invidious to ask for more. Professor Pepper has accomplished his double purpose." E. M. Upjohn
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:34 S 3 '49 750w

PERELMAN, SIDNEY JOSEPH. Listen to the mocking bird; drawings by Hirschfeld. 153p $2.95 Simon & Schuster

817 Humor 49-6126

A collection of the author's humorous sketches from the New Yorker magazine. A large section of the book entitled "Cloudland revisited" revaluates some of the best sellers of the twenties.

Reviewed by Rod Nordell
Christian Science Monitor p14 S 20 '49 500w

Kirkus 17:355 Jl 1 '49 90w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
Nation 169:379 O 15 '49 550w

"Despite the wild, owlist aspect in Hirschfeld's caricatures, this writer can wield a satiric snickersnee that is lethal without spilling blood. He leaves the scene of execution unspattered, and the victim doesn't realize that his head has been severed until he attempts to turn it." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 O 2 '49 450w

Reviewed by Harry Gilroy
+ N Y Times p27 S 25 '49 700w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 23 '49 650w

Reviewed by Lee Rogow
Sat R of Lit 32:19 N 26 '49 700w

"Listen to the Mocking Bird contains a heap of clinkers, but enough live coals (Mortar and and Pestle, and some book reviews) to keep Perelmaniacs hopping."
Time 54:118 S 19 '49 170w

PERKINS, MARY (MRS JOHN JULIAN RYAN). Mind the baby! 122p $2 Sheed

242 Devotional exercises. Children—Management 49-11046

"A mother's various attempts in the course of the day's routine to appreciate by observation, reason and faith the wonders of God's making and remaking of one small Christian —these attempts set forth in the hope of working with God's help towards a less harassed, more intelligent and loving service of Christ in these his least brethren our fascinating and exasperating children." (Subtitle) Written from the Roman Catholic viewpoint.

"Those who know this author's earlier writings . . . hardly need to be told that her latest book is good reading. It is a highly original and humorous presentation of principles and methods to be kept in mind by a mother who has to supervise the development of an exasperating, mannerless little animal into a delightful companion, a useful citizen, a thorough-going Catholic."
+ Cath World 170:239 D '49 120w

"Refreshing little book. . . Mind the Baby is an ideal gift." Jane Edwards
+ Commonweal 51:53 O 21 '49 160w
Springf'd Republican p7C O 9 '49 80w

PERRY, GEORGE SESSIONS. Families of America; where they come from and how they live. (Whittlesey house publication) 151p il $3 McGraw

325.73 U.S.—Foreign population. U.S.—Social life and customs. Minorities 49-11588

Profiles of nine families living in America, explaining their different backgrounds and showing their place in the American way of life. The families are Chinese, Norwegian, Italian, Mexican, German, Negro, Jewish, French, and American.

Booklist 46:115 D 1 '49

"Optimistic, with no deep penetration into problems, these are glossy, bright colored portraits of varied family lives, warmly introduced new acquaintances."

Kirkus 17:499 S 1 '49 130w

"These are very readable sketches, but too optimistic and brief to penetrate below the surface. Good, sympathetic, cheery overall glimpses of some minority groups." Anne Whitmore

+ — Library J 74:1677 N 1 '49 130w

"This little book is, in effect, a sales talk rather than a report. Allowing for this attitude, Mr. Perry has turned out a pleasantly readable, very cheery bit of work." David Tilden

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 30 '49 550w

"These pieces were first published in The Saturday Evening Post and Country Gentleman. Whether they were worth preserving between covers is somewhat debatable. As studies of nine fairly typical contemporary American families they are unhappily slight both in concept and impact. What small merit they do possess lies in their unquestioned warmth and the gusto with which Mr. Perry writes from obviously meager observation." V. P. Hass

— + N Y Times p47 N 13 '49 130w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 30 '49 900w

PERRY, GEORGE SESSIONS. My Granny Van; the running battle of Rockdale, Texas; il. by Reginald Marsh. (Whittlesey house publication) 223p $2.50 McGraw

818 Van de Venter, Maie Phillips 49-10959

"A portrait of one of the more forceful figures in the family album, Mrs. Maie Van de Venter—his Granny Van, with whom George Sessions Perry was in particularly close if not always harmonious relationships. . . This recapitulates her stormy passages at arms with Kate, the maid, with Uncle Harry, their only other relative, with her neighbor and with all tradesmen." Kirkus

Booklist 46:2; 45 S 1 '49; O 1 '49

Bookmark 9:54 D '49 40w

"All in all, this catches much of the spirit of an indomitable she-devil who was hard to live with, easy to love. Nice."

+ Kirkus 17:415 Ag 1 '49 150w

"Why Mr. Perry has been writing about other people's relatives all these years, with his Granny Van right in the same house, is at first blush hard to see. . . Readers of his affectionate tribute to his Granny Van will experience, too, that rare thing, enjoyment which is quite untinged by the fault of envy." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 16 '49 750w

N Y Times p38 O 23 '49 110w

"Let me say just that this is a completely charming little book. For its skillful portrait of an old woman who could be, and was, tyrant, friend, doer-of-good-works, hypochondraic, Philadelphia lawyer and child, all in one, it's worth the time of anyone who ever had a grandmother." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 4 '49 800w

"A portrait humorous and tender at the same time, without a trace of solemnity or sentimentality. 'My Granny Van,' then, has two revelations: one of the indomitable and combative old spitfire, the other of George Perry's rare and almost flawless sense of comedy." Lon Tinkle

+ Sat R of Lit 32:13 D 10 '49 550w

Springf'd Republican p19A O 23 '49 260w

PERRY, RALPH BARTON. Characteristically American. 162p $3 Knopf

917.3 U.S.—Civilization. National characteristics, American 49-10544

Five essays on the bases of the component parts of the American character, first given as lectures on the William W. Cook Foundation at the University of Michigan. The chapters are titled: The American cast of mind; The development of American thought; William James and American individualism; The American religious heritage; the American democracy. The author is professor of philosophy, emeritus, at Harvard university, and an authority on William James. Index.

Booklist 46:62 O 15 '49

"Though himself a philosopher of the most technical sort, able to cross dialectical swords when necessary with the specialists of his own profession, Mr. Perry is at his delightful best when dealing with concrete situations, as in the present informal excursion through the American character. . . What is most interesting in the present book is Mr. Perry's appraisal of American individualism, which he hails as a cooperative or collective individualism." Robert Peel

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 O 6 '49 360w

"A book for the mature reader, for the intelligence demanding an intellectual understanding of its national fundamentals."

+ Kirkus 17:413 Ag 1 '49 110w

"A penetrating commentary touching many phases of life." M. E. Monroe

+ Library J 74:1318 S 15 '49 140w

"Mr. Perry has an understanding, to be expected in one who has given us the authoritative work on William James, of the excesses and crudities of American life. He can be penetrating and salty in his criticism, but there is always the basic sympathy of one who—as he himself said of James—believes that he judges America by American standards." August Heckscher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 O 2 '49 650w

Reviewed by Granville Hicks

N Y Times p18 S 25 '49 650w

New Yorker 25:109 O 8 '49 200w

PERSE, ST-JOHN, pseud. See Leger, A. S.

PETERS, ARTHUR A. (FRITZ PETERS). World next door. 362p $3 Farrar, Straus 49-10430

Story of a young man's fight back to sanity as a patient in a veteran's hospital.

"A brilliant, an astonishing piece of work, written with passion, insight, and great simplicity, and with a subtle humor which provides some very funny pages." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 184:92 N '49 800w

Reviewed by E. Fowke

Canadian Forum 29:237 Ja '50 180w

Reviewed by Willard Motley

Chicago Sun S 26 '49 600w

"A novel of mental instability and institutionalization which has by no means the emotional pull of The Snake Pit, generates little sympathy for its central character and is most interesting in its portrayal of the life within the walls of a Veterans Administration Hospital."

— + Kirkus 17:310 Je 15 '49 150w

"The Snake Pit paved the way, but there has never been anything quite like this, or nearly as good. . . Libraries had best inspect because author has not spared the sensitive in his graphically honest detailing of the quirks, the distorted but logical reasoning processes, the suspicions, and fears of the psychiatric patient." W. K. Harrison

+ Library J 74:1203 S 1 '49 100w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 121:20 S 12 '49 550w

"'The World Next Door' is by any standards a notable piece of work; it comes to artistic terms with material both tragically important and technically difficult; and above all, it has authority and compassion that build to the reader's final awareness that he himself will probably never think quite the same about insanity again." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S 18 '49 750w

PETERS, A. A.—Continued
Reviewed by M. J. Ward
N Y Times p6 S 18 '49 450w

"An exhaustively realistic, often frightening, and sometimes macabre study of insanity in a veterans' hospital. . . The story is saved from unrelieved horror by the sympathetic personalities of the hero and of some of his fellow-inmates."
New Yorker 25:105 S 24 '49 130w

Reviewed by Marc Rivette
San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 30 '49 750w

"This is a magnificent novel. It is a first book, it is probably largely autobiographical, but no qualifications are necessary because of either of these facts. To my mind it is the best piece of fiction yet produced by a veteran of the recent war." Hollis Alpert
+ Sat R of Lit 32:11 S 17 '49 1000w

Reviewed by W. R. Manchester
Springf'd Republican p7C O 9 '49 180w

Reviewed by Paul Pickrel
Yale R n s 39:384 winter '50 290w

PETERS, FRAZIER FORMAN. Pour yourself a house; low-cost building with concrete and stone. (Whittlesey house publication) 217p pl $3.95 McGraw 728.64 Building. Concrete construction
49-9679

"Complete directions for building a home of concrete or concrete and stone. All materials and processes listed, including plumbing, woodworking, electrical work, heating, and painting. Exact costs are given, with detailed plans and time required for particular jobs." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 46:10 S 1 '49

Kirkus 17:202 Ap 1 '49 130w

"Inasmuch as the author's own figures show that the material alone for a small house with only a primitive heating system costs almost $4,000, it is not probable that the book will set off a very strong build-your-own-house movement." R. R. Hawkins
Library J 74:1332 S 15 '49 140w

PETERS, FRITZ. See Peters, A. A.

PETERSHAM, MRS MAUD (FULLER), and PETERSHAM, MISKA. Box with red wheels; a picture book. [32p] $1.50 Macmillan
49-11325

Picture book in which curious animals investigate a box with red wheels and find a new playmate inside.

Booklist 46:129 D 1 '49

+ Bookmark 9:31 N '49 40w

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun O 29 '49 110w

"Text and illustrations combine to make this one of the loveliest picture books of the season." E. W. Kunkle
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 13 '49 80w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 20 '49 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:525 N '49 80w

Kirkus 17:653 D 1 '49 70w

"Here is a new book by Maud and Miska Petersham done in their own lively manner and in a style reminiscent of their early use of color; a bold and imaginative use of red, orange and yellow. The pictures of the animals' amazement at the baby in the box and the child's delight in the animals are an expressive projection of mood." A. G. Zebker
+ Library J 74:1531 O 15 '49 100w

Reviewed by M. M. Smith
+ Library J 74:1828 D 1 '49 80w

"This enchanting picture book is for mothers to read to very small children, who will point to the barnyard animals with glee." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 N 13 '49 120w

"The story is flat and probably intentionally so to set off the inherent vitality of pictures and format. . . These two well known author-illustrators have made a charming picture book out of interests consistently appealing to very small children." Elena Baker
+ N Y Times p50 O 23 '49 150w

New Yorker 25:165 D 3 '49 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 13 '49 130w

"Little children will surely take this picture book for their own. Like 'Mikki,' it will be a favorite for many years." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:21 N 12 '49 120w

"With its realistic portrayal of familiar animals and the text with its surprise, it will delight pre-school and kindergarten youngsters and parents, too."
+ Wis Lib Bul p12 D '49

PETERSON, CAROLINE E. Flower arrangements. 80p pl $7.50 Studio
635.966 Floral decoration Agr48-302

"Examples of the author's arrangements of flowers and foliage of Hawaii and other parts of the United States." (Subtitle) The volume consists of full-page color and monochrome plates with short descriptive notes about the flowers, fruits and vegetables used in the arrangements.

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 74:198 F 1 '49 100w

"It is a sheer delight to turn the pages of this strikingly handsome book, so perfect are its contents and the artistry of their presentation." R. S. Lemmon
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 Mr 13 '49 150w

"The author, a prominent garden club lecturer, has spent many days in the Hawaiian Islands and, as a result, most of her arrangements have an exotic appearance that seems more striking than beautiful to the conventional eye. But withal there are numerous new ideas of great originality. Miss Peterson's book should serve as an admirable text for a course in advanced floral decoration." C. W. W.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 N 28 '48 120w

PETERSON, ROGER TORY. How to know the birds; an introduction to bird recognition; over 200 common species il. with line drawings and silhouettes by the author. 144p $2 Houghton
598.2 Birds 49-7708

Beginners guide to the identification of birds. The five sections are Introducing the birds; What to look for; The families of birds; Habitats (where to look for birds); and Silhouettes of common birds. Index.

Booklist 45:237 Mr 15 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '49

"An excellent and authentic guide for children and beginners. . . Recommended highly where the study of birds is concerned." J. F. Kennedy
+ Library J 74:558 Ap 1 '49 70w

Wis Lib Bul 45:45 Mr '49

PETIOT, HENRY JULES CHARLES. See Daniel-Rops, H.

PETO, MRS FLORENCE. American quilts and coverlets. (American crafts ser) 63p 106il $3.50 Chanticleer
746.46 Coverlets 49-9282

A combination of history of American quilts from 1748 and directions for planning and making quilts. Illustrated. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 45:331 Je 1 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '49

Kirkus 17:203 Ap 1 '49 180w

"Cunning sketches of wind-blown tulips, pineapples and harlequin stars ornament this attractive volume. Belongs in home craft collection." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 74:1325 S 15 '49 70w

PETRIE, SIR CHARLES ALEXANDER, 3d bart. Jacobite movement; v 1, The first phase, 1688-1716. 240p il $3.50 Macmillan

942.071 Jacobites. Great Britain—Politics and government [(49-3575)]

"Sir Charles Petrie's account of the Jacobite movement first appeared in 1932 [Book Review Digest 1933]. It has now been rewritten and greatly enlarged, and the present volume carries the story only to the end of the 'Fifteen.'" (Times [London] Lit Sup) Bibliography. Index.

"The present volume, resting as it does on wide scholarship and many new sources of information, is a welcome new interpretation of this phase of history." Francis Russell

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 22 '49 500w

"A good deal of fresh material has been included, and the book as a whole benefits from the more leisurely development of the narrative. Room has been found for some valuable illustrative passages. . . The book is admirably planned, and Sir Charles Petrie pursues his course with sobriety and restraint."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p163 Mr 12 '49 750w

PETROV, VLADIMIR. Soviet gold; my life as a slave laborer in the Siberian mines; tr. from the Russian by Mirra Ginsburg. 426p $4 Farrar, Straus

365.36 Labor, Compulsory. Prisons—Russia. Gold mines and mining 49-11587

"A sixteen-year-old boy writes his political thoughts into a diary. Three years later a lady friend turns against him and plants anti-Soviet books in his room. The young fellow is caught in the net of the vast purges of the mid-1930's. Terror-stricken ex-friends denounce him. It all adds up to a fat NKVD dossier, a six-year sentence to heavy labor, and an odyssey that leads through the prisons of Leningrad to the labor camps and gold mines of Siberia. That's what happened to Vladimir Petrov. That is the story he tells." Sat R of Lit

Canadian Forum 29:238 Ja '50 220w

"Among many narratives of similar experiences it stands out because of its vivid descriptive quality. It is as exciting as an adventure novel. The author evidently needed the proverbial nine lives of the cat, and perhaps more, in order to survive the Kolyma regime. Mr. Petrov has a good eye for character and personality. He makes his fellow prisoners come alive—priests, professors, Red army officers and Communists who have fallen into disfavor, thieves, embezzlers and murderers." W. H. Chamberlin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p17 N 20 '49 550w

"Mr. Petrov, who is now a member of the Yale faculty, has written his story with great candor—but with too many words. His verbatim quotations of every single hearing and all the conversations he had in those six years seem not only unnecessary but often not quite credible. It is unfortunate that he was not warned against introducing elements of possible fiction into a work whose impact depends solely upon the genuineness of every single fact reported." Ernest Pisko

— Christian Science Monitor p20 N 17 '49 390w

"This is a sober, undramatized, factual record."

Kirkus 17:497 S 1 '49 200w

"What makes me wonder most about the accuracy of this book is the author's apparent ability, after so many years, to quote verbatim long conversations with interrogators, officials, guards, and fellow-prisoners. No doubt this lavish use of dialogue heightens the drama and lends an air of verisimilitude. But this reviewer, at least, would have found the book a more impressive document if Mr. Petrov had not endowed himself with such an uncanny memory." Keith Hutchison

Nation 169:522 N 26 '49 700w

"Vladimir Petrov has written a new Russian thriller. . . It has almost everything in the way of adventure and romance, is packed with heroes and villains, and carries the reader along at a rapid pace as the exciting narrative unrolls against the background of penal life in the vast gold fields of Dalstroy. . . All this is very well, but the author purports to tell something more than an adventure story. . . But, if the author really has such serious intentions, the form in which he writes vitiates his purpose." F. R. Dulles

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 N 20 '49 600w

Discussion by V. Petrov

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p9 Ja 1 '50 600w

"This volume is another addition to the already extensive list of memoirs by former prisoners of Soviet slave labor camps. Mr. Petrov's account is of more than ordinary importance, however, because he claims to have spent his years of compulsory labor in the Kolyma gold fields of the Soviet Far East, one of the major sources of the U.S.S.R.'s gold production and one of the regions least known to the outside world. . . This volume will interest students of the Soviet forced-labor system, but they will regret that in more than 400 pages no effort is made to give documentary or other objective evidence to support Mr. Petrov's story." Harry Schwartz

+ — N Y Times p22 O 30 '49 360w

"Not a very unusual story in the Soviet State of today. But one that needs telling, over and over. I wonder who will read this book. It is long, repetitious, terrifying, and depressing. . . Ably translated by Mirra Ginsburg, the book is a powerful indictment of Soviet society, a frightening revelation of totalitarian inhumanity in our time." Martin Ebon

Sat R of Lit 32:16 N 5 '49 800w

PETRY, MRS ANN (LANE). Drugstore cat; il. by Susanne Suba. 96p $2 Crowell

Cats—Legends and stories 49-6316

A story for ages 6-10. Buzzie, the new drugstore cat, had a short tail and a shorter temper. When he scratched a customer, the druggist's daughter decided he would have to be sent back to the country. One night he scared a robber away from the store, so he was able to stay with his friends who could understand cat language.

Booklist 46:105 N 15 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun O 1 '49 80w

"Small cat lovers—and those not so small—will find Buzzie irresistible, both in the story and in Suba's wonderful pictures, which capture so perfectly the kitten's distinctive and engaging personality." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 13 '49 220w

"Both story and drawings show how real a personality Buzzie is." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 25:406 S '49 80w

"Buzzie is one of the most real and enchanting kittens to come purring into a story. . . The style is fresh, sensitive and witty. Miss Suba's pictures are at their best." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 13 '49 180w

"Buzzie, that round, fat, smoke-colored kitten, will surely endear himself to every 7-to-10-year-old who doesn't positively hate cats. They will like him especially because he was—like you and me—not at all perfect." E. L. B.

PETRY, ANN—Continued
+ N Y Times p24 N 6 '49 150w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:32 N 12 '49 90w

PETRY, RAY C., ed. No uncertain sound; sermons that shaped the pulpit tradition; with an introduction. 331p $4.50 Presbyterian bd.

252 Sermons 48-4009

An anthology of pre-Reformation preaching, consisting of 60 selections from 32 preachers. Beginning with Origen, who died in 251, the book ends with Michel Menot, who flourished between the years 1508 and 1518. Bibliography. Index.

"The sermons themselves will probably provoke two conclusions in the minds of most readers. One will be the judgment that the world of thought which encompassed this preaching is almost totally strange to us. . . The other reaction will be surprise over the fact that the pulpit tradition which most preachers follow today in their organization of sermons was fairly well shaped before the Protestant Reformation came along. . . The only serious shortcoming of the book is that many of the 'sermons' are not given in full, so it is impossible in many cases to study the structure of the sermon as a whole. This is not a serious fault, nor does it prevent the anthology from being the best collection of pre-Reformation sermons yet produced in English." D. E. Stevenson
+ Christian Century 65:1305 D 1 '48 650w

Reviewed by A. W. Swan
+ J Religion 29:168 Ap '49 170w

"There is much more solid material in these sermons than in most of those preached today. However, there is lacking the popular appeal of the best sermons one hears from the modern pulpit."
+ Kirkus 16:516 O 1 '48 180w

PETTENGILL, ROBERT BUNNELL. Price economics. 483p il $4.50 Ronald

338.52 Prices 48-9622

"In its general approach, this book is rather unique in that it treats the subject of economics almost altogether from the standpoint of price. Prices of commodities or tangible goods, and the many demand and supply factors involved in their emergence, are discussed at length in Part I comprising the first fifteen chapters. In Part II, comprising the last twelve chapters, are considered the prices of services rendered by the factors of production in the form of wages, rent, interest, and profits (including dividends)." Ann Am Acad

"The author has apparently devoted much effort to precision and clarity in attempting to make this a successful textbook for students. While the style of the book is not lively, it is concise. Each chapter begins with a statement of the specific questions that the chapter is designed to answer and closes with a good summary. It may well be that this book will have a definite impact on the form of future textbooks." A. Morgner
+ Am Econ R 39:1299 D '49 750w

"Because of the scope and other limitations the book hardly lends itself as a text for a course in the principles of economics. In line with the author's ideas, it will probably be most useful as a text or reference book for intermediate or advanced courses in economic theory. There is also much in this book that is of value and interest to the student of business practice and policy, and especially to students of marketing concerned with the theories underlying price determination and price policy.". T. N. Beckman
+ — Ann Am Acad 265:205 S '49 400w

PETTIJOHN, FRANCIS JOHN. Sedimentary rocks. 526p il $7.50 Harper

552.5 Rocks, Sedimentary 49-7661

"After taking up the texture, composition, structure, color and classification of sedimentary rocks, the author discusses conglomerates, sandstones, shales, limestones, and other sediments. Then follow chapters on weathering, transportation, deposition, and lithification, with both subject and author indexes. Intended as an elementary textbook, it will be used by many as a work of reference." Library J

"This book is a milestone in the history of sedimentology and deserves to be acquired by any geologist regardless of his field of interest. The reviewer did not have to pay for his copy, but if he had not received it free, he would have gladly mortgaged his last shirt to acquire one—the book is worth it!" P. D. Krynine
+ J Geol 58:82 Ja '50 4300w

"Recommended." Julian Sohon
+ Library J 74:553 Ap 1 '49 70w

"A relatively comprehensive treatment, even though it was intended by the author as an elementary work. Its chief use will probably be as a textbook for intermediate and advanced students, but it will appeal also to professional geologists."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 34:14 Ja '49

PETTIT, THEODORE S. Birds in your back yard; bird drawings by George Greller; line drawings by Donald Ross. 210p $3 Harper

598.2 Birds—U.S. Birds, Protection of 49-10697

Practical suggestions for attracting birds to your home grounds by means of suitable houses, feeding trays, baths, and plants. Includes a chapter on bird photography. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:44 O 1 '49

"Entertaining, informing chapters."
+ Bookmark 9:4 O '49 30w

"The author manages to make bird watching truly fascinating as a year-round hobby, an inexpensive one requiring little equipment, and considerable, but self-acquired, knowledge. . . There are excellent lists of shrubs and trees to attract birds, and a good chapter on photography."
+ Kirkus 17:349 Jl 1 '49 140w
Library J 74:1562 O 15 '49 30w

"Here is a sensible and pleasantly infectious book about the delights of attracting birds around your dwelling, and the methods of so doing."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 N 6 '49 90w
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 13 '49 120w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:33 N 12 '49 10w

PFEIFFER, ROBERT HENRY. History of New Testament times; with an introd. to the Apocrypha. 561p $4 Harper

225 Bible. New Testament—History of contemporary events. Bible. Old Testament—Apocrypha. Jews—History 49-9731

"This volume is the 'sequel and completion' of Dr. Pfeiffer's Introduction to the Old Testament [Book Review Digest 1941]. 'Here are two books in one: a summary of the history, religion, and literature of Judaism from 200 B. C. to A. D. 200 . . . and an introduction to the Apocrypha. . . ' In the first 'book' we find a full account of the Palestinian Judaism which produced Jesus and a picture of the Graeco-Roman Mediterranean world through which Paul travelled and preached his gospel. The second 'book' is a detailed treatment of the twelve books of the Apocrypha. Each book is outlined as to its contents, origin, literary qualities and religious teaching." (Library J) Bibliography. Indexes.

"The two themes indicated by the double title are treated so independently that the reader really gets two books—and, it may be remarked, practically for the price of one, when one considers the quantity of material that is packed into these large and crowded pages. . . The works of Goodspeed and Charles on the Apocrypha are not superseded, but they are strongly reinforced by this more exhaustive and detailed study." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 66:868 Jl 20 '49 380w

"Professor Pfeiffer's Introduction to the Apocrypha is unique in the scope of its presentation, while his book as a whole is one which is greatly needed, and deserves to be widely read." T. L. Leishman
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 3 '49 550w

Reviewed by R. C. Miller
Churchman 164:17 Ja 15 '50 90w

"Since this review is limited in space, the present writer must reluctantly resist the temptation to close with an extended appreciation of Pfeiffer's book. He must content himself with saying very earnestly and warmly that the history of New Testament times is an unusually good summary of the subject and that the introduction to the Apocrypha is an incomparably fine presentation of a related subject." Ralph Marcus
+ Crozer Q 27:57 Ja '50 1000w

"Professor Pfeiffer of Harvard and Boston Universities has made in this volume a valuable contribution to the scholarly study of the period extending from 200 B.C. to 200 A.D."
+ Kirkus 17:295 Je 15 '49 180w

"Recommended for large public, college, university and theological seminary libraries, and as a reference work. The excellent author and subject indexes, and selected bibliography are noteworthy." E. H. Weeks
+ Library J 74:1098 Ag '49 140w

PHELAN, PAUL J., ed. Time to laugh; a risible reader by Catholic writers. 322p $4 Longmans

827.08 Roman Catholic literature—Collections. Humor 49-10580

Among the authors represented in this anthology are: Maureen Daly, Paul J. Phelan, Joseph McCarthy, Compton Mackenzie, Bruce Marshall, Ronald Knox, O. S. Gogarty, D. B. Wyndham Lewis, Evelyn Waugh, Padraic Colum, John Kieran, Jimmy Durante, Sheila Kaye-Smith. Biographical notes. Index of authors and titles.

"It is a grand collection."
+ Kirkus 17:348 Jl 1 '49 160w

"Author, 'reformed college professor now feature writing. . .' edited collection of older Catholic humorists in With a Merry Heart (1943). This will appeal to same readers regardless of religion; they will have to supply their own definition of humor, however." R. J. Hurley
Library J 74:1090 Ag '49 110w
N Y Times p56 D 4 '49 180w

PHELPS, MARGARET. Toby on the sheep drive; with il. by Evelyn Copelman. 197p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.
49-6505

Story of the adventures encountered by a thirteen-year-old boy who takes two thousand sheep down the Heber sheep drive in Arizona.

"This is decidedly a new kind of Western, and excellently written." Jane Cobb
+ Atlantic 184:104 D '49 70w
Booklist 46:145 D 15 '49
Kirkus 17:394 Ag 1 '49 150w

"This convincing and appealing story includes fascinating facts about sheep herding and reflects a fine feeling of the country." Alice McQuaid
+ Library J 74:1540 O 15 '49 40w

"Recommended. Good material for remedial reading." Harriet Morrison
+ Library J 75:51 Ja 1 '50 70w

"Miss Phelps portrays well the sensitivity and courage of a young boy faced with new and difficult situations. She vividly describes the Arizona scenery and life along the drive. It makes a satisfying 'happy-ending' story that will provide knowledge and entertainment for boys of 9 to 13." Marjorie Burger
+ N Y Times p26 O 16 '49 150w

Reviewed by A. R. Bosworth
San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 13 '49 100w

PHILIPS, JUDSON PENTECOST (HUGH PENTECOST, pseud). Where the snow was red. 247p $2.50 Dodd 49-9680

Detective story.

Booklist 46:35 S 15 '49

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Jl 8 '49 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Je 19 '49 230w

"Pentecost has shifted from fast, hard action to the leisurely exploration of a little village and its characters; the result is a novel of quiet charm, constructed with all the suspenseful skill of one of the finest pulp-trained old masters." A. B.
+ — N Y Times p14 Jl 10 '49 200w

"A coy twist in the ending isn't particularly helpful to this otherwise sound and well-planned job."
+ — New Yorker 25:88 Je 25 '49 120w

"Highly satisfactory entertainment, for about seven-eighths of his book. We're not at all sure that the remaining eighth is worthy of the book or of Mr. Pentecost. But it's his book, and as long as he wanted it like that—so be it!" E. D. Doyle
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p26 Je 26 '49 90w

"Above average."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:36 Je 4 '49 40w

PHILLIPS, CABELL B. H., and others, eds. Dateline: Washington; the story of national affairs journalism in the life and times of the National Press Club. 307p il $4 Doubleday

071.53 Journalism. Reporters and reporting
49-11680

"This is more than the history of the National Press Club in Washington, it is a book essential to newspaper workers and public understanding of the developments of the democratic press. Mr. Kroch's Introduction is followed by chapters contributed by leaders in the field:—Duncan Aikman traces the rise of political reporting from 1800 to 1900; Scott Hard and Junius B. Wood begin the story of the National Press Club, the development of the techniques of news gathering, the news conference; Theodore F. Koop tells the story of radio news casting; ensuing chapters record the financial contortions which ended in building the Press Building; Homer Dodge recounts the rise of the business reporter; the story of the trials of the newspaper photographer forms one chapter, government press releases another; the columnists, the diplomatic correspondent, the life of the newsman in Washington pressures and a chapter on censorship by George Creek add other facets to . . . [the] picture." (Kirkus) Index.

Booklist 46:114 D 1 '49

"For that market—professional and lay—interested in behind the scenes in the press."
+ Kirkus 17:526 S 15 '49 180w

"In general, the story is one of marvelous organization backed by alertness and resourcefulness. It is safe to say that no other world capital's news is covered with the completeness, the speed, and the factual accuracy that are matters of routine in Washington." J. W. Johnson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 O 30 '49 1600w

PHILLIPS, C. B. H.—Continued

"A fascinating story of the growth of newspaper reporting and influence, the growth of Washington, the growth of America, and the growth of the world in relation to its several parts. The book also illustrates dramatically what to many of us has been the almost incredible development of the means of gathering and transmitting important events to the people." A. W. Barkley

+ N Y Times p3 O 30 '49 950w

Reviewed by Phiz Mezey

San Francisco Chronicle p28 N 20 '49 750w

"Cabell Phillips, four other editors, and nineteen contributors have done a fine job in terms of both the history of the Washington press corps and its anatomy. Some of the pieces are better than others. But the whole book adds up to fine and informative reading." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 33:18 Ja 14 '50 500w

PHILLIPS, CHARLES FRANKLIN, and DUNCAN, DELBERT J. Marketing; principles and methods. 729p il $6 Irwin

658.8 Marketing 48-4458

"A basic text for students or for business executives who desire a broad picture of the structure and functions of marketing. Effects of various marketing policies and practices upon the ultimate consumer are stressed throughout." Management R

———

"Covers the usual material of marketing in a thoroughly satisfying way. The statistics and references are copious and up-to-the-minute, and the statistics are better organized and digested than is common in marketing books. . . While Phillips and Duncan do not go very far in satisfying the current demand for development of marketing theory, their chapters on pricing remain the strongest to be found in marketing texts." E. R. Hawkins

+ Am Econ R 39:807 Je '49 410w

Management R 38:237 Ap '49 30w

PHILLIPS, HAROLD COOKE. Bearing witness to the truth. 219p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

251 Preaching 49-7598

"Harold Cooke Phillips covers a lot of ground in his Yale Lectures on Preaching. The six titles grow logically out of the topic; they not only serve to remind us of what we have heard, but present new insights which are well worth while. The first two chapters tell what the author means by truth; the third speaks of ways of knowing the truth; the fourth deals with the sermon as a means of interpreting the truth; the fifth treats of the preacher and the truth. The concluding chapter, presenting Jesus as the revelation of truth incarnate, eloquently summarizes and brings unity to the whole series." Crozer Q

———

"There are sermons in the book; there is stimulating reading; there is that which makes the reader underscore or take notes and brings him back again and again to refresh his memory. One could hope that it will have a wide reading, and the minister who does not study the book will miss something he should have." F. J. Fitch

+ Christian Century 66:272 Mr 2 '49 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '49

"The lectures are characterized by Dr. Phillips' keen insight, substantial content, and impeccable style." J. D. Morrison

+ Crozer Q 26:284 Jl '49 130w

"The structure of the book is clear and the writing throughout has the imagery and terseness of phrase which characterizes Phillips' preaching." G. E. Bartlett

+ J Religion 29:328 O '49 350w

PHILLIPS, JAMES ATLEE. Suitable for framing. 154p $2.50 Macmillan

49-9878

Detective story.

———

"The author uses the English language well enough to use it better and he should be advised, incidentally, that a gunsel is by no means necessarily a man with a gun." James Sandoe

+ — Chicago Sun Jl 29 '49 150w

Kirkus 17:259 My 15 '49 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Jl 31 '49 140w

"Mr. Phillips has managed to contrive a singularly baffling book, in which the one great mystery is the author's intent. . . On the pure thriller level, the book is too cryptic to be satisfactory, unless you care for nothing but carnage. On the higher level, which its pretentions of style indicate, it is horribly empty —a meaningless world of violence and hatred." A. B.

N Y Times p19 Jl 17 '49 180w

"The whole thing is unreal, but if you read it fast in the hot weather it is passable whodunit stuff. It is at least good for a vicarious thrill." D. F. M.

+ — Springf'd Republican p7B Ag 14 '49 100w

PHILLIPS, JAMES DUNCAN. Pepper and pirates; adventures in the Sumatra pepper trade of Salem. 141p il map $2.50 Houghton

382 Pepper. Salem, Massachusetts. Pirates 49-49285

An account of the pepper trade between Sumatra and Salem, Massachusetts, during the years from 1799 to 1846, when the brig Lucilla landed the last cargo of pepper which was brought direct to Salem. Index.

———

"The true story of Salem adventures in strange seas and of the charting of those seas by Salem masters has been told with careful authentication, but without great attention to literary form." W. K. Rugg

Christian Science Monitor p14 D 20 '49 480w

Kirkus 17:595 O 15 '49 100w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 74:1673 N 1 '49 80w

"Most writers on piracy have worked with a heavy charge of enthusiasm and, in general, a wonderful scantiness of facts. Mr. Phillips brings great gusto to the telling of his tales of Malay pirates, but he has in addition shown particular diligence in searching through contemporary accounts and then splicing the stories together. This combination makes 'Pepper and Pirates' an unusually attractive book." W. M. Whitehill

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p48 D 4 '49 700w

"Mr. Phillips, a Salem historian of note, does not attempt to tell the whole story of the pepper trade, but limits himself to Salem's part in it during the years 1799 to 1846. His presentation is concise and methodical, larded occasionally with fat excerpts from letters and journals." C. B. Palmer

+ N Y Times p36 N 27 '49 230w

Springf'd Republican p17A Ja 8 '50 360w

PHOTO-GRAPHIC, 1949; the annual of America's leading photographers; selected and ed. by the American society of magazine photographers, designed by Bradbury Thompson. (V 1; Whittlesey house publication) 210p il $6.95 McGraw

770.58 Photography—Yearbooks (49-7082)

"Although this photography is the work of magazine photographers, many of the pictures are published for the first time. Included are news pictures, sociological reporting, story pictures, and fashion photography, as well as some pictures rejected by magazine editors." Booklist

Booklist 45:238 Mr 15 '49

Chicago Sun p8X Ja 9 '49 90w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
+ Library J 73:1515 O 15 '48 80w

"Fortunately, the book contains only a few of the self-conscious cryptic and Expressionist photographs that usually crop up in these collections. In a foreword, the editors survey the history of magazine photography, which they say has become, in a little more than ten years, one of the most important and influential means of mass communication in America."
+ New Yorker 24:86 Ja 22 '49 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 27 '48 250w

PICKEN, MRS MARY (BROOKS). Singer sewing book. 244p il $3.95 Grosset

646 Sewing. Dressmaking

"This appears to be a compilation of several of the author's earlier books, somewhat condensed and brought up to date on methods and techniques. Obviously intended to boost the sale of Singer sewing machines and equipment, but the instructions are not limited to use with this make of machine. Amply illustrated, with diagrams clearly indicating procedures in plain sewing, dressmaking, mending, home decoration; special section on children's clothing." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 46:153 Ja 1 '50

"Naturally, owners of Singer machines will have an advantage in the use of the book because it explains the machine itself and all of its attachments. But it will be worth far more than its price to non-Singer owners, too. Just about everything you'd care to machine-sew and just about every material you'd care to make it in are dealt with here clearly and completely." E. J.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 27 '49 150w

PICTON, LIONEL JAMES. Nutrition and the soil; thoughts on feeding; introductory essay on creative medicine by Jonathan Forman. 374p il $4 Devin-Adair

613.2 Nutrition. Soils 49-8770

"The author has collected evidence to show that soil, replenished with the waste of animal and vegetable life, and not with chemical artificial fertilizer, is the medium whereby vitamins and other growth-promoting factors are imparted to the crop. He maintains that production methods must be changed if we are to solve many of the problems of malnutrition and ill-health." Library J

"The material in the book is entertainingly written and well documented. In the back are some whole-meal recipes and an excellent index. The material on the whole is a good 'tie-up' between the nutritional and public health worker, the food producer and handler, and the average housewife interested in properly feeding her family." I. A. Manville
+ Am J Pub Health 39:1482 N '49 320w

"Dr. Picton's informal exposé manifests both geniality and good sense." E. S.
+ Commonweal 50:182 My 27 '49 290w

Reviewed by Julian Sohon
Library J 74:1102 Ag '49 60w

PIGMAN, WILLIAM WARD, and GOEPP, RUDOLPH MAXIMILIAN. Chemistry of the carbohydrates. 748p il $10.80 Academic press

547.3 Carbohydrates 48-7484

"A general survey of a broad field of chemistry. It is monographic in style and organization and is based on a wide but not exhaustive survey of the literature. Statements in the text are keyed to the numerous bibliographic footnotes. The work is written for advanced students who are beginning intensive study of the carbohydrates and for graduate chemists who are not specialists in carbohydrate chemistry but need a general knowledge of the field and, on occasion, specific information about the chemistry of a special carbohydrate group or a particular reaction." N Y New Tech Bks

"Graduate students, research chemists, and all interested in carbohydrate chemistry should find this carefully organized and well documented treatise instructive as well as valuable as a reference volume." T. H. Newkirk
+ Chem & Eng N 26:3297 N 1 '48 270w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:3 Ja '49

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:120 Mr '49 200w

PIGOU, ARTHUR CECIL. Veil of money. 150p $2.50 Macmillan

332.4 Money. Income [49-8609]

"Professor Pigou in his latest book attempts to throw some new light on the old question of the significance of money in determining income and employment. Part I is devoted to a general discussion of the institution of money with special reference to the pricing mechanism and inflation. Part II, under the title, 'Money Income,' contains the substance of the book—a model designed to demonstrate the predominant factors determining the magnitude of money income." (Am Econ R) No index.

Reviewed by P. E. Sultan
Am Econ R 39:1326 D '49 850w

"Professor Pigou has produced a short volume, which is written with his usual distinction of phrase and thought. . . It has a number of interesting points. It adopts a fresh method of approach. Perhaps the most novel bit of technique is the author's method of considering the level of money wage-rates as dependent on the level of total money income. None the less, the book is unsatisfying. Professor Pigou is not a lover of controversy and does not enter into explicit argument with the Keynesians."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p164 Mr 12 '49 850w

PINCHERLE, ALBERTO (ALBERTO MORAVIA, pseud). Woman of Rome; tr. from the Italian by Lydia Holland. 433p $3.50 Farrar, Straus

49-10785

The story of a prostitute. Adriana wants marriage and children, but seems fated to meet men who are unable to give her that kind of happiness. Before her story ends she is looking forward hopefully to the birth of her illegitimate child.

"Moravia has written a profoundly realistic and compassionate story which continually transcends its subject; which is, in effect, the story of modern Italy. This, to my mind, is one of the most powerful novels to come out of continental Europe since the war." C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 184:94 N '49 900w

Reviewed by Mary Sandrock
Cath World 170:314 Ja '50 270w

"The book is a not-too-profound study of a lot of weak characters. You feel sorry for Adriana simply because she wasn't very smart and was a little too sensual. . . In all fairness, however, the book at no time becomes offensive—Moravia has done a fine job on what might have become pornography. It just gets tiresome." Bruce Taylor
Chicago Sun p41 D 6 '49 250w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 6 '49 300w

Commonweal 51:418 Ja 20 '50 460w

Kirkus 17:373 Jl 15 '49 160w

PINCHERLE, ALBERTO—Continued

"Contriving a dramatic plot, [the author] avoids both sentimentalism and sensationalism. However, the endless recital of intimacies becomes terrifically monotonous. . . Albeit, it is a creditable effort and translations of Moravia's other novels will be of interest." E. P. Nichols
Library J 74:1203 S 1 '49 100w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 26 '49 150w

"On the whole this is a good-humored and not useless book. For people with time on their hands, it serves the usual purpose of a few hours at the movies—something between distraction and self-degradation."
New Repub 121:18 N 21 '49 260w

"As a fluid pudding the novel would have been successful, but Moravia has tried to give fluid shape, with the result that the force and imagination of parts goes for nothing—and we have neither a realistic picture of a Roman prostitute's life nor a profound enquiry into the human mind. So the point of view is undecided, and Moravia has produced a readable but idea-less novel which borders on the kitsch; and that could never be said of his earlier, shorter books." Michael Swan
— + New Statesman & Nation 38:153 Ag 6 '49 300w

" 'The Woman of Rome,' with its exhaustive biology, its penetration into the secret recesses of a woman's temperament and the beautiful balance and simplicity of its style, should establish Moravia's reputation securely here." Alfred Hayes
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 N 6 '49 1000w

Reviewed by W. F. Weaver
+ N Y Times p36 N 6 '49 500w

Reviewed by John Broderick
+ New Yorker 25:131 N 5 '49 850w

"As a character study Adriana is quite fascinating—a woman who is never really certain whether she is chasing or being chased by a lustful satyr. No doubt a touch of nymphomania makes the account of her career assume an almost esthetic veneer, whereas the tradition of this kind of naturalistic novel calls for emphasis on the sordid and inevitable physical and mental deterioration of the scarlet woman. However, the toll taken by poverty, innocence, loneliness, and environment is sufficiently considered to make 'The Woman of Rome' a sincere effort at understanding a serious problem." Siegfried Mandel
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:19 N 5 '49 650w

"The story is redeemed from being sordid by Mr. Moravia's clinical exactitude, and by an irony which I like all the better for the fact that it is neither sentimental nor affected. Mr. Moravia enjoys his story, and leaves judgment to the reader." L. A. G. Strong
Spec 183:60 Jl 8 '49 170w

Springf'd Republican p8B D 18 '49 130w

Time 54:110 N 21 '49 550w

"Adriana tells her own story; her reflections, and her analysis of the rather unusual psychology of her lovers show a sophistication and penetration quite outside the simple and narrow intelligence she is supposed to possess. Signor Moravia replies that he has 'attributed to her only those feelings and ideas which women like Adriana would express if they had the verbal and mental power to do so.' This sounds reasonable; but in practice such interpretation creates a frequent impression of forced subtlety, when the simplicity of Adriana's nature is matched with the complexity of her thoughts."
Times [London] Lit Sup p485 Jl 29 '49 420w

PINCHOT, BEN, and PINCHOT, ANN. Hear this woman! 375p $3 Farrar, Straus 49-5074

Character study of a woman of humble beginnings who became a success in radio and politics thru the force of her personality. But to her there was only one man of importance —her husband whom she had left for her career. At the height of her success she returned to her love and her home in a middle western town.

Booklist 46:83 N 1 '49

"A novel of a woman, for women, which has more substance and intelligence than most. . . The off again on again attitude towards marriage will offend some readers."
+ — Kirkus 17:310 Je 15 '49 230w

"Story is entertaining, rapid paced and thought provoking. Plenty of love interest, interesting background and intriguing characterizations make this a readable novel for women. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 74:1095 Ag '49 60w

"What the Pinchots offer is no easy solution of the modern problem of marriage and/or career. But they do present a thoughtful statement of the difficulties involved, and indicate the attitude of mind—probably the only attitude of mind—in which they may be successfully resolved." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 28 '49 900w

" 'Hear This Woman!' is a pretty silly title, and 'Hear This Woman!' by Ben and Ann Pinchot is a pretty silly book. It is, in fact, so silly as to defy simple reporting." Jane Cobb
— N Y Times p26 Ag 28 '49 320w

Reviewed by Marc Rivette
San Francisco Chronicle p28 O 23 '49 120w

"The Pinchots haven't treated her any too seriously, and how can we? They would have it that Faith is a magnetic political leader among women, yet they have failed to endow her with the qualities for the role. Faith isn't even convincing as the most popular girl at school, much less as the spellbinder on a national hook-up. It is a matter of casting." N. L. Rothman
— Sat R of Lit 32:31 Ag 27 '49 240w

PINGEL, MARTHA MARY. An American utilitarian: Richard Hildreth as a philosopher; with selections from his published and unpublished works. 214p $3 Columbia univ. press

191.9 Hildreth, Richard 48-8960

Richard Hildreth, an American author and philosopher, who was born in 1807 and died in 1865, is best known for his Abolitionist novel The White Slave. This study of the man and his works contains mainly materials by Hildreth himself, including two fragments hitherto unpublished: The Theory of Wealth, and The Theory of Taste. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Alan Gewirth
Ethics 60:74 O '49 330w

"Miss Pingel's book on the most consistent American utilitarian gives an excellent new insight into the merits of his sober and truly self-reliant mind. Her work conclusively shows how much richer in substance is Hildreth's thought than that of only too many better known names of his time. It is especially to be welcomed that Miss Pingel made accessible a fair number of Hildreth's writings which have been hitherto unpublished or buried in old magazines and pamphlets of which not too many copies survive in American libraries." David Baumgardt
+ J Philos 46:452 Jl 7 '49 750w

"For all his earnestness and integrity of purpose, Hildreth was insufficiently scientific and observant. His 'Theory of Taste,' for instance, is an interesting essay, but it expresses opinions—some of them dubious—rather than penetrates into the subject. Hildreth tried, commendably, to write in the language of the people; but if he avoided obfuscation, he did not always attain general truth or even flavor. His 'Letter to Andrews Norton on Miracles as the Foundation of Religious Faith' is a brave defense of tolerance, but hardly stands forth in an age which produced such antiformalists as Emerson, Theodore Parker, and Melville, among others. It is, in any event, by such comparisons and by consideration of such elements of Hildreth's work that it can be properly appraised." Louis Filler

New Eng Q 22:114 Mr '49 900w
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:39 Mr '49 300w

PIPER, EVELYN, pseud. See Modell, M.

PIPER, RUTH. Sudy and Prill; il. by Brinton Turkle. 210p $2.50 Doubleday
49-10413

Story of a friendship between two little girls. This friendship, beginning spontaneously with a collision on the main street of a New England village, proves its worth when it helps both little girls to overcome personal difficulties and help others, too. Fun and good times are included and a mystery is solved before the summer is over.

Booklist 46:38 S 15 '49

"Sure-to-be-popular book." J. D. L.
+ Horn Bk 25:414 S '49 120w

"A very sound story of eleven and twelve year olds in a little New England town. The giggles, the flights of imagination, the fun, the heartaches, are all there."
+ Kirkus 17:359 Jl 15 '49 120w

"Recommended." M. E. Martignoni
+ Library J 74:1334 S 15 '49 80w

Reviewed by Alice McQuaid
Library J 74:1541 O 15 '49 40w

"This isn't a problem story. It is full of good times and small adventures, but the way in which each girl solved her difficulty, unconsciously spurred on by her affection for the other, brings this narrative of a true friendship to a very satisfying conclusion. For girls of 9 to 12." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p13 S 4 '49 140w

"Though the writing is occasionally oversprightly, the book is understanding and jolly."
+ — New Yorker 25:178 D 3 '49 90w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:27 N 12 '49 30w

PIPER, WILLIAM THOMAS, and DUFFIN, DANIEL JOHN. Private flying today and tomorrow. 295p il $4.50 Pitman
629.138 Airplanes—Piloting. Aeronautics
49-11825

"The author tells how private flying grew and gives a general description of the various types of heavier-than-air craft. A chapter is devoted to operating costs and insurance, another to development of airports and finally a short discussion of the future of private flying." (Springf'd Republican) Index.

"The text is exceptionally readable."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 34:82 N '49
Springf'd Republican p8B D 18 '49 50w

PISTORIUS, ANNA. What butterfly is it? 25p col il $1.25 Wilcox & Follett 595.789 Butterflies—Juvenile literature
49-8885

"In pictures and simple text, fifty-three butterflies are presented . . . from the blue, black and gold Mourning Cloak, which appears late in winter, to the brown and white Checkered Skipper, which thrives late into the fall. Miss Pistorius describes the individuality of each insect: how it deposits its eggs on a preferred plant, goes to a particular flower for nectar; how it gets its name—from color, wing shape, habitat, etc. Much of the information is presented in the form of a quiz." N Y Times

Booklist 45:340 Je 1 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun My 21 '49 50w

"There's need for a good first butterfly book, so it is too bad that this hasn't more accurate basic facts. It leans too heavily on entertaining oddments."
Kirkus 17:234 My 1 '49 120w

"Accurate text and illustrations in full color make this a worthwhile addition to the material in this field." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 74:961 Je 15 '49 70w

"Fascinating and beautiful book." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Jl 31 '49 190w

"The gay hues of the pictures of butterflies and the flowers and plants on which they feed make this an unusually attractive picture-book." Marjorie Burger
+ N Y Times p22 My 15 '49 170w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:34 N 12 '49 20w

PITTSBURGH. CARNEGIE LIBRARY. Boys and girls department. Stories to tell to children; 6th ed. rev and ed. by Laura E. Cathon [and others]. 96p pa $1 The library, 4400 Forbes st, Pittsburgh
028.5 Children's stories—Bibliography
49-5162

"This is a 'selected list for use by libraries, clubs and radio, with a special listing of stories and poems for holiday and music programs.' It is the sixth edition, revised, the result and record of story hours conducted at this library since 1899." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"The booklet is admirable for its clever arrangement and the ease provided for cross-reference. . . The value of such a workable booklet is obvious." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Je 19 '49 200w
Wis Lib Bul 45:109 Je '49

PITZ, HENRY CLARENCE. Pen, brush and ink; ed. by Arthur L. Guptill. 161p il $8 Watson-Guptill
741.26 Pen drawing. Brush drawing 49-4613

Instructions for the handling of pen-and-ink and brush-and-ink drawing and descriptions of the tools needed: pens; inks; brushes; papers; erasers; etc. Illustrated with over three hundred reproductions of the work of over a hundred well-known pen-and-ink artists, among them Rockwell Kent, Frank Brangwyn, James Daugherty, Eugene Delacroix, Gustave Dore, and the author. List of artists. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 46:10 S 1 '49
Cleveland Open Shelf p23 D '49

"It does seem to this reviewer that some artists such as Brangwyn and Charles Dana Gibson don't come off too well in the reproduction of their work. Book seems high-priced but may provide an easy means to acquaint the reader with the style of Heinrich Kley, Stow Wengenroth, Phil May, Daniel Vierge, Henry C. Pitz, and many others." A. S. Plaut
Library J 74:1823 D 1 '49 140w
School Arts 49:6a Ja '50 60w

PLAGEMANN, BENTZ. My place to stand. 241p $2.75 Farrar, Straus 616.83 Infantile paralysis. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 49-9773

In 1944 the author was serving as pharmacist's mate on an LST near Naples, when he contracted polio. He was first treated at a Naples hospital, and then brought back to the United States for treatment at Warm Springs, Georgia. About half of this description of his reactions to the disease and its aftermath is devoted to his stay at Warm Springs.

"The work is useful in stimulating the reader to do some thinking about his own relevant notions and in extending the understanding of

PLAGEMANN, BENTZ—Continued
readers regarding infantile paralysis. Writing the volume was probably a valuable experience for the author in understanding himself. It could be an interesting case study for inservice training sessions for a variety of social scientists." R. P. Kandle

Am J Pub Health 39:1588 D '49 320w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '49

"Mr. Plagemann is a rather successful novelist and he writes naturally and easily of his war and recuperative experiences. His narrative manifests greater talent for observation than philosophic depth." E. S. S.

+ Commonweal 50:420 Ag 5 '49 260w

"A reflective, sensitive testimony, perhaps of greater personal value than general interest."

Kirkus 17:263 My 15 '49 190w

"An honest, provocative and skillfully written book of general interest by a writer already known for his novels and short stories." B. B. Libaire

+ Library J 74:1022 Jl '49 130w

"So far as I know, Mr. Plagemann's mystical fancy is unsupported by medical opinion. Furthermore, it is probably a disservice, however unintentional, to his hard-fighting fellow 'polios,' who deserve better than to have thoughtless people whispering that they are paralyzed because they want to be. This reviewer must conclude regretfully that a little psychosomatics is a dangerous thing." Richard Match

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ag 14 '49 430w

"Any outsider who had sympathy and some understanding could write a merely inspirational book about Plagemann's case or another. But when the victim himself tells his story, and when that victim is himself a writer of experience who is willing to talk frankly—well, that is something more, as the reader will find out." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 26 '49 900w

"There are not many books which everyone should read, but here is one of them." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 32:26 Ag 13 '49 700w

PLAIDY, JEAN, pseud. See Hibbert, E.

PLANCK, MAX KARL ERNST LUDWIG. Scientific autobiography, and other papers; with a memorial address on Max Planck, by Max von Laue; tr. from German by Frank Gaynor. 192p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

504 Scientists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Science—Philosophy 49-11086

"Max Planck advanced in 1900 the hypothesis that radiant energy can be emitted only in definite portions. This theory has become known under the name 'quantum theory.'. . It is instructive for everybody who has followed, even as a layman, the achievements of modern science to read in the present 'Scientific Autobiography' the authentic story of how these ideas were born and grew up in the mind of their author. . . The papers in this volume were all published in German in 1947 and 1948 and written when Planck was between 80 and 90 years. They deal with philosophical problems such as causality, freedom of will, relation of science to ethics and religion, etc." (N Y Times) Index.

"If you approach this little book for what it is, a group of semiformal papers by the great theoretical physicist, you will be well rewarded. But if you expect it to be either severely scientific or warmly human, you will surely be disappointed." D. H. Killeffer

+ — Chem & Eng N 27:3890 D 26 '49 210w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:103 N '49

"The book is written very smoothly and is understandable to the general reader. In the field of philosophy and religion it keeps closely to the beliefs of the 'man in the street' and shows little acquaintance with the scientific work which has been done in the critical analysis of science." Philipp Frank

+ N Y Times p38 O 30 '49 700w

School & Society 70:224 O 1 '49 30w

PLANTY, EARL GERALD, and others. Training employees and managers; for production and teamwork; with a foreword by Robert W. Johnson. 278p il $5 Ronald

658.386 Employees, Training of 48-9174

"Training is a new profession. The purpose of this work is to demonstrate that the goals of teamwork and production in business and industry can best be achieved by a training program designed to improve both the skills and the attitudes of employees and of managers." School & Society

---

"For anyone administering a training department, the book will be invaluable because it contains much material which will be extremely useful. It will also have considerable worth as a reference book for college courses. It provides what is probably the most thorough and detailed treatment of the subject that has appeared to date. Much case material has been included, together with a bibliography. Anyone interested in the field of industrial training, including executives, will profit from reading the book." R. N. McMurry

+ Ann Am Acad 263:253 My '49 750w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 74:130 Ja 15 '49 80w

"In achieving their major purpose, the authors have brought together in one volume several essentials to effective training that have been time-tested by the experience of many people in numerous organizations. This is a book that will prove helpful both to the beginner as a means of familiarizing himself with the industrial training field as a whole and to the veteran as a continuously useful source of ideas for industrial personnel development programs." M. S. Firth

+ Management R 38:227 Ap '49 280w

School & Society 68:375 N 27 '48 50w

Special Libraries 40:31 Ja '49 80w

PLASS, EWALD MARTIN. This is Luther; a character study. 395p il $5 Concordia publishing house, 3558 S. Jefferson av, St Louis 18

B or 92 Luther, Martin 49-422

"Professor Plass has brought together narrative quotations from Luther's writings and incidents of his life which throw light on 'the many-sidedness and richness' of his character. He portrays him as a genius who was at all times concerned primarily with religious problems; who was consistently a conservative, not a revolutionary, reformer; whose references to political, economic, social, and cultural matters must be interpreted in the light of his overwhelming faith in God's grace which saves the sinner and is found alone in the Bible; and whose greatness of character consisted of 'complete self-effacement, utter reliance upon Jesus Christ, a death- and devil-defying courage, and an immovable conviction of the ultimate triumph of the cause of Christ.'" Am Hist R

"His reluctance to come to grips with current issues is reflected in the author's bibliography, which omits the works of such recent and contemporary scholars of Luther and the Reformation as Ernst Tröltsch, Karl Holl, Otto Scheel, Walther Köhler, Gerhard Ritter, and James Mackinnon, not to mention the important Scandinavian and American scholars. For this reason the use of the book will be limited largely to those who are interested in its abundant supply of quotations and do not have access to larger, more detailed studies of Luther's life and work. While Professor Plass modestly states in his preface that he does not profess 'to have plumbed the depth of Luther's character,' the publication of his volume calls attention to the need for a study which will make use of recent scholarship in attempting to analyze the reformer's psychology, relate his character to the general environment of sixteenth century Germany, and answer the problems raised by the important events of our own day." H. J. Grimm

+ — Am Hist R 54:906 Jl '49 320w

"This portrait of Luther, his character, personality and thought, is evidently based upon extended reading in Luther's works and a considerable acquaintance with the voluminous Luther literature, especially the earlier biographical studies. It may be that this is the real Luther. Certainly it is the orthodox conservative Lutheran's Luther—a Luther without spot or blemish. . . Oh for at least one small wart!" W. E. G.
Christian Century 66:48 Ja 12 '49 350w

PLAUT, JAMES SACHS, ed. Oskar Kokoschka. See Kokoschka, O.

PLEASANTS, SAMUEL AUGUSTUS. Fernando Wood of New York. 216p $3 Columbia univ. press
B or 92 Wood, Fernando 48-7608

A biography of an early New York mayor, which is based on all available material. "Thrice mayor of New York and a leading Democrat in Congress for nearly two decades, Wood, beginning in the early 1830's, influenced the course of local, state, and national political life for almost a half-century. . . A businessman in politics, he made politics his business. Shrewd, smooth, indefatigable in the pursuit of his political goals, he more than once approached real statesmanship, and earned for himself a sure place in the political annals of his era." (Ann Am Acad) Bibliography. Index.

"This volume pretty well exhausts the printed materials bearing on the subject and utilizes the more immediate manuscript sources. The fact that the latter are fragmentary leaves us with a series of glimpses of the central figure rather than with a fully developed portrayal. It is possible that an exhaustive search of the collected papers of other politicians of the period might yield additional information, but the gleanings would probably be scanty and of little significance. Men of the type of Fernando Wood are unlikely to commit to paper much that might be revealing." Wood Gray
Am Hist R 54:379 Ja '49 500w

"Dr. Pleasants reviews the high lights of this impressive record, sparing no fact however damaging to his subject and omitting little data of major significance. But, while a good deal of useful material has been gathered together on Wood's life, much more, it seems, could have been accomplished with it. It is not so much that the narrative lacks dramatic pace. Rather more serious is the failure to probe deeply enough into the motivation that conditioned Wood's conduct. . . Finally, what is needed is the bringing to light of some of the 'inner history,' the behind-the-scenes activity that set the stage on which Wood played so colorful a role." S. I. Pomerantz
+ — Ann Am Acad 261:193 Ja '49 400w

PLENN, ABEL. Upon this continent; a new chronicle of America. 245p $3.50 Creative age
973 U.S.—History 49-8644

"This is a book of seventy-three brief selections of original source material in American history, from a Zuni creation myth to Meyer Berger's account of New York City's reactions to the Truman election victory in The New York Times of Nov. 4, 1948. They are strung together with continuity writing from Mr. Plenn." N Y Times

---

Booklist 45:310 My 15 '49

"Much revealing and interesting material has been selected from the voyages of explorers, the reports of missionaries, the accounts of travelers. Mr. Plenn has let the people speak for themselves. . . The result is a book which tells us much that history often neglects—how people thought and felt as they did the doings which history records." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 My 5 '49 310w

Kirkus 17:126 Mr 1 '49 160w

"Plenn has done a skilful job and given us some very fine writing. But the volume is too brief to do justice to the subject and thus lacks the completeness and roundness of the work on South America. Recommended nevertheless." Joseph Borome
+ — Library J 74:546 Ap 1 '49 100w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman
Nation 169:332 O 1 '49 230w

"This anthologist—for he is essentially just that—has a sharp eye for the human document, the written page that makes the event stand out so sharply that it becomes a part of the reader's experience. And because most of the material comes from sources that have not been trampled into triteness by prior researches, it will make the average reader acquainted with any number of fascinating characters who have played a part in the American story. Even if it is unduly optimistic, that is a fault easily forgiven in these gloomy times." G. W. Johnson
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 Je 12 '49 800w

"As in Mr. Plenn's exciting similar work on Latin America last year, 'The Southern Americas,' this is a charming way of bringing history back alive. It is delivered, incidentally, in cages small enough to fit into the cramped apartment's bookshelf, the short evening's reading time and even the average citizen's book budget. . . Mr. Plenn has a confusing habit in his continuities of lumping his contemporaries with pre-history Zunis, Spanish conquistadores of New Mexico and Iroquois Indians under the pronoun 'we.' It may be snobbish of us, but 'we' just don't feel at home enough with these remote peoples to read this affectation naturally." Duncan Aikman
+ — N Y Times p32 My 8 '49 1000w

"'Upon This Continent' does not accomplish what it purports to accomplish. . . Mr. Plenn seems a great deal more interested, judging by his selections, in the factors that have tended to divide the U.S. than those that have tended to bring it together. And there, I think, is the weakness of this book. Considering it as a whole, the pattern becomes clearer. Mr. Plenn is quite right to note the unfairnesses that have been part of the picture. . . But his picture is out of whack in precisely the degree that, because of his approach, he over-emphasizes these things." J. H. Jackson
— + San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 27 '49 850w

"The selections have been made to overemphasize human exploitation and class conflict. . . What is really offensive about Mr. Plenn's book, however, is the long series of introductory notes, which are straight out of the gospel of Marx-cum-Lenin. Here is a well-slanted text for Commies and fellow-travelers, but it has nothing to do with American history." Allan Nevins
— Sat R of Lit 32:19 Jl 9 '49 140w

Springf'd Republican p8C My 15 '49 300w

PLESCH, JOHANN. János, the story of a doctor [autobiography] tr. by Edward Fitzgerald. 579p il $5 Wyn
B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 49-9046

A combination of biography and history. The author is a Hungarian physician and scientist, who has known many famous Europeans during his lifetime (he was born in 1878 in Budapest). Among his friends he numbers Einstein, Fritz Kreisler, Bergner, the Curies, Toscanini, Richard Strauss, and many more. He includes two chapters on Einstein, and briefer biographical notes on others of his friends. In an appendix he gives some of his opinions on matters medical and scientific. Index.

PLESCH, JOHANN—Continued

Booklist 46:33 S 15 '49

"A useful feature is the author's advice on health and all aspects of social behavior. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 74:816 My 15 '49 110w

"Professor Plesch writes with a concreteness and moderation that give conviction as well as interest to his accounts of persons and events that have come within the extraordinary orbit of his direct experience. . . I wish that for an American audience there had been some elimination of detail in this long book so as to clarify the main outlines of its picture of pre-war Europe and, in particular, Germany between the wars. As it stands, however, these memoirs are a gold mine for those who would dig into one of the many fields it includes and, as a whole, it is a stirring picture of what the world and we ourselves owe to Europe." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Je 5 '49 800w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich
Sat R of Lit 32:19 Je 25 '49 310w

PLUTZIK, HYAM. Aspects of Proteus. 94p $2.50 Harper
811 49-8402

"A slim volume of highly diversified poems, the first to be published by Hyam Plutzik. Twice he has won the Yale Poetry Prize; he is now teaching at Rochester University. His verse shows unmistakable grasp of poetic forms. His thinking is rationalistic, a little pessimistic, intensely modern." Kirkus

---

"His views are broad and cosmic. He is quite evidently influenced by a rich Jewish background and a varied humanistic education. The one lack in his poems is that of melody, but they compensate by their elegance, satire, conciseness. If this young writer can grow in feeling and general capacity he bids fair to be one of our ranking poets. At the present stage, he is worth watching—though it is unlikely his poems will reach a popular audience."
+ — Kirkus 17:48 Ja 15 '49 130w

"Mr. Plutzik has learned a good deal since the publication eight years ago of his privately printed Yale University prize poem, Death at the Purple Rim, which is included in this collection. Not the least sign of increasing maturity, of development in the craft, is Mr. Plutzik's willingness to experiment with form, to submit himself to the discipline of a prior tentative design, to let what is said be controlled and determined somewhat by the peculiar cast in which the thought is to be set." Rolfe Humphries
+ Nation 168:590 My 21 '49 330w

"Nothing in this collection strikes the reader as shoddy or dishonest or exhibitionist. The faults are those of a poet still searching for his characteristic idiom, and everywhere we have the feeling that he is employing the style he uses out of a genuine desire to see what can be made of it rather than out of any desire to imitate or show off. Mr. Plutzik is a poet to watch." David Daiches
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p58 S 25 '49 320w

"Some of Mr. Plutzik's shorter poems are light and chatty: . . But in the best of them—'Sprig of Lilac,' 'Commentary' or 'The Event on the Upland'—he treats some of the oldest poetic themes with strength and clear individuality, and with a freshness that does not depend on innovations." Herbert Barrows
+ N Y Times p4 Jl 17 '49 320w

"The sum-effect of these poems, to me, was one of excitement and perplexity. Mr. Plutzik must learn to turn outward from this 'improvisation before an empty house'; must learn to seize the world less impersonally and more passionately if he is to achieve a poem that is not an etude." Howard Griffin
Sat R of Lit 32:31 My 21 '49 400w

POCOCK, ARTHUR F. Red flannels and green ice. 272p $2.75 Random house
940.548173 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939-1945—Greenland. U.S. Coast Guard 49-10109

An account of the author's wartime voyage to Greenland and the Arctic Circle on a coast guard cutter. He reports humorously on what he saw from glaciers to Eskimos, and tells something of life on board ship.

Booklist 46:12 S 1 '49

"Crackling humor and fresh observation. . . Conservative libraries may object to frank masculine language and casual sex references."
+ — Bookmark 9:4 O '49 70w

"Arthur Pocock finds some warm spots of humor among the glaciers and fiords; but it's hard to give more than a cool reception to his generous servings of standard barracks-room comedy. Mr. Pocock's plain facts are easier to take, in his flippant style, sometimes irritating, generally engaging."
— + Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 18 '49 100w

"There is a youthful exuberance reminiscent of Peter Fleming's travelogues, there is an hilarity, mostly genuine, seldom forced, that lightens his historical and geographical inclusions, and there are vivid pictures of shipboard and shore life."
+ Kirkus 17:289 Je 1 '49 220w

"This delightful story . . . has a threefold appeal. It is a good sea story: a none too experienced crew, vivid descriptions objective and subjective, with thrilling incidents galore. It is a fine travel book: highly interesting impressions of Greenland, the Eskimos, and life at Arctic military bases. Its value as a book of humor is considerable—rough at times, but spontaneous and genuine—a 'natural.' Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:1022 Jl '49 100w

"Mr. Pocock is a lighthearted young man with an indefatigable sense of humor and the tireless comic inventiveness of a half-dozen hungry radio gag-writers. He is also the winner of the Random House Servicemen's Prize Contest, and it's easy to see why. Nobody could dislike Mr. Pocock." Richard Match
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ag 21 '49 450w

"It could have been a funny book, an informative book, a book worth reading a sentence at a time. In lonely little individual paragraphs its author shows that he has humor in the private part of his mind, that he has acute powers of observation, and that he could write well if he let himself go. All three of these faculties are held rigidly in control, and the product of his propriety tells the reader precious little about Greenland or the Eskimos or the Coast Guard or Mr. Pocock." Marion Hargrove
— + N Y Times p6 Ag 14 '49 700w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 4 '49 150w

"Everything about the trip amused him; he here writes about the experience with immense good humor. It is only a slight drawback that the publishers have confounded good humor with humor and presented the book as a side-splitter in the line of S. J. Perelman's trip around the world. The reader who expects anything of that kind will probably suffer a severe shock and recover very slowly. To be sure, there are excellent anecdotes . . . and an active and witty turn of phrase, as though the man were walking with steel springs in his shoes. But the book is about as far from the forced grin of the professional humorist as a good dinner-table conversation is from a Broadway production. . . A well-informed book, an amiable book that is a pure delight in a troubled world, where so few can be so sane, so urbane, and so pleasant. I read it twice and shall probably do so again." Fletcher Pratt
+ Sat R of Lit 32:19 S 17 '49 400w

POLATIN, PHILLIP, and PHILTINE, ELLEN (CATT) (MRS PHILLIP POLATIN). How psychiatry helps; with a foreword by Nolan D. C. Lewis. 242p $3 Harper

616.8 Psychotherapy. Mental diseases 49-8006

"A brief introduction, for the layman, to physical and mental ailments for which psychiatric help may be given. Deals with current methods of handling these difficulties, together with lists of places where treatment or information may be had. Includes psychotherapy, psychosomatic medicine, shock treatments, psychosurgery, chemical treatments, and preventive psychiatry." (Booklist) Index. The authors are a psychiatrist and his wife, the founder of the People's committee for mental hygiene.

Booklist 45:222 Mr 1 '49

Reviewed by M. J. Ward
Chicago Sun F 22 '49 380w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '49

"An intelligent, readily intelligible survey of what 'psychiatry is in its totality.' . . An excellent introduction to the field."
+ Kirkus 16:654 D 15 '48 120w

"Not for those who are seeking self-help, the book seems designed for the families of hospitalized patients who become confused when they hear about lobotimy, topectomy, shock treatment, etc."
Nation 169:190 Ag 20 '49 50w

"Exceptionally well written, factual yet interesting, and authoritative in every detail, 'How Psychiatry Helps' can be recommended heartily to anyone considering seeking psychiatric help, and it is particularly valuable to the families of those already under treatment." F. G. Slaughter
+ N Y Times p13 Ap 10 '49 270w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 19 '49 600w

Reviewed by Patrick Mullahy
Sat R of Lit 32:34 O 15 '49 180w

Wis Lib Bul 45:64 Ap '49

POLITI, LEO. Song of the swallows [pictured by the author]. [32p] $2 Scribner

49-8215

A picture story book about the swallows of the San Juan Capistrano mission, and of the little boy and the old gardener who loved the swallows and waited for their return on Saint Joseph's Day. For grades three to five.

Booklist 45:285 Ap 15 '49

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 170:212 D '49 40w

Reviewed by M. B. King
+ Chicago Sun Ap 16 '49 90w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 15 '49 90w

"This is a remarkable book. It is a very gentle telling of a simple story. . . But the pictures are what make this a really fine book. The author has illustrated it in a magnificently appropriate manner."
+ Commonweal 51:189 N 18 '49 120w

"This tender poetic story of the coming of springtime is touched by the kindliness of the good Fathers of the Mission as a little boy knew it. Lovely pictures in soft colors bring out the charm of the southern California landscape and the melody of the swallow song adds to the feeling of spring." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:209 My '49 80w

"A simple story, which sensitive, beauty loving children will enjoy."
+ Kirkus 17:149 Mr 15 '49 120w

"As in previous books, Leo Politi transforms a southern California tradition or legend into a fragile story of tenderness and beauty for modern children." Claire Nolte
+ Library J 74:667 Ap 15 '49 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 My 8 '49 150w

"This brief and quiet story for 5-to-8-year-olds is illustrated by the author in soft, muted colors. His pictures have tenderness as well as humor." S. C. Gross
+ N Y Times p22 My 15 '49 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 13 '49 100w

"There are three double-page paintings of the mission. . . Two songs are given in full, with the music. It is a lovely book for an Easter gift, with its color and music and its reverent atmosphere."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:36 Ap 9 '49 130w

Wis Lib Bul 45:107 Je '49

POLLARD, ERNEST CHARLES, and STURTEVANT, JULIAN MUNSON. Microwaves and radar electronics. 426p il $5 Wiley

621.38 Radar. Radio waves 49-430

"A compact treatment designed to provide upper-class physics or engineering students with an introduction to the basic principles and techniques of microwave production, control and utilization. Although the treatment as a whole is general, some of the discussions of problems that had to be solved in the application of microwaves, especially in radar, are specific and rather detailed. Selected literature references are included." (N Y New Tech Bks) Indexes.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1598 N 1 '48 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:13 Ja '49

"The great achievement of the book is that of condensation, secured by vigorous style and emphasis on underlying principles illustrated with enough applications to maintain interest. Cleverly designed problems are appended to each chapter. The book should be useful not only to college students but also to more general readers who wish to inform themselves on developments in micro-wave electronics without pursuing the subject through the voluminous details of the Radiation Laboratory Series."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:129 Mr '49 200w

POLLARD, JOHN ALBERT. John Greenleaf Whittier; friend of man. 615p map $6 Houghton

B or 92 Whittier, John Greenleaf 49-10792

A biography of Whittier as Abolitionist, poet, philosopher, and political leader. There are critical chapters on his work. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:81 N 1 '49

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun N 28 '49 60w

Current Hist 17:354 D '49 70w

"A long, scholarly and minutely detailed life of the great abolitionist poet, written with love and appreciation, but without style or charm."
+ — Kirkus 17:350 Jl 1 '49 100w

"This is the best book on Whittier and the author has succeeded in making it, as he had hoped, 'an accurate and definitive account of his life.' . . Recommended." G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 74:1091 Ag '49 140w

"A long, meticulously documented biography, woefully lacking in depth or shading or critical insight. . . A satisfactory modern study of Whittier still remains to be written."
Nation 169:333 O 1 '49 100w

"The biography is a splendid example of what can be done when sound scholarship, critical acumen, and sympathetic insight work harmoniously together. For the quality of its vision alone it deserves an honored place among the best recent biographies of American authors. The scale of Mr. Pollard's book is ample and its tone is correspondingly elevated. It is biography in the grand manner. . . The biographer gives only passing attention to Whittier's associates. . . Here and elsewhere he may be considered to have failed to attain a proper perspective. His Whittier stands more apart than was actually the case." G. F. Whicher
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 S 11 '49 2100w

POLLARD, J. A.—Continued

"The truth is that Whittier, noble though he be, is hardly interesting enough, in and by himself, to entice many readers into staying to the end of so long and meticulous a biography. . . Mr. Pollard's style, in straining after literary effect, is verbose and frequently lamentable. . . As concerns documentation and quotation, the book is wholly admirable." Perry Miller

+ — N Y Times p27 S 18 '49 700w

"Mr. Pollard's biography is not the kind that 'goes with the swing of a novel' which many of us have grown to distrust. It is a solid, substantial and carefully documented piece of work." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p29 N 6 '49 500w

"His biography gets off to a bad start, but whether the fault is his or Whittier's would be hard to say. To read the first twelve chapters is something close to an ordeal. . . The wise reader will skip directly to Chapter 13 and lose little of value, for at that point both poet and biographer seem to mature and mellow. . . Are there two books here, or one? If there are two, the second is complete in itself—a warmly sympathetic study of 'Whittier, friend of man' and only incidentally poet. The result is as good an appraisal of Whittier's value to the twentieth-century reader as could be found." R. E. Spiller

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:38 O 8 '49 550w

"A complete and exhaustive study of the life and work of the poet. Extremely well written."

+ Wis Lib Bul p7 N '49

POLNAY, PETER DE. See De Polnay, P.

PONCET, ANDRE FRANCOIS. See Francois-Poncet, A.

PONCINS, GONTRAN DE MONTAIGNE, vicomte de. Eskimos; photographs and text. 105p $5 Hastings house

919.8 Eskimos 49-3999

Photographs with brief explanatory text, showing the life of the Eskimos of the Arctic Circle. The pictures were taken while the author was gathering material for his book Kabloona (Book Review Digest 1941).

"Wealth of data, attractively presented."

+ Kirkus 17:265 My 15 '49 170w

"M. de Poncins obviously knows that a picture is worth a thousand words, but he is also aware that a thousand words can enormously enhance the value of a picture, and his book is a perfect wedding of the two arts."

+ New Yorker 25:101 My 28 '49 140w

"The author's respect and his genuine liking for the people come warmly through to the reader in this new photograph-album-with-text just as they did through the pages of 'Kabloona,' but in many ways the effect is more direct. The photographs are so fine and so well selected that they reflect almost every aspect of Eskimo life." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 31 '49 750w

POOLE, ERNEST. Nancy flyer; a stagecoach epic. 232p $3 Crowell

49-8012

Novel of "a lifelong battle between a man and a woman, a coach and an inn, a home and the road." The story is told by Sam, the son of a widowed New Hampshire inn keeper who married the coach driver of the Nancy Flyer. Sam's stepfather taught him the thrills of the road, but his mother provided him with a wife to keep him home. When railroad travel replaced stagecoaching Sam turned to breeding horses; but stepfather Bob Gale continued with scenic rides for summer visitors.

Booklist 45:203; 228 F 15 '49; Mr 1 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '49

"I liked this. It has very much the appeal of the Edwin Valentine Mitchell books—or perhaps, since it is a novel, of Edmonds' Rome Haul. . . Delightfully written."

+ Kirkus 16:647 D 15 '48 180w

"A smooth yarn. Recommended." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 74:313 F 15 '49 80w

"This little book does not add to the laurels that the author won as a novelist at the very beginning of his career, but it will add much to the pleasure of readers who enjoy a lively and colorful story, especially if they also like New England." David Tilden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Mr 6 '49 500w

"Told by young Sam, son of an innkeeper on New Hampshire's west side, the tale runs through the stage coach era up to the Civil War, moving always at a fast licketty-clip. Mr. Poole does handsomely by Nancy, who is so delightfully personified that human aspects of the story are secondary. She goes out in a last-act finale that probably won't leave a dry eye in the house." John Gould

+ N Y Times p26 Mr 6 '49 200w

New Yorker 25:104 Ap 2 '49 80w

"Told with rough gusto and simple, ingratiating charm, reading like an authentic diary of the time. . . But the heart of the book is its documentary material on coaches and runs, on drivers and horses, taverns, songs, the life in the New Hampshire towns before the railroad put an end to the whole scene as though it were wiped off the slate." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 32:12 Mr 12 '49 650w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal

Springf'd Republican p22A F 27 '49 300w

POPE, MRS ANTOINETTE, and POPE, FRANCOIS. Antoinette Pope School candy book. 112p il $2.50 Macmillan

641.85 Confectionery 49-11327

Instructions for making candy at home. There are recipes for fondants, fudges, dipped chocolates, caramels, taffies, toffees, brittles, hard candies, and marzipan. Index.

Booklist 46:117 D 1 '49

"This is for the cook with spare time for such treats, for the family that always has candy in the house, for the something special on the cookbook shelf."

+ Kirkus 17:120 Ag 1 '49 120w

"The homemaker who would excel in her own party refreshments, as well as the professional candymaker, will find this book advantageous." H. S. N.

+ Springf'd Republican p8C N 20 '49 120w

POPE, ARTHUR. Language of drawing and painting. 162p pl $5 Harvard univ. press

741 Drawing. Painting. Color 49-9480

"A revision and rearrangement of [the author's] two earlier books, The Painter's Terms and The Painter's Modes of Expression, with the addition of a certain amount of new material. . . The aim of this book, as of those preceding on which it is based, is first of all to give an understanding of the principles underlying representation in the terms of drawing and painting so that the things themselves executed in a variety of ways and for varying purposes, may be understood. . . A further aim is to give a sound basis for critical judgment." (Pref) Bibliographical note. No index.

"Originally published twenty years ago, now revised and improved, this book provides a sound basis for rendering in paint and line in terms of plastic form and color." Lincoln Kirstein

+ New Repub 121:26 D 12 '49 140w

School Arts 49:2a O '49 100w

POPE, BLANCHE ROMICK. Upholstering home furniture. 303p il $3.75 Manual arts

684 Furniture. Upholstery 49-8163

Textbook on all types of upholstering for new furniture and the reconditioning of old. Describes how to make overstuffed chairs from scrap; how to make side chairs and rockers into upholstered pieces, etc. Gives ideas for making slip covers and curtains. Based on the author's experiences with adult classes. Illustrated with pictures and diagrams. Index.

Booklist 45:277 Ap 15 '49

"Good suggestions are given on the restyling of old chairs. Directions are thorough, although at times not entirely clear to a beginner, and the drawings by Miss Pope are professional." F. E. Wright
+ J Home Econ 41:478 O '49 110w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1670 N 15 '48 40w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p29 My 1 '49 60w

"The project method is followed throughout the book, every detail of the work is fully explained, instructions are clear and concise and copiously illustrated." Ethel Dexter
+ Springf'd Republican p9C Ap 10 '49 180w

POPE-HENNESSY, DAME UNA (BIRCH). Canon Charles Kingsley; a biography. 294p il $3 Macmillan

B or 92 Kingsley, Charles 49-11759

This biography of the Victorian clergyman, chiefly remembered as the author of Westward Ho! and The Water Babies, takes into account all the phases of his life. "Based largely on unpublished material such as Miss Grenfell's diaries, and letters from the three brothers Kingsley, this book traces his life from youth at Chelsea Rectory to his romantic marriage, from the incumbency of Eversley to his long-delayed preferment, and throws new light on the contradictions of character revealed in his novels, in his family relationships, and in the conflict between ambition and social conscience." (Publisher's note) Index.

"A biography which illuminates the strange, impulsive character of its subject by relating the many changes in his interests to the various domestic and other crises of his life; these Fanny Kingsley often passed over silently in the two adoring volumes of her husband's life. His intense devotion to his wife, to fly-fishing, to marine biology, and to Christian Socialism, and his hatred of papists, celibacy and bad drains are thus all fitted into place. . . However, Dame Una overdoes the gloom and in particular she is not fair to F. D. Maurice, the mentor of Kingsley and the father of Christian Socialism." Charles Feilding
+ — Canadian Forum 29:20 Ap '49 550w

Reviewed by Leila Flower
Christian Science Monitor p13 D 15 '49 1050w

"In his simplicity and explosive boyishness he was endearingly human in an age that was both smug and yeasty. He lives again vividly in Dame Una's pages, as do the controversies which he provoked or into which he impetuously plunged." H. I'A. F.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 7 '49 240w

"Dame Una Pope-Hennessy has unearthed rich new material for her biography, and I recommend readers not to be put off by the waywardness of her grammar and style. Whereas most of us as we grow older become more particular about our use of words, Dame Una—who now has eleven books to her credit —remains blessedly unaware of even the most notorious traps against which Fowler and Mr. Eric Partridge have warned writers of English. . . Dame Una makes her story most entertaining, and never lapses into the condescending irony favoured by the Guedalla school. Another shining virtue of this biography is the shrewdness of the comments upon character." Raymond Mortimer
+ — New Statesman & Nation 36:572 D 25 '48 2000w

"The author does the literary world and Kingsley himself a service in giving with objective clarity the details of the Kingsley-Newman controversy instead of accepting the distorted but pietistic version of Frances Kingsley. . . Dame Una Pope-Hennessy treats Kingsley with sympathetic understanding and, while tracing the steps that led him to such embalming, points also to the ledge in Westminster Abbey where he won a place for himself in marble." Frances Winwar
+ N Y Times p26 D 4 '49 800w

New Yorker 25:166 N 19 '49 260w

Reviewed by James Gray
Sat R of Lit 33:18 Ja 7 '50 750w

"It is the most complete study that has yet appeared, those of C. W. Stubbs and Mrs. C. E. Vulliamy concentrating rather upon Kingsley's relation to the Christian Social Movement, while his widow's Letters and Memories is a work in which Kingsley is so 'edited,' as Dame Una shows, that, in her words, all the earthiness, vivacity and pith have gone out of life and letters alike. Dame Una has no axe to grind, no one to attack or to defend—not even Kingsley himself—and she keeps her eye on the object all the time. Nevertheless, in this book at once soberly and spiritually written, she manages to put him in his setting. . . This book is particularly interesting because Dame Una has had access to a great deal of unpublished material, some of which, we gather, would be available to us if we knew where to find it." Bonamy Dobrée
+ Spec 181:770 D 10 '48 850w

Times [London] Lit Sup p88 F 5 '49 1650w

POPKIN, MRS ZELDA. Walk through the valley. 320p $3 Lippincott

49-7469

"This book deals with the problems of a wife's readjustment following the sudden death of her husband. In the process, she learns a great deal about the inner life of many another manless woman." N Y Times

Booklist 45:243 Mr 15 '49

"'Walk Through the Valley' has excellent form, pace and clarity. But that third dimension, so necessary to the creation of a really significant novel, depth, is curiously, inexplicably missing." F. H. Bullock
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 F 20 '49 550w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p22 F 20 '49 80w

"A nice handling of a perennial theme."
+ New Yorker 25:93 Mr 5 '49 150w

"A story easy to read which carries one along pleasantly to the happy ending. . . Yet afterward one remembers that there are widows who look their age and have no special talents and no such elegant way of healing what was so deeply broken. Miss Popkin has nothing to say about them. I cannot feel that she has done more than tell a story brightly and entertainingly, holding us chiefly by the real strength of her feeling for character." M. S. Douglas
Sat R of Lit 32:14 Mr 5 '49 550w

POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO. Christmas handbook. 144p il $2 Pop. mechanics

680 Handicraft. Christmas

"Short history of Christmas customs and celebrations and their origins makes an interesting introduction to this useful handbook. Toys, jewelry, articles of furniture, and interesting novelties to make and present as gifts are included with simple, clear instructions. Also included are many clever ideas for making Christmas decorations. The projects vary in difficulty. Ages 12 up." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 46:92 N 15 '49

POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE—Cont.

Reviewed by H. P. Smith
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 N 6 '49 50w

Reviewed by J. S. Watts
Library J 74:1762 N 15 '49 70w

POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO. Complete book of home repair and improvements; complete encyclopedia for home, workshop, and garden. 512p il $2.98; de luxe ed $3.98 Greystone

643.7 Repairing. Handicraft 49-4947

"This book is the answer to a million written and unwritten letters. Every year the editors of Popular Mechanics receive thousands of letters from home owners all over the world asking for help with their problems. Is there any way to stop a fireplace from smoking? What do you do about a leaky basement? Should you paint over wallpaper? How do you install fluorescent lights? Have you any instructions for building kitchen wall cabinets? How do you take care of old paint brushes? Is there any cure for a leaky faucet? How do you build a garden fireplace? . . The editors of Popular Mechanics reasoned that what the world handyman and his wife needed was a book which had the answers—a book that would stand by on its shelf in readiness to meet almost any householding emergency. [This] is such a book." (About this book) Index.

Booklist 46:78 N 1 '49

Reviewed by H. P. Smith
Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 20 '49 90w

Springf'd Republican p7B Jl 31 '49 80w

POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO. Famous concrete block house; comp. and ed. by James R. Ward; construction details by Wayne C. Leckey; il. by Eldon Schiel [and others]. [60p] spir pa $2 Pop. mechanics

691.3 Concrete construction. Dwellings 49-48509

"Brief but adequate information for the building of a small home of concrete blocks. Includes information on wiring and plumbing. Extra loose page of materials needed lists cost in Chicago 1948-1949. Plastic ring binding." Booklist

Booklist 46:117 D 1 '49

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 74:1758 N 15 '49 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:84 N '49

POPULAR MECHANICS MAGAZINE, CHICAGO. Money-making hobbies; selected by the editors. 160p il $2 Pop. mechanics

745 Handicraft 49-6947

"A collection of articles on basic and advanced methods in home arts and crafts which combine profits with fun." (Subtitle) One hundred and thirty-two hobbies are outlined. Included are hobbies in plastics; leather; wood; ceramics; metal; textiles and fibers; gems; glass; flowers; and paper. Index.

Booklist 46:93 N 15 '49

"Clear instructions and numerous illustrations make a useful book for adults and older boys and girls. Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges
+ Library J 74:1920 D 15 '49 100w

PORTER, MRS ELLA BLODWEN (WILLIAMS). Footprints on the sand. 163p $2.50 Macmillan

49-8056

Story of a summer in a girls camp in northern Michigan. The heroine is Marya, an orphan, who has a struggle to make her way in camp because of the camp snob. But by the end of the summer she has made a success of her vacation. For grades seven to nine.

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 9 '49 300w

"As a story of camp life this is excellent and meets a real need, as there is a scarcity of girl camp stories. The story pattern is a fairly familiar one."
+ Kirkus 17:31 Ja 15 '49 130w

"This typical girls' story lacks depth but gives a good picture of camp life." Barbara Perkins
Library J 74:500 Mr 15 '49 80w

"Girls will like it, since so many dreams come true for one at first shy and despised. Many good hints are given all through for camp directors and also for young camp councilors." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Ap 24 '49 150w

"In an almost 'rags to riches' plot, stilted dialogue and conventional writing, one is reminded here of the 'series books' still widely read by girls of 11 to 13. . . So commendable a theme as the adjustment of a foreign-born girl in a more privileged American group merits a better execution than this narrative, readable though it is." C. E. Zagat
N Y Times p29 Ap 3 '49 180w

Wis Lib Bul 45:50 Mr '49

POSSELT, ERIC, ed. World's greatest Christmas stories. 451p $3.50 Ziff-Davis

Christmas stories 49-50199

"A Christmas anthology [which] embodies selections from the literature of 23 different countries and the works of 39 famous authors. The stories are arranged by countries alphabetically, beginning with the United States of America and concluding with Yugoslavia, each country's contribution introduced by a Christmas carol native to it—of which the music as well as the words is given." Christian Science Monitor

"Among all those here presented, the story most expressive of the true Christ spirit of Christmas is Leo Tolstoy's 'Where Love Is, There God Is Also.' . . Charles Dickens' 'A Christmas Carol' is the longest story included, and holds its own as perhaps the greatest Christmas classic. It is followed in the English group by Thomas Hardy's 'The Thieves Who Couldn't Help Sneezing'—which is a surprise, and very funny. The most unexpectedly humorous and charming tale of them all is the story from Switzerland—'The First Picture' by J. C. Heer."
Christian Science Monitor p13 D 15 '49 1100w

Kirkus 17:591 O 15 '49 160w

Reviewed by N. K. Burger
N Y Times p58 D 4 '49 140w

Wis Lib Bul p7 D '49

POSSONY, STEFAN THOMAS. Strategic air power; the pattern of dynamic security. 313p $5 Infantry Journal

358.4 Aeronautics, Military 49-4236

"Attempts to establish the general principles, possibilities, and limitations of strategic bombing. Air power will be the important element in the next war and is an asset, now, for security, the author feels. He discusses, however, the dependence of the air force on army and navy and the economic as well as the military aspects of bombing. There are two chapters on the impracticability of an international air force." Booklist

Booklist 45:370 Jl 1 '49

"This cumbersome book—pedantic, wordy and sometimes confusing—is, nevertheless, the best book on strategic air power, its past accomplishments and future potentialities, that has yet appeared in this country. Mr. Possony, a lecturer at Georgetown University, has produced a book that is not for the average layman, but it is indispensable to the military student and should be required reading for all who understand the role of air power in war, and its importance to the fabric of security." H. W. Baldwin

+ — N Y Times p33 N 27 '49 450w

POST, HOWARD WILLIAM. Silicones and other organic silicon compounds. 230p $5 Reinhold

547 Silicon organic compounds 49-7668

"The scope of this work is 'those compounds of silicon which contain carbon of such a character as definitely to impart organic properties to the molecule.' Its purposes are to provide brief descriptions of the properties and uses of the silicones and other compounds of silicon that fit this definition, and to summarize the various methods which have been developed for their synthesis. It is based on an extensive survey of the international literature including patents, and the bibliography of original sources constitutes one of the most useful features. In the final chapter are tabulated the formula, name, melting point and boiling point for more than 1,000 compounds." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Indexes.

"The present extent of organosilicon chemistry has created a need for a handy, up-to-date reference book on the subject. This book could have admirably filled that need, but it has several faults which have somewhat reduced its usefulness. . . The haste with which this book has apparently been prepared is regrettable. The organization within each chapter is generally bad. There are innumerable misprints and misspelled words and some of the tables appear without proper explanation or reference in the text. The serious student will find 'Silicones' of some value, despite its shortcomings; he will have to search a little for his information, but it is all here." R. N. Lewis

+ — Am Chem Soc J 71:3578 O '49 460w

"Essentially each chapter is a thorough chronological collection of abstracts with no particular critical emphasis. The book should be of considerably more service and interest to the specialist in the organosilicon field than to the student or casual reader." F. A.

Chem Eng 56:242 N '49 150w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:15 Ja '49

POSTON, MRS MARTHA (LEE). Mystery of the eighth horse; il. by Weda Yap. 192p $2.50 Nelson

49-9657

Mystery story for boys and girls.

Booklist 46:53 O 1 '49

"An exciting and spine chilling adventure in China. . . Just one basic criticism: the boys in the story wring every step of the situation dry of all its possibilities, arguing the pros and cons, and too little is left for the reader to do on his own. This weakens the suspense and makes the story at times too slow and talky. A minor criticism, however, in a book that offers much, by way of plot and characterization."

+ — Kirkus 17:327 Jl 1 '49 180w

"Though a made-to-order mystery and not too well written, there is plenty of action and some insight into Chinese ways of thinking and living. Recommended for libraries that need another mystery for ages 12-16." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 74:1107 Ag '49 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Ag 21 '49 130w

"Occasional stiffness in character and dialogue is not wholly alleviated by a sprinkling of slang ranging from 'shucks' to 'oh, brother,' but there are quite enough compensations. Any reader from 11 up will turn the pages steadily for the well-contrived story, will painlessly absorb its lesson that boys and girls everywhere are alike, and will enjoy the excellent picture of Chinese life." F. C. Smith

+ — N Y Times p18 Ag 14 '49 180w

POTTER, PHILIP JOHN. Steam power plants. 503p il maps $6.50 Ronald

621.19 Steam plants 49-6542

"An engineering college textbook in which the emphasis is on the fundamental principles of fluid flow, heat transfer, etc., rather than on the description of a large range of power-plant equipment. However, the operating principles and characteristics of a considerable range of typical eequipment are described. There is also a fair amount of material on the classification and analyses of fuel. The chapters are supplemented by good lists of problems—for which answers are not included—and by short bibliographies." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 46:138 D 15 '49

"Aside from its textbook use, it should find some use as a reference book in libraries, especially libraries in cities where there are small factories which are steam powered." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 74:1758 N 15 '49 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:105 N '49

POUND, EZRA LOOMIS. Selected poems. (New classics ser) 184p $1.50 New directions

811 49-11526

"Prefaced by an extraordinary one-page 'autobiography' [Pound] is represented by typical lyrics, epigrams, translations, adaptations, and selections from his work in progress, The Cantos." Library J

"This is the best possible library choice for a work in one volume by Pound." Gerald McDonald

+ Library J 74:1909 D 15 '49 80w

"This impression of excellent craftsmanship is countered and for the present reviewer ruined by the content of the poems. This excellent gift for words is applied on the whole to experiences which are dull or distasteful, usually dull." C. M. Bowra

— + New Statesman & Nation 38:250 S 3 '49 320w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ja 8 '50 50w

" 'Selected Poems' provides a good sampling of the Pound who wrote 'A Virginal,' the latter-day Renaissance poet, as well as the reincarnate Li Po and the other 'personae' that Ezra wore during the years he spent absorbing the styles (and not the political thinking) of other centuries. But—for the good name of poetry—I suggest that in subsequent issues of this volume the New Directions editors get down off their high Pegasuses and exclude the lament of 'Ben [ito] and La Clara' and the more scatological sections of Cantos XIV and XV." G. P. Meyer

Sat R of Lit 32:14 D 24 '49 360w

POWELL, ANTHONY. John Aubrey and his friends. 335p il $5 Scribner

B or 92 Aubrey, John 49-8658

Biography of John Aubrey, a seventeenth century English antiquary, author of the Brief Lives, and the Miscellanies. Bibliography. Index.

"An exhaustive, painstaking life of John Aubrey. . . It adds up to all the attributes of the man, but somehow not the man himself. . . An important 17th century literary figure—almost the Walter Winchell of his day—is here done full justice if never fully re-created."

+ — Kirkus 17:193 Ap 1 '49 170w

Manchester Guardian p4 S 9 '49 80w

Reviewed by H. R. Trevor-Roper

New Statesman & Nation 37:15 Ja 1 '49 900w

Reviewed by James Stern

N Y Times p5 My 15 '49 850w

"The biography, embedded with chunks of quotation, moves very slowly; it begins with an implacably detailed account of Aubrey's ancestors and ends with brief lives of his friends. But what it loses in speed it gains in flavor and solidity; and Mr. Powell's own style has something of Aubrey's sly angularity." Robert Halsband

POWELL, ANTHONY—Continued
+ Sat R of Lit 32:35 Je 25 '49 230w

"There is something infinitely pathetic in the story of this crazy, bankrupt, seventeenth-century scholar. . . A queer fish, and a failure, he nevertheless took light from the humour of others, and in the story which Anthony Powell tells so admirably as well as in the best of his writings is mirrored all that fantastic conceit, all those half-meaningless follies that make the later half of the seventeenth century such an inexhaustible mine for the novelist and amateur historian. Mr. Powell has no need to apologise, as he does, and to assure us solemnly that in English literary history Aubrey was 'one of the most arresting figures of his age.' Let it be said that Aubrey and his friends are merry company who, like most comical figures, walk at times near a vale of tears." Maurice Ashley
+ Spec 181:768 D 10 '48 1000w
Time 53:110 My 9 '49 600w
Times [London] Lit Sup p696 D 11 '48 3250w

POWELL, JOHN WALKER. Education for maturity [an empirical essay on adult group study]. 242p $3 Hermitage
374 Education of adults 49-11644

"A challenging formulation of a philosophy for library book discussion groups, this recounts Powell's experiences as discussion leader in a San Francisco community center and in the public library of Washington, D. C. Powell is convinced that the group is the natural unit for adult education; that group discussion of great issues (to be found in great books) develops 'the kind of communication which is the method of peace;' and that the library is the institution best suited to conduct such discussion groups." Library J

"Rich personal experience, a clearly developed philosophy, a practical administrative viewpoint, and a gold-mine of suggested reading sequences, make this a book to be read and discussed by librarians." M. E. Monroe
+ Library J 74:1310 S 15 '49 130w

"It is a story everyone with an alert mind and an interest in the intellectual and emotional growth of the adult will want to read, for not only is it told with keen psychological understanding but it makes clear how the group reading of significant books can be an exciting and maturing experience." H. A. Overstreet
+ Sat R of Lit 32:13 D 17 '49 950w
School & Society 70:303 N 5 '49 30w

POWELL, SIDNEY WATERBURY. Toward the great awakening. 173p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury
253 Evangelistic work 49-7606

"This is one more book on evangelism. . . We realize that there is not any new evangelism as there is no new gospel and we do need to be aroused from indifference and complacency. The evangelism that is able to stand up against the materialism and militarism of our day must have a new awareness of the world in which we are living and of what the gospel means to our generation. The historical allusions and illustrations with which the book abounds are moving but seem often to throw us into the past tense." Crozer Q

"Christian women who read this book will see opportunities for personal evangelism they perhaps have not been aware of, and many a one will see for the first time her Christian responsibility to guests in her home. The home itself is presented as the center of evangelistic influence. . . Parents, teachers, church officers and ministers alike will be given a new vision of the need and possibilities of evangelism in all of its phases by this study." Hampton Adams
+ Christian Century 66:430 Ap 6 '49 420w

"Its warmth and fervor commend it. . . The most commendable part is the breaking through, especially in the chapter on Mile Stones, of a real social passion and a John the Baptist cry to bring forth the just and difficult fruits of repentance." E. C. Herrick
+ Crozer Q 26:285 Jl '49 130w

POWERS, ALFRED. Chains for Columbus. 219p $2.50 Presbyterian bd.
48-4044

This adventure story for young readers follows the career of Francisco Perez who first sees Columbus when the Great Admiral was returned to Spain in chains at the end of his third voyage. From then on Francisco is a follower of Columbus sailing with him on his fourth voyage.

Booklist 45:181 Ja 15 '49
Kirkus 16:444 S 1 '48 150w

"Vivid descriptions, excellent characterization. Recommended for older boys and girls." C. W. Field
+ Library J 74:316 F 15 '49 80w

"Adventure follows too closely upon the heels of adventure for complete credibility, although historically, 'Chains for Columbus' is essentially correct. It is a book for older boys." A. N. Fedder
N Y Times p22 Je 26 '49 140w

"The action is swift and the plot replete with mystery and danger. Throughout the story there runs a thread of naturalness and authenticity." R. A. B.
+ Sat R of Lit 31:36 N 13 '48 160w

POWERS, ALFRED. Redwood country; the lava region and the redwoods. (Am. folkways ser) 292p map $3.50 Duell
917.94 Oregon. California 49-5224

In the nineteenth volume in the American Folkways series, the author, "a practicing historian, covers the redwood and lava region of Northern California, Southern Oregon, Southwestern Idaho and Northwestern Nevada." (San Francisco Chronicle) It is a combination of geology, history, fact and anecdote about the region. Index.

Booklist 46:31 S 15 '49
Commonweal 50:470 Ag 19 '49 160w

"More of the raconteur than the naturalist here, but with the facts the tourists will want to know, and those whose interest in these giants of the forests makes anything concerning them important. Brief space is given to certain phases of conservation. There have been other more interesting titles in the series, but the California centenary will stimulate special interest this year."
Kirkus 17:264 My 15 '49 250w

"The total volume is made up of many delightful parts. . . No part lacks the human interest that well-considered and lively writing brings to the fore." Clarence Gorchels
+ Library J 74:1023 Jl '49 100w

Reviewed by Stewart Holbrook
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 O 9 '49 270w

"A highly readable and pleasant introduction to the region and the subject." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 18 '49 750w

"Dr. Powers is best in his recitation of anecdotes and episodes in the history of this neglected region—neglected, that is, from both a literary and a conservation standpoint. A teacher of writing himself, he is a master at weaving legend with statistics so that neither becomes monotonous to the reader. The Folkways Series may be proud of this volume." Maurine Neuberger
+ Sat R of Lit 32:22 S 10 '49 430w
Wis Lib Bul p9 D '49

POWERS, ANNE. No wall so high. 423p $3.50 Bobbs
49-8899

A novel of Elizabethan England and an odd couple in retreat from life. Maurice Quain, merchant, sought security in gaining wealth; Lady Katherine Perrot sought happiness in a lover from the royal court. When a crisis arrives Maurice gives up all his markets to save his beloved Katherine from a false charge of conspiracy.

Booklist 45:336 Je 1 '49

"The book will do well in that flourishing institution, the department store type of lending library, where during the hurried lunch-hour workers of many kinds stop to change one gaudy-jacketed book for another to read on bus, train, or street car, or under the hair-dryer. Shop-worn plots, stereotyped romance and a sufficient number of 'blue' passages to make the reader feel pleasantly sophisticated are enough to insure good sales in this branch of the trade."
Cath World 169:318 Jl '49 200w

Reviewed by Bruce Taylor
Chicago Sun p8X Je 12 '49 120w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 16 '49 180w

"Court intrigue, the Spanish Armada, treason and duels liven things up a bit, but numerous cliches are to be regretted. Should be recommended only to chronic historical fiction fans or the soap opera set." Anne Whitmore
Library J 74:818 My 15 '49 70w

"'No Wall So High' is a well told tale that gives us sidelights on a people whose qualities in danger we have had reason to know and admire in less picturesque modern dress." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 Je 12 '49 450w

Reviewed by Lawrence Lee
N Y Times p22 Je 5 '49 230w

"An Elizabethan piece that plows its stately and determined way along until it reaches a properly thunderous climax in the defeat of the Armada."
New Yorker 25:97 My 28 '49 120w

"Miss Powers hasn't missed a trick and, being a skilful craftsman if not a very original one, she has managed a novel with an abundance of color, action, intrigue, treachery, and love." V. P. Hass
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:20 My 21 '49 650w

POWERS, JAMES JOSEPH ALOYSIUS. Baseball personalities (the most colorful figures of all time). 320p il $3 Field, R.

927.96357 Baseball—Biography 49-9105

Contents: Floyd Caves "Babe" Herman; Al Schacht; John Peter "Honus" Wagner; Vernon "Lefty" Gomez; Walter "Rabbit" Maranville; Tyrus Raymond Cobb; Charles Dillon "Casey" Stengel; George Herman "Babe" Ruth; Arthur "Dazzy" Vance; John J. McGraw; James J. Dykes; Robert "Bob" Feller; Rogers Hornsby; Jerome "Dizzy" Dean; Gordon S. "Mickey" Cochrane; Dick Bartell; Charles Leo "Gabby" Hartnett; Frank Frisch; Theodore Samuel Williams; Leo Ernest Durocher; Louis "Bobo" Newsom; Leroy "Satchel" Paige; Clearing the bases.

Booklist 45:375 Jl 1 '49

"Highly entertaining, anecdotal sketches." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:1032 Jl '49 10w

Reviewed by D. M. Mankiewicz
N Y Times p12 Jl 3 '49 130w

"It's a chatty book, in the baseball tradition, and a few minor inaccuracies can be overlooked." D. B. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p4D My 29 '49 420w

POWERS, PAUL S. Doc Dillahay. 250p $3 Macmillan

49-7689

Novel about a young doctor in Arizona Territory. The wild life of the western frontier provides much of the action.

Booklist 45:225 Mr 1 '49

"Homespun, human qualities give this its likability, rather than any particular distinction."
Kirkus 17:11 Ja 1 '49 150w

"As a picture of Arizona in the '80s, it is warm and vibrant, handling the stuff of melodrama in terms of character instead of the stock formulas of the badlands. Even Mr. Powers' tough hombres and frontier floozies—and there is no scarcity of either—are understood and shown as having normal human responses. . . Mr. Powers has fashioned a yarn that recaptures the past." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Mr 6 '49 400w

"This little novel is almost plotless; its happy ending is obvious from the first chapter, but it is also an interesting and very readable story of a frontier physician: not Dillahay, who is compounded equally of prig and prude, but Ledinger. That lovable, gifted drunkard is a character to remember." Hoffman Birney
+ N Y Times p22 Mr 13 '49 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 17 '49 750w

Reviewed by Stephanie Benét
Sat R of Lit 32:27 Ap 9 '49 200w

Wis Lib Bul 45:89 My '49

PRATOLINI, VASCO. Tale of poor lovers. 369p $3.50 Viking

49-9486

A realistic novel about life among a group of poor families living in an isolated street in Florence in the 1920s.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 184:83 Ag '49 480w

"This book is a superb presentation of the texture of Italian life." Ruth Chapin
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 22 '49 450w

"In an effort to make his novel tight, the author has attempted to squeeze a galaxy of 'universal' types into too small an area and the result belongs in the Department of Utter Confusion. It lacks light, air, space, and in his effort to be significant, Pratolini succeeds only in being trite."
— Kirkus 17:239 My 1 '49 220w

"This could have been an urban-centered Grapes of Wrath but social significance is lacking. Not generally recommended because of subject matter and frankness in presentation." R. P. Bartolini
— Library J 74:892 Je 1 '49 110w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p4 S 30 '49 90w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 121:26 Jl 11 '49 220w

Reviewed by Michael Swan
New Statesman & Nation 38:492 O 29 '49 420w

"Though the action is lively, the scene vivid, for the most part Mr. Pratolini's characters, though readily recognizable because of the few distinguishing attributes with which each one is endowed, possess no great depth of individuality. . . There are, however, quite a number of vigorously handled scenes." Iris Barry
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 3 '49 750w

"A word should be said about the writing, which is simultaneously accurate and poetic. . . The translation, although no translator has been named, has been able throughout to re-create in English the fine qualities of the Italian original." W. F. Weaver
+ N Y Times p7 Je 19 '49 700w

"It should be said at once that this is not a book for the squeamish; unvarnished chronicles of poverty never are. . . But Mr. Pratolini's novel is not the same old kettle of naturalistic fish. It has a quiet, gentle, completely unsentimental compassion that lifts it high

PRATOLINI, VASCO—Continued
above the rather dehumanized plane that realistic and naturalistic writing in this country so often rests upon." Hamilton Basso
+ — New Yorker 25:57 Jl 2 '49 800w

"This mingling of reality and historical melancholy gives 'A Tale of Poor Lovers' its special flavor; and if our taste is now for novels whose central situations are more extreme and whose psychology is more complex, that does not detract from the genuineness of the thing Pratolini has done, or reduce its solid merits." Alfred Hayes
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:19 Jl 16 '49 550w

Reviewed by R. D. Charques
Spec 183:480 O 7 '49 150w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p7B Jl 31 '49 390w

Time 54:68 Jl 4 '49 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p661 O 14 '49 120w

PRATT, FLETCHER. Eleven generals; studies in American command. 355p maps $5 Sloane

923.573 Generals. Military art and science. U.S. Army—Biography 49-2686

Lives of eleven men who helped build the American military tradition. They are: Nathaniel Greene, Anthony Wayne, Jacob Brown, R. M. Johnson, John Buford, P. H. Sheridan, G. H. Thomas, J. H. Wilson, C. P. Summerall, A. A. Vandegrift, Omar Bradley.

Booklist 45:312 My 15 '49

Reviewed by R. E. Dupuy
Christian Science Monitor p14 My 2 '49 360w

Kirkus 16:637 D 1 '48 70w

Reviewed by Donald Wasson
Library J 74:57 Ja 1 '49 140w

"It is, all in all, a most entertaining book, though less instructive, perhaps, than Mr. Pratt had intended. There are shrewd insights here, and perspicacious judgments; there are, too, generalizations and asides that make your hair stand on end. It cannot fairly be said that Mr. Pratt has traced a pattern of the American military character or that he has submitted any important theories about the way a democracy fights wars. It must be admitted that he has given us a series of exciting narratives, and that, in the process, he has thrown out useful suggestions for more serious students." H. S. Commager
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 15 '49 1200w

"Mr. Pratt's eleven generals are typical of America. They brought to battle an open mind and so reached original solutions to their military problems. The civilian reader will find this book of absorbing interest, and the professional, too, will profit." T. R. Phillips
+ N Y Times p3 My 29 '49 950w

New Yorker 25:110 Ap 30 '49 200w

"Each article stands alone, sharp, clearly drawn, written with a vivid swiftness which is always sagaciously kept from running away into the open road of pure narrative. Mr. Pratt can combine criticism and story-telling as few modern students of the military art can hope to do. . . Mr. Pratt's description of General Vandergrift's Homeric performance at Guadalcanal is, next to his Sheridan chapter, the prize in his collection—an exciting battle story and a critical evaluation of Vandergrift's invention of the widely-copied system by which a beachhead was seized, an airfield built, and a perimeter defense set up with an artistry that the Japanese never could fathom." Lloyd Lewis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:15 Ap 23 '49 1000w

Springf'd Republican p6D Je 19 '49 550w

"None of these sketches is exhaustive, but every one is readable, informal history that few armchair tacticians would wish to miss and few professional soldiers could fail to learn from."
+ Time 53:98 My 2 '49 900w

PRATT, FLETCHER. Empire and the glory; Napoleon Bonaparte: 1800-1806; il. by Inga. 535p maps $3.75 Sloane

944.046 Napoléon I, emperor of the French. France—History—Consulate and empire, 1799-1815 48-8511

This volume, following the author's earlier work The Road to Empire (Book Review Digest 1939) carries on the story of Napoleon's rise to power beginning in 1799 when he became First Consul and ending with the victories over Prussia in 1806. Index.

"This is a clever book, based on extensive study, skillfully written, full of telling epigrams, charged with brilliant insights, somewhat scornful of scholarly technique. It repays reading." G. M. Dutcher
+ Am Hist R 55:122 O '49 750w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun Ja 27 '49 400w

"Mr. Pratt's disinterment of inconsequential detail has a confusing rather than a clarifying effect, especially when Napoleon and his generals develop a habit of conversing in good American journalese. Indeed, the tendency of the whole book to fall into that idiom strains one's sense of verisimilitude. . . The actual value of the book lies in the detailed account of Napoleon's great battles—Marengo, Austerlitz, Jena—every move of which Mr. Pratt is able to give from authentic sources." H. J. S.
Christian Science Monitor p11 D 23 '48 750w

Reviewed by John Cournos
Commonweal 49:478 F 18 '49 550w

Current Hist 15:295 N '48 50w

"The story is told in direct chronological narrative, with interpolated excerpts giving personal closeups, from diaries, letters, etc. Not easy reading—but sure of a critical reception."
+ Kirkus 16:461 S 1 '48 190w

"This portrayal of a living figure, capable of change from time to time, making decisions as he went along, constructing a new political machinery for France, results generally in readable history." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 74:57 Ja 1 '49 130w

"The book is spotty. There is undoubtedly talent, and not all of the obvious kind. There is serious research, particularly in the author's favorite line, military history. Some portraits are vigorously etched; the thumb sketches of Napoleon's marshals, for instance, are not perfect likenesses but they are extremely brilliant. . . The book is too confused, and at times too technical, to be easy reading. But in parts it is fascinating. It will command a large circle of readers, and not for its faults alone." Albert Guerard
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ja 9 '49 150w

"Mr. Pratt's new book may not be all its author intended—from his preface, I doubt that it is—but it remains a real contribution to the vast body of Napoleonic literature." Willa Gibbs
+ N Y Times p19 Ja 9 '49 700w

"One of this author's more subtle, if not arresting, performances."
+ New Yorker 24:81 Ja 15 '49 120w

Reviewed by Leo Gershoy
Pol Sci Q 64:631 D '49 850w

"Mr. Pratt has written a remarkably interesting and readable story. He creates atmosphere—or what is more difficult, recreates it. With a fine eye and ear for effect he focuses his narrative on the great crises; and he arranges his dramatis personae on the stage with skill and verve." Leo Gershoy
+ Sat R of Lit 32:11 Ja 15 '49 850w

Reviewed by Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p18A Ja 30 '49 430w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:218 Je '49 320w

Reviewed by T. C. Mendenhall
Yale R n s 38:556 spring '49 850w

PRATT, RICHARD. Treasury of early American homes. (Whittlesey house publication) 136p il $12.50 McGraw

728 Architecture, Domestic. Architecture, Colonial. U.S.—Historic houses, etc. 49-50069

"The collection, originally published in The Ladies Home Journal, assembles especially the fine homes which have been carefully preserved or restored, so that the manner of life they expressed is more or less faithfully recalled. Many are familiar—like Westover and houses in Williamsburg, Charleston, New Orleans and Natchez, in New England and Pennsylvania. [Contains] a brief summary of the successive influences and fashions which determined their architectural character—the medieval, Georgian, Classic or American Provincial 'look.'" (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:139 D 15 '49

"Here is perhaps the most beautiful photografic record of America's fine old homes ever assembled between covers. . . These glimpses—and more—tend to give a real sense of the manner of living of those 200 years. For those who love our architectural past and cherish its beauty as a guide to the present and the future, this is an ideal gift book." Polly Goodwin

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 11 '49 270w

Commonweal 51:249 D 2 '49 10w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 75:45 Ja 1 '50 140w

Reviewed by H. I. Brock
+ N Y Times p43 N 27 '49 180w

PRENTICE-HALL, INCORPORATED, NEW YORK. Business ideas handbook; prepared by the editorial staff. 666p il $7.50; to schools $5.65 Prentice-Hall

658 Business management

"Almost 1,000 tested, time- and money-saving suggestions for streamlining managerial, advertising, and merchandising functions, and for speeding up accounting, purchasing, and correspondence operations, as well as routine clerical tasks." (Management R) Index.

Management R 38:234 Ap '49 40w

Special Libraries 40:228 Jl '49 20w

PRESCOTT, MRS MARJORIE (WIGGIN). New England son. 276p il $3.50 Dodd

B or 92 Wiggin, Albert Henry 49-8216

"Mrs. Prescott, the daughter of the late Albert Henry Wiggin, has written an affectionate biography of her father, 'the man who built the Chase Bank,' and one of the dominant financial figures in the New York City of the Nineteen Twenties. The book divides itself into two sections—the first a straightforward family memoir, the second an account of A. H. Wiggin's relation to the Pecora banking investigation of the early depression years. The second part draws upon letters passing between Mr. Wiggin and such friends and colleagues as Winthrop Aldrich, Charles Schwab and A. W. Harriman." N Y Times

"A modest, aptly expressed tribute to a devoted family."
+ Booklist 45:312 My 15 '49

N Y Times p33 My 8 '49 240w

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter
Springf'd Republican p21A Jl 10 '49 330w

PREST, ALAN RICHMOND. War economics of primary producing countries. 308p $4.50 Cambridge

330.9 Economic conditions. World war, 1939-1945—Economic aspects [48-4007]

"A factual description of the wartime economic contributions of India, several Middle Eastern countries, Nigeria and Trinidad." Foreign Affairs

Foreign Affairs 27:505 Ap '49 20w

"Readers of this book should not be misled by the title. The somewhat ambiguous term 'primary producing countries' does not relate, as some might expect, to the major producing countries but to countries whose production and exports chiefly consist of primary materials. . . Furthermore, the author does not deal with all undeveloped countries. . . Despite this, however, one must recognize that this is a very competent book. . . No criticism can detract from the fact that this is a good and stimulating book in a comparatively untouched field of economics." H. W. Singer
+ — J Pol Econ 56:555 D '48 1400w

PRIBRAM, KARL. Conflicting patterns of thought. 176p $3.25 Public affairs press

301.8 Social sciences—Methodology 49-10501

"The main objective of this treatise is to provide an analytical outline of the logical background of the four leading social philosophies—the scholastic, the individualistic, the nationalistic, and the Bolshevistic—and to indicate the influence of their methods of reasoning upon the development of specific social, political and economic institutions. In essence, the rivalry among social philosophies in various parts of the Western World is traced back to an agelong struggle among methods of reasoning or patterns of thought." (Pref) Index.

Reviewed by J. H. Hallowell
Am Pol Sci R 43:1266 D '49 700w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 66:1138 S 28 '49 700w

"Dr. Pribram is not afraid to apply his theory to practical cases, with the result that its attractive surface gets scarred by a shower of harsh inconsistencies. . . [Dr Pribram's] argument really postulates that international peace could come only when some universal 'pattern of thought' adopted by all will have led to identical political and economic institutions everywhere. Such would seem to be the freak conclusion of this superbly non-Marxian argument." David Mitrany
+ — Manchester Guardian p4 O 18 '49 550w

"The merit of Dr. Pribram's book is to have raised large questions in a provocative way, and to have provided a counterfoil to the view that Western culture has declined because of a shift from religious to secular foundations. But in respect to clarity, logical analysis, and concern for empirical evidence, he exhibits the same failings as those who make nominalism the scapegoat of our cultural troubles." Sidney Hook
— + N Y Times p40 O 23 '49 700w

PRICE, WILLARD DE MILLE. Amazon adventure; decoration by Georg T. Hartmann. 242p $2.50 Day

49-10944

"The exciting adventures of two American boys who follow the upper Amazon in search of snakes and animals for their father's collection." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Al Chase
Chicago Sunday Tribune p41 D 4 '49 200w

Reviewed by Esther Gorey
+ Library J 74:1547 O 15 '49 50w

"Excellent addition to material on jungle life. Highly recommended for older boys and girls." C. W. Field
+ Library J 74:1682 N 1 '49 70w

"For sheer adventure it would be difficult to imagine a more absorbing yarn than this 'Bring 'Em Back Alive' tale of the Amazon. . . This book is a real thriller based, we are assured, on Mr. Price's travels in Amazon country." H. B. Lent
+ N Y Times p38 N 13 '49 140w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:33 N 12 '49 20w

PRIESTLEY, JOHN BOYNTON. Delight. 170p $2.50 Harper

824 49-11794

Over a hundred brief essays on a variety of subjects, from shopping in small towns and villages, to the Marx Brothers, and leaving New York.

"Perfect pick-up reading, for guest room table and reading in bed."
+ Kirkus 17:531 S 15 '49 130w

Reviewed by M. D. Read
Library J 74:1921 D 15 '49 50w

"Mr. Priestley's familiar qualities upon this formal system produces a quaint effect. If there were a Chinese West Riding, this might be its flavour. . . Has any living person produced swifter or more vivid sketches of actors than Mr. Priestley? Connoisseurs in this line will remember what he wrote when W. C. Fields died. In this book there is a sketch to equal it, on the vaudeville art of the American Van Hoven. . . Stroke after stroke fills in the picture, with not a word too few or too many. A dozen pieces of this quality would make this book worth looking out for. As it is, much of its contents would make pleasant enough stuff for his weekly column but hardly stands up to book form." N. S.
+ — Manchester Guardian p4 S 16 '49 300w
New Repub 121:20 D 5 '49 300w

Reviewed by Robert Lynd
+ New Statesman & Nation 38:389 O 8 '49 1050w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 D 11 '49 550w

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols
N Y Times p8 N 13 '49 320w
New Yorker 25:132 N 26 '49 80w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ja 3 '50 700w

"His theme is happiness, and the infinitely varied things that have brought it to his life. The result is wholly felicitous. An excellent book." Maurice Cranston
+ Spec 183:472 O 7 '49 1000w
Springf'd Republican p8B D 18 '49 190w
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p596 S 16 '49 800w
+ Wis Lib Bul p9 D '49

PRINCE, HUBERTA A., ed. Washington book mart; a descriptive guide to the libraries, the field library services, the public information offices, and the procurement offices of the federal government, located in Washington, D.C. 260p $10 Oceana publications, inc, 461 W. 18th st, N.Y. 11

353 Libraries, Governmental, administrative, etc. U.S.—Executive departments 49-9620

"Although not prepared primarily for librarians, it brings together such information as the title indicates, including for the offices, the names of officers, and for libraries, the location, librarians, acquisitions heads, brief account of resources, whom the libraries serve, lending policies, and purchasing agencies. Some thirty-six federal agencies supplying service and materials to field offices also are listed. Three indexes serve as finding aids to (1) organizations, (2) large subject fields covered by libraries, and (3) names of individuals listed." Special Libraries

"Highly useful directory. . . Useful in both book order and reference activities of larger libraries. Information largely not otherwise available. Pocket inside back cover has been provided for supplement which will be issued and sent to buyers of the volume without charge in about sixty days. Compiler is law librarian of the Army Library National Military Establishment." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 74:1028 Jl '49 280w

"As a market guide for publishers and booksellers and as a reference volume for journalists it has some value. Perhaps the greatest weakness of a book of this sort is what the author so well knows: some of the information can never long remain current. The principal virtue lies in the happy combination of types of information that are concurrently useful. Since the directory is compiled primarily for sellers of books, its value to them must be tested by their use of it. The secondary audience, the writers, will find they are served less at a second table; and the librarians, knowing where fuller information on these matters may be readily had, will turn to the book only occasionally." Walter Hausdorfer
Special Libraries 40:269 S '49 170w

PRINTERS' INK (periodical). Sales idea book, by Printers' ink editors and contributors. 376p il $5 Funk

658.85 Salesmanship. Advertising 49-9487

"Promotional material taken from the Printers' Ink idea file. Divided into sections on selling in person, by mail, and in print, and miscellaneous suggestions. The latter section gives 88 examples of packaging, holiday selling, sales meeting, questionnaires and surveys, and economies." Booklist

Booklist 45:370 Jl 1 '49
Management R 38:590 O '49 40w

PROCHNOW, HERBERT VICTOR. Toastmaster's handbook. 374p $3.95 Prentice-Hall

808.8 Toasts. After dinner speeches 49-9163

A handbook for the program chairman or toastmaster. Contents: Responsibilities of the toastmaster; Techniques of the toastmaster; Ten fundamentals for the toastmaster; Illustrations of actual introductions; Illustrations of how speakers respond to toastmasters; Interesting stories from introductions and speeches; Epigrams and witticisms; Quotations for many different occasions; Humorous stories for all occasions. No index.

Booklist 45:351 Je 15 '49

"A good reference book of conscientious guidance."
+ Kirkus 16:200 Ap 1 '49 120w

"Will prove of considerable value to small as well as large libraries. Recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 74:1100 Ag '49 40w

" 'The Toastmaster's Handbook' is a modern tool which will prove invaluable to anyone who may be called upon to speak in public." J. F. S.
+ Springf'd Republican p6D Je 19 '49 180w

PROFFITT, JOSEPHINE MOORE (SYLVIA DEE, pseud). And never been kissed. 247p $2.75 Macmillan

49-7429

Portrays the adolescent years of Flory and her best friend Millie, back in the late nineteen twenties. Flory progresses from one crush to another: Charlie, Douglas, Bill, and Eddie the Yale man, and finally Philip who went to military school.

Booklist 45:195 F 1 '49

"Miss Dee has done a masterly job with Flory. Out of an ordinary child's experience she has made her heroine's days full of excitement and crises, partly via daydreams and partly by dint of a vivid imagination. . . The book is obviously not meant to be, nor is it, one of the slightest literary consequence. But if in your reading diet of 'important' books you would like to finish off with a patisserie topped with whipped cream, then 'And Never Been Kissed' is just your dish." R. B.
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 4 '49 240w

"An accurate portrayal of adolescence."
+ Kirkus 16:627 D 1 '48 200w

Reviewed by Emily Kimbrough
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Mr 6 '49 500w

"The simple facts of adolescence are always good fun. Flory would be funnier, though, if she hadn't been preceded by Sally Benon's 'Junior Miss,' Mary Roberts Rinehart's subdeb and Booth Tarkington's Willie Baxter, to name a few. She would be funnier, too, if she weren't poorer than those others. To wear a shiny red leather jacket because your family can't afford to buy you the dull navy ones that the popular girls have is no joke, as many a grown-up will remember. . . No sensitive plant, Flory goes on stanchly enjoying herself. But stuffing dolls for a much-needed new skirt does not seem quite as mirth-provoking as the odd jobs Willie Baxter tackled to buy a dress suit. Willie's economic impasse was comic all the way through because it was, after all, temporary." Catharine Brody
N Y Times p30 F 13 '49 450w

PROSPECT before us; some thoughts on the future [by Charles E. Raven and others]. 266p $3 Macmillan

901 Prophecies. Twentieth century. Great Britain—Civilization [49-20071]

Nine essays in which as many Englishmen each prophesy on the future of his own particular field. Contents: The future of religion, by C. E. Raven; Science and the future, by C. H. Waddington; The future of literature, by Philip Toynbee; The future of drama, by James Agate; The future of education, by J. F. Wolfenden; The future of music, by Eric Blom; The future of art, by Michael Ayrton; The future of medicine, by Lord Horder; The future of politics, by Stephen King-Hall.

"The nine contributors to this symposium clearly rate as experts. The special coloration of their judgment derives from the fact that they are incorrigibly British, and that they want government patronage and subsidy for almost everything." W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 66:988 Ag 24 '49 2400w

"If this symposium cannot be said to reach any major conclusions, it is useful pioneering work. It might have been more conclusive had its nine British contributors approached the subject on the same level. When, for example, Canon Raven, in his scholarly discourse on the religious situation, takes in the widest perspective of religious thought, whereas Mr. Wolfenden limits his study of education to possible improvements in the present system, the two subjects do not integrate or complement each other. Surely the whole concept of education is in question at the present turning point in our history!" Henry Sowerby
Christian Science Monitor p15 S 15 '49 1050w

Reviewed by C. W. Weinberger
San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 4 '49 700w

PROUST, MARCEL. Letters; tr. and ed, with notes by Mina Curtiss; with an introd. by Harry Levin. 462p $5 Random house

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc.

"The letters in this volume have been chosen, primarily, to provide readers of Remembrance of Things Past with clues to the development of the personality and the creative process out of which the novel grew." (Pref) The correspondence is arranged chronologically in the following sections: Youth and the years in society, 1885-1899; Work, sorrow, and solitude, 1899-1909; Swann's way and the war, 1909-1918; Fame and death, 1918-1922. Index.

Booklist 45:224 Mr 1 '49

Reviewed by Paul Engle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 D 4 '49 250w

Current Hist 16:288 My '49 60w

"The interpretative introduction by Harry Levin is a brilliant one to that 'intelligence that had to be cushioned, cribbed, confined'.—and the volume, if predicated on an interest in Proust, will have a definite audience among his followers."
+ Kirkus 16:545 O 1 '48 150w

Reviewed by R. E. Kingery
Library J 73:1509 O 15 '48 130w

"Proust's letters were not written for publication, and it is not his fault if only the last ones in this collection are interesting. Even these contribute very little to an understanding of his novel." René Blanc-Roos
Nation 168:309 Mr 12 '49 450w

Reviewed by David Daiches
New Repub 120:22 My 2 '49 1500w

Reviewed by Marvin Lowenthal
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 F 20 '49 2050w

"Specialists may regret this or that inclusion or omission, but they will, I think, agree that Mrs. Curtiss has put together a comprehensive self-portrait of Proust and artfully framed it in her sober commentary. It would be a pleasure to be able to say that the annotations, printed at the end of the volume, are as well done as the selections. But though they frequently contain new information about the writer's friends, they generally disappoint in matters of literary interest. Surely, for instance, the quoted French verses (which cannot all be known to American readers) call for translation and identification, as do the book and periodical titles." Justin O'Brien
+ — N Y Times p7 F 20 '49 1150w

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin
New Yorker 25:104 Mr 26 '49 1800w

Reviewed by Anne Comfort
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 27 '49 500w

"For the average Proustian, the mild to ardent Proustian, the book will be very satisfactory. The translation is sensitive to the originals and to the genius of English prose. From the mass of published and available unpublished letters Mrs. Curtiss has chosen well. . . She has supplied connecting links of text and elucidating passages, so that the book may be read without reference to a biography. She has appended thirty-five pages of notes, adequate but not overwhelming. All her editorial work is exact and well informed. One may wish only that she had filled in more of the truncated names of the printed texts. . . Professor Harry Levin, of Harvard, provides an introduction, provocative, even provoking." Morris Bishop
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:18 F 26 '49 550w

Time 53:110 F 21 '49 650w

"The young Harvard Professor of Comparative Literature brings to his appraisal of French letters a wide curiosity, a familiarity with several literary traditions, a nervous perception of secrets which elude less refined natures, and a rare gift of style verging on préciosité in the better meaning of the word. His presentation of a beautiful and careful volume heightens the value of Proust's correspondence." Henri Peyre
+ Yale R n s 38:730 summer '49 600w

PRUD'HOMMEAUX, RENE. Sunken forest; il. by Rafaello Busoni. 248p $2.50 Viking 49-11408

A mystery story for ages ten to fifteen.

Booklist 46:129 D 1 '49

"The plot is fresh and ingeniously worked out, the characterization is excellent and the author tells his story with humor and zest. Excellently illustrated." A. T. Eaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 17 '49 240w

"Thoroughly modern in details and approach, the mystery is well sustained and convincingly handled. Lifelike characters and good writing mark the book." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:531 N '49 80w

"A grand yarn."
+ Kirkus 17:474 S 1 '49 100w

"A well told story of buried treasure and foreign agents with a background of Fire Island in winter." Esther Gorey
+ Library J 74:1547 O 15 '49 70w

"Characters are well drawn and the writing exceptionally good. Recommended for older boys and girls." H. M. Brogan
+ Library J 75:113 Ja 15 '50 80w

PRUD'HOMMEAUX, RENE—Continued
"There is action enough even for radio serial addicts. . . When Mr. Prud'hommeaux describes the sea, the forest, or bucking a winter gale in a well-loved small boat he writes with a vividness which makes one regret that the whole of his book does not live up to its best parts." L. R. Davis
+ — N Y Times p24 N 6 '49 140w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:30 N 12 '49 30w

Wis Lib Bul p12 N '49

PRYCE-JONES, ALAN. Beethoven. (Great musicians ser) rev ed 118p $1.50 Wyn
B or 92 Beethoven, Ludwig van 49-847

A very brief biography and interpretation of the works of Beethoven by an English critic, who has been editor of the Times [London] Literary Supplement since 1947. Select list of Beethoven's major works. Bibliography. No index.

Reviewed by C. K. Miller
Library J 74:664 Ap 15 '49 40w

Reviewed by R. W. Flint
Nation 168:642 Je 4 '49 110w

"Alan Pryce-Jones portrays Beethoven as a monster of genius, with all emphasis upon the monstrosity. His materials on the composer's dirtiness, rudeness, and inhumanity would appear less preponderant in a full-length book. In this thirty-thousand-word essay they usurp the narrative and supply the climaxes. This focus leaves both the purpose and the effect of the book doubtful." Herbert Weinstock
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ag 28 '49 200w

Reviewed by H. G. Lawrence
N Y Times p18 F 6 '49 110w

"His comments are perceptive questionings rather than dogmatic assertions. Mr. Pryce-Jones aims to enlighten rather than convince, and this he does, though in the complicated process of compressing fifty-seven years into 115 pages much important, if not absolutely essential, data falls by the wayside." Roland Gelatt
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:60 F 26 '49 90w

PUDOVKIN, VSEVOLOD ILLARIONOVICH. Film technique; and, Film acting [his] cinema writings; tr. by Ivor Montagu; introd. by Lewis Jacobs. 204; 153p $3.75 Lear
791.4 Moving pictures. Acting 49-9315

Two handbooks in one volume, written on the practice and theory of film making by a famous Soviet director. These pioneer works in this art were first published abroad in 1929 and 1933.

"Mr. Pudovkin's contribution to the subject is clear, sound, and forthright." Theodore Kalem
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 8 '49 950w

"Well translated by Ivor Montague, enthusiastically introduced by no less authority than Lewis Jacobs, this is a valuable contribution to film literature. Recommended for cinema and theatre collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 74:960 Je 15 '49 30w

"His treatises on technique and acting lead straight to the core of the matter, exposing the processes of film making with an expert's lucidity and an artist's fondness for his medium. Part of the material is still valid: the penetrating analysis of the film actor stands out unsurpassed to this day." Siegfried Kracauer
+ New Repub 121:23 S 26 '49 110w

PUGH, BRINLEY, and COURT, JACK MILSON ALFRED. Fuels and lubricating oils for internal-combustion engines. 169p $3.50 Pitman
662.6 Fuels. Lubrication and lubricants 49-9183

"This concise treatment of the subject of fuels and lubricants attempts to fill the gap between works dealing with heat engines for engineering students and textbooks devoted solely to the chemistry of fuels and lubricants. The authors . . . 'anticipate that the book will appeal to students of aeronautical, automobile, oil engineering, and fuel technology, as well as to junior members of the staffs of oil companies, the motoring fraternity, and staffs of transport organizations.' " (Chem & Eng N) Index.

"In general, this reviewer believes that the good qualities of the book more than offset the few inaccurate statements it contains and that the beginner in this borderline field will profit by reading it." Lloyd Withrow
+ — Chem & Eng N 27:2443 Ag 22 '49 270w

"The text is so elementary that no chemical engineer or chemist would find the book useful when so many authoritative books exist in this field." K. A. Kobe
— Chem Eng 56:291 O '49 160w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:93 N '49

PUNER, MRS HELEN WALKER. Sitter who didn't sit; pictures by Roger Duvoisin. [26p] $1.50 Lothrop 49-8457

A picture-book telling the rhymed story of a sitter who was interrupted so many times that her charges fell asleep before she could read them a fairy tale.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb
Atlantic 184:103 D '49 50w

"This book is rather a disappointment for those who remember 'Daddies . . . what they do all day,' an earlier collaboration by this same author and illustrator." F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 12 '49 120w

Kirkus 17:206 Ap 15 '49 190w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hodges
Library J 74:896 Je 1 '49 70w

"The story has a pleasing simple humor which 4-to-6-year-olds will enjoy. Sentences which end intermittently in rhyming words will have more charm for them than for grown-ups, who may feel that clearness of thought has been too often sacrificed to find words similar in sound." Lois Palmer
N Y Times p14 My 29 '49 210w

New Yorker 25:165 D 3 '49 80w

Sat R of Lit 32:38 My 21 '49 60w

PUTNAM, BRENDA. Sculptor's way; a guide to modelling and sculpture; fully il. with pl. and diagrams. rev ed 357p $7.50 Watson-Guptill
731 Sculpture. Modeling 48-9755

"In this book have been summed up the time-tested experiences of creative artists of the past, as well as those of the author. It is for the student, to supplement the necessarily brief attention of the art school instructor: to relieve the master of spending too much time explaining and demonstrating basic techniques. . . There are detailed studies in anatomy, bone structure, clay modeling, casting (including bronze), carving directly from stone, wood carving, and relief work. There are 196 illustrative plates." (School Arts) Bibliography. Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1939.

Booklist 45:227 Mr 1 '49

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 74:1029 Jl '49 80w

"The first chapters are simple enough to be understood by even young beginners; the later chapters will be valuable in aiding the girl sculptor who has no opportunity to augment her art school studies by serving an apprenticeship in a sculptor's studio; the complete text will guide the older layman who wishes to try his hand at sculpturing in his spare time."
+ School Arts 48:5a Je '49 150w

PUTNAM, GEORGE PALMER. Hickory shirt; a novel of Death valley in 1850. 252p $2.75 Duell

49-3219

"Death Valley in early 1850 provides the time and the place for this novel. The hazards of the westward trail, when covered wagons traveled unknown and dangerous lands, are depicted against the background of this fabulous desert country. . . The action of the story centers about two young men whose hatred of each other was submerged in the struggle for survival." Publisher's note

---

Booklist 45:338 Je 1 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '49

"This is a vigorous story of pioneer travel. . . Very competently handled, this combines good adventure of the rugged sort, with believable frontiering."
+ Kirkus 17:95 F 15 '49 110w

"Here are excellent descriptions of the hardships of the wilderness—especially of desert obstacles and flash-floods. The plot lacks originality, and the characterization lacks polish; but the struggle of man against the rugged West and of man against man generates unflagging action which holds interest from cover to cover." Clarence Gorchels
+ — Library J 74:547 Ap 1 '49 90w

"A modest work, it is, nevertheless, a mettlesome melodrama of high adventure and low cunning and with characters of sufficient complexity to make them believable human beings." Arthur Leonard
+ N Y Times p24 My 8 '49 180w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 32:32 Jl 16 '49 160w

Q

QUAIN, BUELL HALVOR. Fijian village; with an introd. by Ruth Benedict. 459p il maps $5 Univ. of Chicago press

572.9961 Ethnology—Fiji islands 48-7315

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"The account is uneven in excellence. To contrast with the full and well-documented discussion of kinship is the unsatisfactory chapter dealing with priests and practitioners. We are told that witchcraft is 'common to almost every native of the region' (p.59), but very little more about it. . . The present volume, a comprehensive account of an area largely unknown, will be welcomed by all students of Melanesia and Polynesia." D. M. Spencer
+ — Am Anthropol 51:112 Ja '49 700w

Reviewed by T. F. McIlwraith
Canadian Forum 29:119 Ag '49 500w

Foreign Affairs 27:693 Jl '49 10w

"Quain was obviously a sensitive field observer. His book is rich in case material, to which many pages are devoted. . . Quain' method is to include lengthy, detailed case materials in the body of the book. The reviewer's feeling is that their very bulk overshadows Quain's own generalization and interpretation, and that they do not contribute to the conceptual sharpness of the study. Yet the most effective way of organizing ethnographic data is one that plagues all field workers, and Quain's own method can be criticized for the most only on subjective grounds. Fijian Village is a welcome addition to the anthropological literature on the present-day peoples of the Pacific." Alexander Spoehr
+ — Social Forces 27:440 My '49 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p270 Ap 23 '49 600w

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:296 S '48 240w

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERICK DANNAY and MANFRED LEE. Cat of many tails. 314p $2.75 Little 49-10982

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p40 O 21 '49 150w

Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 20 '49 70w

"Some of the same old stratagems, in a new territory—psychoanalytical—,and a more than superior manhunt."
Kirkus 17:376 Jl 15 '49 70w

"Cat of Many Tails is most entertaining and spectacular as long as the stranglings keep on their way, but goes dead as soon as psychiatry intervenes." Ralph Partridge
+ — New Statesman & Nation 38:528 N 5 '49 300w

"Whether any series of crimes could so terrorize a city seems questionable. If you take his premise for granted, however, Mr. Queen makes a lively story out of what might happen under such circumstances."
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 O 9 '49 190w

"What you will most remember the novel for is its 'descriptive passages' and 'atmospheric' preoccupations." If the human characters still betray a touch of the bloodlessness of the Van Dine era, the actual protagonist of the novel, The City of New York, comes magnificently to life." Anthony Boucher
N Y Times p27 O 9 '49 270w

"Solution is one of those currently fashionable double-edged affairs that can fit two suspects—an ingenious enough finish to an otherwise overinflated story."
— + New Yorker 25:112 O 8 '49 200w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 9 '49 200w

Reviewed by John Garrett
Spec 183:788 D 2 '49 230w

"This is an extraordinary treatment of a baffling series of homicides. . . The chase that finally leads to the identity of the criminal not only keeps the reader on edge, but is told with an eclat that may make this a classic of the genre." D. F. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p7C O 9 '49 180w

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud. of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE, ed. Queen's awards, 1949. 313p $3 Little

Short stories—Collections (46-8129)

Contents: Blessed are the meek, by Georges Simenon; Dust to dust, by W. D. Steele; A study in white, by Nicholas Blake; The cat's-paw, by Stanley Ellin; The Chinese apple, by Joseph Shearing; Double exposure, by Ben Hecht; Lacrimae rerum, by Edmund Crispin; Forget-me-knot, by Barry Perowne; Beyond the sea of death, by M. A. deFord; the big shots, by John Di Silvestro; Crisis, 1999, by Fredric Brown; Thou Lord seest me, by Q. Patrick; The singing diamonds, by Helen McCloy; Off the face of the earth, by Clayton Rawson; The arrow of God, by Leslie Charteris; The fine Italian hand, by Thomas Flanagan.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun N 18 '49 120w

Kirkus 17:489 S 1 '49 90w

"Whether you're an Ellery Queen fan or not, it must be admitted that they have a real talent for editing. The sixteen stories in this book fit into sixteen different categories of detective fiction, and each one is excellent of its kind."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 N 13 '49 160w

"Here is the detective short story at its best." Anthony Boucher
+ N Y Times p51 N 20 '49 230w

"Of the sixteen stories in this annual prize-winning collection, only five seem to have any real quality."
New Yorker 25:172 N 19 '49 80w

QUEEN, ELLERY—Continued

"The 16 stories here published are, in Ellery Queen's opinion, the finest of the 793 manuscripts submitted to the contest from all parts of the world. Get your copy of 'Awards' and settle down for some rare enjoyment." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p36 N 20 '49 160w

Wis Lib Bul p11 D '49

QUENNELL, PETER COURTNEY. John Ruskin; the portrait of a prophet. 289p $3.75 Viking

B or 92 Ruskin, John 49-11240

Study of the life, character, and works of John Ruskin. Selected bibliography. No index.

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 184:98 D '49 900w

Booklist 46:57; 81 O 15 '49; N 1 '49

Reviewed by R. B. Nye
Chicago Sun p73 D 7 '49 350w

Reviewed by Paul Engle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 N 6 '49 500w

"Peter Quennell has drawn a sensible line in his biography of Ruskin—a line which, if it permits a sympathetic interpretation of Ruskin's disastrous amours, perhaps does not quite do justice to the enormous range and import of his critical work. It is in this sense that the book's subtitle is rather misleading: for Ruskin as the prophet emerges only momentarily in the narrative, which is too well-knit for any evaluative disengagement, and too fluent for any pause that would allow us to re-consider Mr. Quennell's not implausible thesis." J. H. Johnston

+ — Commonweal 51:134 N 4 '49 260w

"Quennell has now acquired such mastery of technique in biographical writing that content and interpretation almost escape under the smoothness and readability of his sentences. . . It is not Ruskin's truly great role as an interpreter of architecture that is stressed. Rather [the author] seems endlessly taken up by the queer aberrations of Ruskin's sex-life; his unconsummated marriage to his first wife and his hopeles love for a child in his middle age—all fair enough material for a popular book. The author weaves skillfully enough into this personal life the strands of work, friendships and influences; but he completely passes up a very real opportunity for appraising Ruskin in the light of present day trends in art and architecture."

+ — Kirkus 17:459 Ag 15 '49 190w

"A contribution to literature and to psychology. This is a supplement to Ruskin biographies and does not take the place of any existing study of Ruskin's work. For large collections." K. T. Willis

Library J 74:1197 S 1 '49 80w

"It is an enthralling, tragic story of the collapse of a great mind, which Mr. Quennell, always a master of style, has made doubly poignant by telling it with an unfailing sense of values and without a touch of melodrama." Lawrence Haward

+ Manchester Guardian p5 D 28 '49 420w

"There is probably no one now writing who could have handled the man and the subject with the wit, grace and savor that Quennell has brought to them." George Mayberry

+ New Repub 121:35 N 14 '49 1150w

"Mr. Quennell has written with an insight and a sympathy which leave the final impression of neither mockery nor scorn, but pity." DeLancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 D 4 '49 950w

"Mr. Peter Quennell . . . is a man of great intellectual probity, who has the intelligence to realize that truth is always more interesting than fiction. He has an excellent narrative and dramatic gift and knows exactly how to tell a story in such a manner as will provide both anticipation and relief. He possesses an unobtrusive style which has all the elasticity and strength of silk. . . Being thus endowed and constituted, Mr. Quennell is the ideal biographer for John Ruskin. The story of that neurotic egoist is one in which it is almost impossible not to take sides. Mr. Quennell, being one of the most gifted English champions of literary justice, refuses to take sides. . . Mr. Quennell is able to tell the whole story, and to tell it excellently, without a single note of anger or pity disturbing the calm monotone of his voice." Harold Nicolson

+ N Y Times p5 O 23 '49 850w

"Mr. Quennell's book is of no particular value. While it is, as one would expect, very elegantly written, it has no intellectual urgency whatever, and is not likely to arouse any new interest in Ruskin's work." Alfred Kazin

— New Yorker 25:140 N 12 '49 1300w

"Mr. Quennell's book is a brilliantly thought out, well written study of its subject. It should find many readers who would like to know more about Ruskin and many more who enjoy for its own sake any book that recreates, as this one does, the social setting in which the writers, artists and intellectuals generally did their work in middle-19th century England." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 10 '49 900w

Reviewed by Douglas Grant
Sat R of Lit 32:36 D 3 '49 850w

"Leaving to others the closer analysis of Ruskin's prose-poetry—at its best incomparable—and his social prophesying—which shook complacency and has borne much fruit—Mr. Quennell has given us, in a style of rare distinction, the man himself, his very form and pressure." Basil Willey

+ Spec 183:780 D 2 '49 800w

"Admirers of John Ruskin will certainly feel that although some of the shafts of light thrown by this penetrating and splendidly written book distort his greatness, that quality still remains in all its lofty eminence."

Times [London] Lit Sup p840 D 23 '49 3300w

QUIGLEY, MARTIN. Tent on Corsica. 192p $2.75 Lippincott

49-9131

Novel about a group of flyers of a Marauder squadron, based on Corsica during World war II.

Reviewed by Feike Feikema
Chicago Sun Jl 18 '49 230w

"Martin Quigley's first novel is more a collection of short stories than a novel, but they are mostly good short stories, told with a sincerity and a flair that mark an accomplished writer with something worth writing about. . . Although Mr. Quigley says his stories are fictitious he makes one feel that most of them are true. A good many former soldiers may be inclined to say that they really happened—perhaps to themselves." Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 31 '49 400w

"This feeble novel unpardonably reads as if it were pieced together from V-mail letters somebody saved. . . Not only does the author fail to make his Italians live and breathe but his Americans sound like jerks, and when the setting is Rome, that takes mediocre writing." Herbert Mitgang

— N Y Times p16 Jl 17 '49 270w

"A talented young 12th Air Force veteran with an attractive mind has written his war out of his system, and given us a very good story." Peter White

+ Sat R of Lit 32:18 Jl 30 '49 500w

QUILLER-COUCH, SIR ARTHUR THOMAS (Q, pseud). Q anthology; a selection from [his] prose and verse; comp. and ed. by F. Brittain. 425p $3 Macmillan

828 Literature—History and criticism [49-8623]

An anthology composed of selections from the verse, essays, short stories, and university lectures of Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch. Index.

"Read now, Q's writing is dated. This is partly a quaintness of speech. In a lecture on Jargon, for example, he is himself guilty of the academic jargon—whimsical Latinisms and frequent appeals to the small-letter deities. But the mark of his time is particularly deep on his romantic attitude to literature. . . Although this chivalrous passion may amuse, the important thing is that he took literature seriously, neither dismissing it as a pastime, nor depreciating his own position as a teacher. It is important not only as reflecting credit on Q, but in the history of contemporary criticism—particularly that of the present critics at Cambridge." John Farrelly

+ New Repub 121:19 Jl 25 '49 700w

"From the early poems and the parodies, such as the one of Walt Whitman—'Myself only I sing. Me Imperturbe! Me Prononcé! Me progressive and the depth of me progressive'—to the later witty and cutting essays on writing English, the book is a continuous pleasure."

+ New Yorker 25:117 My 14 '49 80w

R

RABINOWITZ, SHALOM (SHALOM ALEICHEM, pseud). Tevye's daughters; tr. by Frances Butwin. 302p $3 Crown

49-7020

"Casual glimpses of Jewish folkways in Czarist Russia shortly after 1900. There are about thirty stories in the book, and the title refers to the principal series of them, which concerns the domestic difficulties of a peasant who is trying to get his children suitably married." (New Yorker) Glossary.

Booklist 45:193 F 1 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '49

Kirkus 16:536 O 1 '48 160w

"The wonder of these stories lies in that they catch and express the feelings and hopes of all the little peoples the world over. The translator has done a fine job of leaving the original flavor as unspoiled as possible. Recommended." C. W. Roth

+ Library J 74:58 Ja 1 '49 80w

Reviewed by Alexander Klein

New Repub 120:24 Ap 4 '49 1550w

Reviewed by Joshua Kunitz

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Mr 6 '49 1300w

"If Mrs. Butwin's stories are not the equal of the originals (and she would be the last to claim that they are), there is still a great deal that is amusing and delightful. Her versions are always mellifluous, and at least two of the stories can be recommended without qualifications. In 'Another Page From the Song of Songs,' she has caught the tender wistfulness of a spring day; and in 'Schprintze' she has retained the melancholy that was a quality of the original." Thomas Lask

+ N Y Times p12 Ja 23 '49 450w

New Yorker 24:79 Ja 15 '49 120w

Reviewed by A. B. Simon

San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 13 '49 550w

Reviewed by William Soskin

Sat R of Lit 32:24 F 5 '49 800w

Time 53:79 Ja 31 '49 650w

RABL, SAMUEL SUPPLEE. Mobtown clipper. 277p $3 Cornell maritime

49-8485

A tale of privateering during the war of 1812, of the clipper ship, Chasseur, built in Baltimore, and of the man, Eduardo Chavez, who built and sailed her.

Reviewed by E. B. Davis

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Je 26 '49 700w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 32:29 Je 4 '49 130w

"Of interest to shipping enthusiasts, the book lacks the excitement and fastmoving plot necessary to an historical novel." W. R. Manchester

Springf'd Republican p6D My 22 '49 150w

RADFORD, EDWIN, and RADFORD, MONA AUGUSTA (MANGAN), comps. Encyclopaedia of superstitions; with a foreword by Sir John Hammerton. 269p $6 Philosophical lib.

398.3 Superstition. Folklore—Dictionaries, indexes, etc. 49-10195

"This pair of British gleaners have now plunged briskly into the murky field of superstition, from Accidents (most frequent when the broad bean is in flower) to Youthfulness (which may be preserved by eating snakes), with many illuminating pages in between on such assorted curses as Black Cats, Women, Fires (adders' skins in the rafters will keep them out), Funerals, Cross Husbands (a formula for avoiding same is given in full)—and such blessings as Bride's Cakes, Haycarts (bad luck in Britain, good in Wales), Stockings (good luck if the left one is donned first on arising), and Worm Cure for Wounds." N Y Times

"Seems to be a scissors-and-paste job. Material already available." E. L. Lewis

— Library J 74:1205 S 1 '49 20w

"Even if you are one of those intrepid souls who stride beneath ladders, pass hearses on either side, and never tear the corners of the two-dollar bill, you will find this informal encyclopedia sprightly reading. Since it was compiled for our cousins in Albion, the American reader will search for certain favorites in vain. . . On the other hand, it's interesting to note that it's wise to choose a shop with two doors when bying onions—or that girls named Agnes always go mad—or that one should never kill a glow-worm when in love." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p23 Ag 28 '49 270w

San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 13 '49 150w

"In spite of shortcomings, this is a book of very considerable interest. Indeed, it would hardly be possible to collect an assortment of popular superstitions without exciting the curiosity, and even the alarm, of the reader. . . The authors have done well in bringing together a representative collection of popular beliefs, but the survey is incomplete and its area by no means definite. The book is a work of industry rather than of scholarship, and it certainly cannot be said to cover 'the whole world,' a claim which is made by Sir John Hammerton in a foreword. Thus the term 'general' so frequently used in the text has no explicit meaning; while such a phrase as 'general, especially in Scotland,' is, of course, mere nonsense. There is also much overlapping, with needless cross-references and repetitions which could easily have been avoided." C. E. Vulliamy

+ — Spec 181:842 D 24 '48 700w

Time 54:86 Ag 15 '49 440w

RADIN, MAX. Epicurus my master. 142p $2.75 Univ. of N.C. press

Atticus, Titus Pomponius—Fiction 49-8114

In diary form describes the life and times of Titus Pomponius Atticus, friend and correspondent of Cicero, who was also a follower of Epicurus. Atticus writes of the Rome of Marc Antony, Pompey, Maecenas, and others, while he himself is on the verge of death.

Booklist 45:314 My 15 '49

"By a legal light, this is of more interest to scholars than the general public, but has an intimate feeling for its central character and his era."

+ Kirkus 17:155 Mr 15 '49 100w

RADIN, MAX—Continued

"Whatever the morals of detachment from the evils of one's times, this book is an enchanting picture of one classically successful attempt at it, shadowed as is the Epicurean philosophy itself, by a sense of regret, and resignation, of wistfulness and of bereavement." Irwin Edman

+ New Repub 120:16 Je 27 '49 1050w

"Whether Atticus was so devoted a follower of Epicurus as Mr. Radin believes, or whether he found the Greek philosopher a convenience, hardly matters. The book is an admirable re-creation of the atmosphere of a great age, a fine exposition of one of the philosophies that influenced Roman thought, as well as a subtle analysis of a human soul." H. J. Haskell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ap 10 '49 1300w

"All this is presented with a calmness and urbanity that is a delight to the mind; and it is presented with that complete naturalness which alone can convince and which springs from Mr. Radin's deep understanding of the period with which he deals. The application of these Epicurean doctrines is, of course, to Atticus' own life and times, but there is enough of the universal in what Mr. Radin has put into the mouth of this Roman for us to find ourselves not infrequently making the application to our own day." J. E. Walsh

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 10 '49 400w

"A volume of considerable charm, more reflective than dramatic, quietly informative and entirely convincing. It's a short book which should be read slowly and thought about, an afternoon's relief from the impact of fact or the excitement of fiction, an afternoon with a cultivated mind." V. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 28 '49 600w

"A work which can assume its own distinctive place in the literature of Epicureanism. Its special value is not that it offers any profound statement or critical estimate of that philosophy. What it does offer is a simple and effective restatement of what such a philosophy meant in the life of a disciple." M. K. Munitz

+ Sat R of Lit 32:17 Je 4 '49 650w

RADZINOWICZ, LEON. History of English criminal law and its administration from 1750; with a foreword by Lord Macmillan; pub. under the auspices of the Pilgrim trust [v. 1] The movement for reform, 1750-1833. 853p $15 Macmillan

359.0942 Criminal law—Great Britain

49-7148

"The principal period covered by this volume is the eighteenth century, and Part I deals with capital punishment in criminal law of that century. . . Part II concerns the administration of statutes imposing capital punishment during the same century. Part III gives a detailed account of leading currents of thought on the principles of punishment." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Bibliography. Tables of cases and statutes. Index.

Reviewed by L. B. Orfield

Harvard Law R 63:185 S '49 1550w

"Dr Radzinowicz goes rarely into the field of technical interpretation, and when he does he leaves us occasionally with the impression that he is not equipped for prolonged exploration in that territory. His merit is that, in this learned work . . . he gives us the most comprehensive volume yet published on the eighteenth-century influences for reform. . . Because of its freedom from technicality this work will appeal to the non-lawyer. It is not, however, a mere popular outline. It is thoroughly documented, and the bibliography alone occupies 51 pages." R. A. E.

Manchester Guardian p3 D 31 '48 240w

Reviewed by C. H. Rolph

New Statesman & Nation 37:212 F 26 '49 800w

"This book compels a kind of awed admiration. There has certainly been nothing like it before in the history of the criminal law. It is the first volume of a work designed to record the development of English criminal law from 1750 down to modern times. The patient and extensive research is apparent on every page, and if the further volumes equal this one in knowledge and interest, it is quite clear that an outstanding contribution of the highest permanent value will have been made to the history of law and the history of thought." Norman Birkett

+ Spec 182:18 Ja 7 '49 1100w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p7 Ja 1 '49 420w

RAHV, PHILIP. Image and idea; fourteen essays on literary themes. 164p $3 New directions

809 Literature—History and criticism

49-8967

Fourteen essays all previously published in periodicals, but here considerably revised. Contents: Paleface and redskin; The cult of experience in American writing; The Dark Lady of Salem; The heiress of all the ages; Attitudes toward Henry James; Tolstoy: the green twig and the black trunk; Dostoevsky in The Possessed; The death of Ivan Ilyich and Joseph K; Notes on the decline of naturalism; Sketches in criticism: (1) Mrs. Woolf and Mrs. Brown, (2) Henry Miller, (3) Dr. Williams in his short stories, (4) Koestler and homeless radicalism, (5) De Voto and Kulturbolschewismus.

"The essays, in varying degrees, carry Mr. Rahv's trade-mark: fresh insight, cogent and persuasive argument, logical conclusion, provocative implication."

+ Atlantic 184:87 S '49 190w

"There is just one disturbing fact about this very intellectual, very intelligent collection of essays, and that is what I may call their anonymity. I had already read several of them in Partisan Review, of which Mr. Rahv is an editor, but I had not remembered that he was the author of any of them, or indeed that any two of them were by the same author. I suppose this is in part the inevitable result of trying to make criticism a science instead of an art." Vivian Mercier

+ Commonweal 50:369 Jl 22 '49 600w

"The heartbeat of Rahv's style is faint. The Partisan Review has a loyal following who may provide a market for this book; and it may be read by others to provide criticism of these criticisms."

Kirkus 17:262 My 15 '49 120w

"The collection can be recommended to the audience for serious literary criticism." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 74:891 Je 1 '49 130w

"What one admires most in Philip Rahv's essays is the determination to search among our modern cultural closures and total ideologies for 'the cultural forms of dissidence and experiment.' And what one admires about Rahv's critical method is his abundant ability to use such techniques as Marxism, Freudian psychology, anthropology, and existentialism toward his critical ends without shackling himself to any of them. . . All critics have their self-perpetuating weaknesses, and Rahv's weakness is characteristic of the leftist criticism of the last decade—a failure in moral perception." Richard Chase

+ — Nation 169:89 Jl 23 '49 1050w

"The specific literary judgments and helpful criticism in this volume are found almost haphazardly, and frequently in unexpected links and parallels. From a really wide reading, the critic illuminates a writer or a book or a relevant situation by juxtaposition or comparison. Again, a telling judgment may occur in a reference to a writer's background or experience; for example, with deceptive casualness he really puts the finger on Henry Miller when he says that 'the final impression we have of his novels is that of a naturally genial and garrulous American who has been through hell.' The range of Rahv's taste is extraordinary; characteristic is a balanced and generous estimate of Virginia Woolf. And common sense is indistinguishable from brilliance in an essay called 'Notes on the Decline of Naturalism.' " John Farrelly

+ New Repub 121:23 S 26 '49 950w

"If these yesterday's reviews are not quite so fresh as this morning's offerings from the henhouse, they are still what might be called good cooking eggs." G. F. Whicher
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ag 7 '49 550w

"Rahv's writing lacks the connotative precision, the rich immersion in the medium which he admires in James, and it has a little of the journalistic flair for striking simplifications which he criticizes in Koestler. But the way in which he has tried to comprehend his own very representative political and ethical evolution through a reassessment of American and European writers has made 'Image and Idea' one of the most clarifying of recent books of criticism." R. G. Davis
N Y Times p6 Ag 14 '49 800w

New Yorker 25:66 Jl 9 '49 150w

"Mr. Rahv is an untrustworthy historian of the national culture. On Henry James, on Tolstoy, on Dostoievsky, he has many penetrating things to say. I like his essay on Tolstoy especially. I cannot get as excited about Henry Miller as he does, but this, like other matters of esthetic judgment, I cheerfully waive. But I have borne so long the bad historical sententiae found in criticism of this sort, that, as a literary historian, I must protest against the sheer, unadulterated recklessness of statement in this kind of essay." H. M. Jones
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:16 Jl 23 '49 1500w

RAISIN, JAMES REDFORD. Backlash [Eng title: There is another sun]. 248p $2.75 Simon & Schuster
49-135

Dramatic story of a few days in the lives of some English carnival people. Particularly it is about Maguire, a slow-thinking boxer; Racer, a speedway champion who is off the regular courses because of an injury; and Lilian, who is picked up by Racer, and finally left to Maguire. In his tragic end Racer almost involves his two less clever friends.

"A tough overlay for softer sentiments and a certain sympathy for this hybrid world of have-nots, but a general audience is however dubious."
Kirkus 16:631 D 1 '48 130w

"Each character is treated with dignity; a basic kindliness underlies them all. Much of story is developed by extremely clever, if unusual conversation. Recommended." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:127 Ja 15 '49 100w

"The author has an irritating habit of stringing together with present participles unclear and unrelated phrases into endlessly long sentences. He can also, however, write staccato, provocative conversations, and magnificent descriptions of prize fights or motorcycle races. The total result is a tough, slightly sentimental story which is often engrossing."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 F 20 '49 250w

"The atmosphere of the fair, its cheapness, its tawdriness, the never-ending noise, the camaraderie, are well done. You feel it and you smell it in its brash intrusion in the town. Not so much can be said for the characters. They do not quite come to life, although they are not the familiar stereotypes that we have been conditioned to accept. But Mr. Raisin's principal fault, in the opinion of this reviewer, is that he fails to create intensity and suspense. Without those qualities—and again we may have been overly conditioned by our own prolific school of the hard-boiled—a narrative based on characters so limited and so thinly drawn is bound to falter." M. W. Childs
+ N Y Times p30 F 13 '49 450w

"It could be wonderful stuff, if told from the inside. Raisin, however, has watched the characters and photographed them where he should have lived them, if only inside his head. None has any past, any family, or any connections outside of the immediate scene being played. Also the feel of the carnival lot is lacking. . . It is a heartbreaking job to write a novel, working nights and weekends on it over the years, and then have it get a review like this one. But then, writing is a heartbreaking business." W. L. Gresham
— Sat R of Lit 32:17 My 7 '49 600w

RAJAN, BALACHANDRA, ed. T. S. Eliot; a study of his writings by several hands. 153p $3 Funk
811 Eliot, Thomas Stearns 49-7235

Contents: The waste land: an analysis, by Cleanth Brooks; Ash Wednesday, by E. E. Duncan Jones; Four quartets: a commentary, by H. L. Gardner; The unity of the quartets, by R. Rajan; Eliot's philosophical themes, by Philip Wheelwright; A question of speech, by Anne Ridler; Eliot's critical method, by M. C. Bradbrook; Notes on "Gerontion", by Wolf Mankowitz. A check list of T. S. Eliot's published writings.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun F 14 '49 280w

"To an inquisitive reader, aware from experience in other fields that textual study is a dangerous game, this book will provide much delight. But I should be alarmed at the thought that it might fall into the hands of a person not already well-versed in, and a little protective towards, the poems it discusses. I would not mind his seeing Mrs. Ridler's refreshingly personal essay on the lessons which Eliot and others may have to teach younger writers; and I would actually encourage him to read Miss M. C. Bradbrook's breezily facetious pages on Eliot as critic, as an example, simply, of how not, on any occasion, to write. The rest I would keep in a safe." Henry Reed
+ — New Statesman & Nation 35:278 Ap 3 '48 900w

"The 'several hands' of the title are all skilled ones; and Helen L. Gardner's commentary on 'Four Quartets' and Cleanth Brooks's analysis of 'The Waste Land' are examples of interpretative criticism at its best. My only complaint against the book as a whole is that it makes few reservations and leaves us with the impression of having listened to a group of pious theologians praising in chorus the rector of their seminary." Malcolm Cowley
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Mr 13 '49 140w

Reviewed by D. A. Stauffer
+ N Y Times p27 Mr 27 '49 250w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril
San Francisco Chronicle p10 My 29 '49 70w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 32:9 Mr 12 '49 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p52 Ja 24 '48 1200w

RANKIN, ROBERT STANLEY, ed. Presidency in transition. 256p pa $2 Florida book company, 1924 W. University av, Gainesville, Fla.
353.03 Presidents (U.S.)—Powers and duties

"This volume is a reprint of twelve articles, together with an introductory statement by the editor, which appeared in the February, 1949, issue of the Journal of Politics. They cover a wide range and constitute a fairly complete survey of current major problems and issues relating to the presidency. Following a brief introductory review of the evolution of the office by Professor Corwin, there are essays on particular topics by twelve other authors, dealing with presidential selection; succession in event of disability; the President's rôle in party politics; his relations with Congress; recent Supreme Court rulings bearing on presidential powers; his emergency powers; his powers and functions in connection with labor disputes, foreign relations, and military affairs; and his position as head of the national administration." Am Pol Sci R

"As might be expected, the symposium method employed displays both the strengths and the weaknesses of this type of approach. While

RANKIN, R. S.—Continued
emphasis is given in most of the essays to critical review and evaluation of recent developments and trends, this is not attempted in all cases. There is consequently a certain unevenness in depth from article to article. . . This collection of articles is a useful addition to the rapidly expanding body of literature on what many believe has come to be the central problem in our system of government. It can be studied with much profit." J. E. Kallenbach

+ — Am Pol Sci R 43:1038 O '49 700w

"Professor Rankin has done political scientists and lay readers a service by making the series available in book form. The high quality of the essays, the timeliness of the subject, and the breadth of the treatment accorded the subject are unusual in a symposium. . . In these essays there is much learning, much thought, and some really constructive proposals." O. P. Field

+ Ann Am Acad 265:179 S '49 550w

Foreign Affairs 28:162 O '49 20w

RANNEY, JOHN CALYER, and CARTER, GWENDOLEN MARGARET. Major foreign powers. 865p maps $7.50; text ed $5.50 Harcourt

342 Great Britain—Politics and government. France—Politics and government. Russia—Politics and government. China—Politics and government 49-7494

Comparative study of the political institutions and governmental procedures of Great Britain, France, the Soviet Union, and China. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by E. G. Lewis

Am Pol Sci R 43:600 Je '49 380w

Booklist 45:220 Mr 1 '49

"A well-organized, up-to-date treatise."

+ Foreign Affairs 27:679 Jl '49 20w

"Recommended for all general library collections." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 74:308 F 15 '49 130w

"Vastly informative but essentially a book for reference and for classroom study rather than for reading, with the emphasis, as is inevitable, rather on the outward forms than on the living realities."

Nation 168:283 Mr 5 '49 80w

RAPHAELSON, SAMSON. Human nature of playwriting. 267p $4 Macmillan

808.2 Authorship. Drama—Technique 49-48104

"Mr. Raphaelson's [book] is the case history method, for, as he points out, it is a verbatim account of how he and thirty young people at the University of Illinois spent four months together 'delving into their lives in the effort to find dramatic material' and he, digging into his 'experience in the effort to give that material writing form and vitality.' . . Following the day-to-day development of the students' ideas and, under the author's guidance the discovery of incidents and people in the students' lives, it is possible to perceive what is the road—and how winding it is—toward satisfactory playmaking." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 46:155 Ja 1 '50

"A vivid narrative of a bold adventure in creative teaching as well as creative writing." Fred Eastman

+ Christian Century 66:1457 D '49 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '49

"A book of interest for classroom study, for writing and drama courses in its offering of a personal angle in matters theatrical."

+ Kirkus 17:457 Ag 15 '49 160w

"Far and away one of the best books on playwriting to come along. It ranks with Lajos Egri and George Pierce Baker, which is praise indeed. Recommended for theatre and drama collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 74:1759 N 15 '49 40w

"There is certainly no other book on playwriting anything like it. It is not systematic; it has no illustrative texts save those taken from student plays; it summarizes no rules. But it is full of practical wisdom and it gives insight into the bewilderments of beginners. It also gives the reader a warm respect for Raphaelson's qualities as a kindly and creative teacher. The book may not be widely used as a textbook for students, or not without some supplementary text, but it should certainly be read by all teachers of playwriting." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p22 N 27 '49 370w

"Uncommonly worth while. Not only worth while for the student but also for anyone sufficiently curious about both the theatre and the creative forces that the writer must harness and then turn loose." Lewis Funke

+ N Y Times p20 N 20 '49 320w

"In the main Mr. Raphaelson has wisely desisted from rule-making and has written a book which attempts to bring to light the creative process of play-writing itself. . . The important failing of the book, even from the most practical viewpoint, is its desultory consideration of the integration of character and story with the theme. . . All of which does not invalidate the service this book may render talented but floundering writers." Arthur Miller

Sat R of Lit 32:10 D 31 '49 800w

RATHBUN, MARY CHALMERS, and HAYES, BARTLETT H. Layman's guide to modern art; painting for a scientific age. [107p] il $4 Oxford

759.91 Art, Abstract. Painting. Art, Modern 49-11900

"This book is intended to explain new picture forms in familiar terms. It consists of three parts: 1. Reasons for abstract forms in painting; 2. Comparisons of techniques, old and new; 3. Influences of modern environment on the artist's use of abstract images." Argument

Booklist 46:170 Ja 15 '50

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 D 11 '49 140w

"A splendid little book which may be of help to a great many readers." Dorothy Adlow

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 22 '49 160w

"A book librarians should have handy at all times when the attack on modern art comes to their ears. Arguments are well implemented and convincingly stated. Recommended."

+ Library J 75:107 Ja 15 '50 70w

"Cheerfully designed, brightly written, with good plates, Layman's Guide is a fine approach to the task of overcoming prejudices." Lincoln Kirstein

+ New Repub 121:25 D 12 '49 50w

RAUTENSTRAUCH, WALTER, and VILLERS, RAYMOND. Economics of industrial management [pub] in assn. with Modern industry magazine. 451p $5 Funk

658.15 Industrial management. Cost accounting 49-7915

"Questions the theories involved in the solving of economic problems of specific industries and develops methods of dealing more intelligently with them. Planned for the executive in industry as well as the student of industrial engineering and management. Effort has been made to have the book intelligible to the reader without special background in economics." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 45:277 Ap 15 '49

"Drs. Rautenstrauch and Villers have made a contribution to American industry and given us a volume which should be read profitably by both the chemical manager and student of industrial economics." R. S. Aries

+ Chem Eng 52:286 Ap '49 350w

Management R 38:581 O '49 90w

"There is much in this book about break-even points that is worthy of study by unions and Government as well as managers. However, in one important respect the book is outdated by adhering to classical engineering economics. It takes no account of industrial or community relations." J. M. J.
+ — N Y Times p51 O 23 '49 220w

RAYMOND, FATHER. Burnt out incense. (Saga of Citeaux, American epoch) 457p $3.50 Kenedy

271.125 Gethsemani (Trappist abbey) Nelson county, Kentucky 49-5040

"This is a history-narrative of the first hundred years of the Cistercian Monastery at Gethsemani, Kentucky." Sat R of Lit

"For those who want the story of Gethsemani—now so much in the secular news—one can't recommend a better chronicle." Donald Demarest
+ Commonweal 50:350 Jl 15 '49 200w

"Fr. Raymond refers to his book as 'romanced history.' . . To be sure, he has placed in bolder or lesser relief, through narrative treatment, the real people who came from France and struggled to found the first Cistercian Monastery which has survived in America and become the prototype of others to follow. But at no time has Fr. Raymond deviated from historical truth to inject unreal or romantic situations for specious effect." Ashley Pettis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:12 N 12 '49 800w

REACH, JAMES. Late last night. 218p $2.50 Morrow 49-7206

Detective story.

"It is a sound artifice, this first novel; its manner is swift, economical and set forth with an acrid topicality that is pleasant to read. There is nothing very fresh about the materials and in the final chapters the vox humana swells to the near obliteration of sense; but the management of the matter is deft and the itching of its suspense an agreeable discomfort." James Sandoe
+ — Chicago Sun F 4 '49 140w
Kirkus 16:607 N 15 '48 70w

"This is a straight detective story and not, as billed, 'a novel of suspense.'" Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 F 13 '49 90w

"Mr. Reach's first mystery novel is definitely for the aficionado who likes his puzzle on the cryptic side—though it is only fair to warn such readers that this ingenious author makes his own rules, as deftly as Agatha Christie once did in the case of Roger Ackroyd." Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p28 Ja 23 '49 150w

"This is one of the more entertaining, and at the same time, challenging mystery yarns of the year to date." D. F. M.
+ Springf'd Republican p22A F 27 '49 120w
Wis Lib Bul 45:89 My '49

READ, HERBERT EDWARD. Education for peace. 166p $2.75 Scribner

370.19 Education—Aims and objectives. Peace 49-7688

"Five lectures, with introduction, arguing that education is the only effective means of preventing war; that the part of education is to harness our aggressions to worthwhile aims; and that the kind of education which can do all this is education in the arts." Library J

Reviewed by W. J. Ronan
Am Pol Sci R 43:1074 O '49 380w
Booklist 45:256 Ap 1 '49
Christian Century 66:1107 S 21 '49 210w

"A well rounded, stimulating piece of thinking and idea presentation."
+ Kirkus 17:22 Ja 1 '49 120w

"Generally recommended." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 74:308 F 15 '49 130w
Nation 168:397 Ap 2 '49 50w

"Read develops his points with lucidity and logic, and his conclusions might be pondered by the officials of UNESCO whom he accuses of confusing culture with learning and education with propaganda." A. L. Goodman
+ New Repub 120:23 My 9 '49 600w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ap 24 '49 600w
San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 15 '49 450w

Reviewed by Asher Brynes
Sat R of Lit 32:28 S 10 '49 1150w

READ, HERBERT EDWARD. Education through art. 2d ed 320p pl col pl $5.50 Pantheon bks.

707 Art—Study and teaching

"This is the second London edition, revised and augmented, of Herbert Read's elaborated argument for giving the creative arts top ranking in the schools of democratic states. The book is an outcome of an appointment to a Leon Fellowship in the University of London during the war years. . . In spite of its disarming title, this book, it must be warned, is a relentless analysis of the most recent findings in the fields of psychology, education, and esthetics." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography. Index.

"I defy any teacher, of art or other subject, to read it and not be influenced by it. Mr. Read deals with cold facts, but with them he builds a glowing city of gold." Priscilla Ordway
+ Horn Bk 25:546 N '49 320w

"Critics of established progressive education theory may as well save their ammunition: Read's thesis is a mile out of the conventional target area. His proposal is not for this school or that district but for the whole human community, whose attitudes are nominated for thorough revision—presumably as a preliminary, since Read does not say where non-authoritarian teachers are to be found at present. The case as given is hardly complete. But Read's scout work is exhilarating for its scope and oddly enough, for the care and sensitivity of its presentation. A long section correlating children's art with personality typing is illustrated by 126 children's drawings, carefully annotated." Kevin Wallace
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 17 '49 750w

Reviewed by Hughes Mearns
Sat R of Lit 32:29 S 10 '49 700w

READ, HERBERT EDWARD, and DOBREE, BONAMY, eds. London book of English prose. 2d ed 572p $3.75 Macmillan

820.8 English literature—Collections 49-10786

"The aim of this Anthology is to examine prose as an instrument, to take the various purposes for which prose is written, and to see if any principle of writing will emerge. To this end we have classified the purposes and reduced them to simple heads, and under these heads have given typical examples of good prose-writing. . . . After considering the various uses of prose as an instrument, we found that they could be reduced to three main branches of expression or communication. These spring from: I. The desire to tell a story (narrative prose), II. The desire to describe a thing (scientific prose), III. The desire to produce an emotional effect in the reader (emotive prose)." (Introd) The selections are from about 250 writers, from Sir John Mandeville (fourteenth century) to the present. Index.

Christian Century 66:1173 O 5 '49 280w
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 O 23 '49 150w
Times [London] Lit Sup p384 Je 10 '49 650w

READ, HERBERT EDWARD, and DOBREE, BONAMY, eds. London book of English verse. 874p $3.75 Macmillan

821.08 English poetry—Collections 49-10698

"The aim we have set ourselves in this anthology is to make a representative selection of English poetry, with historical limits which begin with Chaucer and end with our contemporary T. S. Eliot." (Introd) The poems are arranged under the following headings: Narrative poetry; Songs and incantations; Lyrical verse: the poetry of sentiment; Lyrical verse: fantasy and curious meditation; Descriptive verse of an objective type; Descriptive verse of an impressionistic type; Moralistic verse; Metaphysical verse; The symphonic poem; Satirical verse. Indexes of authors and first lines.

Booklist 46:45 O 1 '49

"Of the two editors, the first is professor of fine arts in the University of Edinburgh, the second is professor of English literature in the University of Leeds. Their intention was no less ambitious than to produce an anthology which would supersede the Oxford Book of English Verse, now nearly 50 years old, as that in large measure (but never quite) superseded Palgrave's Golden Treasury, which is 40 years older. . . Read and Dobrée have gone at the task with mature judgment and a free hand. The result is good. . . American poets get meager representation. . . But a splendid collection. It will stand beside Palgrave and Oxford, even if it does not displace them." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 66:1172 O 5 '49 420w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries

Nation 169:402 O 22 '49 270w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 O 28 '49 140w

New Yorker 25:131 D 17 '49 120w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril

San Francisco Chronicle p26 Ja 8 '50 30w

"For a book of approximately 900 pages, it lies easy in the hand; the paper is thin enough to crease unless carefully handled. 'The London' will do as an anthology, but it is not 'unique' and it is far from the 'fresh outlook' its publishers claim for it. Numbering its poems like its great predecessor and presuming on its title, it is a direct challenge to wrest whatever advantage 'The Oxford Book of English Verse' has won in fifty years." J. L. Salomon

Sat R of Lit 32:32 O 22 '49 600w

"If it is suggested that there is an element of caprice in the selection, the complaint is not intended as very seriously detracting from its merits. The choice, based on wide knowledge, is as a whole well judged, and the poems are agreeably set forth. The brief introduction is rich in stimulus."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p384 Je 10 '49 650w

READ, OLIVER. Recording and reproduction of sound. 364p il $5 Howard W. Sams & co., 2924 E. Washington st, Indianapolis 7

621.381 Sound—Recording and reproducing 49-5405

"Briefly reviews the history of acoustical recording and then describes the basic methods of recording—lateral disc, wire, tape and magnetic tape. Continues with microphones, reproducers, tone arms, filters, tone controls, and amplification. Includes proposed recording and reproducing standards of the National Association of Broadcasters, and a proposed American Standard acoustical terminology. Arranged in classified form." Library J

Booklist 46:60 O 15 '49

Reviewed by Julian Sohon

Library J 74:1102 Ag '49 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:76 S '49

"As far as this column is concerned, Mr. Read's work is a striking illustration of what's wrong with instructional writing in such fields as recording. It combines an enormous amount of factual material, ill-digested, with a singular lack of critical evaluation; more than that, the intended audience for the material is highly undefined. At one moment Mr. Read seems to speak to the amateur home recordist, the beginner, at the next to the professional radio dealer. . . Final note: music—the very be-all and end-all of recording—receives one paragraph of exclusive attention in some hundreds of pages." E. T. Canby

— Sat R of Lit 32:55 My 28 '49 800w

RECHNITZER, FERDINAND EDSTED. Raff, the story of an English setter; with drawings by Marguerite Kirmse. 240p $2.50 Winston

Dogs—Legends and stories 48-10567

The story of Raff, an English setter, and Bruce, his sixteen-year-old master. Thru an accident the two were separated and the main part of the book is concerned with Raff's experiences up to the time he is reunited with Bruce. Grades five to eight.

Booklist 45:196 F 1 '49

Kirkus 16:441 S 1 '48 100w

"Fine bits about training of field dogs and justifiable appeal to all dog lovers. . . Recommended for ages 12 and up." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 73:1285 S 15 '48 70w

REECE, ERNEST JAMES. Task and training of librarians: a report of a field investigation carried out in Feb. to May 1947, to assist with curricular problems then pending before the dean and faculty at the School of library service, Columbia university. 91p pa $1.75 King's crown press

020.7 Library schools and training. Librarians 49-5934

"Describes the results of an inquiry into education for library service submitted to nearly 100 persons experienced in the field. Suggestions for the improvement of library training range from a broadening of general academic education for librarians through more thorough training in special branches of librarianship made necessary by the increased specialization of learning and the products of research." Special Libraries

"A careful reading of the report raises many questions that to this reviewer are still not adequately answered and library school faculties will not find in it the answers to all their problems in reorganizing their programs. It does set a worthy goal and a splendid and convincing argument of means to attain that goal. To the extent that it is carefully read and studied and reread again and again with the care that such a careful and comprehensive study merits, it cannot fail to have an impact on the conditioning of the minds of all those who have a stake in the training of librarians." G. C. Allez

+ — Library J 74:1662 N 1 '49 500w

School & Society 70:444 Ag 27 '49 30w

"This informal report should be of interest to all those in the field of library training, focusing light as it does upon many questions now under consideration."

+ Special Libraries 40:344 O '49 90w

REEL, ADOLF FRANK. Case of General Yamashita. 324p $4 Univ. of Chicago press

341.4 War crimes—Trials. Yamashita, Tomoyuki '49-10326

"Yamashita, 'Tiger of Malaya' and General of the Japanese Imperial forces at the time of the surrender in the Philippines, was tried, convicted and hung by a Military Commission of the U.S. Army. This is a dissenting opinion by one of the defense attorneys, who feels that the defense was not given time to prepare an adequate case, and that the trial was colored by desire for revenge. The legal arguments are detailed in conscientious manner by the author, who manages to present the defense picture without the excessive personal prejudice that his growing attachment to Yamashita might have indicated. Both majority and dissenting opinions of the Court are attached." (Kirkus) No index.

Booklist 46:28 S 15 '49

Reviewed by R. E. K. Pemberton
Canadian Forum 29:188 N '49 300w

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt
Chicago Sun S 8 '49 400w

Reviewed by Takashi Oka
Christian Science Monitor p14 S 12 '49 400w

"Mr. Reel's apology for General Yamashita is written with passionate fervor and journalistic talent, and it will convince many readers that the trial of the Japanese war leader was anything but a triumph of justice. If the author is right and the judges were moved by embitterment and patriotic emotions, the fact that their findings can be criticized openly in such a frank way makes it unfair to compare even a blunder of American justice with the procedures of totalitarian states." Max Fischer
Commonweal 50:614 S 30 '49 350w

Current Hist 17:226 O '49 80w

"Good reading for that special audience that has more than academic interest in preserving the legal foundations of our democracy."
+ Kirkus 17:447 Ag 15 '49 120w

"This case has ramifications which extend beyond the legal profession, and while the author makes no pretense of objectivity, the account deserves the attention of an alert citizenry. Recommended." A. J. Gaines
+ Library J 74:1198 S 1 '49 130w

"To the legal reader Captain Reel's book is a well-written story of absorbing professional interest. To the layman who is not especially concerned with the far-reaching implications of what is related it is at the least an exciting tale better done than many a widely sold 'thriller.' To the politician it will suggest the making of a few notes against the not impossible day when General MacArthur may become a serious factor in our politics. In the thoughtful student of the current American scene it will provoke serious reflections upon the proper role of the military in a democracy. For every American it will be profitable reading." Larue Brown
+ Nation 169:256 S 10 '49 1100w

"There has been time enough now for reviewers and readers to wake up to the fact that The Case of General Yamashita is in many ways, one of the most important books to come out of the late war. If America has a conscience, this is the document to give it an excruciating twinge." Don Hollenbeck
New Repub 121:18 D 5 '49 1100w

Reviewed by M. R. Johnson
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 O 23 '49 1200w

"He writes with an eloquence that gains in impact because bitterness has been tempered with the realization that the indictment is the stronger without it. In this sense it is a good book, a fearless book and an honest book. Yet, to this reviewer at least, the book is weakened by an overemphasis on the character and personality of Yamashita himself." Bucklin Moon
+ — N Y Times p31 O 9 '49 800w

"Mr. Reel is clearly pretty angry, but he has prepared this book with care, giving full attention to progressive logic."
New Yorker 25:60 D 24 '49 200w

"Contrary to what might be expected, Mr. Reel never forgets to be judicial in spite of the fact that he is an angry man. There are no hysterical outbursts. He writes so swiftly and compellingly that the reader who had expected a book to be plowed through, wakes up to find it finished in one sitting." Marc Rivette
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 9 '49 850w

"This is an absorbing and important book." Newman Levy
+ Sat R of Lit 32:42 O 8 '49 1250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p842 D 23 '49 480w

REELY, MARY KATHARINE. Seatmates; il. by Eloise Wilkin. 237p $2 Watts, F.
49-9746

The story of ten-year-old Kate who lived in Spring Green Prairie, Wisconsin, fifty years ago. It is a lively tale of the everyday doings of a sturdy small person and her school friends and her parents, and is filled with the simple good times of the period. Based on the author's own experiences.

Booklist 45:400 Jl 15 '49

"The book is not quaint, but fresh and natural and pleasant to read." F. C. Darling
+ Christian Science Monitor p4 S 13 '49 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:409 S '49 70w

"The period and regional feel are less real than, for instance, in Ruth Sawyer's Roller Skates. But some children, whose chief delight is in stories of when grandma was a little girl, will enter happily into the somewhat prim and stylized point of view, the high excitement of sleigh rides, of games of marbles, of parties, of a return visit to the farm, and of the start of the new school year. The utterly delightful pictures by Eloise Wilkin add tremendously to the charm of the slight story."
+ — Kirkus 17:253 My 15 '49 230w

"A delightful story. . . Easy reading. Charmingly illustrated by Eloise Wilkin. It is indeed a pleasure to recommend the story about Kate and Lily for ages 8-10." D. M. Blasco
+ Library J 74:1106 Ag '49 60w

"Kate is pictured very intelligently as a gay, busy, normal little girl, able to hide her wounded spirits and to think out her small problems courageously. Hers is a quiet everyday story of family, school and community life which will linger happily in the minds of little girls of her own age. Miss Wilkin's pictures have their usual rather inexplicable charm." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 7 '49 250w

"Eloise Wilkin's line drawings wonderfullly evoke the early Nineteen Hundreds of Mary K. Reely's Wisconsin story. From the pretty Valentine cover to the last page of school doings, 'Seatmates' is a book that 7-to-11 girls will enjoy reading to themselves and to each other." S. C. Gross
+ N Y Times p26 Ag 21 '49 170w

REESE, ALBERT. American prize prints of the 20th century. 276p il $7.50 Am. artists
769.973 Engravings 49-11409

"In this book we have the award winners of many different print shows. These run the whole gamut of today's art from the literalism of Samuel Chamberlain, John Taylor Arms, or Walter Tittle, to the exciting, fantastic designs of William Hayter, Lasansky, or Alice T. Mason, while between these two extremes we find many an eye-holding print. All the big names in American printmaking are represented: Sloan, Hopper, Adolph Dehn, Kent, Marin, Mahonri Young, and others, including the Chicagoans Ivan Le Lorraine Albright, Aaron Bohrod, Max Kahn, Bernece Berkman-Hunter, James Swann, Yngve Soderberg, and the late Todros Geller. Each differs in theme but not in the quality of their work." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Reviewed by Irving Stone
Chicago Sun p12X D 4 '49 40w

"The reproductions are clean and faithful, the authors' comments pertinent and interesting, the biografical matter valuable. If we cannot own the original prints we can at least enjoy them in this book." Gary Sheahan
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p19 N 20 '49 210w

Kirkus 17:598 O 15 '49 140w

"The reader—or, more accurately, the viewer—is treated to a richness of feeling and depth and variety of insight hard to sustain in any large group of photographs. And simultaneously, he receives a picture of America, and Americana, that delights the eye and stimulates the brain. . . If there is any defect, besides that necessarily accompanying any arbitrary selection of artists' work, it is that the pages were not devoted more to the print, and less to text. But, text included, 'American Prize Prints' is a bounteous source for pleasure and reflection." J. T.

REESE, ALBERT—Continued
+ Survey 85:618 N '49 200w

REFLECTIONS on our age; lectures delivered at the opening session of UNESCO at the Sorbonne univ, Paris; introd. by David Hardman; foreword by Stephen Spender. 347p $4.50 Columbia univ. press
901 Civilization. Science. Education 49-9555

"With an introduction by David Hardman, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Education, and a foreword by Stephen Spender, these lectures were a spiritual and philosophical background to UNESCO's first conference in 1946." School & Society

"Though Stephen Spender in a brief introduction works hard to show that the book has the 'unity of the themes of UNESCO,' this is in fact a random if interesting collection of essays by professional men of letters, scientists, and scholars, mostly French, English, and American. The men behind the Iron Curtain are already absent in 1946, and the defeated Germans and Japanese are still excluded. These essays are then hardly a complete cross-section or a trustworthy sampling of what is going on in the world of the intellect. They do, however, make suggestive reading." Crane Brinton
+ — N Y Times p14 Ag 21 '49 700w

"By itself, without the political harmony of the great powers within the United Nations proper, the organization will probably remain as relatively ineffectual in its great aim as was its predecessor, the Institute of Intellectual Co-Operation of the old League of Nations. There is manifest within these pages perhaps a certain reluctance to recognize sufficiently this political reality. Nonetheless, the lectures here presented in book form represent intellectual contributions of the highest order towards world peace and understanding by writers, scientists and educators of various nations." D. H.
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p25 Je 26 '49 450w
School & Society 69:439 Je 18 '49 40w
Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 70:197 S 24 '49 360w

REGLI, ADOLPH CASPER. Fiddling cowboy; il. by Nat Edson. 230p $2.50 McKay 49-11372

A boys' story of the Texas cattle country of 1874, written for grades 6-8. Ross Gordon longed to be a cowboy but was told to stick to fiddling. He finally found a job which paid him fifteen dollars for fiddling and ten for riding range. After many heroic exploits with rustlers, bandits, and Indians Ross earned the nickname "Cowboy."

Booklist 46:129 D 1 '49

"Fiddling Cowboy will delight all boys." B. J. Thompson
+ Cath World 170:211 D '49 20w

"This is an exciting, fast-moving story of work and play in the cattle business, a first rate Western."
+ Kirkus 17:587 O 15 '49 100w

"All the old ingredients of this plot are related competently, so that the reader does not object to the rapidity with which Ross escapes one peril only to meet another. Somewhat above the average for this type of story. Boys of 11-14 should like it." Eleanor Kidder
+ Library J 74:1830 D 1 '49 70w

"Mr. Regli's accounts of the actual working methods used in cattle business of that time are authentic, and this reviewer has only one quarrel with him—and with many another Western writer. Why, when your true cowboy was a rather terse individual, given more to understatement than otherwise, must we have dialogue that refers to 'smoke poles' and 'shootin' irons' instead of guns. . . In spite of this minor complaint, 'Fiddling Cowboy' is recommended for the 10-15-year-old readers." A. R. Bosworth
+ San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 13 '49 160w

REGTEREN ALTENA, JOHAN QUIRIJN VAN. Dutch master drawings of the seventeenth century. xxviiip 56pl $2.50 Harper
741.9492 Drawings 49-10641

Fifty-nine drawings representing the work of forty-two Dutch artists of the seventeenth century. There is an introductory historical and biographical sketch, and brief discussions of each individual drawing. The text is by the professor of art at Amsterdam university.

"A fine piece of book making, and a contribution to our knowledge in a field of art where a few names are known chiefly through other media."
+ Kirkus 17:536 S 15 '49 110w

"Excellent accomplishment and reasonably priced." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 74:1822 D 1 '49 80w

"Most of what one finds within its pages is unfamiliar and rewarding." L. R. Sander
+ Sat R of Lit 32:38 O 1 '49 90w
Springf'd Republican p5D O 2 '49 70w

REIBEL, SIDNEY. Trolley conveyors. 265p il $4 McGraw 621.867 Conveying machinery 49-9164

Information on all types of overhead trolley conveyors used in industry. Covers their use, layout, control, and power sources. Tables. List of visual aids. Index.

Booklist 46:9 S 1 '49
N Y New Tech Bks 34:55 Jl '49

REID, ALBERT CLAYTON. Resources for worship; with an introd. by Harold W. Tribble. 154p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury
242 Worship 49-7889

Fifty brief addresses, each embodying interpretation of a scriptural passage, originally delivered as chapel talks at Harvard University and Wake Forest College.

"The Bible passages are handled intelligently; the relevancy to daily life in our time is stressed. There is no strikingly original insight, no purple verbiage, but a straightforward, thoughtful, contemporary presentation of the Christian life, its resources and its outcome." H. L. Bowman
+ Christian Century 66:684 Je 1 '49 250w

"While brevity may be the first impression received, intelligent devotion will be the abiding experience of those who make of these talks 'resources for worship.' " R. E. Keighton
+ Crozer Q 26:283 Jl '49 80w

"The book may be used for private devotions and ministers and teachers will find in it many suggestions for sermons and addresses."
+ Kirkus 17:51 F 1 '49 70w

REID, VICTOR STAFFORD. New day. 374p $3 Knopf
49-1576

A novel covering the history of Jamaica from the rebellion of 1865 to the "New Day" in 1944 when it won a portion of self government from the British. The story is told in the first person by an old man, John Campbell, recalling the events of his life-time.

Booklist 45:281 Ap 15 '49
Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 7 '49 370w

"By a young Jamaican Negro, this is a first novel, indigenous in its expression, sincere in its conviction, but of dubious popular appeal."
Kirkus 17:38 Ja 15 '49 150w

"A compelling novel, striking for its absence of bitterness, heartening for its faith in the 'New Day.'" E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 74:496 Mr 15 '49 80w

"Though true to historical fact, the book 'New Day' is a liquid, lyrical thing of wondrous beauty. Homer himself might have sung it as he wandered from court to court in ancient Greece. The book has something of the flavor of the venerable Bede." Z. N. Hurston
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Mr 20 '49 600w

"There is new and powerful material, obviously in Jamaica's past and present, but it is only hinted at here. 'New Day' has too much plot and too much ground to cover to allow time for real development of character or situation, and what mood there is is carried almost entirely by the frequently distracting dialect instead of by genuine insight and interpretation." A. L. Goodman
— + N Y Times p31 Mr 27 '49 260w
+ New Yorker 25:99 Ap 23 '49 160w

Reviewed by Marc Rivette
San Francisco Chronicle p11 Je 12 '49 550w

"'New Day' is full of the sweet melange of Jamaican speech. It is unashamedly poetic, its imageries are fresh and lucid. It may take a little doing at first as with any unfamiliar dialect, but the strangeness will go after the first few chapters, to be replaced by what was for me a genuine esthetic pleasure in the lyrical prose. The trick is to listen while you read." John Woodburn
+ Sat R of Lit 32:14 Ap 9 '49 1000w

Reviewed by W. R. Manchester
Springf'd Republican p8C My 1 '49 180w

REIK, THEODOR. Fragment of a great confession; a psychoanalytic autobiography. 497p $6 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Psychologists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von 49-11026

"Author is a long time student and disciple of Freud, now a practicing psychoanalyst in New York. This book begins with an interesting if individualistic analysis of the Friederike Brion episode in Goethe's life using the poet's own writings for the revelatory statements concluding that Goethe was sexually impotent until maturity. Reik then purports to find and attempts to show that in analyzing Goethe, he contributed to his own self-analysis, especially in reference to his first marriage." (Library J) The first part of the book was published separately some twenty years ago. No index.

"The fullblown and digressive sentimentality which has characterized all of Reik's books is once more a part of this which is chiefly valid as personal self-expression and holds little professional interest."
Kirkus 17:382 Jl 15 '49 130w

"His purpose is never entirely clear and the book becomes part scientific report, part autobiography, and part defense of Reik's own analytical method. Reik's recent writings for the United States market are weakened by his self-conscious style and irritating condescension." Harold Lancour
Library J 74:1198 S 1 '49 140w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling
Nation 169:424 O 29 '49 900w

"I believe that Mr. Reik used poor judgment in republishing his interpretation of Goethe's romance in his own autobiography. The long introductory interpretation serves to blur rather than clarify Mr. Reik's experiences, and will, I suspect, tire many readers, since it demands considerable specialized knowledge and insight for a thorough understanding. This book seems to embody a strong effort to make Mr. Reik's experiences intelligible to himself and the reader. But it is needlessly repetitious and wearisomely pessimistic." Patrick Mullahy
— N Y Times p14 O 16 '49 450w

REILLY, MRS HELEN (KIERAN). Staircase 4. 245p $2.50 Random house 49-7740

Detective story.

Booklist 45:337 Je 1 '49

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun My 20 '49 50w
Kirkus 17:40 Ja 15 '49 90w

"A firm believer in thrills, action and general excitement, Helen Reilly provides plenty of all three in this bang-up Christopher McKee puzzle." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Mr 20 '49 200w

"Better in the build-up than in the dénouement, but a lot of good hunting all round New York." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p26 Mr 27 '49 110w

"Expert and sleek."
+ New Yorker 25:108 Ap 2 '49 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 10 '49 160w

"Sound plot, believable emotional overtones, interesting people, adequate violence, and McKee at his best as veracious manipulator of modern police methods. High grade."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:33 Mr 5 '49 40w

REILLY, PAUL. Introduction to Regency architecture. (Introductions to architecture) 96p il pl $2.50 Pellegrini & Cudahy

724.142 Architecture—England [48-10921]

An illustrated guide to the Regency architecture of England. The author, a journalist, has two ends in view: to introduce the examples of Regency building while they are still in existence; and to explain the historical rôle of Regency architecture.

"Recommended as background material for those who like to know the setting of history." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 74:198 F 1 '49 70w
Manchester Guardian p3 Je 4 '48 60w

REILLY, WILLIAM JOHN. How to avoid work. 137p $2 Harper

371.425 Profession, Choice of 49-8253

A book of advice based on the theory that work consists of doing what one doesn't want to do or enjoy doing. Tells how to move into a different job, how to get money with greatest possible ease, how to control the future. Index.

Booklist 45:307 My 15 '49
Kirkus 17:25 Ja 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by A. H. Weiler
N Y Times p19 Ag 28 '49 90w

"Although designed as a sort of pep talk, Mr. Reilly's textbook is happily far from being the too familiar 'inspirational' slap on the back. If approached seriously, his advice should lift many a square peg out of a round hole." R. F. H.
+ Springf'd Republican p9C Mr 20 '49 150w
Wis Lib Bul 45:63 Ap '49

REINFELD, FRED. How to play better chess. 120p il $2.50 Pitman

794.1 Chess 48-9664

Analyses chess openings and endings, and other plays. Intended to show the chess player how to improve his game. Index.

Booklist 45:133 D 15 '48
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '49

REINFELD, FRED—Continued

"Mr. Reinfeld crams into small space a large amount of chess wisdom, together with well-chosen examples of how that wisdom should be applied over the board." Dana Brannan

+ N Y Times p18 F 6 '49 90w

REISER, OLIVER LESLIE. World philosophy; a search for synthesis. 127p $2.50 Univ. of Pittsburgh

191.9 Humanism. Religions (proposed, universal, etc.) 49-157

"This book sets forth the claims of a philosophy known as 'scientific humanism' to be recognized as the most promising guide out of our present world chaos and confusion." (Ann Am Acad) No index.

"It is difficult to estimate whether this book, for all its brilliant flashes of imagination, will actually point out new methods of investigation that are not already under way." M. W. Gross

Ann Am Acad 264:124 Jl '49 400w

"Like a dream, this bold flight of the imagination envisages the fulfilments of all longings, regardless of whether they are compatible or possible. Like a nightmare, it annihilates all that is distinctive of different human pursuits: confusing the search for truth with acting intelligently, truth about one matter with truth about another matter, propaganda with knowledge, religion with politics, artistic creation with scientific investigation." D. P. Dryer

— Canadian Forum 29:44 My '49 420w

J Philos 46:736 O 27 '49 250w

"Had Professor Reiser paid more heed to the actual values which he holds in common with 'traditional religions,' he doubtless would have been more persuasive to a larger number of readers."

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:174 Je '49 260w

REMAN, EDWARD. Norse discoveries and explorations in America [ed. by Arthur G. Brodeur]. 201p $3.50 Univ. of Calif.

973.13 America—Discovery and exploration—Norse 49-9107

A study of the Norse colonization of America, based on a new translation of the sagas, and on the evidence provided by changes in the climate of Greenland and other nearby regions. Index.

Booklist 45:374 Jl 1 '49

"Here is a highly interesting book—for some it will be downright fascinating. At the same time it is a serious, scholarly work and an historical detective story." Roland Sawyer

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 18 '49 650w

"Whether Reman's identifications will meet with final acceptance or not cannot be foretold, his findings are very controversial, and his work is for a highly specialized audience."

Kirkus 17:251 My 1 '49 120w

"Reman's book is a creditable volume, worthy of inclusion with the better writings on the subject." O. J. Falnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p56 S 25 '49 550w

REMICK, ARTHUR EDWARD. Electronic interpretations of organic chemistry. 2d ed 600p il $6 Wiley

541.2 Chemistry, Organic. Electrons 49-9793

"Relates selected principles of theoretical and physical chemistry to the reactions and phenomena of organic chemistry. A major part of the material is concerned with the electronic theory of valence and linkage, but there is much else besides. The author has not only gathered the material together, but he has outlined the experimental evidence upon which it is based, and has critically evaluated it from the standpoint of its application to organic chemistry. In this edition, the work has been extensively revised, and considerably increased in length. The changes are of enough importance to justify discarding of the earlier edition." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1943.

"An important work which will be best appreciated by advanced students specializing in chemistry and by professional chemists." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 74:1607 O 15 '49 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:67 S '49

RENICK, MRS MARION (LEWIS). The Dooleys play ball; il. by Dwight Logan. 165p $2.25 Scribner

49-8451

Story of how the Dooley boys teach a visiting girl-cousin to play softball. Among the illustrations are diagrams showing how the game is played, and the last chapter lists "Things to know about softball." For ages 9-11.

"There is little actual playing in the book but readers along with Linda will pick up considerable information about softball. The story has a nice feeling of family solidarity and cooperation, and the humor which seems forced to adults will probably please children."

Booklist 45:299 My 1 '49

Kirkus 17:150 Mr 15 '49 130w

"One learns much about [softball] while enjoying this lively story. Recommended for ages 8-12." J. S. Watts

+ Library J 74:826 My 15 '49 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 10 '49 100w

Reviewed by Marjorie Burger

N Y Times p30 My 8 '49 150w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R of Lit 32:27 N 12 '49 50w

Wis Lib Bul 45:107 Je '49

RETAN, WALTER (GEORGE WALTERS, pseud). Mystery of the haunted cliff; il. by Frederick T. Chapman. 131p $2 Aladdin

49-8673

Mystery story for grades four to six.

Booklist 45:340 Je 1 '49

"It is not literature, but it's sound and interesting and may well lure non-readers (and comic book addicts) into an interest in books."

+ Kirkus 17:109 Mr 1 '49 160w

"A not very exciting mystery. . . Recommended for ages 7-10." Judith Watts

+ — Library J 74:1034 Jl '49 70w

"The story gets off to a rather slow start, but gains momentum as it goes along. Readers of 8 to 12 will enjoy reading how these plucky boys follow one clue after another until they solve the mystery." Marjorie Burger

+ N Y Times p24 My 1 '49 180w

REVOLTA, JOHNNY, and CLEVELAND, CHARLES B. Short cuts to better golf; il. by Jerry Gibbons. 203p $2.95 Crowell

796.352 Golf 49-8821

"Based on principle of adapting the swing to the physique of the player, with four simple ideas. A professional outlines his system. Line drawings." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 45:309 My 15 '49

"Revolta gives the golf world a new book in every respect; a book easy to read and worth reading; a book which is the equivalent to a series of lessons from the costly expert." Gene Kessler

+ Chicago Sun My 4 '49 400w

"There are special chapters of interest to youngsters starting the game, and to women players. There are suggestions for winter conditioning, practice, bad weather golf, etc."

+ Kirkus 17:129 Mr 1 '49 100w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 74:738 My 1 '49 30w

"One of the most thorough of the many books of golf instruction to come out this year is 'Short Cuts to Better Golf.'" Rex Lardner

+ N Y Times p23 Je 12 '49 150w

Springf'd Republican p8C My 8 '49 240w

REXROTH, KENNETH. Art of worldly wisdom. ltd ed 117p $3 Decker press

811

"These poems have been published in Blues, Pagany, Poetry, (USA), the Objectivists' Anthology, New Masses, Fantasy, Nativity, Morada, Accent, New Directions, and a couple of ephemerids whose names I have forgotten. . . Most of them were written in a half decade of transition and foreboding—1927-1932. I have withheld them from permanent publication until the time which produced them was no longer an element in the judgment of their value." Pref

"They are exhausting poems to read; we feel that at any moment we will be able to seize the poem as a whole and wrest its inner core of meaning from it; but that moment never comes, and the perceptions, images and propositions disintegrate on all sides, leaving us aware of having experienced something but not sure what it was. It seems that the poetic energy here is greater than the control, and that a centrifugal tendency is working to pull the parts of the poem off in different directions." David Daiches

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 O 2 '49 500w

"The more freakish poems—Mr. Rexroth would reject the epithet—heavily influenced by Gertrude Stein and the surrealists, are in the familiar (and today how archaic in tone!) manner to which most of us who were experimenting in the late Twenties did obeisance. But these pieces are in the minority. Elsewhere, in poem after poem the reader will find adumbrated the firm control, the brilliant wit, the quick ear, and the deep humanistic passion that characterize Mr. Rexroth's mature work. He is often difficult, at times perversely so; but he is always the convinced, absorbed artist." Dudley Fitts

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:27 S 17 '49 220w

REXROTH, KENNETH, ed. New British poets; an anthology. 312p $3 New directions

821.08 English poetry—Collections 49-7599

An anthology of contemporary British verse, composed of selections from the works of seventy poets, many of them not well known in the United States. Brief biographical notes.

Booklist 45:223 Mr 1 '49

"An interesting and comprehensive collection of contemporary British poetry. . . The volume is for followers of modern poetic trends."

+ Kirkus 17:82 F 1 '49 120w

"If the outcome in Britain should be great poetry, this book will have been a milestone toward that event." Gerald McDonald

+ Library J 74:958 Je 15 '49 270w

"Of the poets he includes, Dylan Thomas stands out in the field like a giant; the only man of comparable stature is that old Scotch hurricane, Hugh MacDiarmid; and Alex Comfort wears his rue with a difference. The rest are all very good, but no voice is particularly conspicuous for its idiosyncratic tone or its special adaptations of technique. The dominant impression, if you read straight through the book at one sitting—which is probably no way to consider anthologies—is of a high level of literate competence and of an informed, cool, pastoral sameness." Rolfe Humphries

+ Nation 168:191 F 12 '49 290w

Reviewed by Robert Fitzgerald

New Repub 121:18 Ag 8 '49 400w

"Mr. Rexroth's anthology of new British poets is important for anybody who wishes to keep up with developments in British poetry in the last ten years. The opinionated preface will offend some, but it is a brilliant piece of work, both for its wit and for its remarkable series of uncannily perceptive thumbnail sketches of movements and individual poets." David Daiches

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Je 12 '49 230w

"This copious anthology of contemporary English verse is important for the same reason that a slim volume entitled 'New Signatures' was important back in the early Thirties. 'New Signatures' introduced for the first time to the American poetry-reading public the work of Auden, Spender, Day Lewis and their confrères. 'The New British Poets' similarly introduces Keith Douglas, Adam Drinan, Roy Fuller, David Gascoyne, Louis Adeane, and a half-dozen others. And many more for 'The New British Poets' errs on the side of inclusiveness." Selden Rodman

+ N Y Times p4 D 19 '48 600w

"After Rexroth's enthusiastic buildup, the poets in the collection, arranged in undramatic alphabetical order, seem fairly washed out and feeble. The outstanding talents we already know. . . A group of women poets, rather warmly normal in tone and subject, are highly derivative in style." Louise Bogan

New Yorker 25:109 Mr 26 '49 550

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril

San Francisco Chronicle p10 My 29 '49 100w

"The book is knowledgeable and of general scope. Those who do not really like poetry can get a lively enjoyment from reading Mr. Rexroth's sinuous prose." Richard Eberhart

+ Sat R of Lit 32:20 Je 4 '49 300w

REYNOLDS, DICKSON, pseud. See Dickson, H.

REYNOLDS, JAMES. Gallery of ghosts. ltd ed 295p il $10 Creative age

133.12 Ghosts 49-48171

A companion volume to Ghosts in Irish Houses (Book Review Digest 1948). Here are twenty-three factual ghost stories ranging over nine centuries in eleven countries: England, France, Belgium, Portugal, Italy, Holland, Saxony, India, Norway, Hungary, and America.

"All [the stories] are told in the Reynolds manner, with lavish detail, careful attention to motive, and a feeling for the time, the place, the mood and the colors of sky, battlement, goblet and sword. Each is prefaced by one of the author's black and white drawings; the result is a rich menu for those who like tall tales, the dark places of the human heart and mind, and blood." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Hearld Tribune Bk R p7 D 18 '49 800w

"Curiously, considering the paucity of the American tradition of ghosts and our lack of ruined castles, the four stories in the book about American shades show surprising vigor and character; some of the European ones seem diaphanous even for spectres. Mr. Reynolds' prose overflows with boyish gusto, and his attitude toward spectral evidence sometimes seems terribly eager, but the book is attractively designed and illustrated, and should make a good Christmas gift for those who have a taste for what the jacket calls 'grizzly' episodes."

New Yorker 25:126 D 17 '49 160w

"A very effective piece of work. . . Mr. Reynolds' illustrations are admirable, and the design of the entire book is handsome in the extreme." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 10 '49 800w

"The only trouble with all this is that Mr. Reynolds does not tell his stories very well; the illustrations seem to me quite crude, and the price of the volume almost prohibitive. But birthdays are coming, and if you have a friend whose taste is not exactly for literature this is the kind of gift which might make a pronounced impression." Rolfe Humphries

Sat R of Lit 33:30 Ja 28 '50 190w

Reviewed by W. G. Roger

Springf'd Republican p8C O 30 '49 70w

REYNOLDS, LLOYD GEORGE, and SHISTER, JOSEPH. Job horizons; a study of job satisfaction and labor mobility. 102p $2.25 Harper

331.112 Labor turnover. Occupations 49-7109

"Second of a series of preliminary reports on major research projects of the Yale University Labor and Management Center. This report grows out of a study of the structure and dynamics of the labor market of a medium-sized New England manufacturing center. Through interviews information was secured on the factors which determine a worker's satisfaction or dissatisfaction with a job, how he goes about finding a new one, his conception of occupational aspirations. Reveals the wide gap between current economic theory of job choices and actual behavior." Library J

Reviewed by A. M. Ross
Am Econ R 39:1061 S '49 600w

Am Soc R 14:330 Ap '49 120w

Reviewed by R. C. Sorensen
Ann Am Acad 263:251 My '49 440w

"Whatever the shortcomings of Job Horizons, they are clearly outweighed by the stimulus it gives to further research and to reappraisal of economic theory and public policy concerning labor markets." Albert Rees
+ — J Pol Econ 57:269 Je '49 800w

"The report is of some value to men in personnel and industrial relations fields as it reveals the thoughts and feelings of workers. The coverage is broad enough to apply to many fields of work."
Kirkus 16:586 N 1 '48 100w

"Written for laymen, it contains valuable information for anyone concerned with social behavior." Harold Lancour
Library J 74:57 Ja 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by Julian Sohon
Library J 74:553 Ap 1 '49 60w

Reviewed by Ernest Dale
Management R 38:231 Ap '49 800w

"The report leaves one with a strangely frustrated feeling about the prospects for 'coöperation.'" R. S. Lynd
New Repub 120:24 Mr 21 '49 900w

Reviewed by H. R. Northrop
Sat R of Lit 32:34 Je 4 '49 310w

REYNOLDS, PAUL REVERE. Writing trade. 159p $2.50 Writer

029.6 Authorship—Handbooks, manuals, etc. Authors and publishers 49-7535

"General résumés of book and magazine publishing and movie, theater, and radio production from the point of view of a writer's interest and welfare. There are two chapters on the function of the literary agent (one agent is of the Hollywood variety) and sample contracts are given in the appendix." Booklist

Booklist 45:255 Ap 1 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '49

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 31 '49 650w

Reviewed by J. A. Michener
Sat R of Lit 32:35 Ap 30 '49 600w

Reviewed by J. W. Bogan
Springf'd Republican p8C My 1 '49 210w

REYNOLDS, QUENTIN JAMES. Leave it to the people. 341p $3.50 Random house

940.55 Europe—Description and travel. Democracy. Europe—Politics 49-2432

Records the author's experiences while traveling thru Germany, France, Italy, Greece, Norway, the Netherlands, and the new state of Israel. "He talked with 'the important people of Europe'—'cab drivers, farmers, fighters, tavern keepers, workers, chorus girls, horse trainers, and only occasionally to cabinet ministers.' He found democracy stronger than we realize." (Library J)

Booklist 45:293 My 1 '49

Reviewed by Keith Wheeler
Chicago Sun p8X Je 12 '49 180w

"It must be apparent to an informed commentator that Britain has carried a large share of responsibility for world stability, and, further, that the United Nations is preparing to carry a still larger share. To roundly denounce both Britain and UN, therefore, for not immediately facilitating the establishment of a new sovereign state [Palestine], that might bring unforeseeable complications, is a compliment to Mr. Reynolds' heart rather than to his discernment. . . In the rest of his tour, Mr. Reynolds interests himself in a variety of fields . . . and invariably proves an entertaining traveling companion." H. J. S.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 25 '49 600w

Foreign Affairs 28:162 O '49 30w

"Perhaps this is not an important book, but it is a heartening book. . . Reynolds, as always, is good with the people, rather than their leaders. . . He was in Palestine at the birth of Israel. He catches the spirit of a handful of people whose struggle for freedom and liberty over terrific odds is an epic. Here Reynolds is at his very best. This section is worth the price of the book!"
+ Kirkus 17:127 Mr 1 '49 220w

"Exceedingly readable. Reynolds' realism is blended with shrewd refusal to prophesy and, for this reader, a thrillingly aggressive belief in the American brand of democracy. Recommended." H. S. Taylor
+ Library J 74:493 Mr 15 '49 130w

Library J 74:1561 O 15 '49 30w

"A cheerful report by a habitual optimist on the fight for democracy in Palestine, Italy, Greece, France, Holland, Germany, and Norway. . . The long section on Palestine is excellent; the rest, hurried and superficial."
+ — Nation 169:190 Ag 20 '49 70w

Reviewed by R. E. Lauterbach
New Repub 120:22 Je 6 '49 850w

"This is, Reynolds admits, a minority report. It is not likely to convince the pessimists. Reynolds is a feature writer rather than a conventional reporter. His anecdotes and the personal details of his travels are easy to read, and easy to forget. Tavern keepers and waiters are rated higher here as news sources than they would be by many who will disagree with his conclusions. . . Everywhere he went he talked to people, and the sampling was made on lines which would make an expert on opinion polls shudder. But they were people, and this book tells a good deal about how they live and work and play, in addition to what they think and say. People are still factors in the world's crisis, even if they escape the headlines and the statistics. They are the excuse for this kind of reporting, and a very good excuse indeed." Joseph Barnes
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ap 17 '49 700w

"I had supposed the device of quoting reportorial colleagues had been killed some time ago; I had supposed I helped in the overdue assassination. But Reynolds brings the mangled ghost of the device to life, and I, for one, experienced the eerie sensation of having been here before. Since the book has no more order than did the author's six months' trip, I gather he just went where his whims and his magazine editor's telegrams advised, and then as an afterthought put the jigsaw together as a book. Still, it does add up to more than just a travelogue because of the universality of what Reynolds found about the hopes and determination of men in diverse places. He recognizes the universality, and that is why his story leaves an impact despite its wanderings. I noticed a few inaccuracies, a number of dubious generalities, too many clichés and one unverifiable anecdote that should have been eliminated." Eric Sevareid
+ — N Y Times p6 Ap 17 '49 900w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 3 '49 600w

"The book bursts with anecdotes, most of them lively, some on the rowdy side, some extremely droll." M. S. Watson
+ Sat R of Lit 32:36 Ap 16 '49 800w

Wis Lib Bul 45:105 Je '49

REYNOLDS, REGINALD. Beards. 310p $3 Doubleday

391.5 Beard 49-9732

This history of beards and their social significance thruout the ages, is also a study of their "religious involvements, decorative possibilities and value in offence and defence." Index.

Reviewed by Rod Nordell
Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 26 '49 550w

"A fascinating, specialized piece of research where erudition is tempered with a brilliance of mind and style and the whole a tour de force of no mean ability."
+ Kirkus 17:247 My 1 '49 130w

"Some time back Mr. Reynolds added to the salty learning and gayety of life by his study of 'Cleanliness and Godliness.' He's done it again in 'Beards,' and the masculine population, bearded and clean-shaven, solemn owls and merry wits, will lap it up." Richardson Wright
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Jl 10 '49 800w

"Mr. Reynolds roars genially down the corridors of time shouting 'Beaver!' Without splitting a hair, he writes of a tangled subject lucidly. He takes history on the chin and tells us all we shall ever need to know about beards." Charles Poore
+ N Y Times p5 Jl 31 '49 900w
New Yorker 25:110 S 10 '49 140w

"The thing to do is to dip into 'Beards' for yourself. Only by so doing can you tell, really, if it's your sort of book. The publisher chooses to define Mr. Reynolds' style as 'mock scholarship,' but I'm not wholly satisfied with that. True scholarship is here, plenty of it. If Mr. Reynolds is mocking any thing, he's mocking the too-often pompous manner of the scholar. For those who find amusement in this kind of thing—and I must say I'm one of them—'Beards' will be first-rate entertainment." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 13 '49 700w

"I am sorry to report that I found the humor ponderous and the erudition spotty." J. T. Winterich
Sat R of Lit 32:10 Ag 13 '49 300w
Time 54:84 Jl 18 '49 650w

REYNOLDS, REGINALD. Wisdom of John Woolman; with a selection from his writings as a guide to the seekers of today; with a pref. by Stephen Hobhouse. 178p $3 Macmillan

B or 92 Woolman, John [49-9017]

"About half of the book considers the main ideas expressed by an American Quaker of the eighteenth century whose work continues to be read. The rest of the volume is composed of illustrative excerpts from his writings. Shows the spirit of charity and the willingness of the individual to do as he would be done by, which are associated with Quakerism." Booklist

---

Booklist 45:392 Jl 15 '49

"It is a joy to read the reflections of a man so filled with compassion for his fellow man, so clear in his understanding of the ever-presence of God." Neil Martin
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 4 '49 300w

Reviewed by Norman MacKenzie
New Statesman & Nation 37:307 Mr 26 '49 120w

"This book contains a disappointingly small measure of Woolman's own writings, but what there is, in spite of the quaint stiffness of style, still warms the heart, as it warmed the heart of the nineteenth century, with its goodness. Woolman's ideas are the fundamental ideas that do not grow stale."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p204 Mr 26 '49 470w

RHAU, HENRY VON. See Von Rhau, H.

RHODE, JOHN, pseud. See Street, C. J. C.

RHODES, EUGENE MANLOVE. Best novels and stories; ed. by Frank V. Dearing; introd. by J. Frank Dobie. 551p map $5 Houghton 49-11703

Contents: Novels: Pasó por aquí; Good Men and True; Bransford of Rainbow Range; The Trusty Knaves; Novelettes: The Desire of the Moth; Hit the Line Hard; Short stories: Consider the lizard; The perfect day; Beyond the desert; Maid most dear; Narrative Essay: Penalosa; Say now shibboleth; Poem: The hired man on horseback.

Reviewed by E. S. Watson
Chicago Sun p9X D 18 '49 120w
Reviewed by Vincent Starrett
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 13 '49 650w
Kirkus 17:373 Jl 15 '49 90w

"A banquet of regional writing is served in this collection, but like the speeches at most banquets it is too much of the same thing. . . Readers seeking western fiction will not be so satisfied as readers seeking Southwest regional atmosphere." Clarence Gorchels
Library J 74:1203 S 1 '49 110w

"Their contrived plots and conventional sentiment make these Westerns, mostly written for the Saturday Evening Post, seem pretty dated, but they give the genuine local color of Alamagordo County, New Mexico, where Rhodes lived during the 1880's and 1890's. The cowboys are not wholly stereotypes, and Rhodes is a master hand at a chase or a hide-out. The best one, 'Pasó por Aquí,' would make a refreshing change from Bret Harte as an anthology piece."
Nation 169:551 D 3 '49 110w

"One cannot read Paso Por Aqui or Bransford of Rainbow Range, or Good Men and True, or, for that matter, any of these exuberant, sad and sensitive tales without realizing that this neglected writer is the best who ever wrote on the region." John Woodburn
+ New Repub 121:28 D 12 '49 290w

"His work, which pleases cowboys who know it is truthful, no less pleases good judges of fiction, who realize that Rhodes's stories must be true or they could not be so convincing and satisfying."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p56 D 4 '49 360w

"Rhodes is the peer of Owen Wister in portraying the cowboy in his code, and often, though briefly and incidentally, the equal of such factual narrators as Andy Adams and Will James in presenting the mode of his working life. In variety and scope he is the best of the four. None of his tales is without many amusing and characteristic incidents." W. V. Clark
+ N Y Times p7 N 20 '49 650w
Reviewed by W. H. Hutchinson
San Francisco Chronicle p29 N 20 '49 850w
Wis Lib Bul p11 D '49

RICE, CRAIG (MRS LAWRENCE LIPTON) (DAPHNE SANDERS, MICHAEL VENNING, pseuds). Innocent bystander. 246p $2 Simon & Schuster 49-1570

Detective story.

"Craig Rice, the lady with the zany sense of humor, parked that valuable property when she started this eclectic endeavor which begins with murder on a ferris wheel and ends with execution in the carnival's Crazy House." James Sandoe
— Chicago Sun Ap 22 '49 100w

"Successful stuff."
+ Kirkus 17:97 F 15 '49 60w

"Grade A startler." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ap 10 '49 230w

RICE, CRAIG—Continued

"For the first half of the book things don't seem as deadly serious as the author implies they are, and by the halfway mark you will probably have a better idea of who done it than anyone else concerned. But the excellent carnival atmosphere of the amusement pier, where the action takes place, and the spectacularly staged climax do much to compensate." E. B.

+ — N Y Times p33 Ap 24 '49 190w

"Straight suspense stuff, nicely handled by a writer who has moved—temporarily, at least —out of her usual field of slapstick."

+ New Yorker 25:124 Ap 9 '49 120w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 17 '49 320w

RICE, DAVID TALBOT. Byzantine painting and developments in the West before A.D. 1200. 66p pl $2.75 Transatlantic

759.9495 Painting, Byzantine

"Monograph on Byzantine painting from the sixth through the fifteenth centuries and of Western trends in painting before A.D. 1200. . . Thirty-seven plates, four are colored." Booklist

Booklist 45:258 Ap 1 '49

— Times [London] Lit Sup p42 Ja 15 '49 360w

RICE, ELMER L. Show must go on. 472p $3.50 Viking

49-11107

"A novel, crammed with theatrical lore, lingo, customs, practices and procedures, of the progress of rather gauche Eric, ex-GI, from his isolated Connecticut home and factory job through the Broadway entertainment world and all its ramifications. His mentor is a weary, understanding agent, his producer an accomplished veteran of many shows with artistic but not moral integrity, and his cast provides fireworks with their private and professional lives. He experiences every vicissitude of play production—changes in script, backing and housing bugaboos, star trouble both personal and performance, rehearsal setbacks, preopening and first night jinxes and a show that wins critical acclaim and slow public acknowledgement, an artistic although not financial success. But a jealous, individual quarrel between the producer and one of the owners of the theater is used for revenge and the theater leased to another show, so that Eric's has to close." Kirkus

"Mr. Rice's is a fairly conventional but workmanlike and entertaining story, and above all, a refreshingly honest treatment of the theater. It fails to be more than that because factual authenticity and realistic portraiture add up to no more than good fictional reporting. Mr. Rice sheds no light in dark places, but I suspect he has written another hit." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 184:90 N '49 700w

Booklist 46:4; 63 S 1 '49; O 15 '49

Canadian Forum 29:237 Ja '50 290w

Reviewed by Dorothy Langley

Chicago Sun O 25 '49 170w

Reviewed by Fitzroy Davis

Christian Science Monitor p16 O 10 '49 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '49

"There is sober reality and knowledge of the stage and a feeling for plausible happenings and characters while the digressive inserts on theatrical technicalities form a solid bulwark for the story. A better book of show business than Damion's Daughter."

+ Kirkus 17:407 Ag 1 '49 270w

"To many persons connected with the professional theatre the novel will seem needlessly explanatory, but Mr. Rice is writing for the average reader. This book will probably be more popular than Quicksilver or Broom Stages, though it is not so good as either. Recommended for pay collections and large public libraries." George Freedley

Library J 74:1203 S 1 '49 130w

"This story Mr. Rice tells explicitly, leaving nothing unsaid. And rarely does he say anything either wittily or tersely. And yet, when you have turned the last page and reflected on the long, sometimes weary, road you have traveled with Mr. Rice, you realize that you have gathered on the way a very specific notion—almost at first hand—of what it is like to be a young playwright getting acquainted with the personnel and working methods of the Broadway theater. But as for the novel's value as a novel—that is something else again. Mr. Rice never really gets under the epidermis of his characters. He merely sketches their all-too-familiar outlines, presents them as types rather than as individuals." F. H. Bullock

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 9 '49 750w

"It would be hard to name, off-hand, a more earnest and well-intentioned book. Its plot is perfectly adequate, albeit a bit predictable. Its characters are proto-typical theatre folk, yet are shown to have their individual, human sides. The style, while neither elegant nor lovely, is not obnoxious. Its humor, though sometimes elephantine, is cheerful and never cruel or waspish. Unfortunately, these sterling virtues do not make a good novel. . . Swathed about this story, like a greatcoat on a midget, is a primer of the theatre. . . At times, all effort to adhere to the novelist's technique is abandoned, and the author takes over on his own delivering lectures on such matters as craft versus industrial unionization in the theatre and the artistic limitations imposed by American commercialism. Despite these imperfections, however, the story of Eric's growth to greater maturity and of his Alger-like rise will be eagerly followed by those for whom other considerations are outweighed by a success story with love interest and a glamorous background." A. C. Spectorsky

+ — N Y Times p4 O 9 '49 500w

New Yorker 25:130 O 15 '49 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p29 N 27 '49 400w

"Whatever its flaws, 'The Show Must Go On' is an intelligent and interesting novel for any reader; for everyone who knows and loves the theatre, it is a must." Edmund Fuller

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:15 O 15 '49 800w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 6 '49 800w

Wis Lib Bul p11 D '49

RICE, FRANCIS OWEN, and TELLER, EDWARD. Structure of matter. 361p $5 Wiley

541.2 Matter—Constitution. Quantum theory

49-527

"In this work, fundamental atomic phenomena and their grosser manifestations such as spectra, chemical bonds, and magnetism, are explained in the concepts and terms of quantum mechanics. Thus it is both an exposition of modern atomic physics and an introduction to the applications of quantum mechanics. The presentation has been kept as simple as possible so that the book will be useful to chemists, engineers and others who need a non-specialist's knowledge of quantum mechanics. Within each chapter, the exposition is developed under short sub-topics, an arrangement that facilitates comprehension and makes the book easier to use as a reference aid or as a 'refresher.' " (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"This reviewer found the book profitable reading and believes that there are few who would not likewise at least acquire useful new viewpoints from it. The attack on the subject is tremendously ambitious and the scope covered is very great. Nevertheless, it is a little difficult to decide upon a class of reader for whom it can be recommended without qualification. . . It must be reluctantly confessed, however, that this reviewer does not like the general approach which was used. . . It appears doubtful that the reader who cannot even be exposed to the Schrödinger equation is going to be able to grasp the concepts of 'coulomb and exchange integrals' introduced on p. 73 without any real explanation, to pick just one example. . . It is unfortunate that these criticisms seem necessary, because the authors have carried out a really remarkable translation of a vast variety of deductions into word pictures. It is certainly highly desirable for theoretical scientists to uncover the physical meaning of each stage of their mathematical derivations." E. B. Wilson

+ — Am Chem Soc J 71:3581 O '49 550w

"The text no doubt has its place in the curriculum of a college or university, probably on the senior or graduate level. The practicing chemist, physical chemist, or chemical engineer will still have to do his tasks the hard way." F. C. Nachod
Chem Eng 56:300 S '49 550w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 74:200 F 1 '49 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:13 Ja '49

RICE, JESSIE PEARL. J. L. M. Curry, southerner, statesman and educator. 242p $3.50 King's Crown press

B or 92 Curry, Jabez Lamar Monroe 49-10502

"A matter-of-fact biography of Jabez Lafayette Monroe Curry, native of Georgia, product of the University of Georgia and Harvard, lawyer, soldier, politician, and agent for the Peabody Endowment Fund. Among his quondam occupations were president of Howard College and preacher." (Current Hist) Bibliographical note. Index.

Current Hist 17:285 N '49 50w

School & Society 70:144 Ag 27 '49 20w

RICH, MRS LOUISE (DICKINSON). Start of the trail; the story of a young Maine guide. 216p $2.50 Lippincott 49-7941

The story of Bill Gordon, son of a Maine game warden. At eighteen Bill gets his guide's license, and makes a success of his first trip. There is a forest fire and the discovery of a murder to lend action to the story. For older boys.

Booklist 45:319 My 15 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Jl 16 '49 240w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p12 My 26 '49 300w

"The characters in the book really 'come alive,' and Bill's adventures, though told with restraint, are exciting enough to make the story move swiftly. Will be enjoyed by both boys and girls." J. D. L.
+ Horn Bk 25:216 My '49 70w

"Will be popular with older readers as well as young people from twelve to eighteen. Recommended." A. M. Wetherell
+ Library J 74:828 My 15 '49 70w

"An outstanding book for all boys over eleven." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ap 3 '49 280w

"Full of good living, sane thinking and presents a reassuring outlook on life. . . It is a well-written book and, though it is designed for teen-aged readers, many others will find it worth while." M. P. Allen
+ N Y Times p29 Ap 3 '49 140w

New Yorker 25:181 D 3 '49 80w

"Anyone, of any age, who goes to the Maine woods for fishing, hunting, water or winter sports, or merely to enjoy their beauty and freshness will have a good time reading this story. . . The strength and charm of the book lie not as much in the story as in Mrs. Rich's almost uncanny power of bringing the north woods and their people to her readers."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:38 Ap 9 '49 360w

Springf'd Republican p5D Je 5 '49 120w

RICHARDS, MRS EVA ALVEY. Arctic mood; a narrative of Arctic adventures. 282p il $4 Caxton printers

917.98 Wainwright, Alaska. Eskimos 49-2473

During the 1920s the author spent three years as government teacher and nurse in a small Eskimo village within the Arctic circle. Her book, devoted chiefly to the experiences of her first year, describes the life and customs of the people and tells of her work among them. Many pictures including photographs and drawings by the author.

Booklist 45:311 My 15 '49

"Mrs. Richards tells a clear story of her sights and insights without too much romantic coloration. The most interesting feature is that she enables the reader to see the Eskimos as real people who have warm personal qualities even if they do live in a cold climate." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 66:790 Je 29 '49 170w

"There is no distinction to the writing, but the character of the woman stands out."
Kirkus 17:47 Je 15 '49 170w

"The book has freshness in text, drawings and photographs. . . As in all such books, there is a special interest in seeing what primitive ways have lessons for uneasy, sophisticated parts of the world." Ernestine Evans
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 My 22 '49 350w

"The most useful adaptation of this work would be to read it to children. Mrs Richards has a devoted affection for the Eskimo tykes whom she taught to read and write and to know about the mysterious outside world. This affection shines through the book. We see that the children of Wainwright have all the capacity for mischief, brilliance, and neuroses of their U. S. brothers and sisters." R. L. Neuberger
+ Sat R of Lit 32:27 Je 18 '49 400w

School & Society 69:272 Ap 9 '49 60w

Reviewed by E. G. Eastman
Springf'd Republican p7B Jl 17 '49 270w

Wis Lib Bul 45:86 My '49

RIDDICK, FLOYD MILLARD. United States Congress; organization and procedure. 459p $4.50 Nat. capitol pubs, inc, Manassas, Va.

328.735 U.S. Congress 49-1982

"In 1941, Dr. Riddick published a volume entitled Congressional Procedure [Book Review Digest 1941] based upon his intimate contact with the national legislative body as an editor of the Congressional Daily. The present book represents a continuation of this interest, but it is much more than a new edition of the earlier work. An even closer relationship resulting from his service, since 1946, as Senate editor of the 'Daily Digest' of the Congressional Record has given new insight and has stimulated the addition of much new material." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

Reviewed by Harvey Walker
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:588 Je '49 340w

Reviewed by L. M. Short
Ann Am Acad 266:224 N '49 440w

"Dr. Riddick is well qualified to expound his complex subject. His book is an informative one on a subject of importance, but its treatment is so technical that only serious students of political science are likely to devote the careful study needed to master it." F. S. Adams
+ N Y Times p28 Je 19 '49 450w

"With faithful scholarship and painstaking application Dr. Riddick has put together a volume that will serve for many years to come as a firstrate handbook of congressional structure and functioning." C. L. Rossiter
+ Pol Sci Q 64:475 S '49 600w

Reviewed by M. E. Dimock
Survey 85:557 O '49 550w

RIDDLE, DONALD WAYNE. Lincoln runs for Congress. (Abraham Lincoln assn. Publication) 217p il maps $3 Rutgers univ. press

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham. Illinois—Politics and government 48-7601

"Of the present volume the author says: 'This study of Lincoln's campaign for nomination and election to Congress is offered as a report of an episode in Western history, rather than as a chapter of Lincoln biography.' . . The book tells briefly the story of Lincoln's two attempts and successful third campaign, 1843-46, to win election to the House of Representatives in the period of phenomenal western development under way at that time." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. Index.

"Modestly Professor Riddle disclaims having found new Lincoln sources as the basis for his carefully documented account, and it is true that this little volume does not materially alter the picture of the campaign as drawn by A. J. Beveridge or Harry E. Pratt. But Lincoln Runs for Congress is more exhaustive in research and more complete in detail than any previous study of this almost forgotten chapter of the Lincoln story. Professor Riddle's book is another example of the superior scholarly productions sponsored by the Abraham Lincoln Association." David Donald

+ Am Hist R 54:691 Ap '49 280w

Booklist 45:50 O 1 '48

"There is little of personal warmth, political heat, or of literary interest here; rather, the author has quite effectively proved, from Illinois sources, that better to understand Lincoln, the successful minority President, his experiences as a scrupulously fair, capable, aggressive, farsighted leader of the minority Whig Party in Illinois must be better known."

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:326 S '48 200w

RIDER, JOHN FRANCIS. Installation and servicing of low power public address systems. 208p il $1.89 Rider, J.F.

621.381 Electroacoustics 49-380

"Takes up the fundamentals of sound, microphones and phonograph pickups, impedance matching, amplifier specifications, loudspeakers, installation and servicing. Defines low power as up to and including 50 watts." Library J

Booklist 45:292 My 1 '49

Reviewed by Julian Sohon

Library J 74:824 My 15 '49 40w

"A practical manual intended primarily for the guidance of radio service men and radio engineers responsible for the installation of public address systems."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 34:12 Ja '49

RIENOW, LEONA TRAIN. Dark pool; il. by Allen Pope. 149p $2.25 Scribner

49-7766

An adventure story of Cro-Magnon times for ages nine to twelve. A sequel to Bewitched Caverns (Book Review Digest 1948).

"The earlier book, with all its faults, pushed aside the thousands of years. This seems to be chiefly stage props and stage sets—with no reality in story or characters. Disappointing."

— Kirkus 17:30 Ja 15 '49 130w

"Recommended for ages 9-14." Helen Swartz

+ Library J 74:500 Mr 15 '49 70w

"There is plenty of action and heroism, and the excellent pictures make the eerie atmosphere all the more believable." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Jl 24 '49 110w

"Although the setting and characterizations are graphic, the anthropological age serving as background is identified only by information on the book jacket. But children over 10 who want chilling suspense can find it here, not softened by the touch of unborn civilization." Irene Smith

N Y Times p22 Ag 7 '49 200w

RIESENBERG, FELIX, 1913-. Mysterious sailor; a sea adventure. 210p $2.50 Dodd

49-10276

"Mystery story of seventeen-year-old Tommy Marden who foils the plans of a gangster to save the freighter Hatteras." (Library J) For grades 7-9.

Booklist 46:86 N 1 '49

"[This story] may lack something in plausibility, but boys, spellbound by the plot, will learn a great deal about the Merchant Marine." F. W. Butler

Library J 74:1612 O 15 '49 70w

"The authentic nautical background and the colorful descriptive scenes of Panama and Rio are obviously drawn from the author's first-hand experience. Teen-aged boys will find it hard to lay this book down. Not only is it a rousing good yarn of mystery and adventure, but for those who aspire to go to sea it is also a primer of practical seamanship." Howard Boston

+ N Y Times p34 S 18 '49 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 13 '49 200w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R of Lit 32:30 N 12 '49 50w

RIGGS, ROBERT LARIMORE. Tennis is my racket. 245p il $2.75 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Tennis 49-8951

Autobiography of a famous American tennis player, for some time a champion in the amateur field, now a pro. The last part of the book contains tips on how the average player can improve his game.

Chicago Sun p8X My 1 '49 30w

"For the sports fans."

+ Kirkus 17:130 Mr 1 '49 170w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 74:1032 Jl '49 30w

Reviewed by Rex Lardner

N Y Times p23 Je 12 '49 150w

RIGSBY, HERBERT PRENTICE. Welding fundamentals. 178p il $2.75 Pitman

671 Welding 48-11941

"The information presented in this work is intended for engineering students and engineers rather than for students who wish to make welding their vocation. Accordingly, the instructions are general and theoretical, and aim to show how arc welding may best be used on engineering projects. Such topics as where arc-welding may be most profitably used; what is the most easily welded steel; main functions of electrode coating materials; and the kinds of metals which are welded by the heliarc process are discussed. The chapter on tests is fairly complete and deals with the guide-bend, free-bend, nick-break, tension, radiograph and other tests for welds." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Should prove of value to all interested in welding." Julian Sohon

+ Library J 74:824 My 15 '49 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:95 N '48

RIKER, THAD WEED. History of modern Europe. 835p maps $6.75; text ed $5 Knopf

940.2 Europe—History 48-8751

"This book is a complete revision and extensive elaboration of the author's earlier work,, A Short History of Modern Europe, which first appeared in 1935. . . It traces the significant developments of European history from the Reformation to the present day. Dr. Riker's main objective is 'to show how institutions have evolved, then changed, and sometimes passed under the impact of man and time.' " (Social Studies) Bibliography. Index.

Current Hist 15:295 N '48 60w

"His management of the historical facts essential to his survey is masterly, but these facts are carefully selected, for, as he says, his concern is with the evolution of institutions rather than with wars and reigns and heroes." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 31:35 N 20 '48 180w

"In addition to its use as a college text, secondary school teachers will find it a good book to have on their desks; it is a sound statement of fact within the areas it treats, and it brings the story down to the current year." K. S. Cooper
+ Social Educ 13:199 Ap '49 500w

"Although the book is primarily designed as a text for college use, it can be read profitably by high school students, particularly since it is written in a very clear and interesting style. The reader will find the short outlines at the beginning of each chapter very useful and helpful. Dr. Riker is to be congratulated, indeed, for providing such a readable, well-balanced, and worthwhile book." R. H. Bauer
+ Social Studies 40:139 Mr '49 600w

RISTER, CARL COKE. Oil! titan of the Southwest. 467p il maps $5 Univ. of Okla. press
665.5 Petroleum industry and trade. Petroleum—Southwest 49-9715

"Historian's account of the search for oil and the development of oil resources in the Southwest. Describes the growth of the giant corporations, the struggles of the 'independents,' the adoption of scientific methods, and the emergence of controls." (Booklist) Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

"A well-written and restrained narrative."
+ Booklist 45:387 Jl 15 '49

Reviewed by J. J. Parsons
Geog R 40:157 Ja '50 600w

"It is good, solidly documented history, but it will be read also for pleasure by persons who participated in the events described." R. R Hawkins
+ Library J 74:1332 S 15 '49 70w

N Y Times p38 O 23 '49 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 25 '49 70w

"The volume's reference value is somewhat impaired by the incompleteness of index and glossary. The former omits such fairly important individuals and devices, for example, as Ed W. Bateman and the gravimeter, and the latter defines 'tool dresser' but neither 'roughneck' nor 'roustabout.' Tables of crude oil production, a map, and a selected and classified bibliography extend the volume's value. Over seventy illustrations of discovery wells, oilfields, communities 'before and after,' refineries, etc., will prove a popular feature. The book is an obvious 'must' for the library, large or small, of any community or individual with a particular interest in the oil industry; such will be grateful for the careful research which has gone into this useful and handsome volume. But the general reader, unfortunately, will probably continue to derive his ideas of the industry from the colorful, anecdotal volumes in which revolver shots resound more frequently and significantly than nitroglycerine 'shots.' " K. W. Porter
Sat R of Lit 32:14 Ag 27 '49 650w

RITCHIE, ALICE. Treasure of Li-Po; with il. by T. Ritchie. 154p $2 Harcourt
Fairy tales 49-10204

Six fairy tales of Old China. Contents: The treasure of Li-Po; The faithful lantern-bearer; The fox's daughter; The toys; In the far southwest; Two of everything.

Booklist 46:17 S 1 '49

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 170:209 D '49 10w

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun S 3 '49 40w

"Simple and direct, and refreshingly out of the ordinary." A. T. Eaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 13 '49 80w

"The humor and the value given to individual character distinguish the book."
+ Commonweal 51:190 N 18 '49 70w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:416 S '49 80w

"Told with humor and distinction. Good to read aloud." A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk 25:436 S '49 30w

"Of these six wonderful fairy tales, The Faithful Lantern Bearer and Two of Everything are sure favorites but all of them are thoroughly enjoyable. . . All are enchanting. Written in the best traditional fairy tale style, nonetheless these are original with the author and worthy companions to the literature of fairyland. The 26 illustrations by T. Ritchie are full of dignity and beauty and imagination and are exactly suited to the text. Story tellers will welcome this and bookstores should do well with it. Don't forget it will make the perfect plus-sale book for Christmas."
+ Kirkus 17:393 Ag 1 '49 150w

"Six Chinese fairy tales told with a simplicity and charm that give them real distinction. The beauty of the country and true dignity of the people shine through each story. A treasure for storytellers which listeners of all ages will enjoy. . . Highly recommended for fifth grade up." Anne Izard
+ Library J 74:1208 S 1 '49 60w

Reviewed by Alice McQuaid
Library J 74:1542 O 15 '49 40w

"The Treasure of Li-Po contains no more than six stories, but these are told with such wit and goodwill that they should never be allowed to go out of print." Naomi Lewis
+ New Statesman & Nation 36:557 D 18 '48 120w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 13 '49 130w

"As childlike and as finely written a group of stories as have appeared in many a year." V. H. Mathews
+ N Y Times p22 N 13 '49 100w

New Yorker 25:172 D 3 '49 100w

"Children always welcome new fairy tales. It is particularly heartening just now to have stories that contain both humor and beauty come from China." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:45 O 22 '49 150w

RIVETT, EDITH CAROLINE (CAROL CARNAC, E. C. R. LORAC, pseuds). Over the garden wall. 190p $2.25 Doubleday 49-4808

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun S 2 '49 150w

+ Kirkus 17:260 My 15 '49 70w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
New Statesman & Nation 37:61 Ja 15 '49 100w

"Chief Inspector Rivers has to do lots of talking to explain the facts and his detection of same. This may be taken as a pleasing enough collection of whodunit tricks, with some good characters—they seem human." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ag 7 '49 170w

"Clues, motives, the relationships of the characters, and the action get more and more complicated, in a manner which suggests that the complications are introduced for their own sake. This, plus the fact that there is as much speculation as action on the part of the law, makes this mild British mystery something less than fast-paced." E. B.
N Y Times p23 Ag 7 '49 140w

"Fortunately, the Inspector is a dogged type and fond of following up unpromising leads, with the result that his solution of the case is a sound one, if not exactly stimulating."
New Yorker 25:64 Ag 6 '49 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 4 '49 70w

"First-rate."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:36 Ag 13 '49 40w

RIVETT, EDITH CAROLINE (CAROL CARNAC, E. C. R. LORAC, pseuds). Place for a poisoner [Eng title: Part for a poisoner]. 189p $2.25 Doubleday 49-8674

Detective story.

Booklist 45:355 Je 15 '49

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun My 27 '49 50w

"A fine yarn for a cold night and a warm hearth."
+ Kirkus 17:121 Mr 1 '49 60w

"Inspector MacDonald does a noble job in this highly recommended item." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 My 1 '49 150w

"One of Macdonald's earlier adventures ('Case in the Clinic') involved a nurse whose past included a suspicious number of dead patients. Now he is confronted with a similar situation, far more interestingly developed and embellished with such attractive figures as an old-time low comedy panto team. Only the use of an obvious and outworn device of English mysteries keeps this from standing in the front rank of the season's novels of straight detection." A. B.
+ — N Y Times p22 My 1 '49 190w

"Good grade British"
+ Sat R of Lit 32:45 My 21 '49 40w

RIWKIN-BRICK, ANNA. See Brick, A. R.

ROANE, MARIANNE, pseud. See Meisel, M. S. F.

ROBBINS, MRS ANN BROKAW (ROE). How to grow annuals; il. by L. J. Robbins. 300p $3.50 Macmillan
635.931 Floriculture 49-9900

Lists varieties of twenty-five annuals, names the best varieties, and gives instructions for planting, cultivating, and combining with other flowers. Gives a brief history of each of the twenty-five flowers. List of United States Agricultural experiment stations. Index.

Booklist 46:29 S 15 '49

"Excellent—and not too fancy—handbook on growing annuals, which are the choice for beginning gardeners, and essential as fill-ins for the most experienced gardener. The one fault I find in this book is the introduction—too early in the text—of what seems a bit too advanced information on hybridizing, which might prove misleading to the uninitiated."
+ — Kirkus 17:168 Mr 15 '49 200w

"Mrs. Robbins's volume should be most welcome to all newcomers who are somewhat confused by the complexities of the field into which they are venturing. Indeed, one suspects that there are oldtimers, too, who will find much profitable reading between its covers." R. S. Lemmon
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p40 D 4 '49 230w

ROBBINS, HAROLD, pseud. See Rubins, H.

ROBERT, JOSEPH CLARKE. Story of tobacco in America. 296p il $5 Knopf
338.47 Tobacco 49-8562

"This is a history of tobacco in America from the time of Columbus to the present. The author gives the broadest possible interpretation to his assignment, tracing not only the industry itself in its various phases—plantation, leaf market, factory, and fluctuating nicotine manners—but also the effect of tobacco on political, economic, and social life in America throughout the years." (Publisher's note) Bibliographical notes. Index.

"An agricultural and industrial biography, thorough in its denomination, dull in its presentation."
+ — Kirkus 17:101 F 15 '49 150w

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 74:661 Ap 15 '49 140w

"This is, in fact, two books. One is a scholarly, competent and perhaps definitive history of a vast industry that should command the respect of the American Historical Society; the other is a light-hearted disquisition on human foibles that would have enchanted Charles Lamb or Charles Calverley." Gerald Johnson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ap 24 '49 1050w

"Joseph C. Robert . . . has devoted years to his subject, and the thoroughness of his research is attested by an extensive bibliography. But this is no dull academic performance. Footnotes and statistical tables are avoided, and the story is told in an engaging style, with emphasis always on the human element." T. P. Abernethy
+ N Y Times p7 My 1 '49 800w

"Professor Robert here helps to refute the base canard that a Ph.D. and membership in a history department are incompatible with the presentation of an important and somewhat complicated subject in a fashion both clear and entertaining." K. W. Porter
+ Sat R of Lit 32:26 Jl 30 '49 650w

ROBERTS, MRS CATHERINE. Make it and make it pay! il. by the author. 120p $2.50 Houghton
680 Handicraft 49-10205

Instructions for learning skills which will pay the maker. For junior and senior high school. Contents: What you can build with concrete; Brick by brick the bank account grows; Gilding the junk pile; With hammer and nails; Turn the holidays into dollar days; With needle and pins the smart girl wins; New seats, new $$$; Merchandising; Materials and where to get them; Address list of handicraft supply houses. Diagrams. Index.

Booklist 46:17 S 1 '49

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 12 '50 130w

"Recommended for arts-and crafts enthusiasts who don't object to a dash of old-fashioned capitalism."
+ Commonweal 51:192 N 18 '49 130w

"Except for a few interesting ideas on simple masonry and carpentry jobs for the young craftsman, most of the projects are covered in more exhaustive handicraft books." J. S. Watts
Library J 74:1763 N 15 '49 70w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:50 N 12 '49 50w

ROBERTS, DOROTHY JAMES. Marshwood. 328p $3 Appleton
49-2705

Novel about four wealthy sisters living in their comfortable home in an Atlantic seaboard town in the 1920's. Their quiet lives are disturbed by two foundlings left on their doorstep. The death of one sister and the coming of the depression changed things for all of them, but the foundlings were by that time a permanent part of the family.

Booklist 45:314 My 15 '49

"A comfortable, substantial portrait of four women which reflects the fundamental drives of their sex, this is pleasant reading."
+ Kirkus 17:118 Mr 1 '49 150w

"Nice characters, adequate writing, and good plot make for comfortable, non-thought-provoking reading. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 74:736 My 1 '49 70w

"Miss Roberts writes vividly and well. Her chief fault is occasional over-explicitness—about the house itself, about her characters. Her best effects are those she achieves with a light touch, especially her characterizations of Octavia and of Octavia's fascinating husband, Win, who confuse the sisters by the indecorum of their marital quarrels and the passionate encounters which resolve them. 'Marshwood' is both a thoughtful and an attractive novel." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 My 29 '49 450w

"Miss Roberts has written an entertaining romance centered about characters that are varied and individual and she has placed them in a situation that is novel for a contemporary tale. 'Marshwood' is sparkling make-believe." J. P. Quehl
+ N Y Times p24 My 8 '49 220w

"The background is standard, but the characters are fresh and accurate."
+ New Yorker 25:111 My 7 '49 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 14 '49 250w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 32:38 Jl 2 '49 140w

Wis Lib Bul 45:106 Je '49

ROBERTS, KENNETH LEWIS. I wanted to write. 471p $3.50 Doubleday

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 49-8638

"Answering advice-seekers, Roberts illustratively describes in detail his method of work, tracing his career, partly by diary, from journalism days in Boston, as roving reporter for SEP in Europe, in Siberia for Military Intelligence, to writing in Italy and Maine. His experience substantiates his belief that 'no one can become a writer of any standing unless he learns to drive himself incessantly and ruthlessly.' . . [There are] tributes to Booth Tarkington's friendship, generosity of H. G. Lorimer and his wife's essential support; shrewd comment on politicians, people, Pulitzer Prizes, Italian cookery and a variety of themes." (Library J) Index.

"This is such a good book, so warm, so edifying, so honest in its account of the whole industry of writing, that I hate to see it marred by tedious insertions, personal invectives, and bouquets of congratulations." Edward Weeks
+ — Atlantic 183:81 Je '49 1600w

Booklist 45:201; 294 F 15 '49; My 1 '49

Reviewed by F. N. Litten
Chicago Sun My 3 '49 420w

"It should not be supposed that 'I Wanted to Write' is interesting only to persons actively engaged in writing, or pining to be writers. There are vivid, and appreciative views of persons like George H. Lorimer, A. Hamilton Gibbs, and especially of Booth Tarkington, and character sketches of less famous persons whom Mr. Roberts has made unforgettable. Besides this, the book would not be Kenneth Roberts' if it were not vigorous, downright, full of enthusiasms and antipathies, and sharply amusing. Should some cautious critic call the book opinionated, or even repetitious, let it be remembered that this is an autobiography, in which a man must express his opinions or be only a shadow; and that the story of the ordeal of each novel, rehearsed in detail, is the essential part of his life." W. K. Rugg
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 27 '49 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '49

Kirkus 17:18 Ja 1 '49 160w

"Intensely interesting, much humor. Obviously a 'must' for all libraries." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:308 F 15 '49 150w

Reviewed by D. C. Fisher
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Ap 24 '49 1300w

"'I Wanted to Write' is studded with memorable sayings and people and a luxuriant miscellany concerning life and letters. From the title a literary aspirant might expect a handbook on success in fiction. It is not that; but young writers will be able to extract counsels of industry and patience hopeful or discouraging according to their own natures." Robert Hillyer
+ N Y Times p5 Ap 24 '49 1650w

New Yorker 25:110 Ap 30 '49 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 15 '49 1000w

"I know of few narratives that so clearly depict an artist at work. This account will be referred to for years to come. Let me make it clear, however, that Roberts's picture of himself is not always a pleasant one." J. A. Michener
+ Sat R of Lit 32:8 Ap 30 '49 700w

"Readers who plow through I Wanted to Write may wish that Tarkington had been around to discuss it with Roberts. He almost certainly would have cut out the ten-page list of people to whom Roberts wrote letters in 1935, together with the scores of pages of now-dull journeyman journalism reprinted here in full. He might even have suggested, as Roberts' publisher should have, that I Wanted to Write should be quietly put away in an old trunk."
— Time 53:110 Ap 25 '49 600w

Wis Lib Bul 45:87 My '49

ROBERTS, LESLIE. The Mackenzie; il. by Thoreau MacDonald. (Rivers of America) 276p $3.50 Rinehart

917.122 Mackenzie river 49-8302

Saga of the river which runs thru the western part of Canada, draining five great provinces, on its way from Great Slave Lake to the Arctic. This volume in the Rivers of America series treats of the history and legends of the region, and the people who lived there, then and now. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:293 My 1 '49

"Mr. Roberts presents an interesting summary of facts relating to the country immediately surrounding the river, and gives an outline of Arctic exploration in the surrounding territory. To the reader acquainted with Canadian history, there is not much that is new, but for those who lack such background, the adventures of Alexander Mackenzie and his successors, the fur traders, the prospectors and the miners will bring to mind the strategic importance of this, the last great frontier." M. G. Cohen
Canadian Forum 29:47 My '49 160w

"For those who like dates and history—they are all here, with page after page of stirring adventure, as well." H. B. Nichols
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 4 '49 750w

"Highly readable and definitive volume."
+ Kirkus 17:25 Ja 1 '49 150w

Reviewed by Bruce Hutchison
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Mr 27 '49 1000w

"The book hardly does its subject justice. Leslie Roberts has warmed over a good many week-end supplement tales about bush pilots and the Mad Trapper of Rat River, but he has missed the real story of the Mackenzie. . . This book is at its best when Leslie Roberts describes Great Bear and Great Slave, the pair of massive lakes which the Mackenzie empties into the Arctic Ocean." R. L. Newberger
— + N Y Times p23 Jl 17 '49 700w

"Unfortunately, Mr. Roberts is not a naturalist. He does not get into the sweep and mood of the great river. . . Mr. Roberts's book is redundant with news reporter's phrases. . . [The illustrator's] work shows in one glance that he knows his subject. His birds are not just birds; they are snow goose, arctic loon, and swan. His trees are the arctic kind. His shores of Great Bear Lake are rocky with a great expanse of water and sky. The work has sympathy and illuminating detail. Mr. MacDonald catches the spirit of the Mackenzie region." Constance and Harmon Helmericks
— + Sat R of Lit 32:17 Ap 23 '49 550w

ROBERTS, WALTER ADOLPHE. Single star; a novel of Cuba in the '90s. 378p $3 Bobbs 49-11126

Historical novel of Cuba in its revolutionary years, the 1890's.

Booklist 46:189 F 1 '50

ROBERTS, W. A.—Continued

"There is good Caribbean history here, excellent descriptions of the homes, the food, the people and their customs, and the affairs of Garcia, Gomez, and Teddy Roosevelt seem to fall into place naturally. Recommended." K. A. Shorey

+ Library J 74:1460 O 1 '49 100w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 D 4 '49 110w

"Mr. Roberts' story is straightforward and economical, but utterly laconic. It is correct but cold. It is as if the the author, properly disgusted with the over-production of bosomy, swashbuckling novels of the Spanish Main, had pledged to avoid creating another. In honoring his pledge, he has failed to honor his material." V. L. Warren

N Y Times p44 N 27 '49 320w

"History and romance are teamed to pull this tale along, and it would seem that either one of them ought to have been loosed, so the other might have its head. The history reads better than the romance; Stephen is an incredible, flat figure with stagey speeches and heroics. La Estrella is little better. What life the book has lies with the little Cuban men who carry the spears and perform the unheralded action." N. L. R.

— + Sat R of Lit 32:47 N 19 '49 270w

ROBERTSON, DIANA FORBES-. See Forbes-Robertson, D.

ROBERTSON, ELIZABETH WELLS. American quilts. 152p il $6.50 Studio

746.46 Quilting. Coverlets 48-28158

The history of American quilts and the textiles from which they were made, from Colonial times. After considering quilt fabrics and their manufacture, the author goes on to the pieced and applique quilts and quilt names, and the different types of quilting. Illustrated with photographs of early quilts and quilt fabrics, and drawings of designs. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 45:174 Ja 15 '49

School Arts 48:5a Je '49 60w

ROBERTSON, JOHN HENRY (JOHN CONNELL, pseud). W. E. Henley (a biography). 385p il $4 Macmillan

B or 92 Henley, William Ernest [49-11911]

"It was Professor Saintsbury who wrote of Henley some years after his death that 'it was very easy to quarrel with him but strangely impossible to dislike him.' A large part of this book is taken up with Henley's violent disputes, enthusiasms, and hates, literary and personal, in the last years of Queen Victoria's reign. It is based on the long series of extremely frank letters he wrote during his editorship of the 'Scots [later National] Observer' to his close friend and literary first lieutenant Charles Whibley. Whibley kept them carefully in order and they are now for the first time available." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

"The author of this biography has used the Whibley collection of Henley's letters as the basis of his work and has produced a volume of excellent chronological arrangement, constructed with his own running historical commentary." Leila Flower

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 25 '50 480w

"This forthright, racy, slangy, and sometimes reckless correspondence gives clearer insight than most of his contemporaries had into Henley's mentality. . . . The biography throws light on political and literary thought at the turn of the century and strikingly reveals, with all his courage and his faults, one of the strangest characters in the long story of English letters." A S. W.

+ Manchester Guardian p4 S 13 '49 750w

"Mr. Connell makes little attempt to place his subject critically—perhaps it is a pity that he makes any attempt at all. . . Nor do we have any more confidence in Mr. Connell as a judge of character than as a judge of literature. . . . It is doubtful whether Henley will interest future biographers and one therefore regrets that this biography is not more critical and more sensitive." Graham Greene

— New Statesman & Nation 38:388 O 8 '49 1050w

Reviewed by Carlos Baker

N Y Times p4 D 11 '49 800w

"Is it the fault of his biographer that Henley, as we see him here, affects us as a distasteful figure? This is hardly an inspired book: it is untidy and often arid, at once too long and rather insubstantial. Yet one is left with the feeling that the author has himself been discouraged by the documents. It is not he who has made Henley depressing. The fault of the book is rather that it does not focus Henley clearly. Mr. Connell does not know quite how to handle him." Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 25:57 D 24 '49 1050w

"In this factual and extremely interesting biography Mr. Connell has printed for the first time a large number of letters, or extracts from letters, written by Henley to Charles Whibley, and these form the basis of his work. This brings the book into line with the admirable series which Messrs. Constable are now producing; admirable, not always on account of literary brilliance, but as handsome contributions to the documented history of English literature. . . If one does not wholly agree with Mr. Connell in his findings as a literary coroner, that is not a reason for denying the value of his book; more particularly the value of its fresh material." C. E. Vulliamy

+ Spec 183:334 S 9 '49 900w

"Mr. Connell brings a sympathetic cast of mind to his subject and helps us to see the domestic man behind the not always attractive public mask; and he sketches in the political and literary background of the later Victorian period with commendable skill."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p630 S 30 '49 1200w

ROBERTSON, JOHN KELLOCK. Radiology physics; an introductory course for medical or premedical students and for all radiologists. 2d ed 323p il $5 Van Nostrand

537.53 X-rays. Radioactivity 48-9465

"An introductory textbook mainly written for the medical student includes the latest developments in the field of nuclear energy which includes the radioactive isotopes. Emphasis is placed upon the relation of nuclear physics to radiology. Covers information relating to production control and utilization of radiation. It presents facts relating to each source of radiation, including X-rays and both natural and artificial radioactive substances." (Library J) "The general scope and purpose of the 1940 edition have been retained, but much of the material has been revised to include recent developments in the field of atomic physics." (N Y New Tech Bks)

"Useful for radiologists, and radiological technicians." L. A. Eales

Library J 74:201 F 1 '49 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:32 Mr '49

ROBERTSON, LILIAN. Picnic woods; il. by [the author]. [32p] $2 Harcourt

49-5055

A picture book for ages 3-6. Mister Fox's picnic lunch was stolen, in turns, by two gray squirrels, an old raccoon, a bear, a brown bunny, beavers, and water rats, but was recovered from the rats in mid-stream by means of a fishing pole.

Booklist 46:38 S 15 '49

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 25:408 S '49 90w

"Even people who object to personified animals wont mind this for the whole world of the story is the animal's own, with nary a human in sight, and youngsters will chuckle over the raccoon's natural markings which make him look like a holdup man and the stove which is the rabbit's home."

+ Kirkus 17:390 Ag 1 '49 180w

"Recommended." A. M. Wetherell
+ Library J 74:1334 S 15 '49 70w

Reviewed by A. G. Zebker
Library J 74:1532 O 15 '49 40w

"The animals are caricatured rather cleverly, and the colors give a bright sense of a happy May day for a picnic. The simple idea is best for listeners of about four." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 S 11 '49 90w

"The neat little story cleverly follows young children's concepts of cause and event; nor will the children be disappointed in the animals. The humor will be highly appreciated. The illustrations are amusing and lively." Elena Baker
+ N Y Times p26 Ag 21 '49 140w
New Yorker 25:166 D 3 '49 50w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:22 N 12 '49 40w

ROBINSON, CLARK NORVAL. Meet the plastics. 172p il $3.75 Macmillan

668.4 Plastics 49-9028

Explains for the layman what plastics are and how they are manufactured into useful and ornamental objects. The appendix contains lists of materials manufacturers, plastics materials, schools training in the plastics, and trade publications. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:9 S 1 '49

"Recommended." Julian Sohon
+ Library J 74:1102 Ag '49 20w
Library J 74:1562 O 15 '49 40w

ROBINSON, DANIEL SOMMER. Principles of conduct; an introduction to theoretical and applied ethics. 420p $3.25 Appleton

170 Ethics. Conduct of life 49-7081

A textbook in ethics which attempts to "provide beginning students with an adequate survey of ethical theories and principles and their applications, and to equip them with a sufficient understanding of moral concepts to enable them to formulate a sound personal philosophy of life." (Pref) The author is Director of the School of philosophy, University of Southern California. Bibliography. Index.

"Here is a useful and comprehensive, though not at all profound, college textbook in ethics. While it lacks the consistency of the author's earlier volume, Political Ethics, it nevertheless has considerable appeal and merit of its own. . . The student and teacher can find here enough well presented, thoroughly digested matter to make a lively and rewarding course. The author has the classroom situation and manner clearly in hand. . . On second thought, a book like this may be less than adequate for introducing students to the field of ethics. Not so much because of what it says as because of what it leaves unsaid." Roger Hazelton
+ — Christian Century 66:497 Ap 20 '49 650w

"Robinson's method is the one that he used so successfully in such books as his Political Ethics and his Anthology of Modern Philosophy. It consists in selecting, summarizing, simplifying, and integrating a considerable number of technical works of high quality. Unfortunately, he did not use the method successfully in the present book." R. G. Stephens
Ethics 59:299 Jl '49 550w

ROBINSON, DWIGHT EDWARDS. Collective bargaining and market control in the New York coat and suit industry. 248p $3.50 Columbia univ. press

331.18871 Collective bargaining. Clothing trade 49-11992

"After summing up the key problems and main historical phases of bargaining in the industry, the author presents step-by-step accounts of the NRA period and its aftermath and of the Federal Trade Commission's action under the anti-trust laws against employers' organizations and unions alike." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 75:48 Ja 1 '50 50w
School & Society 70:352 N 26 '49 50w

ROBINSON, GERTRUDE. Sign of the Golden Fish; a story of the Cornish fishermen in Maine; il. by Frederick T. Chapman. (Land of the free ser) 207p $2.50 Winston

49-8795

A story of the Cornish fishermen who settled in Maine in the middle of the seventeenth century. The hero is a fifteen-year-old boy when the story begins. He had come to the New World to search for his father, but when after many adventures, his family was found, it was the boy who stayed in the New World. For grades seven to nine.

Booklist 45:340 Je 1 '49

"This fresh and revealing picture of the beginning of a famous industry is well supported by the illustrations." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:294 Jl '49 120w
Kirkus 17:181 Ap 1 '49 160w

"Not easy reading, but it is well written and interesting for the 12-16-year-olds. Should be useful as supplementary reading in history and social studies." A. M. Wetherall
+ Library J 74:1036 Jl '49 80w

"A thoroughly satisfactory story for older boys, exceptionally well written and with unusual background. . . A book rich in character drawing, in unusual information about a little-known phase of colonization and in its finely imaginative style. Very good reading for older boys and girls." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 8 '49 320w

"The details of life in the colony and in the Indian village are satisfyingly graphic, as are those relating to the fishing industry. Miss Robinson's sound knowledge never impedes her fast-moving story for teen-agers." N. B. Baker
+ N Y Times p22 Je 26 '49 140w

"This reviewer can remember no other story of these hardy, adventurous men and women who came to the New England Coast to make their living from the sea. It is good to have this one, not only for its historical value but for its vital characters and its fine continuity. Format and illustrations are most satisfactory."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:38 Jl 9 '49 110w
Wis Lib Bul 45:108 Je '49

ROBINSON, HOWARD. British post office; a history. 467p il maps $7.50 Princeton univ. press

383.4942 Postal service—Great Britain 48-5750

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"Despite its great importance as a factor in modern economic and cultural development, the postal service has not received careful attention from historians. The writing of its history has been left largely to postal officials and amateurs. We still lack a comprehensive and scholarly history of the postal service of the United States. That void for Great Britain, however, is satisfactorily filled by the title under review." O. W. Holmes
+ Am Hist R 54:583 Ap '49 650w

Reviewed by Sarah Maurer
Social Studies 40:188 Ap '49 850w

"This American history of the British Post Office is an ample and careful work rather overloaded with detail—for Mr. Robinson has spared nothing to make it complete—but very fully illustrated, provided with many maps and beautifully produced."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Mr 19 '49 850w

ROBINSON, HOWARD ADDISON, ed. High-polymer physics. 572p il $12 Chemical pub. co.

541.7 Polymers and polymerization 49-7048

"A collection of twenty-three papers that were presented at a symposium held in January, 1946, under the auspices of the High Polymer Division of the American Physical Society. Most of the papers have been printed in periodicals, but some that were so published have been revised for this volume, and several are printed here for the first time. The majority of the contributors are associated with industrial research laboratories." N Y New Tech Bks

"Altogether, this book deserves careful study by anyone who is interested in the application of physics to problems of high polymers." Turner Alfrey

+ Chem Eng 56:282 Ap '49 240w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:12 Ja '49

"These papers are intended for the advanced worker and theorist, and are essential to those concerned with high polymers. The latest advances in experiment and thinking are reported."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:124 Mr '49 220w

ROBINSON, JUDITH. Tom Cullen of Baltimore. 435p il $3.50 Oxford

B or 92 Cullen, Thomas Stephen [49-10642]

Biography of a Canadian minister's son who studied medicine under the famous surgeon Howard A. Kelly, and succeeded him as chief gynecologist at Johns Hopkins and professor of gynecology in its medical school. Index.

"Even had Miss Robinson written nothing else, this book would mark her as an unusually good, perhaps even a great, writer. Had she written nothing else, had she not served so adequate an apprenticeship as reporter, editorial writer, and editor, she would not, of course, have done so splendid a job on Tom Cullen, but that is beside the point. Here is the whole man—the small-town boy, the medical student, the intern, the devoted son, the great surgeon, the tireless researcher, the applied idealist, the fine man and the beloved doctor—set down so that he who reads may know, and knowing, love." Allan Sangster

+ Canadian Forum 29:164 O '49 350w

"This book is a worthy record of a worthwhile life."

+ Manchester Guardian p4 O 21 '49 170w

"A glowing, warm-hearted tribute. . . A picture of American medical practice on the higher levels. . . The study of Tom Cullen's early days as the son of a Methodist parson in Canada is delightfully done. The relation of the boy and his hard-driven, poverty-smitten, but truly magnificent mother is explained with insight and sympathy that never slip over the line into bathos." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 O 9 '49 1200w

Reviewed by I. W. Voorhees

+ N Y Times p26 O 2 '49 450w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

Sat of Lit 32:12 O 1 '49 230w

ROBINSON, LINCOLN FAY. Goldie and Yellowhammer; story and pictures. 32p $1.50 Viking

49-10699

A picture book based on a true incident of henyard life on the author's Kansas ranch. Goldie the hen and Yellowhammer the tiger kitten were good friends. Yellowhammer even helped Goldie set on her eggs. When the chicks were hatched out Old Cocklecrow the rooster took his place as head of the family and Yellowhammer, forgotten, found a new friend—a Persian tabby.

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun N 5 '49 50w

"The story woven around this friendship and the amusing pictures will make Goldie and Yellowhammer a universal favorite." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 25:408 S '49 80w

Kirkus 17:425 Ag 15 '49 80w

Reviewed by A. G. Zebker

Library J 74:1532 O 15 '49 40w

"The story is told in a matter of fact way that makes one believe it, and no creature talk is invented. The sketches are ever so good, lively, funny, and true to the barnyard. Its probable appeal is to all who know hens, but especially those from about four to ten." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 O 16 '49 140w

"The picture-book audience will find these domestic creatures real personalities, an impression strengthened by Mr. Robinson's illustrations. These are somewhat amateurish in drawing but they are full of vitality and are very funny." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p26 O 9 '49 170w

San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 13 '49 60w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R of Lit 32:21 N 12 '49 70w

ROBINSON, MABEL LOUISE. Back-seat driver; il. by Leonard Shortall. 68p $2 Random house

Dogs—Legends and stories 49-11437

A story about a back-seat driver who was also the doctor's pet dog. Riley thought driving a car would be easy; but after some mishaps in his own little car he was only too happy to continue riding beside the doctor.

"It's delightful and funny and wonderful, as near to Dr. Doolittle as anyone has come."

+ Kirkus 17:360 Jl 15 '49 130w

Reviewed by E. A. Groves

Library J 74:1918 D 15 '49 70w

"The fantasy may be a bit overdone for some tastes. But the idea is so funny, Riley the dog is so very doggy in a real terrier way, the style is so clipped and skillful for a tale of man and dog that the whole lingers in the mind and should cure many a back-seat driver of his sins." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 D 25 '49 140w

"This is a merry nonsensical tale for 6-to-10-year-olds who like dogs and automobiles. The dialogue between the doctor and Riley is handled so expertly that anyone with a bit of imagination and dog-knowledge can just hear that Riley laying down the law without stretching one's credulity." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p50 O 23 '49 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 13 '49 100w

"A story that in action and dialogue is continuously funny. It is an absolutely perfect characterization of a wire-haired terrier—the most lovable and most troublesome of dogs. The illustrations, in black and white, are Riley to the life. Both he and the pictures are irresistible." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 32:32 N 12 '49 190w

ROBINSON, THOMAS PENDLETON. Trigger John's son; il. by Robert McCloskey. 284p $2.50 Viking

49-10455

"When Trigger John's Son was first published in 1934, it was hailed as 'the best thing of its kind since Tom Sawyer.' Robert McCloskey is the perfect illustrator for this new edition." Horn Bk

Booklist 46:18 S 1 '49

"The book has been recommended for men and boys, but don't let gender keep you from reading it. Trigger is universal boy. The setting is middlewest-American-Gothic but I'll wager an Italian translation would find enthusiastic readers. What I want to say is—do not miss this book." Lucile Pannell

+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 13 '49 200w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p10 N 17 '49 110w

"The humor and liveliness of [McCloskey's] drawings of Trigger and the Goosetown gang must be reminiscent of his own boyhood, for he has wanted to illustrate the book ever since he first read it." J. D. L.
+ Horn Bk 25:425 S '49 70w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
+ Horn Bk 25:522 N '49 120w

"80 lively drawings by Robert McCloskey should insure this book the wide popularity it deserves. Recommended." M. F. Cox
+ Library J 74:1830 D 1 '49 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p20 N 13 '49 360w

New Yorker 25:164 D 3 '49 80w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:50 N 12 '49 30w

ROBOTTI, FRANCES DIANE. Chronicles of old Salem; a history in miniature; with a foreword by Russell Leigh Jackson; il. from the collections of the Essex institute. 129p $3 A. E. MacSwiggan, 95 Loring av, Salem, Mass.

974.45 Salem, Massachusetts 49-7257

"In this book the author has tried to outline, in the briefest and most selective form, the exciting story of this ancient New England town from 1000, when Leif Ericson paid his legendary visit, to 1926." School & Society

---

"Here is Salem's skeleton, all flesh stripped away. Although an admirable piece of work it is too superficial for the serious scholar, too factual for your average reader. But it is a good meaty introduction to one of America's most romantic cities." Esther Forbes
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 F 6 '49 370w

School & Society 69:88 Ja 29 '49 30w

ROCHE, ALOYSIUS. Bedside book of English saints after 1066. 127p $2 Macmillan

922.2 Saints [48-9346]

A continuation of A Bedside Book of English Saints, this tells the stories of several dozen English saints after the time of the Norman conquest. Told from the Roman Catholic point of view. No index.

"There is little of the 'new hagiography' here, except a suave and sometimes slightly G.K.C.ish style. The multiplicity of petty detail may make the eyelids heavy before their time. But the book is doubly suitable for reading in bed—it is light to the hand and conducive to slumber." W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 65:1338 D 8 '48 130w

"Fr. Roche is a Roman Catholic, and his Saints are those of the Roman Calendar: but most of these are common to English Christianity, anyway, and should be interesting to all of us. Further than that: this book is worth reading as a sketch of one particular aspect of English Church history. Fr. Roche tells the story well, and without bigotry." F. J. Moore
+ Churchman 163:17 Ag '49 120w

"Anyone wanting to learn about the real heart of English history, about the invisible sun, that lit and warmed it internally, can read nothing better, in its wholly unpretentious way, than this exquisite little book, which is for all ages." A. F.
+ Commonweal 49:333 Ja 7 '49 200w

ROCK, JOHN CHARLES, and LOTH, DAVID GOLDSMITH. Voluntary parenthood. 308p $3 Random house

612.63 Fecundity. Birth control 49-9585

"Information on planned parenthood. Here is help for both childless and prolific couples—chapters on contraceptives, with a thorough discussion of both good and bad kinds, the best ones to use; and help on infertility—its causes and treatment. Foolish beliefs and superstitions are exposed and general help is given to overcome ignorance." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 45:387 Jl 15 '49

"A first—and important first—scientific presentation of planned parenthood, this makes accessible medical information not only on the control of conception, but also on its stimulation."
+ Kirkus 17:224 Ap 15 '49 200w

"In addition to giving sound scientific advice, the authors present their views in such a frank, straightforward way that reading is not merely tolerable but interesting. An important book, the best I ever have read on the subject. Highly recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 74:955 Je 15 '49 120w

" 'Voluntary Parenthood' can be highly recommended, not only to young people contemplating marriage, but also to medical students and even physicians. It deals ably with a problem of particular importance to our modern age." W. E. Studdiford, M. D.
+ N Y Times p18 Ag 21 '49 400w

RODALE, JEROME IRVING. Stone mulching in the garden. 164p il $3 Rodale

631.79 Mulching 49-7869

A study of the method of using stone mulches for growing trees and vegetables, and as a means of keeping down weeds. The first part of the book contains the author's own experience with stone mulching. Part II contains articles reprinted from Organic Gardening Magazine, showing the experiences of others with rock mulching.

Booklist 45:257 Ap 1 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '49

"To one who lives in a region where the removal of rocks to make room for plants is a major and inescapable chore, the thought of deliberately dragging in tons of them as an aid to growing vegetable and fruit crops is impressively fantastic. . . This much, in all fairness, should be said in favor of the author's theme: Once his rocky (and rough) road to Dublin type of mulch is in place, nothing short of history's worst tornado could ever blow it away." R. S. Lemmon
— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 N 6 '49 220w

RODGERS, ANDREW DENNY. Liberty Hyde Bailey; a story of American plant sciences. 506p il $7.50 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Bailey, Liberty Hyde. Agricultural research 49-1927

"This biography of Liberty Hyde Bailey is really more than a biography. It traces not only Dr. Bailey's long career, but deals, in detail, with the development of state agricultural colleges and experiment stations and conservation in general. Thus it taps a rich vein of history—the story of how we have dealt with our lands and improved the fruits thereof." N Y Times

---

Booklist 45:312 My 15 '49

"An excellent contribution to the history of plant sciences." Julian Sohon
+ Library J 74:1102 Ag '49 70w

"Mr. Rodgers alternates between the romantic and the pedantic. Documents and letters are lavishly quoted and footnoted. But through this musty material steals the soft breath of orchards in bloom and of fields turning green in the spring. Especially is this true in the description of Bailey's Michigan boyhood." H. M. Davis
+ N Y Times p6 Ap 10 '49 550w

"Mr. Rodgers' is a rich work, especially important to the student of botany or of the history of modern American science."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:185 Je '49 260w

Reviewed by Alan Devoe
Yale R n s 39:158 autumn '49 850w

RODGERS, WALTER R. Huntin' gun; men, gun feel and game; il. by Jim Berryman and Gib Crockett. 188p $3.50 Infantry journal

799.2 Hunting Agr49-437

"Stories—actual experiences of a professional trapper—of hunting in New Mexico, with much gun lore. Originally published in American Rifleman. Illustrated with small cuts." Library J

Booklist 46:31 S 15 '49

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 74:1206 S 1 '49 30w

RODITI, EDOUARD. Poems, 1928-1948. 151p $2 New directions

811 49-3051

"Of the poems included in the present volume, two whole sequences have previously been published as separate volumes: Poems for F., Paris, Editions du Sagittaire, 1934, and Prison within Prison, Prairie City, The Press of James A. Decker, 1941. Many of the individual poems have also appeared previously, either in their present form or in earlier versions, in various publications." Acknowledgement

"Too many of Mr. Roditi's subjects are not felt; he is writing from the top of his head, not the bottom of his heart. So far from possessing a satisfactory technique, he sometimes strikes me as an unwitting victim of the malady known as 'the tin ear.'" Vivian Mercier
— Commonweal 50:396 Jl 29 '49 150w

Reviewed by Richard Eberhart
N Y Times p18 Ag 21 '49 300w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril
San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 18 '49 50w

Sat R of Lit 32:27 S 17 '49 270w

RODMAN, OLIVER HAZARD PERRY, and JANES, EDWARD C. Boy's complete book of fresh and salt water fishing; drawings by Jack Murray. 275p $3.50 Little

799.1 Fishing 49-10051

The first part of the book deals with the fresh water fishing, and covers all sides of the sport from catching and cleaning your catch, to ice fishing and caring for equipment. The second half takes up salt water fishing. No index.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun p7X D 11 '49 70w

Commonweal 51:193 N 18 '49 100w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:542 N '49 120w

"Fortunately, boys are not dependent on this book alone for the information contained herein, for though there's lots of it built into 'listen my children and you shall hear' style, it is presented so patronizingly that it would utterly discourage any aspiring young fisherman."
— + Kirkus 17:254 My 15 '49 80w

"Ideal book for the teen-ager, or adult beginner. Clearly written, lucid explanations, with helpful diagrams and drawings." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:1206 S 1 '49 20w

"Recommended to anyone over 12 who is interested in the subject." E. T. Dobbins
+ Library J 74:1830 D 1 '49 100w

"Of special importance to the many hundreds of thousands who have to take their sport when and where they can find it, Mr. Rodman treats the popular practice of hand-lining with a completeness and dignity too often missing in books for fishermen." N. P. Alex
+ N Y Times p18 Ag 14 '49 230w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:50 N 12 '49 50w

Reviewed by Leo Marceau
Springf'd Republican p8B Ag 28 '49 480w

RODMAN, SELDEN, comp. 100 modern poems; selected with an introduction. 191p $2.75 Pellegrini & Cuddahy

808.81 Poetry—Collections 49-50036

An anthology of modern poetry. It is divided into four sections: Beyond frontiers,—translations from outstanding continental poets; Forerunners,—Hopkins, Yeats, Lawrence, Eliot, etc; The age of satire,—poets of the thirties; and The forties,—American poets of the last ten years. There is a long critical introduction by the compiler.

Booklist 46:187 F 1 '50

"Selden Rodman has broken new ground in each of his anthologies. The present one is distinctive for its selection of important European poets in translation and for its introduction of passages from prose works. Those of James Joyce and Hemingway give a new dimension to such an anthology. Opinion may differ as to the wisdom of including some of the others. The editor's introductory essay is a useful and perceptive summary of the development of modern poetry." Gerald McDonald
+ Library J 74:1909 D 15 '49 130w

"His collection of a hundred modern poems is original without being freakish, representative but not in the least routine." David Daiches
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 Ja 29 '50 400w

"Let it be said that Mr. Rodman's anthology—memory-book or not—is excellent reading. This is particularly true of the opening pages, which are devoted to translations from the Russian, French, Spanish, German and so on—a memorable little anthology in itself. . . A reader will have little trouble seeking out Cummings or Fearing or any of the Moores, but this is hardly true of Mayakovsky, of Garcia Lorca, of Rilke and Apollinaire. To this extent Mr. Rodman's book is an act of public service. It is valuable, too, in its rescuing from (one hopes) temporary oblivion such poems as Winfield Townley Scott's 'Mr. Whittier' and Robert Fitzgerald's fine 'Portraits.' As for the rest, the collection does credit to the editor's taste as poet and critic." Dudley Fitts
+ N Y Times p5 D 11 '49 400w

School & Society 70:336 N 19 '49 30w

ROEBURT, JOHN. Tough cop. 216p $2 Simon & Schuster

49-9567

Mystery story.

"The course of this is rapid and fretful but not especially convincing and it is worked in prose in need of rebuke." James Sandoe
— Chicago Sun Jl 1 '49 90w

Kirkus 17:190 Ap 1 '49 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Jl 10 '49 140w

"On the credit side this story of the last case and first love of a hard-boiled veteran copper deserves full marks for some fine detailed detection, a vivid feeling for the slums of Manhattan and Brooklyn, an adroit twist on a standard plot cliché—and above all for its recognition of the fact that cruelty is not something to be casually accepted in the whodunit." A. B.
+ — N Y Times p24 Je 26 '49 170w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 24 '49 70w

Sat R of Lit 32:34 Jl 9 '49 40w

"[This is] a fast-paced thriller and has a surprise ending that is likely to catch a majority of armchair sleuths napping." D. F. M.

Springf'd Republican p7B Jl 31 '49 90w

ROGERS, AGNES (MRS FREDERICK LEWIS ALLEN). Women are here to stay; the durable sex in its infinite variety through half a century of American life. 220p $5 Harper

396 Woman—Pictorial works. Women in the U.S. U.S.—Social life and customs 49-9917

A collection of photographs and cartoons with descriptive paragraphs, showing the advancement of women into the various aspects of modern life. Covers roughly speaking the last fifty years. The compiler is the wife of Frederick Lewis Allen, with whom she collaborated on I Remember Distinctly (Book Review Digest 1947). Index.

Booklist 45:365; 386 Jl 1 '49; Jl 15 '49

Bookmark 9:5 O '49 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '49

"Recommended only to those who like to drench themselves in nostalgia and old photographs."

Nation 169:258 S 10 '49 30w

"If there are a few lacks in the book, set them down to Miss Rogers's embarrassment of riches. She's covered the waterfront and her book will be as durable—under the head either of history or delightful entertainment—as the sex whose progress she celebrates." D. D. Bromley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S 11 '49 650w

N Y Times p30 S 11 '49 100w

New Yorker 25:115 S 17 '49 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 25 '49 160w

"This is a picture book that is at once superlative entertainment and eloquent social history." J. T. Winterich

Sat R of Lit 32:21 S 10 '49 450w

Springf'd Republican p8C O 30 '49 200w

ROGERS, CORNWELL BURNHAM. Spirit of revolution in 1789. 363p il $5 Princeton univ. press

944.041 France—History—Revolution. Public opinion—France 49-8645

"A study of public opinion as revealed in political songs and other popular literature at the beginning of the French Revolution." (Subtitle) "History as reflected in the printed words of the time, with comments on the principal figures, political and otherwise, to show the human side of the period." (Current Hist)

Reviewed by B. F. Hyslop

Am Hist R 55:120 O '49 480w

Reviewed by Tamotsu Shibutani

Am J Soc 55:417 Ja '50 650w

Booklist 45:353 Je 15 '49

Christian Century 66:894 Jl 27 '49 390w

Current Hist 16:344 Je '49 40w

"Mr. Rogers has catalogued his songs meticulously; I am not convinced that he has weighed them. Is he sure that in the songs of 1789 demand determined supply? I find no distinction in his book between songs that were genuinely popular and songs that were published but perhaps never sung. In other words what Mr. Rogers is studying is the psychology of French songwriters, not the psychology of the French people. I wonder whether they were the same. . . Despite these criticisms, I got much more from Mr. Rogers than I expected to. Or rather, the best thing about his book is that I did not get very much. His material is novel; his conclusions leave things much as they were." A. J. P. Taylor

— + New Statesman & Nation 38:151 Ag 6 '49 800w

"Mr. Rogers belongs to the younger school of historians who are emancipating themselves from the incorrigible conceit of the graphocracy. He does not take it for granted that the song the sirens sang can be played on a typewriter. Unfortunately there is not space here to glance into all the haunted recesses of the mob mind that his searchlight helps to illumine. The serious reader who is not afraid of footnotes and has sole command of French may follow these leads for himself. Any careful study of the mechanisms that mould public opinion is pertinent in these times, and a scholar who can be both authoritative and interesting deserves to be read outside professional circles." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 21 '49 900w

Times [London] Lit Sup p427 Jl 1 '49 1350w

ROGERS, LINDSAY. Pollsters; public opinion, politics, and democratic leadership. 239p $2.75 Knopf

301.154 Public opinion polls. Public opinion—U.S. 49-7842

An examination of the work of the public-opinion poll takers. "Professor Rogers, Burgess Professor of Public Law at Columbia University is not so much against the polls themselves as he is against the pretensions of the pollsters. His thesis, in its simplest terms, is this: The pollsters, through a barrage of propaganda, have led the public to believe that their business is a science which measures public opinion." (N Y Times)

"This is the first full-length attack on the work of the public opinion polling industry. Professor Rogers must be credited with the courage to speak out in the face of professional, as well as commerical, sentiment. . . In unmistakable terms he has told the pollsters that the concept of public opinion is not something to toy with. He has also advised his readers that a public opinion bearing no relation to republican government can be—nay, ought to be—ignored. Within this setting Rogers has written a spirited and effective book." Sebastian de Grazia

+ Am J Soc 55:415 Ja '50 1150w

"Political scientists should not expect to find in this brilliant production a definitive critique of the polls as instruments for predicting the results of popular elections. . . Since Dr. George Gallup has been a leading spokesman for the pollsters, the polemic against the profession seems at times to become almost a philippic against its most conspicuous champion. This is unfortunate, because Professor Rogers' book is an important contribution to the literature of contemporary political philosophy. . . It is to be hoped that a controversy which is capable of promoting the advancement of knowledge in the field of politics will not be diverted into a personal duel." A. N. Holcombe

+ — Am Pol Sci R 43:823 Ag '49 700w

"This reviewer finds himself congenial to Rogers' warning that pollsters should not be permitted to reach the position of a Metternich, to which at least one of them has seemed to aspire. But that the failings of Gallup should be used to tar and discredit all the work of such men as Likert, Link, Katz, Clyde Hart, Lazarsfeld, Stouffer, and Merton is mischievous and inexcusable. . . The Pollsters is an excellent title; it is too bad that it could not have been used on a better book." R. C. Myers

— Ann Am Acad 264:151 Jl '49 380w

Booklist 45:236 Mr 15 '49

"The Professor of Public Law at Columbia University gives what almost deserves to be called a theory of democratic government. From time to time he brightens his informative, but never ponderous, study with a punch line—telling us for example, that the pollsters have been taking in each other's washing."

+ Cath World 169:160 My '49 200w

Current Hist 16:289 My '49 40w

Foreign Affairs 28:159 O '49 30w

Kirkus 17:75 F 1 '49 120w

"A whole-hearted, effective, and rather witty attempt to destroy the science, art, or legerdemain of public-opinion polling by impugning its accuracy, questioning its utility, and denouncing its philosophy."

+ Nation 168:397 Ap 2 '49 30w

"The author's criticism of the polls is on the whole sound and useful as well as entertaining, but on occasion he seems carried away by the fluidity of his phrase making. . . Mr.

ROGERS, LINDSAY—Continued
Rogers reveals his own technical weaknesses in his discussion of the pollsters' methodology. . . He also correctly admits confusion about the report of the Social Science Research Council's Committee on the Analysis of Pre-Election Polls and Forecasts. . . Finally, the author might have devoted more space than he does in referring to techniques of sampling, of questionnaire design, of interviewing, and of analysis, superior to those now in use in most commercial polling which could result in more reliable and more valid survey findings. However, the reviewer's criticisms of Mr. Rogers's book in no way detract from the ease, pungency and wit of his style, from the fundamental importance of his analysis of the limitations and hazards in the preparation, publication, interpretation, and use of public-opinion polls; or from the significance and value of his insights into the nature of public opinion, representative government and the democratic process." P. M. Hauser

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ap 10 '49 1200w

Reviewed by John Desmond
N Y Times p6 Mr 6 '49 700w

Reviewed by A. B. Simon
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 27 '49 350w

"Unfortunately, Professor Rogers's book will not compete in public appeal to the 'Dr. I.Q.' approach of Dr. Gallup. The professor's technique is far too philosophical, his numerous classical quotations take his work out of the realm of popular reading, and his tome is annotated to the point of annoying those who do want to read what he has to say." Warren Moscow

Sat R of Lit 32:9 Mr 26 '49 800w

"The author says many things about the pollsters which have needed saying for a long time. Many of his criticisms have been recognized as having merit by the more conscientious of those in the profession of polling and who are working for improvement. One need not accept all of his viewpoints in order to accept his volume as a substantial contribution to the literature on democracy and public opinion." H. A. Bone

Social Educ 13:393 D '49 350w

Springf'd Republican p9B Mr 6 '49 140w

Reviewed by Hillier Krieghbaum
Survey 85:279 My '49 200w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:242 Je '49 320w

ROGERS, WILL. Autobiography; selected and ed. by Donald Day; with a foreword by Bill and Jim Rogers. 410p $3 Houghton

B or 92 49-11206

"This is the popular comedian's story told in his own words, by means of judiciously edited selections from his newspaper and magazine writings. Rogers' well-remembered rustic humor and the style which lent itself to his drawling delivery call up a picture of this well-loved figure; the many homespun sayings reaffirm the good sense and fine feeling with which he was always credited." (Booklist) Index.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 184:88 D '49

Booklist 45:345; 46:81 Je 15 '49, N 1 '49

Bookmark 9:28 N '49 20w

"Impressive as this book is as the revelation of a right and reasonable man, it is additionally valuable as a refresher course in American history." Clorinda Clarke

+ Cath World 170:240 D '49 300w

Reviewed by Herb Graffis
Chicago Sun O 17 '49 600w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds
Christian Science Monitor p15 N 10 '49 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '49

Kirkus 17:343 Jl 1 '49 190w

"Brilliantly edited and selected . . . this is a distinguished piece of work. Written in Rogers' inimitably humorous style, it is extraordinarily funny as well as shrewd. . . Recommended for libraries regardless of size. Should have a wide public, so order generously." George Freedley

+ Library J 74:1023 Jl '49 110w

Nation 169:450 N 5 '49 40w

"This volume includes hundreds of his brief newspaper comments, extracts from his books —and a few valuable records from the early days, before he had achieved national recognition. The selections have been made skillfully and arranged logically. There are notes enough to provide continuity, but not so many as to interrupt or obscure the humorist himself. It is an excellent job of editing. The result is a manual of American humor that will be read with nostalgic delight by the elder generation and that may be a revelation to the younger." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 O 16 '49 1050w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson
N Y Times p4 O 2 '49 600w

New Yorker 25:166 N 19 '49 80w

"This book is a compilation of simon-pure Rogersana, with the column which Will wrote from the end of 1922 to his death in Alaska in 1935 providing, happily, the bulk of the text. The result will be compared to Poor Richard, Puddn'head Wilson, Marcus Aurelius, and Samuel Pepys, and it can stand up under that comparison without having to produce a passport." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R of Lit 32:19 O 15 '49 1050w

"Mr. Day's book is made up of hundreds of things Will said and wrote, some of them humorous, some serious, some critical and a surprising number accurately prophetic. At any place the book is opened Will's slow smile and drawling voice come to mind, and they are pleasant to remember indeed. They've built a monument to him out West, but this book is a better one." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p7C O 16 '49 240w

Wis Lib Bul p7 N '49

ROGGE, OETJE JOHN. Our vanishing civil liberties; foreword by Thomas I. Emerson. 287p $3 Gaer

323.4 Civil rights 49-8733

"The author, former Assistant Attorney General, now a practicing attorney and a practicing liberal, presents the thesis that our civil rights are today under attack in a way ominously reminiscent of Germany in 1932. The supporting evidence, recitation of personal experience, cannot but be taken seriously by anyone to whom the ideals of American society are more than mere verbiage." San Francisco Chronicle

Booklist 45:328 Je 1 '49

Reviewed by Carleton Kent
Chicago Sun p6X Jl 3 '49 320w

"When Mr. Rogge stops giving evidence and turns to argument he weakens his whole case. He sees the current syncline on the American civil liberties chart in black and white—a plot by the leaders of business and industry to destroy trade unionism in America. . . As a part of this plot, Mr. Rogge includes the Marshall Plan, of which, he says: 'No amount of hysteria can convince me that the aid which the Marshall Plan gives European industrialists ever reaches the people who need it.' Such unqualified statements, together with the use of loose slogans about 'Wall Street' and 'Peoples' Government,' and the oversimplified analysis of the causes of the postwar decline in civil liberties, lead one to question just how much of Mr. Rogge's evidence is really sound, and also to wonder how much other evidence he may have omitted." Roland Sawyer

— Christian Science Monitor p16 My 7 '49 500w

"Mr. Rogge's legal comments are enlightening, but perhaps the most depressing and impressive sections of the book are those in which he has transcribed questions and answers from the records of so-called loyalty hearings. Those who think that police state methods occur only in countries outside America will find the volume particularly illuminating—and, one hopes, disturbing." Williamson Grant

+ Churchman 163:17 Ag '49 150w

"Topical, but probably not durable goods." R. E. Kingery
Library J 74:661 Ap 15 '49 100w

Reviewed by A. G. Hays
New Repub 121:19 S 19 '49 900w

"Mr. Rogge's book is a political tract which unfortunately distorts what might have been a most useful attack on the hysterics of the Un-American Activities Committee, the futilities and injustices of the loyalty purges and the senseless and dangerous drive to put all Communists outside the law." R. N. Baldwin
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 My 15 '49 700w

"Mr. Rogge spoils his case by some of the largest statements this reviewer has seen in print. . . Let it be said for Mr. Rogge that he has frankly approached his subject as an advocate for one side of it. Let it also be said that he has contributed little to the rational resolution of a real problem." R. G. Whalen
— N Y Times p21 Je 5 '49 550w

"Unfortunately the weight of the thesis somewhat overbalances the weight of the argument. Even those most wholly in accord with Rogge's aims must feel that a trained and experienced attorney might have presented a more sober and deeply reasoned analysis. The book is a sincere contribution to the cause of freedom, but it is not likely to be, in the long run, one of outstanding significance." G. T.
— + San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 8 '49 150w

ROHMER, SAX, pseud. (ARTHUR SARSFIELD WADE). Hangover house. 244p $2.50 Random house 49-5059

Detective story.

Kirkus 17:312 Je 15 '49 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 S 18 '49 100w

"The only Rohmeric touch is the cryptic figure of one Mohammed Idn Lahûn. . . The rest is standard brand. . . Preposterous is the only word for the solution, which does equal violence to the laws of probability, the science of medicine, and the ethics of the detective story; but the story has an easy readability which may enable you to kill some time while waiting for Mr. Rohmer to return to his serious work." A. B.
N Y Times p21 Ag 14 '49 190w

ROLLINS, HYDER EDWARD, ed. Keats circle; letters and papers, 1816-1878. 2v il $12.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Keats, John 49-7086

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"These two volumes are an admirable example of understanding scholarship. The biographical portraits at the beginning are discriminating and well-lit; the arrangement and the footnotes place the letters and papers in a fair, understandable context; the typography and architecture of the books maintain the quality of Gordon Ray's Thackeray." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 183:76 Ap '49 1500w

"Offers a valuable source for students of Keats and his works. The letters, to and from his family and friends during his lifetime, and between friends after his death, also provide facts and sidelights on the top literary figures of London of the time, as well as on the poet himself. . . The letters and comments are interesting reading in their own right."
+ Current Hist 16:169 Mr '49 70w

Reviewed by Edward Sackville-West
New Statesman & Nation 38:304 S 17 '49 2250w

"There are no letters from Keats in the collection, which is entirely made up of the correspondence of his family and friends, but it is invaluable for a study of the poet's life and of the growth of his reputation after his death."
+ New Yorker 25:103 Ap 23 '49 80w

Reviewed by H. W. Garrod
Spec 182:826 Je 17 '49 1100w

"Perhaps of most interest to the general reader will be the editor's brief biographies of all the important figures in the Keats circle. As with the members of all such circles, their quarrels, jealousies, and conflicting statements have made the truth about some of them almost impossible to arrive at. Professor Rollins' sketches are models of fair-mindedness."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:52 Mr '49 240w

ROMANOFF, ALEXIS LAWRENCE, and ROMANOFF, MRS ANASTASIA J. (SAYENKO). Avian egg [il. by A. L. Romanoff]. 918p $14 Wiley

598.2 Birds—Eggs and nests 49-1116

A treatise on all available knowledge on the bird egg, particularly the hen's egg. The book is divided into three parts. Part one covers the laying, formation, external characteristics, structure and abnormalities of the egg. The second part deals with the chemical and physical properties of the egg. Section three takes up the egg's value as food, a discussion of methods of preservation, and industrial uses. Bibliography. Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 34:20 Mr '49

"The result of a lifetime of study and work, this book is probably the most complete, exhaustive, critical, and factual treatise ever written on the subject of birds' eggs. Aside from the vast amount of material, well digested and coordinated, and clearly presented, the book includes a very extensive bibliography on the subject, and should be a most useful volume for anyone working with avian eggs either in the so-called 'pure' fields of biology or in the 'applied' ones of poultry husbandry."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:265 Je '49 280w

RONNE, FINN. Antarctic conquest; the story of the Ronne expedition, 1946-1948. 299p il maps $5 Putnam

919.9 Antarctic regions. Ronne-American antarctic association expedition, 1946-1948
49-11486

An account of Commander Ronne's expedition to the Antarctic regions, which left Texas in January, 1947, and returned fifteen months later. They explored 250,000 square miles, and made 14,000 aerial photographs. Besides the twenty men of the expedition, Commander Ronne's wife and the wife of a pilot accompanied them. Index.

Booklist 46:95 N 15 '49

"The Commander's book is exceptionally well illustrated and written both with a desire to intrigue the casual reader and supply information and warning to those who follow him 'way down under.' There is plenty of adventure included, though none of it led to any major difficulty." H. B. Nichols
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 13 '49 390w

"If the expedition itself was a model undertaking, so is the book a model presentation—forthright, incisive, illumined with touches of humor and with the underlying feeling for the wilderness that bespeaks the true explorer."
+ Geog R 40:154 Ja '50 1000w

"The present book is a running human account of the challenges met, and the trials endured, in the achievement of those results. While it is not without its highlights of adventure . . . the story happily lacks that inflated human-interest touch which only too often bemuses the reader with romance while also diverting his mind from the workmanlike quest for solid results. Indeed, Mrs. Ronne and Mrs. Darlington, who accompanied the expedi-

RONNE, FINN—Continued
tion as the first women in history ever to winter in Antarctica (or perhaps even to set foot on the continent), are dealt with only sporadically, almost as a matter of course, and in connection with their work as expedition members—the one as secretary and correspondent and the other as librarian and photographer-assistant." E. P. Hanson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 D 25 '49 1050w

Reviewed by Russell Owen
N Y Times p20 N 6 '49 400w
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 1 '50 270w

ROONEY, PHILIP. Golden coast. 227p $2.50 Duell
49-7236

Romantic story of the sea in the days of the Barbary pirates. Rick Sheridan, a Dublin shipbuilder's son, built the Ouzel, and sailed on her against his will, staying thru the ship's five-year adventure with the pirates. Reaching Dublin at the end of his rope, his object is to go to sea again, as soon as he can find a post; but old misunderstandings are cleared up at last, and Rick finds he is on land to stay.

"The writing beguiles the reader and he may not notice that the book lacks depth."
Booklist 45:193 F 1 '49

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg
Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 3 '49 230w
Kirkus 16:602 N 15 '48 140w
Library J 74:1558 O 15 '49 20w

"The plot seems hackneyed, but this is a fair story with good sailing ship background, and is particularly suitable for young people's collection." H. A. Wooster
+ Library J 73:1743 D 1 '48 70w

"For suspense and excitement there are some good fighting scenes, narrow escapes from storms and other sea hazards—and two faithful heroines. Unfortunately, the heroines, like most of Mr. Rooney's characters, are quite stock. Of Rick's loves, it is his love for the Ouzel that we believe in most. And it is the Ouzel that becomes the novel's chief source of interest." Samuel Withers
+ — N Y Times p21 Ja 30 '49 140w
+ New Yorker 24:69 Ja 29 '49 120w

ROOS, KELLEY, pseud. of AUDREY (KELLEY) ROOS and WILLIAM ROOS. Triple threat; three Jeff and Haila Troy mysteries. 249p $2.50 Wyn
49-11027

" 'Triple Threat' includes three novelettes, originally published in American Magazine, one set in a publisher's penthouse, one on a Pittsburgh showboat, and one in a Fifth Avenue School of Beauty." (N Y Times) In each one a murder case is solved by Jeff and Haila Troy, amateur sleuths.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun N 4 '49 40w

"Compact, if a little contrived."
Kirkus 17:563 O 1 '49 70w

"The Troys pursue their familiar airy way through these rather slim mysteries."
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 O 16 '49 60w

"In each case, the background is well realized, and the plotting technique meets the highest professional standards." A. B.
+ N Y Times p27 O 9 '49 170w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p32 D 4 '49 50w

ROOSEVELT, ELEANOR (ROOSEVELT) (MRS FRANKLIN DELANO ROOSEVELT). This I remember. 387p il $4.50 Harper
B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano 49-48262

This second volume of Eleanor Roosevelt's autobiography begins with the days before Franklin D. Roosevelt's first term as governor of New York and ends a short time after his death. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks
Atlantic 185:82 Ja '50 600w
Booklist 46:2; 96 S 1 '49; N 15 '49
Bookmark 9:54 D '49 40w

Reviewed by E. T. Douglas
Chicago Sun p10X N 6 '49 400w

Reviewed by Walter Trohan
Chicago Sunday Tribune p23 N 13 '49 600w

"Mrs. Roosevelt's book is absorbing reading, chiefly for intimate glimpses it gives of the democratic way of life at the White House during a period of expanding contact with a shrinking world. It leaves still to be written a real appreciation of Eleanor Roosevelt as a warmhearted person with a tremendous capacity for growth from mother and schoolmistress to the greatest stateswoman of our day."
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 7 '49 800w
+ Kirkus 17:445 Ag 15 '49 400w

"Wider in scope and content than This is My Story, undoubtedly it will be read with satisfaction by both foes and friends. An invaluable addition to the history of our crucial times. Well indexed. Recommended for general purchase." H. S. Taylor
+ Library J 74:1674 N 1 '49 100w

Reviewed by J. N. Rosenau
+ Nation 169:496 N 19 '49 1350w

"The quality of Mrs. Roosevelt's wonderful book is not easy to describe in words as simple as her own. It looks plain, unadorned—'just as I am without one plea.' But again and again, in reading it, one is obliged to pause and wonder how this or that effect can be achieved with language apparently so usual, manipulated by an author who is not a stylist. The conclusion imposed is that in this case the words themselves, the structure and style and even the content, are all subordinate to the character of the author, and therefore it is from the character of the author that the pervading sense of great beauty arises." Vincent Sheean
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 N 6 '49 2200w

"In this age of papier-mâché memoirs . . . it is almost shockingly delightful to read a book which could have been written by absolutely no one else in the world than the great and important figure whose name is signed to it, which is flavorful, characteristic, and moving. But since the name signed to it is that of Eleanor Roosevelt, no one is particularly surprised. This is just what we expect of Mrs. Roosevelt." Elizabeth Janeway
+ N Y Times p1 N 6 '49 1700w
+ New Yorker 25:133 N 5 '49 220w

Reviewed by Gordon Pates
San Francisco Chronicle p29 N 20 '49 500w

"Its fascination comes almost less from its sidelights on Franklin D. Roosevelt than from its candid and beguiling revelation of a woman who is in her own right one of the most remarkable figures of our time." Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.
+ Sat R of Lit 32:12 N 5 '49 1400w
Springf'd Republican p8C N 27 '49 800w

Reviewed by Beulah Amidon
Survey 85:686 D '49 480w
Time 54:108 N 21 '49 1000w

"Wise, penetrating, and in parts, deeply moving."
+ Wis Lib Bul p7 N '49

ROOSEVELT, KERMIT. Arabs, oil and history; the story of the Middle East. 271p $3.50 Harper
956 Arabs. East (Near East). Petroleum industry
49-8768

A discussion of political and social conditions in Egypt, Arabia, Iran, Afghanistan, based partly on the author's experiences as a State Department representative (during the war years), partly on a trip made thru the Middle East in 1947 as executive director of the Committee for Justice and Peace in the Holy Land.

Booklist 45:311 My 15 '49

Reviewed by Keith Wheeler
Chicago Sun My 11 '49 700w

"Mr. Roosevelt has written on a vitally important subject a book that no student of Middle Eastern questions should fail to read." Egon Kaskeline
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 27 '49 450w

Foreign Affairs 28:169 O '49 80w

"This is an individual accounting, worthy of note because of its less specialized approach, its wider and deeper interest in allied questions, its greater readability."
+ Kirkus 17:166 Mr 15 '49 210w

"Of the books on the Near East which have been published in the last couple of years, this is one of the most readable and interesting." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 74:818 My 15 '49 100w

"As the title indicates, the author's major interest lies with the Arabs, although Turkey, Iran, Afghanistan and especially Israel also come in for their share of attention. But contrary to the promise of the title, less is said here about oil than the situation would warrant; and the book has relatively little to do with history in the full, three-dimensional sense of the term. Style and emphasis, too, appear better suited to a series of popular magazine articles than to a broader canvass. Nevertheless, the issues involved are of such obvious importance that they will bear restating more than once, and on more than one level." E. A. Speiser
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 29 '49 1200w

"This grandson of T. R. knows his Middle East and, what is more rare, he knows how to write about it. It is refreshing indeed to read at last a coolheaded, impartial and thoroughly knowledgeable summary of the lands, peoples and problems of this vital area." C. W. Weinberger
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 22 '49 750w

Reviewed by P. L. Hanna
Sat R of Lit 32:27 Jl 16 '49 700w

Reviewed by Frederick Reinstein
Springf'd Republican p8C My 8 '49 500w

ROPER, WALTER FREDERIC. Experiments of a handgunner. 202p il $4.50 Stackpole & Heck

623.443 Firearms 49-1218

"Series of experiments by designer and consulting engineer on pistols and revolvers: trigger pulls, sights, stocks, safeties, etc." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 45:277 Ap 15 '49

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 74:379 Mr 1 '49 20w

ROPS, HENRY DANIEL-. See Daniel-Rops, H.

ROSE, ARNOLD MARSHALL. Negro's morale; group identification and protest. 153p $2.50 Univ. of Minn.

325.26 Negroes—Moral and social conditions 49-48668

"Dr. Rose, who is Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of Minnesota, makes the first attempt to fill a significant gap in race literature with an analysis of Negro group identification among Negroes and the central theme is that the trend among Negroes over the last forty years has been from low morale to high morale. Beginning with the days of slavery, he traces the development of group identification among Negroes and the factors which have served as blocks to this growth." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:152 Ja 1 '50

"A well-sourced, well-coordinated probe, with an extensive bibliography. Too bad it comes into a saturated-therefore-slow market."
+ Kirkus 17:535 S 15 '49 130w

Reviewed by B. M. Murphy
N Y Times p28 Ja 8 '50 410w

ROSE, ARNOLD MARSHALL, and ROSE, CAROLINE (BAER). America divided; minority group relations in the United States. 342p $4; text ed $3 Knopf

323.173 U.S.—Race question. U.S.—Foreign population 48-9862

A survey of racial, religious, and national minorities: their political, economic, legal, and social positions in American life today. Bibliography. Index.

"The lasting impression of the reader is of the analytical clarity and unceremonial bluntness of the argument rather than of its literary elegance. The book will go a long way in meeting the needs of undergraduate students of American race relations." Ernest Manheim
+ Am J Soc 55:423 Ja '50 420w

"A book which will be highly useful to those seeking an introduction to the facts and problems concerning minority groups in this country." D. B. Truman
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:821 Ag '49 700w

"The book is written in a clear and highly readable style and is thought-provoking. The analysis of the various types of discrimination is excellent, as is that of the problems faced by the Negroes and Jews. On the whole, despite its shortcomings, the book represents a lucid exposition of a complex problem and contributes considerably towards its clarification." Samuel Koenig
+ — Am Soc R 14:435 Je '49 1200w

Booklist 45:188 F 1 '49

Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 74:57 Ja 1 '49 110w

Reviewed by Carey McWilliams
Nation 169:236 S 3 '49 1150w

"Among the new volumes on minorities in the US, that of Arnold and Caroline Rose stands out as a brief but well-organized introduction to the whole vexed question." R. A. Schermerhorn
+ New Repub 121:33 N 14 '49 1100w

"There is no doubt that the Roses' work contains a great deal of the material essential to an understanding of the problem. But there is doubt that the work will actually impart that understanding. The book has these virtues: it is clearly written, free of the sociologists' usual jargon; it is comprehensive in coverage, and its authors are conscientious and well intentioned: they wish to prove prejudice harmful, to demonstrate that discrimination weakens the whole society. Unfortunately, the book is also marred by significant errors of detail and it staggers under the burden of unsupportable assumptions." Oscar Handlin
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 My 29 '49 900w

"Minority group relations have emerged as one of America's most acute social problems, one with international as well as domestic implications. Sociologists, social psychologists, economists, lawyers, journalists, governmental agencies, legislators and the minority groups themselves have expended an extraordinary amount of energy and money on its solutions. Mr. and Mrs. Rose, in 'America Divided,' perform a real service in expertly summarizing and evaluating this material in a popular but not folksy style." Morroe Berger
+ N Y Times p22 Ja 23 '49 900w

"Professor and Mrs. Rose have essayed this important task of mature popularization in the present systematic survey of American minority groups and their inter-relations. They are to be complimented for the successful way in which they have reduced the complex factual and theoretical data to proportions manageable by the layman." D. H.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 27 '49 220w

ROSE, ARNOLD MARSHALL—Continued

"This is a good book. . . But it has certain basic flaws which seriously mar its scientific character. The first of these is the authors' complete disregard of the nature of the 'in-group' and the 'out-group,' which is considered by most sociologists to lie at the very core of organized social life. . . The second major flaw is the reluctance of the authors, which they share with many well-intentioned writers, to face up to the realities of race. . . Lastly, the authors' treatment of the immigration question displays superficialities and confusions. . . But the book nevertheless is well worth reading." H. P. Fairchild

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:26 F 26 '49 750w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:242 Je '49 220w

ROSEBURY, THEODOR. Peace or pestilence; biological warfare and how to avoid it. (Whittlesey house publication) 218p il $2.75 McGraw

623.456 Bacterial warfare 49-3462

"Reveals contributions from wartime biological warfare research that may be published without damaging the national security. Written to help the general reader see possible ways in which BW may be controlled or eliminated. The author was chief of the Air-Borne Infection project at the U.S. Biological Warfare Headquarters at Camp Betrick, Md., during the war." Booklist

Booklist 45:350 Je 15 '49

Reviewed by H. B. Nichols
Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 6 '49 800w

Kirkus 17:201 Ap 1 '49 160w

Nation 169:142 Ag 6 '49 30w

"A clear, objective and yet compassionate treatment of a rather unpleasant subject. There will be many who do not like this book. Those who have enjoyed the privilege of being self-appointed priests of a new cult of superstition—germ warfare—and who have been waving it about like a poisoned chicken bone during the councils of state will not welcome the overthrow of their magic. . . And yet I think that most Americans, like myself, will be thankful indeed for this book." David Bradley, M.D.

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 My 29 '49 1000w

"While 'Peace or Pestilence' is written in a personal vein, it contains the full story of biological warfare. Written in a non-sensational style, it provides the first comprehensive picture of the potentialities of the use of such weapons. It is, therefore, an important book, which, along with the many reports on the atom bomb, rounds out the story of the role that science will play in the next war." L. J. Warshaw

+ N Y Times p5 Je 5 '49 850w

"A good popular summary of what bacteriological warfare means, despite the fact that the most important information on the subject has been held back by the military authorities." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ Sat R of Lit 32:12 Je 18 '49 700w

ROSENBERG, ALFRED. Memoirs; with commentaries by Serge Lang and Ernst von Schenck; tr. from the German by Eric Posselt. 328p $4 Ziff-Davis

B or 92 Germany—Nazi movement

These memoirs were written while Rosenberg waited in prison in Nuremberg for the trial which was to result in his conviction and death sentence. The editors have added extensive notes interwoven with the text though printed in smaller type.

Reviewed by Ernest Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 5 '49 550w

Current Hist 16:288 My '49 40w

Reviewed by Alfred Werner
New Repub 120:24 My 9 '49 900w

Reviewed by H. R. Trevor-Roper
N Y Times p17 F 20 '49 1200w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Mr 27 '49 180w

"He was hanged on October 16, 1946. But is he really dead? Many observers believe that Hitler with his armies has lost his war, but that Rosenberg with his 'philosophical crap' has not lost his by far. If only for this reason, the memoirs, although adding little new to what we know about Rosenberg's rise and fall, should be carefully studied." H. B. Kranz

Sat R of Lit 32:14 Ap 2 '49 1000w

ROSENBERG, ETHEL. Go fight City Hall. 255p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

49-8950

A light-hearted novel about Jewish family life in Brooklyn. The principal characters are Uncle Julius who loves the BMT, Mama whose housekeeping is confused and efficient, Hannah, well aware of Mama's intentions concerning her boy friends, and Howie who picks up Hannah and Uncle Julius on the subway and almost lives to regret it.

Booklist 45:289; 337 My 1 '49; Je 1 '49

Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 30 '49 150w

"Offers gentle, mild humor of unimpeachable authenticity."

+ Kirkus 17:159 Mr 15 '49 160w

"Though book never attains stature of well-integrated story, characters are vividly drawn and the Yiddish dialect is remarkably apt. Recommended as another facet of the Brooklyn picture and for its entertainment value." R. P. Tubby

+ — Library J 74:818 My 15 '49 80w

"For any one with a tender feeling for orthography, the curse of the dialect story is the grotesque phonetic spellings most writers of broken English resort to. Occasionally, though, you'll find an author with ear so sensitive that he can rely on the subtler rhythms of word order and sentence structure to reproduce a dialect in print. Ethel Rosenberg owns an ear like that. Her spelling is all Webster, the effect pure Pitkin Avenue." Richard Match

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 My 29 '49 450w

"The situations in the book, particularly Mrs. Rivkin's highly vocal evening at the theatre and Uncle Julius' venture in cemetery real estate, are cleverly wrought. Both are common experiences in Jewish communities and both are highly amusing. It is doubtful, though, whether the volume will have popular appeal. It has a peculiarly parochial flavor. It belongs in that category of books which are more likely to be enjoyed when the reader brings to the scanning some previous knowledge of the subject." Meyer Berger

+ — N Y Times p22 Je 12 '49 320w

"The dialogue and the gentle tempo reflect a little of the mood of Sholem Aleichem's classic narratives."

+ New Yorker 25:88 Je 4 '49 120w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 31 '49 200w

"Read 'Go Fight City Hall' for the sound and spirit, the wit and cantankerousness of Jews without money." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 32:29 Je 11 '49 700w

Springf'd Republican p4D S 25 '49 180w

ROSENBLUM, MARCUS. Story of Franklin D. Roosevelt; with drawings by Frances M. Ball and photographs. 52p $2 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano—Juvenile literature 49-10643

"The book carries the young reader from the former President's childhood days spent roaming the grounds of Hyde Park and on trips to Europe, through the years at Groton and Harvard to the end of his political career." Springf'd Republican

Booklist 46:146 D 15 '49

+ Kirkus 17:511 S 15 '49 90w

"The author of this simply told, factual account of Roosevelt's life is always careful to make fair statements on both sides of controversial issues. The nineteen photographs by Frances M. Ball are particularly interesting since they are not the ones most commonly known. Recommended for younger children." Anne Izard
+ Library J 74:1465 O 1 '49 60w

"To summarize Roosevelt's life and the time in which he came to power, in about forty pages of large type, is no easy task. This writer has been successful in making his short story readable for young people and in bringing both this complicated personality and recent history into a reasonable focus." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 N 6 '49 170w

Springf'd Republican p8B S 18 '49 120w

ROSENFARB, JOSEPH. Freedom and the administrative state. 274p $4 Harper
320.15 State, The. Liberty. Public administration 48-6309

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"Mr. Rosenfarb is trying to do too much on a very limited number of pages. His subjects range from the advantages of the British as compared with the American form of democracy to the role of the family in primordial society and to the intricacies of the Taft-Hartley Act. This broad approach prevents the author from concentrating the force of his reasoning on the decisive points but also makes his book very stimulating for anyone interested in the interrelationships of sociology, political science and economics." Carl Landauer
+ — Am Econ R 39:1323 D '49 550w

"[The author's] recommendations will not be readily accepted by all, but they certainly merit thought and criticism."
+ Columbia Law R 49:586 Ap '49 140w

"Although so many unfavorable things can be said about the book, it remains both readable and worth reading. There are many nuggets of valuable information, and in its very confusion it is a faithful portrait of contemporary American left-wing liberalism, eagerly advancing in all directions at once. There is, however, more to the work than that. The second section attains real insight and power." D. M. Wright
+ J Pol Econ 57:88 F '49 1200w

"What is new in this treatment of the subject is the laudable effort to make a synthesis of a large and variegated body of materials. It is perhaps in the discussion of labor relations that the author speaks with the clearest authority, but the scope of his reading and the diversity of his information is considerable. The bibliography and notes contain citations from the literature of anthropology, psychology, sociology, economics, political science, law, and public administration. Professional people in the field covered will follow the analysis with the most ready comprehension, but the study should be of interest also to the resolute general reader."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:343 S '48 290w

ROSENFELD, DAVID. Porcelain figures of the eighteenth century in Europe. 131p pl $5 Studio
738.28 Pottery 49-4142

Photographs of more than 200 characteristic porcelain figures of the eighteenth century, arranged according to the factories which produced the figures. There is an introductory study on the work of the leading ceramic artists of the period, and data on modelers, date of execution, and present location of each piece. Includes reproductions of factory marks. Index.

Booklist 45:371 Jl 1 '49

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 74:1325 S 15 '49 70w

"The photographs have been chosen with care and skill, but unfortunately the reproductions seldom give any real idea of the charm of the originals and the text contains no reference to the illustrations by which the uninitiated, to whom the book is addressed, may receive guidance."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p565 S 2 '49 330w

ROSENHAUPT, HANS WILHELM. How to wage peace; a handbook for action. 248p $2.95 Day
172.4 Peace—Societies 49-11726

A "how to" handbook which presents "ways to wage peace in your own community, in Washington, and in the United Nations, with addresses of organizations and a brief explanation of the make-up and objectives of each, programs, lecturers, etc." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 46:114 D 1 '49

"'How to Wage Peace' may well be the most important and useful handbook on the market today. Every frustrated and consciously futile man of good will should get a copy or have one given to him." A. C. Ames
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 Ja 15 '50 250w

"One often hears the easily discouraged, 'How awful—but there's nothing I can do!' This book is one more proof of the falsity of this facile dismissal of hope. It should receive the widest possible circulation at this urgent hour." W. G. Fletcher
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Ja 4 '50 480w

"A reference tool, and an exceedingly valuable one, a necessity for public libraries and certain kinds of organizations, useful for club libraries, where programs are planned, first aid to anyone seeking information on relief and service organizations, peace organizations, and so on."
+ Kirkus 17:525 S 15 '49 160w

"An important reference tool, a must for every library." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 74:1459 O 1 '49 110w

"The crying need for a handbook for action on the peace front has, at last, been met. 'How To Wage Peace' by Hans W. Rosenhaupt is a book which will be received with enthusiasm and appreciation, for it is the answer to every program chairman's, every organization leader's, every willing worker's question: 'What can I do?'" Julie d'Estournelles
+ Survey 86:39 Ja '50 460w

"This is definitely a reference tool and a valuable one, a must for public libraries."
+ Wis Lib Bul p4 N '49

ROSENHEIM, MRS LUCILE G. Kathie, the new teacher. 195p $2.50 Messner
49-6146

"Kathie is teaching seventh grade in a place of her dreams, a beautiful suburban town. But in both town and school, Kathie soon finds practical democracy lacking; she quickly tries to take steps to soften the line between those on the two sides of the tracks. Much is accomplished through her social studies program, 'Our Town,' also through the friendly guidance of Jim, who, of course, becomes her fiance on the last page." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

Booklist 46:50 O 1 '49

"We enjoyed Kathie's warm, outgoing personality and are glad to label this one of the better stories of its kind." A. R. Brooks
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 N 13 '49 200w

"An unusually good career story which tells about real people and is not overloaded with information or weakened by sentimentality." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:546 N '49 100w

Kirkus 17:364 Jl 15 '49 130w

Reviewed by Esther Gorey
Library J 74:1553 O 15 '49 30w

ROSENBLUM, L. G.—Continued
"Doubt its use as career material, but if budget permits it will be read by grades 8-10." E. A. Groves
Library J 74:1830 D 1 '49 80w

"Good stories about modern young school teachers are rare indeed, and this is a good one." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 O 30 '49 150w

ROSS, FRANK XAVIER. Young people's book of jet propulsion. 126p il $2.75 McBride
629.13338 Jet propulsion 49-43

Brief history of jet propulsion, with photographs of the latest air and navy experiments. For each pictured model the following data are given: builder, type of engine, weight, size, speed, special features of plane structure, and probable future use. No index.

Booklist 45:181 Ja 15 '49

"A chapter on the vital differences between rocket and jet planes is very good. Cutaway diagrams of power plant interiors make for clearness of text. Adults and boys interested in engineering aeronautics, or science fiction will find this book necessary. Well bound, good format. A MUST book." M. I. Ross
+ Library J 74:316 F 15 '49 130w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ja 30 '49 140w
Sat R of Lit 32:38 Mr 12 '49 90w

ROSS, IRWIN. Strategy for liberals; the politics of the mixed economy. 211p $3 Harper
338.91 Liberalism. U.S.—Economic policy 49-9513

"[This work] assumes that a mixed economy (blend of capitalism and socialism under government) offers the best solution to economic problems in the United States and sees the techniques of such an economy as well developed. Holds that the major problem facing us is the political one of making those techniques effective through the creation of a sound liberal movement looking toward economic stability and expanding freedom. After brief account of history of mixed economy, outlines specific political action to be taken—Congressional and Judicial reforms, strengthening of Presidency, etc." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 45:386 Jl 15 '49

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p8X Jl 24 '49 260w

Reviewed by S. R. Davis
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 14 '49 800w
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '49
Kirkus 17:200 Ap 1 '49 130w

"Thoughtfully presented with considerable feeling. More specific in its argument and proposals than most related material. Therefore, recommended." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 74:1027 Jl '49 140w

"Whether Irwin Ross's conclusions are right or not, he has done a service in raising long-range issues of strategy for those Americans, roughly called liberals, who occupy a position in politics often defined as a little 'left of center.'. . My objection to Ross's book is not that he tries to discuss basic issues but that he does not discuss them with much penetration or profundity. He assumes that what should be done is now known and that all that is necessary is to devise a strategy for putting the right groups in power. I think the most erudite still have a lot to learn about what should be done, and that even political strategy may benefit from a careful and painstaking study of political processes." George Soule
+ — Nation 169:351 O 8 '49 1650w

"If there is anything that liberals need it is strategy; and the title of Mr. Ross's book makes one eager to embark on its argument. The strategy that emerges is, disappointingly, that of a negative assault upon 'privileged' classes and groups, in pursuit of a concept known as the Mixed Economy." August Heckscher
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Jl 17 '49 600w

"Though a strong anti-Communist, Mr. Ross does not seem to have liberated himself from the Marxist clichés of social prediction. . . His historical parallels, when closely examined, seem to weaken rather than to strengthen his argument. . . Still, this is a valuable book, raising important questions. It represents the kind of adventurous, post-New Deal thinking which the liberal movement in America badly needs. Liberals may ponder Mr. Ross' recommendations with benefit." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.
+ — N Y Times p6 Je 26 '49 850w
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 7 '49 250w

"With a catchy title, this tract for the times presents a thesis more seductive than sound. . . The author begs the most important questions, and approaches his problems in a mood that is impetuous, imprecatory, and, secularly speaking, is impious. Could the temper of this perpetration be made somehow to prevail, the American people would meet their trials of peace and war without discipline, with romanticism, minus reserves, and lacking endurance." T. V. Smith
— Sat R of Lit 32:17 Jl 2 '49 800w

"Nowhere, to my knowledge, has the case for devoted and militant democratic action been more effectively stated. This is a very important book." H. W. Hintz
+ Survey 86:45 Ja '50 450w

ROSS, ISABEL. Margaret Fell, mother of Quakerism. 421p il $6 Longmans
B or 92 Fox, Mrs Margaret (Askew) Fell. Friends, Society of 49-10415

Life story of Margaret Fell, the wife of Judge Fell of Swarthmoor Hall in Furness, England. She became convinced of the Quaker doctrine while still a young woman, and after the death of Judge Fell married George Fox, the founder of the Society of Friends. To the end of her long life she was the moving spirit of the sect, and Swarthmoor Hall was the center of their early activities. The author is a direct descendent of Margaret Fell. Chronology. Index.

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p11 O 13 '49 600w

"Mrs. Ross's book is well documented but the very extent of its documentation has prevented it from quite fulfilling the description on the wrapper. It does not supply so much a portrait of a woman and a picture of an age as the material out of which such a picture could be created." R. V. Holt
Hibbert J 47:417 Jl '49 1100w

"Mrs. Isabel Ross has produced an exhaustive biography, based on much conscientious research and pious thought, which still leaves room for a shorter and more readable effort." Maurice Ashley
Manchester Guardian p4 Je 17 '49 370w

"Mrs. Ross has used the evidence with skill and patience. And yet Quaker virtue, so long sustained, begins ultimately (after about page 250) to pall. If only Mrs. Fox had died younger—say at 68—or if only Mrs. Ross had reduced some of those uniformly virtuous Quaker episodes! The book would not have suffered. It would still have remained, what it is now, a valuable work of scholarship on the seventeenth century." H. R. Trevor-Roper
+ — New Statesman & Nation 38:179 Ag 13 '49 950w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p23 N 27 '49 240w

"Isabel Ross's biography has the great virtue of being based upon an exhaustive familiarity with the voluminous manuscripts—particularly the indefatigable letters—that are the memorials of this career. Miss Ross quotes from them copiously. In fact, perhaps, Miss Ross has plunged too deeply into her source materials; she seems hardly able to survey the forest for all the trees. She uncritically accepts the Quaker experience as being exactly what the seventeenth-century worthies recorded. And, in telling the story exclusively in its own terms, she makes it difficult reading to the worldly analyst of today." Perry Miller

+ — N Y Times p18 O 2 '49 360w

San Francisco Chronicle p33 N 20 '49 310w

"Mrs. Ross's book does not attempt to present her subject with any dramatic or romantic overtones. She tells the life simply and straightforwardly, and the background is only lightly sketched. One's chief criticism is perhaps that the figure of George Fox, the dynamic magnetic pole about which the whole Swarthmoor family turned, is never rendered fully alive; yet, after all (it might be said), even when he and Margaret had become man and wife the course of their lives lay generally apart, and she herself had also a magnetic quality in her own right. If the figure of Fox remains somehow dim, we have by way of compensation a fascinating chapter dealing with the daily life of the complicated Swarthmoor household as revealed through surviving account books, and another on the Fell daughters and their fortunes which shows that this remarkable mother had a progeny not unworthy of her." J. W. Harvey

+ Spec 183:246 Ag 19 '49 450w

"Mrs. Ross sets Margaret Fell on a pedestal; there is absent the breath of criticism which might have brought the great figure to life. This is a long, conscientious and competent biography, but at the end Mrs. Fell is still elusive. . . We have the events; we have a detailed panorama of noble behaviour; but the actors are shadowy. The book, however, is valuable in giving a close picture of one aspect of that most complicated age. To Friends themselves it will be of paramount interest."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p384 Je 10 '49 1150w

ROSS, ISHBEL (MRS BRUCE RAE.) Child of destiny; the life story of the first woman doctor. 309p $3.50 Harper

B or 92 Blackwell, Elizabeth 49-10905

Complete biography of Dr Elizabeth Blackwell, the British-born, American-educated feminist, who was the first woman doctor of modern times. Bibliography Index.

Booklist 46:2; 46 S 1 '49; O 1 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 O '49

"A thoroughly worthwhile biography that never underestimates the integrity of its subject but does manage to soften what might have been a wholly austere picture of a dedicated life."

+ Kirkus 17:383 Jl 15 '49 180w

"Miss Ross' book is based on authentic sources. Readers will overlook occasional awkwardness of syntax. Recommended for general purchase." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 74:1318 S 15 '49 100w

Library J 74:1559 O 15 '49 30w

"An interesting story told in readable but somewhat journalistic prose."

+ — Nation 169:333 O 1 '49 80w

"This lively narrative of the first woman physician to be accredited in this country and Great Britain is of particular interest as a picture of changing times and the variety of isms and arts in which Elizabeth and her sisters and brothers shared in this country and in Europe." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 O 23 '49 750w

"Careful, interesting biography. . . Elizabeth's experiences at medical school and in the great Parisian hospital, La Maternité, are especially well presented." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p12 S 25 '49 460w

"Dr Blackwell was a pertinacious but completely unassuming woman, whose interests extended far beyond the field of medicine alone; in this biography all the various phases of her career are handled capably, if without any great stylistic distinction."

New Yorker 25:137 O 15 '49 140w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p31 D 4 '49 550w

Springf'd Republican p7C N 6 '49 300w

"In Ishbel Ross's biography of the first American woman doctor we have a very vivid account of how Elizabeth Blackwell came to study medicine, of the obstacles she encountered, and of the times in which she lived. Miss Ross has given the reader a social history of an era, based on wide research and sympathetic imagination." G. F. Alsop

+ Survey 85:614 N '49 700w

ROSS, JAMES BRUCE, and MCLAUGHLIN, MARY MARTIN, eds. Portable medieval reader; with an introduction. (Viking portable lib) 690p $2 Viking

808.8 Literature, Medieval 49-10606

Anthology of "the writings of men and women between the years 1050 and 1500. The aim of the editors is to give, by means of selections from contemporary reports, a picture of the whole structure of the Middle Ages. The less known chronicles have been used whenever possible. The language throughout is modern, most of the renderings of recent date, and the lover of medieval lore, who has not kept his reading up to the minute, will find numerous references to works of research with which he is not familiar. There is a chronological table, but no biographical notes and no index." (Commonweal)

Booklist 46:64 O 15 '49

Reviewed by C. W. Dunn

Canadian Forum 29:212 D '49 420w

"Provided with a scholarly and warmly human introduction, this is a delightful anthology." D. H. Moseley

+ Commonweal 50:589 S 23 '49 800w

"There are nearly a hundred and fifty passages from about a hundred writers. The thoughtfulness, artistry, and sympathy with which these have been arranged are matched by the qualities of the introduction written jointly by both editors." S. C. Chew

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p32 N 13 '49 600w

"Reflecting as it does a large cross-section of the habits and thought of the age, it is an admirable introduction to the robust life and the vigorous spirit which animated the period." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 29 '49 700w

ROSS, ZOLA HELEN. Bonanza queen; a novel of the Comstock lode. 358p $3 Bobbs

49-8076

Novel based on the life in and around Virginia City, Nevada, in the days of the silver boom. The heroine is beautiful Serena Courtelot, who wanted money and power, and did not scruple to use any means to get them.

"Zola Ross writes with keen enthusiasm of the roaring days of Nevada's Virginia City when the Comstock Lode was a world wonder. . . The story's style is undistinguished. But Rene's share in the history of the bonanza days . . . is stirring stuff in anybody's book." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p32 Mr 27 '49 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 Mr 27 '49 240w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 32:15 Jl 2 '49 130w

ROSSELL, MRS BEATRICE (SAWYER). Working with a legislature. 82p pa $1.90 A.L.A.

021.89 Library laws and legislation 48-9526

"Deals with how to go about securing passage of a good library Bill—what to do and what to avoid doing. Its sole aim is 'to offer a brief, practical guide to inexperienced librari-

ROSSELL, B. S.—Continued
ans and library trustees, and a quick review for the more experienced.' " Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 45:114 D 1 '48

"The treatment in the book is logical, and the step-by-step guides which are liberally provided should save a good deal of aimless waste of time and energy. Of particular importance are the many minor details covered by Mrs. Rossell which frequently mean success or failure in the passage of a bill." Emerson Greenaway

+ Library J 74:952 Je 15 '49 350w

"Much of Mrs. Rossell's advice could, of course, be applied to any group seeking to influence legislation, but it is because we have so few instances throughout the United States of state groups having conducted successful library campaigns that it would do most librarians a great deal of good to study this volume for the lessons it contains. Certainly this reviewer found it fascinating and rewarding reading." R. H. McDonough

+ Library Q 19:288 O '49 800w

Wis Lib Bul 45:10 Ja '49

ROSSITER, CLINTON LAWRENCE. Constitutional dictatorship; crisis government in the modern democracies. 332p $5 Princeton univ. press

321.8 War and emergency powers. Dictators 48-7284

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"Despite its inherent weaknesses and lack of historical perspective, there is a good deal of interesting material in Mr. Rossiter's volume which is both useful and stimulating. What Mr. Rossiter needs is more history and less law, and his future work will gain immensely if it will develop in that direction." William Ebenstein

+ — Am Hist R 54:562 Ap '49 1150w

"The author makes two general and six specific proposals of reform. They merit the serious consideration of all those concerned with the survival of American democracy in the critical times ahead." H. J. Morgenthau

+ Am J Soc 54:566 My '49 850w

"The work has some very definite weaknesses, which fall into three groups. The first is weakness of conception stemming from the use of the term 'constitutional dictatorship'; the author is misled into attempting to give significance to emergency measures by straining this erroneous concept. The second group consists of errors in judging the situation and constitutional life of the countries used by the author to build up his generalizations. The third group is comprised of faults of organization: it often seems as though the author had commenced with a strong generalization only to discover in the course of further writing that the generalization was unwarranted, whereupon, without changing it, he proceeds to riddle it with unsystematic qualifications. . . The most regrettable thing about the book is that so much good work should have been marred by errors of form and conception. The undertaking was too broad in scope, and it would have been more appropriate to call the book by its subtitle, Crisis Government in the Modern Democracies. But despite the flaws which we have indicated, it would be unjust not to praise the energy, tenacity, and intelligence which must have gone into the study of the vast amount of material here presented, from which one may learn a great deal." Herman Finer

+ — Columbia Law R 49:724 My '49 2350w

Foreign Affairs 27:330 Ja '49 30w

Harvard Law R 62:351 D '48 320w

"This is a thoughtful, scholarly, and well-written book. It is a work which offers some well-supported conclusions to the student and a note of warning to the public officials of constitutional states. It suggests and furnishes a model for other studies in the field of comparative government and public law on such topics as separation of powers and executive legislation. The postwar period has seen all too few attempts at the type of comparative analysis found in this excellent book." Taylor Cole

+ J Pol Econ 57:262 Je '49 800w

"As a whole, the study is a valuable contribution to comparative government."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:344 S '48 230w

"This is a work of great learning which will be of considerable value to students of politics and law, both for the mass of material it brings into focus and for the obligation it imposes upon the reader to reconsider certain basic constitutional ideas. . . This work purports to be an empirical study; that is to say, it confines itself to the 'facts,' telling us who exercised what power, for what reason and on what authority. But one supremely important consideration slips through the meshes of such a treatment, and that is the bearing of the various national myths upon all these matters. . . Nevertheless, one must repeat unequivocally that this is a work of wide scholarship which undertakes a task that has not previously been attempted in this form." C. H. Driver

+ — Yale R n s 38:549 spring '49 1250w

ROSSITER, CLINTON LAWRENCE, ed. Documents in American government. 346p $2.50 Sloane

342.73 U.S.—Politics and government—Sources 49-1136

"A textbook in American government, giving the text of 64 national documents, from the Declaration of Independence to the Labor-Management Relations Act. Rossiter (Cornell) suggests the need for reading source material rather than interpretive commentaries." (Current Hist) No index.

"Short, pithy, refreshing, entertaining, and exceedingly helpful introductory paragraphs for each chapter, and shorter introductions for each of the separate documents. He has the happy faculty of sorting out the significant and of making things fall into place. At the risk of missing the point of the book, this reviewer is tempted to observe that despite the superiority of the document over the hearsay evidence in a text, the hearsay evidence which Mr. Rossiter put into his collection is the best thing in it. One may lament that there is not more Rossiter, even if that had meant fewer documents." J. E. Stoner

+ Am Pol Sci R 43:846 Ag '49 280w

Current Hist 16:229 Ap '49 40w

ROTH, CECIL. Short history of the Jewish people. il ed rev & enl 470p $5; presentation autog ed $12 East & West lib, 114 E. 32d st, N.Y. 16

296 Jews—History [48-10277]

A new edition of this book which presents the history of the Jews from the days of Moses to the year 1945. Profusely illustrated. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:142 D 15 '48

"Well-written book gains in usefulness by rich pictorial material. Bibliographic appendix less satisfactory; should have been more inclusive. Recommended for public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 73:1666 N 15 '48 110w

"Mr. Roth's excellent book may be collated profitably with Dr. Sachar's history, recently recommended here. But the greater, antiphonal story, which all histories of Jewry tell, is that of a people who, century after century, in many lands, have managed to live a life within a life; an inner existence hedged by traditional spiritual walls that have proved inviolable." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 32:27 F 12 '49 290w

ROTH, CHARLES B. Professional salesmanship. 278p $3.50 McGraw

658.8 Salesmanship 49-2381

"Describes effective techniques for solving typical day-to-day sales problems and winning and keeping customers. Many of Mr. Roth's tips on the psychology of the sales situation should prove practical." (Management R) Index.

Booklist 45:387 Jl 15 '49
Management R 38:589 O '49 30w

ROTH, CHARLES B. Stimulating salesmen successfully. 348p $5; to schools $3.75 Prentice-Hall

658.8 Sales management 48-11868

"Proceeding on his theory that incentive is the priceless ingredient that distinguishes a star salesman from a mediocre one, Mr. Roth discusses dozens of tested ways to stimulate salesmen to exert their best efforts consistently. Contains many practical suggestions on training, sales meetings, contests, sales bulletins and letters, use of visual aids and props, and effective compensation planning." (Management R) Index.

Booklist 45:205 F 15 '49

"Recommended." Julian Sohon
+ Library J 74:824 My 15 '49 30w
Management R 38:237 Ap '49 50w

ROTHENBERG, ROBERT EDWARD. Group medicine and health insurance in action; introd. by George Baehr. 278p $5 Crown

614.2 Medical service. Insurance, Health 49-10662

"The Health Insurance Plan of Greater New York, the largest of its kind in the United States, was established in 1947. It provides voluntary, prepaid and complete medical service to more than 200,000 persons, functioning through twenty-six medical groups. The largest of these is the Central Medical Group of Brooklyn. This is a comprehensive report of that group's first two years of highly successful service and includes detailed studies of staff organization, the physical plant, statistics of use, doctor-patient relationship, community relationship, financial arrangements, and a plan for National Health Insurance." (Library J) No index.

Booklist 46:43 O 1 '49

"An important document for all concerned with this very-current issue, although addressed primarily to the specialist rather than to the general reader. Larger libraries will want to purchase." George Wakefield
+ Library J 74:1204 S 1 '49 140w

ROTHERY, AGNES EDWARDS (MRS H. R. PRATT). Joyful gardener; il. by Lee Vitale. 274p $4 Dodd

635.9 Gardens. Gardening Agr49-447

Essays on gardens and gardening with a distinct literary flavor. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:2; 60 S 1 '49; O 15 '49

"Agnes Rothery is one of those rare people who, wise in the realities of gardening craft, can transmit its happiness to others with contagious sincerity and charm." R. S. Lemmon
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p40 D 4 '49 180w
San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 27 '49 140w

"Mixes gaiety, humor and sentiment, and while she does not primarily tell her readers what to do in their gardens she does let them know how to enjoy not only their own but all gardens. And without realizing it the reader finds out many things about them." R. T.
+ Springf'd Republican p19A O 23 '49 180w
Wis Lib Bul p8 D '49

ROTHFELS, HANS. German opposition to Hitler; an appraisal. 172p $2.50 Regnery

943.086 Germany—Nazi movement. Germany—Politics and government 48-3753

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"This tightly packed little volume should be required reading both for students of recent history and for anyone concerned with the contemporary European scene. . . That Professor Rothfels did not attempt a more definitive work on the German opposition at this time is to be welcomed, for it was important to have this book now. Certainly he has contributed enormously toward providing the basis and the stimulus for further study of this problem." H. C. Deutsch
+ Am Hist R 54:598 Ap '49 800w
Foreign Affairs 27:336 Ja '49 20w

Reviewed by G. A. Craig
Pol Sci Q 64:283 Je '49 1000w

"Unlike most of the previous accounts of the anti-Nazi movements in Germany, Rothfels' book is not a fruit of service in the allied intelligence services or of participation in the attempts to overthrow the Hitler regime. It is a scholarly account, based upon a very comprehensive knowledge of published and unpublished sources. . . Rothfels' book certainly deserves thorough attention from all who are concerned with the future of Germany." Rudolf Heberle
+ Social Forces 27:325 Mr '49 1350w

"Some readers will doubtless feel that Professor Rothfels is too sweeping in his claims. . . Nevertheless, the evidence he presents should persuade American historians to be somewhat more critical of the wartime attitude toward the German problem. Quite apart from that, the book is not only a compact and readable description of the German resistance movement, but a very useful guide to the already extensive source material on the subject."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:92 Mr '49 280w

ROTHMANN, S. C., ed. Constructive uses of atomic energy, by Samuel K. Allison [and others]. 258p il $3 Harper

541.2 Atomic energy 49-5202

"Fourteen authoritative articles on the use of atomic energy in industry, medicine, and other non-military fields." (Nation) Chronology. Glossary. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:60 O 15 '49

"Although much of interest is available in the book, its organization leaves something to be desired." F. T. Barr
+ — Chem & Eng N 27:2796 S 26 '49 250w

"The book will be a gold mine for students writing papers, and it should appeal also to a large audience of adult readers." R. R. Hawkins
+ Library J 74:1332 S 15 '49 80w
Library J 74:1562 O 15 '49 30w

"A book for reference and study, rather than for general reading."
Nation 169:237 S 3 '49 40w
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 S 18 '49 170w
N Y New Tech Bks 34:65 S '49

"It is not a book to skim; you can't talk sense about atomic energy in terms that the careless reader can absorb with half his attention. But for those who are willing to read with concentration these 14 essays on peaceful aspects of the atom are well worth while." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 4 '49 1250w
Survey 86:46 Ja '50 40w
Wis Lib Bul p5 N '49

ROUCEK, JOSEPH SLABEY, ed. Slavonic encyclopedia. 1445p $18.50 Philosophical lib.

947 Slavs—Dictionaries 48-6489

"Editor and many contributors are natives of Slavic countries. Work consists to a great extent of many small factual entries, including especially all personalities of any importance to, or in any way connected with the Slavonic world. Stress is on Slavic nationals and culture in United States. Apart from the small entries there are long articles on topics such as history, art, literature, subdivided by countries. Most of the articles

ROUCEK, J. S.—Continued
are signed. Cross references but no bibliographies. Appendix: constitutions of Slavonic countries." Library J

"This is a valuable reference book on a part of Europe from which there is not an entirely free flow of current news, and concerning the cultural history of which the standard encyclopedias are not quite adequate. On some points it might have been brought down a little nearer to date, even allowing for the magnitude of the publishing job. It has Rodzinski still with the New York Philharmonic." W. E. G.
+ — Christian Century 66:989 Ag 24 '49 310w

Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 50:443 Ag 12 '49 800w

Current Hist 17:97 Ag '49 20w

"Recommended." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 74:1028 Jl '49 130w

New Statesman & Nation 38:370 O 1 '49 190w

ROUECHE, BERTON. Greener grass, and some people who found it. 213p $2.50 Harper

818 Occupations 49-8766

Articles from the New Yorker's "Reporter at large" columns describing visits to a mink ranch, a sugarbush, a Shaker village, a vineyard, a buckeye, a monastery, and farms devoted to the raising of ducks, oxen, herbs, donkeys, and potatoes.

Booklist 45:332 Je 1 '49

Kirkus 17:104 F 15 '49 130w

"Book's collection of facts about odd vocations can be really useful in libraries. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 74:661 Ap 15 '49 130w

"Readable but highly standardized New Yorker reporting."
Nation 168:717 Je 25 '49 30w

Reviewed by J. W. Krutch
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 My 22 '49 1050w

Reviewed by Morris Markey
N Y Times p6 My 8 '49 600w

"Mr. Roueché's theory of composition is to have something to say and to say it. His book is recommended to high-school and college English teachers and to people who enjoy reading good reporting about other people." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 32:33 Je 25 '49 140w

"Mr Roueche has a gift for the precise word, and the ability to establish the mood he has in mind, the atmosphere of his subject. . . This engrossing mixture of sights, sounds, smells, thoughts and feeling, besides being informative and fascinating, is spiced with herb of amused inquisitiveness." D. B. B.
+ Springf'd Republican p8C My 15 '49 330w

ROUNDS, GLEN. Ol' Paul, the mighty logger; being a true account of the seemingly incredible exploits and inventions of the great Paul Bunyan, profusely il. by drawings made at the scene by the author. 5th ptg rev 173p $2.50 Holiday

Bunyan, Paul—Juvenile literature 49-9464

"This edition contains all of the original, plus two new stories with illustrations." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1936.

Booklist 45:378 Jl 1 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Jl 2 '49 30w

"Excellent for storytelling. Recommended." Clara Adams
+ Library J 74:1035 Jl '49 60w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:52 N 12 '49 10w

ROUNDS, GLEN. Rodeo; bulls, broncs & buckaroos [il. by the author]. 157p $2.25 Holiday

917.8 Rodeos. Cowboys 49-11510

The story of the rodeo as it is on the Western ranches. Told for boys of ten to fourteen, and illustrated with over sixty of the author's black-and-white action drawings.

Booklist 46:130 D 1 '49

"Pictorially and factually excellent." B. J. Thompson
+ Cath World 170:211 D '49 20w

"Every detail of a rodeo is here from a description of headquarters to breathless reporting of trick roping and riding, wild cow milking, steer wrestling, wild horse racing, and clowning."
+ Chicago Sun p8X N 13 '49 150w

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 15 '49 210w

"There are plenty of excellent drawings, and heavy jokes. There is authentic stuff here, but it's still no Will James."
+ — Commonweal 51:190 N 18 '49 40w

"A good gift item for boys."
+ Kirkus 17:428 Ag 15 '49 120w

"Boys who want honest-to-goodness facts about the life of cowboys will get them from one who knows." Alice McQuaid
+ Library J 74:1539 O 15 '49 150w

Reviewed by M. B. Snow
Library J 75:112 Ja 15 '50 70w

"Mr. Rounds's action pictures, and on-the-spot quick sketches of cowboys and creatures in every possible position, are simply remarkable. It makes a neat little item to add to that already full young cowboy shelf, and study of it will make his play even more professional." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 15 '50 180w

"Any boy interested in cowboys, broncs and bulls will enjoy this vivid description of authentic Western rodeo and its varied program. . . This book is a good substitute for the real thing." J. W. McGill
+ N Y Times p28 N 13 '49 140w

"This book will be preserved by art-lovers for its sixty vigorous, dramatic drawings of horses and their riders in action." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:34 N 12 '49 50w

Wis Lib Bul p13 D '49

ROUTH, HAROLD VICTOR. English literature and ideas in the twentieth century; an inquiry into present difficulties and future prospects. 204p $3 Longmans

820.9 English literature—History and criticism A49-9824

"H. V. Routh traces the diverse currents and cross-currents which form part of the main stream of English literary thought in the present day, commencing with a chapter on the transition from Victorian to modern literature. . . In discussing pre-World War I literature, the author covers a host of figures (among them Kipling, Beerbohm, Hardy, Barrie, and Bridges) connected not only with poetry but also with the novel and the drama. Accounts are given of the particular aspect of an author's thought and philosophy as they contribute to the trends of modern humanism. To the discussion of each author is added a brief bibliography and a short biographical sketch; and in each case the literary and ideological background of the figure under consideration is stressed. A sizable portion of this book is devoted to literary developments between the two World Wars." (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

"In a day when so much criticism lacks objectivity, it is gratifying to find a critic so open-minded and receptive to modern trends as Mr. Routh. Apart from the vast repository of knowledge upon which he draws, there is, in his book, every indication of extreme sensitivity to the conflicting ideas, psychological trends, and emotional confusion inherent in present-day literature. For this reason, if for no other, 'English Literature and Ideas in the Twentieth Century' is to be wholeheartedly welcomed into the ever-growing corpus of modern literary criticism." J. L. Bradley

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 28 '49 420w

"This is an inventive book filled with a seemingly inexhaustible source of erudition, combining the best elements of traditional critical analysis with a breezy unliterary style. . . One cannot accept all the premises reached here that strike at fashionable opinions. But it is a lively experience and that's often a welcome excuse in literary criticism." Jules Schwerin

Sat R of Lit 32:38 F 26 '49 800w

ROWE, GUY, il. See Bible. Old Testament. Selections. In our image

ROWEN, RUTH HALLE. Early chamber music. 188p $3.50 King's Crown press

785.7 Chamber music 49-7942

"Directed toward the chamber music enthusiast and toward the scholar anxious to penetrate the bypaths of the formation of chamber music, this book carries the reader through the transformations which took place in chamber music from its emergence around 1600 to the early 1700's when its form became regularized. In a treatment with a topical rather than chronological approach, the author discusses developments in instrumentation and fashion of composition occurring in England, France, Italy, and Germany during this period." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"Author deals with a huge mass of material, both musical and literary, with assurance. Aimed, first of all, at the scholar but the knowledgeable enthusiast could well tackle it. A broad approach, touching upon social function and aesthetics as well as upon essential musical problems of medium, style and form." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 74:820 My 15 '49 130w

"Having read Mrs Rowen's master's thesis on the emergence of the string quartet, I have been looking forward to this publication of her doctoral dissertation done at Columbia University. I am happy to say that the new book is no disappointment. . . The book seems to me to be remarkably free of errors, although occasionally there are generalizations that raise questions. . . The study belongs in every well-equipped library and will reward its purchasers with much that is new and interesting about early chamber music." W. S. Newman

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 6:463 Je '49 1200w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 24 '49 190w

ROYER, FANCHON. México we found. 210p il $2.50 Bruce pub.

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel. Mexico—Social life and customs 48-9501

The author took her three daughters to Mexico and made their home there while she directed the making of historical films for the Catholic Film and Radio Guild. This is an account of their experiences.

"A very personal and rather sentimental account, generously sprinkled with Spanish words and phrases."

Booklist 45:156 Ja 1 '49

"A rather charming if rambling narrative."

+ Commonweal 49:262 D 17 '48 90w

Wis Lib Bul 45:86 My '49

RUARK, ROBERT CHESTER. One for the road; il. by R. Taylor. 253p $2.50 Doubleday

817 49-11462

Collection of irreverent essays on American life, in which the newspaper columnist considers such subjects as life in the country, women, personalities, gadgets, and the duck-billed platypus.

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley

Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 20 '49 350w

"There's a definite bite to his ideas, a rowdy corrective quality to his opinions, and a happy exaggeration in his style. The combination of illustrations by R. Taylor is quite in tone with the off center, often zany quality of this type of writing."

Kirkus 17:421 Ag 1 '49 130w

"Mr. Ruark's reporting is trenchant and truculent—never too pure or too pretty." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 O 23 '49 270w

"Most of Mr. Ruark's weaknesses are the usual frailties common to literary newspaper men. He is obliged to be gruff at regular intervals, whether the gruffness is appropriate or not (for sufferance is the badge of all his tribe). He is addicted to frequent coarse and carnal expressions (which were never permitted in his newspaper columns). But, on the whole, Mr. Ruark distinguishes himself by quite definite and original opinions about things in the world around him, and by an often vivid and entertaining way of expressing these opinions." Marion Hargrove

+ — N Y Times p16 O 23 '49 470w

"The selection having to do with the perils of drinking accessories is again Ruark at his best; but when he is obviously hunting copy as he is in his 'How To Vulcanize a Snake' he can be dull as well. The good thing about this collection however, is that there are only a couple of these. The others will keep you smiling, chuckling or even laughing outright." M. R.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 27 '49 250w

RUBIN, HERMAN HAROLD. Your life is in your glands. 192p il $2.75 Stratford house

612.4 Glands, Ductless. Personality 48-8958

"How your endocrine glands affect your mental, physical and sexual health, your appearance, personality and behavior." (Subtitle) Glossary. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '49

"[This book] does not attempt to answer all the questions but it does coordinate and present interestingly the knowledge already gained in the complicated field of endocrinology." A. H. Weiler

+ N Y Times p17 Ag 7 '49 110w

RUBIN, ROBERT. Book of camping; camping essentials for the leader; il. by Robert Hofsinde. 152p $2 Assn. press

796.54 Camping 49-8508

Guide to camping essentials, intended for parents, teachers, camp directors, counselors, and campers themselves. Based on the author's twenty years' experience as a camp director. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 45:278 Ap 15 '49

"In a simple, readable way, it covers every aspect of camp housekeeping, programs, administration and leadership." L. B. M.

+ Springf'd Republican p8B Mr 13 '49 190w

Survey 85:408 Jl '49 20w

RUBINS, HAROLD (HAROLD ROBBINS, pseud). Dream merchants. 496p $3.50 Knopf

49-6577

A novel based on the rise of the motion picture industry. Johnny Edge, who had ideas, and Peter Kessler who backed him, and Peter's daughter Doris who loved Johnny are the chief characters. From the nickelodeons to Hollywood the story of Johnny and his part in the movies is traced, until after Johnny's first marriage is ended, and he turns to Doris.

Reviewed by Dorothy Langley

Chicago Sun O 25 '49 360w

RUBINS, HAROLD—Continued

"It should make a good movie, for wise cutting will do what judicious editing could have done for the book. There is no reason or excuse for the incredible lack of taste displayed in the treatment of the various sex episodes, which are wholly superfluous to the narrative and are obviously only a bid for popularity. . . It is regrettable that a book with so much in it that is otherwise entertaining and tempered with warm humanity should have been allowed to lapse into such tastelessness." M. W. Stoer
+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 O 28 '49 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '49

"A long book, which never loses its hold on the rollercoaster momentum of this business, the energy, the excitement, the lure of the fast buck, the sometimes smart, sometimes sucker practises, and some of the good guys that went along with it."
Kirkus 17:441 Ag 15 '49 220w

"An absorbing, well written novel." George Freedley
+ Library J 74:1603 O 15 '49 100w

Reviewed by Richard Match
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 O 30 '49 650w

"It is an ingeniously constructed novel and, in the main, an excellently written one. But what distinguishes it from most of the fictional or semi-fictional stories of the movies is the author's almost heroic resistance to the temptation to caricature, rather than characterize, his people." F. S. Nugent
+ N Y Times p4 O 16 '49 750w

"The story is told in the first person present with third-person flashbacks and flashbacks within flashbacks, and the scenes carefully rotate melodrama, tear-jerking, and sex, with all the problems solved at the end by a banker with a heart of gold. There is, however, some interesting material about the business end of the movies."
— + New Yorker 25:110 O 29 '49 140w

"Any number of things could have happened to turn Mr. Robbins' novel into a 'B' novel. It is much to his credit that 'The Dream Merchants' is decidedly an 'A' job." E. D. D.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 N 27 '49 750w

"In terms of chronology, geography, and the number of its printed pages, 'The Dream Merchants' is by far the most ambitious novel ever to be fashioned around the American motion-picture industry. . . Paradoxically, its verisimilitude is a source of weakness as well as strength, for while the upward climb of immigrant shopkeepers to positions of power in the industry of mass entertainment makes colorful history and entertaining reading, Mr. Robbins never quite succeeds in re-creating them as vital fictional characters." Budd Schulberg
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:18 O 29 '49 1050w

"Where Author Robbins writes as chronicler he has interesting things to say; where he begins to function as novelist he is simply depressing."
Time 54:109 O 24 '49 390w

RUDHYAR, DANE. Modern man's conflicts; the creative challenge of a global society. 228p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

901 Civilization 48-9107

"Art critic, composer and psychologist, Dane Rudhyar here seeks to transform the present 'civil war of man' into a 'prelude to a global peace.' In the words of the subtitle, this is 'the creative challenge of a global society.'" (Christian Century) Index.

Reviewed by C. D. Brodhead
Christian Century 66:271 Mr 2 '49 700w

"A significant claim is made in this book for modern man's attention and loyalties. But it lies buried beneath a conglomeration of bold-faced terms . . . innumerable instances of terms and sentences in italics or quotation marks (e.g., 'atomic bomb'), and vague metaphors which range from fire to fecundation." H. S. Fries
Crozer Q 26:154 Ap '49 1000w

RUFSVOLD, MARGARET IRENE. Audio-visual school library service; a handbook for librarians. 116p il $2.75 A.L.A.

025.177 School libraries. Visual instruction 49-10666

"Miss Rufsvold's handbook is designed to encourage library sponsorship of the school's audio-visual center and to guide the librarian in the evaluation, administration and distribution of films, slides, records, maps, etc. . . It is not concerned with a reporting of present practices, but gathers together the tried and mature thought of leaders in the audio-visual field. For the few librarians whose audio-visual procedures are well established, the bibliographies of books, pamphlets, periodicals and film catalogs are sufficient reason for the book's purchase. Also included are source lists of U.S. Government films, sources of equipment, and a directory of producers and distributors." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 46:28 S 15 '49

"This handbook will be welcomed by all librarians concerned with non-book materials. It is concise throughout, yet contains adequate description of methods to serve as a working guide. . . The first chapter on the role of the librarian as an audio-visual leader should be especially inspiring to the school librarian just taking on these duties. Indeed, for the beginner the handbook is indispensable." Elizabeth Andersen
+ Library J 74:1310 S 15 '49 350w
Wis Lib Bul p15 D '49

RUGOFF, MILTON ALLAN, ed. Harvest of world folk tales; with il. & decorations by Joseph Low. 734p $3.95 Viking

398.2 Folklore 49-11088

About two hundred folk tales collected from nineteen different sections of the world. Stories are grouped under the headings: African; American; American Indian; Arabian and Turkish; Chinese; Egyptian; English; Finnish; French; German; Greek; Indian; Irish; Italian; Jewish; Latin American; Russian; Scandinavian; Spanish. Index.

Booklist 46:91 N 15 '49

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Chicago Sun p4X Ja 1 '50 160w

"There is no system in this selection. You find stories from the American Indians, from Chinese, Egyptian, Arabian, Turkish and Greek literature, but not one from the rich folklore of the Portuguese, the South Slavs, the Hungarians and the Japanese. Nazi readers will be glad to know that the Flemish stories of Till Ulenspiegel are included as 'German.' . . Though we might prefer a more systematic anthology, we have to admit that we find in this book many stories worth reading. I am especially fond of the Italian section, with its stories from Strapola's Pleasant Nights and Basile's Pentamerone." Max Fischer
— + Commonweal 51:136 N 4 '49 280w

"The versions of the classic tales are considered the best available. While the book is too heavy for easy handling it will be most useful for reference service in libraries and schools." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:541 N '49 90w

"This is a superb job, and so comprehensive, that the public library with funds too limited to represent Botkin and Ben Clough adequately, need not feel cheated with this volume."
+ Kirkus 17:355 Jl 1 '49 190w

"Includes most of the stories required by college courses in comparative literature of folktales. This I believe is the book's chief value —and chief liability—because it follows the academic lag in folklore knowledge. Ireland, recognized by folklorists as the richest European folktale region, is represented by only five items; England, admittedly weak, has fourteen. Also greater part of contents are already easily available, coming as they do from a relatively small group of standard collections." E. L. Lewis

— Library J 74:1603 O 15 '49 130w

"People who are looking for a book to take to that desert island can give up their search. Mr. Rugoff's huge collection of folk tales . . . should fill an unimaginable stretch of leisure, entertain the most exacting palate, and offer rich stuff for speculation when we are in a philosophic mood." Marion Lowenthal

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 D 4 '49 1200w

"Though designed for popular use, this is an unusually comprehensive and thoughtfully selected collection of folk tales. . . There is a complete representation of the various categories of legend as well, including parables, fairy tales, drolls, fables, fantasies, ghost stories, and all the rest. Beyond this richness of substance, the book is distinguished from most of its kind by Mr. Rugoff's informative commentaries." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p36 O 9 '49 360w

New Yorker 25:91 Ja 14 '50 140w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 5 '49 150w

"Very valuable collection." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 32:23 N 12 '49 220w

Springf'd Republican p8C N 13 '49 270w

RUHEMANN, HELMUT. Artist and craftsman; contrast, similarity, influence; sixty-eight reproductions in colour and monochrome ptd. in photogravure. 79p $3 Chanticleer

706.9 Art. Arts and crafts 49-7966

A study of the contrasts, similarities, and mutual influences of arts and crafts, from a Chinese painting of A.D. 1079 to a silk scarf designed by Matisse in 1947. The text is written by the lecturer in charge of the Technology department at the Courtauld institute of art.

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 74:1325 S 15 '49 50w

"An intelligent, admirably presented study. The Dutch reproductions are excellent." Lincoln Kirstein

+ New Repub 120:28 Ap 18 '49 50w

New Yorker 25:108 Ap 16 '49 140w

RUITER, JACOB H. Modern oscilloscopes and their uses. 326p il $6 Rinehart

621.38413384 Cathode ray tubes 49-11901

"A semi-technical book which explains the fundamental principles of the cathode ray tube and how these are put to use in the oscilloscope. About half of the space is devoted to specific uses of the oscilloscope as in the adjustment of radio and television receivers, the monitoring of radio transmitters, and the testing of photographic shutters." (Library J) Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins

Library J 74:1915 D 15 '49 80w

"A clear and practical account of the construction, operation and industrial uses of oscilloscopes. . . Although the fundamentals of electrostatics are briefly discussed, the book requires a background knowledge of electricity and general physics. It is intended for users of oscilloscopes rather than specialists in the field."

N Y New Tech Bks 34:84 N '49

RUNBECK, MARGARET LEE. Answer without ceasing. 333p $3 Houghton

264.1 Prayer 49-11207

Beginning with a brilliant young scientist-neighbor, the author describes the power of faith and prayer on the problems of everyday life. The boy, Jeff, was tired of living when he first came to her for help. She used case histories of the power of prayer, Christian Science, Moral Rearmament, and finally Alcoholics Anonymous, before she found the answer.

Booklist 46:114 D 1 '49

Kirkus 17:495 S 1 '49 100w

"Written in simple winning and modern style, this book will interest and inspire many who usually avoid religious reading." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 74:1459 O 1 '49 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 O 16 '49 100w

"Writing in a warm, conversational style, the author strives to show that people who reject religion because it is steeped in ancient traditions and folklore are missing the important fact that 'God's a modern, and He'll always be a modern. Man may lapse into temporary obsolescence, but God never will.' " Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p38 O 23 '49 140w

Reviewed by J. W. Culver

Springf'd Republican p8B D 18 '49 420w

"Will interest and inspire many who usually avoid religious reading."

+ Wis Lib Bul p4 N '49

RUNBECK, MARGARET LEE. Pink magic. 231p $2.75 Houghton

49-9369

Short novel in which a bright sixteen-year-old girl describes her adventures while on a tour of Mexico.

Booklist 45:319; 359 My 15 '49; Je 15 '49

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

— Cath World 170:81 O '49 150w

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Ag 6 '49 60w

"Lambie's success should gladden the heart. But somehow it doesn't. For her single-minded pursuit of boys serves to highlight the spuriousness of a general contemporary American assumption—that 'popularity,' beginning in adolescence, is the norm and standard of success. . . For it is sadly true that Lambie and her friends are simply stereotypes in the tradition of this most superficial concept. They betray hardly an intimation of the most valid, significant, and universal characteristics of awakening maturity; the growing identification with deeper areas of meaning in life, the sometimes painfully acute sensitivity, the immense, often practical, idealism."

— Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 16 '49 470w

"There's a certain amount of humor, corny humor to be sure, and the sustained level of adolescent thinking is set by very arbitrary use of current lingo."

Kirkus 17:216 Ap 15 '49 180w

"A good, light—very light—longish short story." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 74:818 My 15 '49 80w

Library J 74:1558 O 15 '49 50w

" 'Pink Magic' is that uncommon find, a thoroughly light novel that does not try to be anything else, even sentimental. Moreover, though I am aware of the perils of predicting teen-age taste, I think it will be relished by youngsters themselves as well as their elders. While neither is likely to add much to their knowledge of art or Mexico, both stand to gain considerable enlightenment and much amusement from Lambie's picture of the business of being young." David Tilden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Je 19 '49 500w

"Mrs. Runbeck makes her Amazon-size heroine a wholesome, romantic lass with a great capacity for getting in and out of trouble. 'Pink Magic' is amusing lightweight reading. It was high time someone did a novel about one of this generation's tall girls not endowed with Powers-model glamour and looks." Barbara Bond

RUNBECK, M. L.—Continued
+ N Y Times p16 Jl 17 '49 230w
Reviewed by N. G. Chaikin
Sat R of Lit 32:34 Jl 30 '49 360w
Wis Lib Bul 45:109 Je '49

RUNES, DAGOBERT DAVID. Letters to my son. 92p $2.75 Philosophical lib.
170 Conduct of life 49-10984

"Dagobert D. Runes, in letter form, expresses his views on numerous ethical and moral issues. He writes of such varied subjects as self-indulgence, friendship, prejudice and communism. . . Runes [is] a doctor of philosophy at the University of Vienna." Springf'd Republican

"Dr. Runes sets forth for his son in simple, mellow style some of his philosophical views. . . Recommended." C. W. Roth
+ Library J 74:1601 O 15 '49 100w

"Sound wisdom and positive faith are evidenced in many of these writings. One cannot read the book without sensing the author's feeling of at-homeness in the universe and his appreciation of the world of nature, the beauty and wisdom of the order and intricacy of the life processes about us and within us. . . But in the highly emotional passages he sometimes lacks the breadth and soundness of an inclusive morality. The essays often oversimplify complex problems and bring more of condemnation than understanding." A. D. Black
+ — Sat R of Lit 33:23 Ja 21 '50 650w

"Original, profoundly moving, sometimes profoundly disturbing by their bitterness, are these letters by a man who has trained his mind on the problems besetting our times."
+ School & Society 70:224 O 1 '49 30w
Reviewed by R. F. Henchey
Springf'd Republican p8C O 30 '49 170w

RUNNING, MRS CORINNE. When coyote walked the earth; Indian tales of the Pacific Northwest; il. by Richard Bennett. 71p $2 Holt
398.21 Folklore, Indian 49-11127

"These stories, originally dictated by elderly Indians to Professor Melville Jacobs, anthropologist of the University of Washington, have been adapted for children of the middle years by Mrs. Running. They tell how animals familiar to the Western forests—Coyote, Grizzly, Fox, Elk, Beaver and others—prepared the earth for the coming of the Indians. Led by Coyote, they set the seasons, determined day and night, brought fire to the earth, released the water supply." N Y Times

Booklist 46:130 D 1 '49
Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:538 N '49 80w

"Careful selection and faithful rendition adapt these to child level. Good story-telling material for libraries."
+ Kirkus 17:550 O 1 '49 120w
Reviewed by M. A. Herr
Library J 74:1918 D 15 '49 80w
Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 8 '50 90w

"Inherent in the stories are the imagination, simplicity, and deep wisdom of a primitive people, and they are valuable as a contribution to the folklore of a region heretofore neglected." E. H.
+ N Y Times p24 N 13 '49 110w
+ San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 13 '49 100w
Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:24 N 12 '49 20w

"Genuine folk material, and founded on authentic Indian actions and lives." S. M. N.
+ Springf'd Republican p19A O 23 '49 120w
Wis Lib Bul p13 D '49

RUNYON, DAMON. Runyon first and last; foreword by Clark Kinnaird. 255p $2.75 Lippincott 49-9949

A collection from the writings, both early and late, of Damon Runyon.

"The book reflects harder and more serious work, and a good deal more imagination, than most anthologies do. Its editor, Clark Kinnaird, has introduced it with the best capsule life-and-study of Runyon that has yet appeared. He has begun the collection with a couple of good, recently-written stories in the last and most popular Runyon manner. . . Then, having dredged old newspaper and magazine files for forgotten pieces by the early Runyon—the young man still fresh in New York from the Rocky Mountain country where he had been raised—he has made out a clear, compact case for his writer as something more than a glib satirist with an infectious, but made-to-order Broadway style." John Lardner
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 31 '49 600w

"To readers who have always loved Runyon —any bit of Runyon—every line in the book will squirt laughs and chuckles." Meyer Berger
+ N Y Times p4 Ag 21 '49 380w
Reviewed by John Lardner
New Yorker 25:58 Ag 27 '49 2800w
Reviewed by Marc Rivette
+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Jl 31 '49 650w
Springf'd Republican p7B Jl 31 '49 90w
Time 54:68 Ag 1 '49 500w

RUSH, BENJAMIN, 1745-1813. Autobiography; his Travels through life together with his Commonplace book for 1789-1813; ed. with introd. and notes by George W. Corner. 399p il $6 Am. philosophical soc; Princeton univ. press
B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-10222
For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

Reviewed by A. F. Tyler
+ Am Hist R 54:883 Jl '49 650w
Reviewed by D. J. Boorstin
Nation 169:209 Ag 27 '49 850w

"Dr. Benjamin Rush did not write one of the great American autobiographies. His 'Travels through Life,' as the book was originally called, was too verbose, prejudiced, and fragmentary to take high rank. Nevertheless, the eminent Philadelphian had so interesting a career, knew so many great men from Washington and Franklin down to Robert Morris and James Wilson, and took such original views of both science and politics, that his record of his adventures has enduring value. We are indebted to the American Philosophical Society, and in particular to Mr. Corner, for the first really satisfactory edition ever published." Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 32:41 Ap 16 '49 230w

"Of special interest to readers in the educational profession are Rush's chapters on his educational experiences here and abroad. It is unfortunate that Rush did not elaborate on these and that he did not offer much light on the reasons for his drawing up his celebrated plan for a public school system in Pennsylvania. Amid the wealth of material brought together by Corner in his scholarly edition of Rush's life history are many quotable and citable items." W. W. Brickman
+ School & Society 69:175 Mr 5 '49 450w

"Of course the main interest of this book is for the American historian in general and the historian of American medicine in particular. But it has interest for the common reader, too. . . There are some admirable pen pictures of his fellow 'signers'—and there is a good deal of more or less conscious light thrown on human nature. . . The autobiography is edited with all that care and accuracy we have come to expect from American scholarship." D. W. Brogan
+ Spec 182:296 Mr 4 '49 650w

"Editorial partisanship is almost inevitable. It is perhaps somewhat extravagant to regard Rush as 'America's most distinguished eighteenth-century physician.' Mr. Corner is undoubtedly prejudiced in his behalf, but supporters of Kearsley might dispute this assertion as supporters of Cobbett will certainly deny the editorial conviction that Rush was always right and Cobbett always wrong. The editor is as elusive as was Rush himself on the mystery of Rush's association with the 'Conway Cabal.' But Mr. Corner's generally immaculate scholarship makes of this edition a major contribution to the materials of revolutionary history."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p263 Ap 23 '49 1200w

"His story, written in lucid and readable eighteenth-century prose, is that of a great but humorless man living in a stirring age."
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:53 Mr '49 250w

RUSH, WILLIAM MARSHALL (MARK LAYTON, pseud). Red Fox of the Kinapoo; a tale of the Nez Percé Indians; il. by Charles Banks Wilson. 279p $2.75 Longmans
49-9794

"Red Fox, handsome Nez Percé Indian, leaves the white man's school and returns to his people. As aide to the brilliant Chief Joseph as well as scout and interpreter, he was a valuable and daring member of a peaceful tribe that was forced to fight to retain their lands in the Pacific Northwest." Library J

"Older boys will find this one of the best of the Indian stories. . . Tense and realistic throughout, the story is enriched with many sound human values and fine descriptions of life in a mountain Indian camp. The whites win the battles but it is the vanquished Indians who will remain in memory as the true heroes."
+ Chicago Sun p6X N 13 '49 250w

Reviewed by Walter Havighurst
Chicago Sunday Tribune p16 N 13 '49 190w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p15 S 29 '49 240w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:538 N '49 120w

"A long, sometimes bitter, often exciting picture of Indian life and character, with realistic bits of humor and some romance, this ends with Chief Joseph's decision to surrender."
+ Kirkus 17:302 Je 15 '49 180w

"Sympathetic picture of Indian life, good characterization, and enough humor and action to make it palatable. Recommended for ages 12-15." M. M. Smith
+ Library J 74:1107 Ag '49 80w

Reviewed by Esther Gorey
Library J 74:1548 O 15 '49 70w

"Good writing, unusual characterization, excellent background details, make this an outstanding Indian story for those over twelve." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 13 '49 270w

"This is a sympathetic portrayal of an early 'minority group.' Although the author skims over so much ground that the story's dramatic possibilities are not always fully realized, he conveys the tumult and confusion of frontier warfare extremely well. In this fast-moving, informative novel, young people of junior-high age and up will acquire a fresh perspective on frontier days in the West." Howard Boston
+ N Y Times p26 Ag 21 '49 170w

"It is a worth-while book, well illustrated and edited." M. P. Allen
+ Sat R of Lit 32:45 O 22 '49 450w

"A well-told and exciting story."
+ School & Society 70:16 Jl 2 '49 30w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p8C N 20 '49 130w

RUSHMORE, HELEN. Lost treasure box; il. by Louis Glanzman. 184p $2 Harcourt 49-10607

Mystery story for grades 4-6.

"Although the search adds spice, this is not primarily a mystery; it is a warm and good-humored story of the adjustments of children and perceptive adults to each other in the forming of a new family."
+ Booklist 46:53 O 1 '49

"Third and fourth grade readers who have just 'discovered' mysteries will find this rather mild family mystery story to their liking."
+ Kirkus 17:509 S 15 '49 120w

"Recommended for ages 9-12." D. M. Blasco
+ Library J 74:1918 D 15 '49 50w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:26 N 12 '49 40w

Springf'd Republican p8C O 30 '49 110w

"Fourth to sixth graders will read this mystery plus lively family happenings, with enjoyment, aided by the clear readable type."
+ Wis Lib Bul p11 N '49

RUSK, HOWARD A., and TAYLOR, EUGENE J. New hope for the handicapped; the rehabilitation of the disabled from bed to job; foreword by Bernard M. Baruch. 231p $3 Harper

331.86 Disabled—Rehabilitation, etc. 49-3878

"By two members of the staff of the N Y Times, this is inclusive coverage of the progress, and the programs, concerned with the rehabilitation of the disabled which however does not fail to indicate the wide areas of neglect. In this survey of the various types of disability which affect one out of seven in our male working population, considered here are the military services and their physical reconditioning programs; the Veterans Administration, the help and the services they provide; the disabled civilian—the 'forgotten casualty' of our time—and the incidence—350,000 per year, and here particularly there is a need for funds and facilities; and particular afflictions which require particular therapies, tuberculosis, cardiac ailments, diabetes, cancer, paralysis, cerebral palsy, surgery patients and accident victims, etc." (Kirkus) Index.

"The authors, Dr. Howard A. Rusk and Eugene J. Taylor, combine an encyclopedic knowledge of their subject with an ability to discuss it in terms the layman can understand. Case histories throughout the book offer a frame of reference on which handicapped persons can predicate their own hopes for physical restoration, and medical and social service personnel will gain a greater understanding of the field of rehabilitation from the social and historical analyses presented." H. H. Kessler
+ Am J Pub Health 39:1358 O '49 330w

Booklist 45:368 Jl 1 '49

"The case illustrations give this both its human and hopeful value, and the naming of particular places for particular treatments give this its usefulness for those personally involved."
+ Kirkus 17:199 Ap 1 '49 170w

"No dull telling but competent medical journalism by two New York Times men. Recommended for all but the smallest collections." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 74:957 Je 15 '49 150w

"Armed with an arsenal of warmly human stories and coldly urgent statistics, the authors have produced the most comprehensive and authoritative summary yet of the problems and triumphs of medicine's youngest specialty." Richard Match
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Jl 31 '49 550w

"Not only a thought-provoking presentation of the national problem of disablement but also one of the most readable and informative works in the growing body of literature on the subject. Written in human terms and filled with heart-stirring episodes, it is a warm, vibrant picture of gallantry in the face of danger and, often, desperation." O. R. Ewing

RUSK, HOWARD A.—Continued
+ N Y Times p5 Je 12 '49 600w

"This book will furnish much 'new hope for the handicapped,' their relatives and friends; and employers prejudiced against the handicapped would do well in reading particularly the chapter on the advantages of hiring them. Their eyes will be opened by the forceful arguments to be found here." A. B. Simon
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 17 '49 470w

Reviewed by Justine Turner
Survey 85:399 Jl '49 200w

RUSK, RALPH LESLIE. Life of Ralph Waldo Emerson. 592p $6 Scribner

B or 92 Emerson, Ralph Waldo 49-9006

A life of the nineteenth-century essayist, based largely on his unpublished manuscripts, journals, and letters. Index and bibliography.

"Professor Rusk's is a fresh, sensible, and firmly realistic portrait, which presents to us an Emerson who is admirable and impressive but in whom one scarcely recognizes the radiant Philosopher-King of Van Wyck Brooks's devotional Life. . . The only criticism possible—perhaps an improper one—is that [Mr. Rusk] did not set himself a somewhat different task. His massive biography does not attempt a critical appraisal of Emerson as writer and thinker." C. J. Role
+ Atlantic 184:86 Ag '49 650w

Booklist 45:354 Je 15 '49

Reviewed by R. B. Nye
Chicago Sun My 26 '49 500w

"The austere New England moralist is almost impossible to bring to life in the written word, but for scholars this may well be a definitive biography."
+ Kirkus 17:196 Ap 1 '49 220w

"It seems as if this might be a definitive life, for the moment. Scholarly but not dull." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 74:734 My 1 '49 90w

Reviewed by Howard Doughty
Nation 168:687 Je 18 '49 600w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley
New Repub 120:17 Je 13 '49 1750w

"Mr. Rusk's imagination and selectiveness have not been equal to his industry. As a result Emerson's personality is too often obscured by a cloud of secondary facts. . . We learn the names and sailing dates of all the traveler's ships. But much of the time the face of the poet, the teacher and the prophet is hidden by this factual dust. Some of the secondary figures, in fact, emerge from the narrative more clearly than Emerson himself does. His overwhelming aunt, Mary Moody Emerson, and his wife, Lidian, are more fully revealed here than in any previous biography. Even so, one occasionally gets the impression that Mr. Rusk is deliberately avoiding the dramatic. . . On the credit side, Mr. Rusk's careful study of early journals, letters and sermons enables him to trace the slow development of Emerson's thought more clearly than any previous study has done." DeLancey Ferguson
— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 My 22 '49 800w

"Mr. Rusk's chronicle is most open to criticism in that it does not add as much as we might expect to our understanding of the structure of Emerson's thought, or of the relation of that structure to the strains of the biography. . . Though we are informed that Sampson Reed and Swedenborg exerted an influence, and though the word 'correspondence' flits through the quotations, we are told little of the fascinating way, in which this concept was incorporated into the basic themes or of how much the later works were permutations upon it. . . Mr. Rusk has written a sane, detailed and perceptive book, and has introduced us, at long last, to the real, to the great Emerson." Perry Miller
+ — N Y Times p1 My 22 '49 1500w

"An important and exciting book."
+ New Yorker 25:98 My 28 '49 130w

"This is a solid, careful, full book, admirably organized and written, the kind of critical yet readable biography that can serve as a model for its kind of thing. It is not often that the reader has a chance at so thoroughly satisfactory a work on so important an American. Perhaps it is a bit early to talk of next year's Pulitzer Prize, but you might watch this as a likely contender, I should think." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 23 '49 1000w

"We should be thankful for this book, especially in these times. Emerson's transcendental faith may not be wholly transferable to our day, but an understanding of an integrated, sweet, and compelling personality is tonic for our confusions. Mr. Rusk's complete and living portrait of Ralph Waldo Emerson helps us also to remember what 'purer' critics are so prone to forget: that a philosophical position or a work of art is always—whatever else it may be—the product of a personality, a time, and a place." R. E. Spiller
+ Sat R of Lit 32:15 Je 4 '49 850w

"This book is a scholar's work for other scholars. . . [It] will not be so attractive to readers generally. And it is not dramatic in its plan or style. It is still a book of major importance, though its interest lies in the factual subject and not in the author's manner of treatment." H. L. Varley
Springf'd Republican p7B Jl 24 '49 600w

"A massive, detailed, thorough, factual study. . . The greatest limitation of Rusk's book is its lack of enthusiasm and feeling. It shows Emerson as far more practical, sometimes calculating, and much less steadily conscious of his purpose in life than has been believed. . . And yet so many of the facts in the book are new that no such characterization can do it justice. Almost every page of this biography yields some new or little-known fact about Emerson or his contemporaries, and if the first result is to make his life seem slow and somewhat sad, the final one is likely to make his career seem even more extraordinary and his achievement even greater."
Time 53:87 My 30 '49 950w

"Readers of Professor Rusk's monumental edition of Emerson's letters, now ten years old, will expect to find that in carrying through the present even more exacting task he has been faithful, accurate, sensible, and self-effacing. He is all of that, and he shows other qualities besides which many an excellent editor has not possessed. This amplest and most fully documented biography of the Concord Sage ever yet produced is a highly readable book, seldom brilliant or exciting or profound but sufficiently enlivened by quiet humor and warmed by an enthusiasm that stops well short of idolatry." Odell Shepard
+ Yale R n s 38:739 summer '49 1200w

RUSKAY, SOPHIE. Horsecars and cobblestones; il. by Cecil B. Ruskay. 240p $2.75 Beechhurst press

B or 92 49-7056

Reminiscences of the author's childhood spent in New York's lower East side at the turn of the century. But it was an East Side not so well-known, for Sophie lived on East Broadway, a sort of Park Avenue of the East Side. Her parents were comfortably well off, and her energetic mother saw to it that each of her seven children had the advantages of education. The author's engagement to the lawyer she later married ends the story.

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '49

Library J 74:1560 O 15 '49 20w

"The illustrations by the author's husband add charm to a lively, readable and thoroughly delightful book." H. J. Bresler
+ N Y Times p19 Ja 30 '49 500w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich
Sat R of Lit 32:33 Je 25 '49 140w

"The author has an abounding love of humanity and a keen sense of humor and adds a touch of pride to everything she tells." S. M. Neal

+ Springf'd Republican p8B Ja 9 '49 420w

RUSSELL, BERTRAND ARTHUR WILLIAM RUSSELL, 3d earl. Authority and the individual. (Reith lectures) 79p $2 Simon & Schuster

301 Authority. Individualism 49-11780

"In July 1947 Sir William Haley, Director-General of the BBC, announced the establishment of an annual series of broadcast lectures, to be known as the Reith Lectures in honor of Sir John Charles Walsham, Lord Reith, who became the British Broadcasting Corporation's first General Manager in 1922, and remained its Director-General until 1938." This volume contains the first series of lectures. "The fundamental problem [considered] in these lectures is this: how can we combine that degree of individual initiative which is necessary for progress with the degree of social cohesion that is necessary for survival." (Lecture one)

Booklist 46:115 D 1 '49

Reviewed by Marshall Field
Chicago Sun p10X N 6 '49 450w

Reviewed by L. T. Heron
Chicago Sunday Tribune p2 N 20 '49 250w

"Here in brief compass, but presented with penetrating insight and lucid argument by one of the world's greatest living philosophers, is an analysis of our most pressing modern problem: how can we develop the highest value that we know, that of individuality, and at the same time maintain sufficient control to furnish the orderly society which that very individuality must have if it is to develop?" J. B. Alexander

+ Christian Century 66:1458 D '49 1150w

"Broad in scope, provocative of thought, terse in treatment. The reader appeal is limited by the intelligence quotient of the individual. But the market is widened by a certain intellectual snob appeal which Bertrand Russell satisfies."

Kirkus 17:523 S 15 '49 160w

"Mr. Russell examines the question, and is wonderfully equipped to examine it, in all its aspects—psychological, political, social, and moral. I could summarize his observations, but the book itself is succinct enough and so well written that paraphrase could not but be less persuasive; I should like to review it in quotations but there is not space. Therefore, since it is inexpensive, I merely recommend it." Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 169:544 D 3 '49 550w

"Despite its brevity, which produces at times an unhappy absence of needed details, this is a book to read and ponder. Free men can take heart from it. Would-be despots can learn the error, and the inevitable failure, of their brutal and tragic ways." David Spitz

+ New Repub 121:27 D 12 '49 650w

Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad
New Statesman & Nation 38:100 Jl 23 '49 850w

"Despite the limitations imposed by the medium, these lectures delivered over the BBC are a distinguished contribution to social philosophy." Sidney Hook

+ N Y Times p7 O 30 '49 1850w

New Yorker 25:156 N 12 '49 130w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 27 '49 420w

Reviewed by Jerome Frank
Sat R of Lit 33:38 Ja 28 '50 700w

"It can never again be said that what is excellent as spoken through a microphone cannot be excellent as literature. Even Russell has rarely written more lucidly, lightly and directly about high abstractions and generalities, making general notions seem familiar, and preaching a sermon without striking an attitude or appealing to authority." Stuart Hampshire

+ Spec 182:760 Je 3 '49 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p405 Je 24 '49 5150w

RUSSELL, BERTRAND ARTHUR WILLIAM RUSSELL, 3d earl. Human knowledge; its scope and limits. 524p $5 Simon & Schuster

121 Knowledge, Theory of 48-11754

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

Booklist 45:204 F 15 '49

"Bertrand Russell, champion of the empirical approach to philosophy, has written a book in which he makes the most searching analysis of this approach. Just as Plato, in his later dialogues, is a critic of his own philosophy, so Russell appears to do something similar in his investigation of the scope and limits of human knowledge." H. W. Steiger

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 10 '49 1150w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '49

Current Hist 16:101 F '49 50w

"Russell is fertile and entertaining in his many original examples and illustrations of his abstract arguments, but I think a great many of them are trivial. Where they give promise of going deeper, they often go wrong. . . Again, when laws of nature are being discussed from a fundamental point of view, one would have expected that room could be found for the situation reached in Kinematic Relativity, in which laws of nature depend on the locality in space-time to which they refer, more particularly to the observer's estimate of the age of the universe reckoned from the zero-point of time. But this is held by Russell to contravene the principle of the uniformity of nature. . . Detailed criticism apart, what judgement should one make of the book as a whole? First, that it is unequal. . . On the other hand the chapters on 'Time, Public and Private' and on 'Space in Classical Physics' are definitely constructive and interesting, and one rejoices to find a reasonable theory of overlapping events as leading to the concept of 'instants.' Secondly, the book is so long that by the time one comes to the meaty sections one has forgotten the drift of the earlier discursive ones. Thirdly, its science is not always strictly accurate. . . The theses of this book stand in the wake of scientific discovery, not in its van, and would be hindrances rather than spurs to research." E. A. Milne

— + Hibbert J 47:297 Ap '49 1750w

"'Human Knowledge' is the realization of Russell's aim. It contains the fullest account he has ever given of his views on probable inference, and on the justification of knowledge that is claimed to be objective. . . A by no means negligible value of the present book lies in its presentation in systematic and perhaps final form of analyses of special questions in the figments of the liberal internationalist theory of knowledge with which Russell has long been identified—questions ranging from problems of language and meaning to issues connected with space, time, and causality." Ernest Nagel

+ Nation 168:364 Mr 26 '49 1550w

"Lord Russell, who is now seventy-six, published a substantial history of philosophy only two years ago. After such a short interval, it is a remarkable feat to produce a work so exhaustive, and in many respects so original, as the volume before us." E. T. Whittaker

+ New Repub 120:24 Ap 18 '49 2100w

Reviewed by Stephen Toulmin
New Statesman & Nation 37:108 Ja 29 '49 1700w

"Lord Russell states that this book is intended for the general reader. But, in spite of his justly famous lucidity, he lacks the talents of the true popularizer. . . And, in fact, the well-known style is as before. Important issues steam straight into the fray, theories large and small scud past stripped for action, while the bark of weird definitions punctuates the methodical thudding of the deductions: the smoke clears rapidly, and behold a trim array of propositions, each with a degree of belief corresponding to its credibility nailed rationally to the mast."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p156 Mr 5 '49 1700w

RUSSELL, MRS CHARLOTTE (MURRAY). Careless Mrs. Christian. 189p $2.25 Doubleday 49-7244

Detective story.

Kirkus 16:607 N 15 '48 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 F 6 '49 140w

"The smooth blend of comedy and first-rate detecting recalls Miss Russell's former success with Jane Amanda Edwards, the spinster sleuth. Jane doesn't turn up this time, but Uncle Homer is even funnier—and that's no faint praise." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p28 Ja 23 '49 140w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p17 F 13 '49 80w

"Enjoyable."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:38 Ja 29 '49 40w

Wis Lib Bul 45:47 Mr '49

RUSSELL, MRS CHARLOTTE (MURRAY). Hand me a crime. 221p $2.25 Doubleday 49-10249

Detective story.

Kirkus 17:341 Jl 1 '49 60w

"Jane Amanda takes a lighthearted view of grim happenings, and this time she has surpassed herself at plain and fancy thinking. She's a tonic for mysteryites. It's a pleasure to meet Sister Annie and Brother Arthur again, too." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 S 4 '49 150w

"This one is strictly for those seeking fun without too much thinking. Anyone else opens the book on his own responsibility." E. B.
N Y Times p14 S 1 '49 110w

"Slow-paced but mildly amusing."
New Yorker 25:68 S 3 '49 100w

"Jane Amanda is a nice girl and not the type to avoid looking for a clue in the supposedly innocent gossip of her friends and neighbors. You can be pretty sure she'll find something or other of value, too. And you can be very sure that you'll have a lovely time watching Jane Amanda operate." E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 S 25 '49 150w

RUSSELL, HAROLD, and ROSEN, VICTOR. Victory in my hands. 280p $2.50 Creative age
B or 92 Disabled—Rehabilitation, etc.
49-7890

Autobiography of a handicapped veteran. "Russell's loss of two hands in the paratroops, on stateside manoeuvres not overseas, plunged him into psychological and emotional as well as physical problems. He learned the difference between being crippled and handicapped, chose between hands that were 'cosmetic' and hands that were hooks, resolved not to become a 'mental basket case', and did become an object lesson of a bilateral [amputee] taking normal life in normal stride. A documentary for fellow amputees helped him get in the movies and win two Oscars in The Best Years of our Lives. Education under the GI Bill, work with the Anti-Defamation League continued the job of smoothing over his self-consciousness and shame and gave him an active part in the world to which he was returning." (Kirkus)

Booklist 45:240 Mr 15 '49

"Putting in book form the story of a personal victory over such a stark loss was a sound idea but, unfortunately, it was badly managed. Due either to Russell or Rosen, the quality of the prose is poor and confused. . . There is some vapid editorializing on racial and religious tolerance, but no basic reasons are given for being tolerant. Victory in My Hands has a poignant theme but fails to do it justice." Mary Sandrock
+ — Cath World 169:239 Je '49 220w

Reviewed by Frank Smith
Chicago Sun Mr 22 '49 550w

"Parts of Mr. Russell's book—perhaps due to his collaborator—sound like hackneyed screen writing. Parts seem irrelevant to his theme, and only sometimes amusing or interesting. But these defects cannot obscure that 'symbolic significance,' in which Mr. Russell sees a suggestion of human possibilities, in which others may see an inkling of man's greater source of strength." Rod Nordell
+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 15 '49 600w

Kirkus 17:76 F 1 '49 180w

"The concreteness and unassuming simplicity with which Mr. Russell tells about his struggles to stop being sorry for himself and about the interest and fun he found when he put his mind and his efforts on what he had left, make good and pleasant medicine for any one who feels (and who does not, at least occasionally?) that fate has struck too nasty a blow." Mary Ross
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Mr 13 '49 550w

"Mr. Russell and Victor Rosen, his collaborator, have fashioned a simple, warm, sometimes humorous, sometimes trenchant report on a special brand of courage." A. H. Weiler
+ N Y Times p10 Mr 27 '49 500w

Reviewed by A. C. Fields
Sat R of Lit 32:11 Ap 2 '49 700w

"The book is remarkable for its frankness and sincerity and is a fine piece of story telling." Henry Redkey
+ Survey 85:333 Je '49 370w

RUSSELL, JOSIAH COX. British medieval population. 389p $6 Univ. of N.Mex. press
312 Great Britain—Population 48-11094

"The available materials pertaining to the population of England in the Middle Ages are here re-examined. The author utilized published materials, as well as unpublished historical records available only in manuscript. The major sources of data utilized include: the Domesday Survey of the 11th Century; Estimates, which often provided the names of inhabitants as well as descriptions of properties; Inquisitions Post Mortem and proofs of age; and the Poll Taxes, particularly that of 1377. On the basis of these data Russell presents his estimates of the population of England for various dates from 1086 to 1545." Am Soc R

"Probably statisticians and actuaries, accustomed to modern sources, will regard the records available for Professor Russell's study as extremely inadequate. Medievalists, however, will be impressed by the patience, thoroughness, and caution with which the author applies demographic techniques to medieval material. In some respects this book may be regarded as an essay on the statistical use of medieval records. Being familiar with the peculiar problems presented by such records, the author can explain how they must be studied in terms of what they do and do not tell. He has been working on these documents, both published and manuscript, for twenty years and presents his findings in more than a hundred tables and a dozen figures, with illuminating commentary. We may presume, consequently, that his data and analysis are as near the truth as one may hope to come." R A. Newhall
+ Am Hist R 54:866 Jl '49 550w

"A considerable body of literature exists on the subject of British Medieval population . . . estimates were already being made by the 17th Century, if not earlier. Russell is primarily an historian and, as such, views population problems from the historical viewpoint rather than from that of a trained demographer. His re-working and re-evaluations of the available data are excellent from an historical viewpoint and mark a contribution to the existing historical literature." A. J. Jaffe
+ Am Soc R 14:442 Je '49 650w

School & Society 69:64 Ja 22 '49 70w

RUSSELL, LEONARD, and BENTLEY, NICOLAS, eds. English comic album; a century of pictorial wit and humour. 152p il $4.50 Transatlantic

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons. Humor, Pictorial

"Choice English humor of the past 100 years with pertinent comment on many of the earlier cartoons and caricatures that will make them understandable to Americans. Includes the work of such artists as Ape, Lear, Cruikshank, Doyle, Lancaster, Low, and May." Booklist

---

Booklist 45:388 Jl 15 '49

"It cannot help being a fascinating book. . . All the same, this might have been much better done. Fascinating themes are kept in the background: the shifting relations of art, wit, and society as all three go through an important period of development. Not only the structure but the whole make-up of the book give the impression of a rushed job." J. W.
+ — Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 14 '49 130w

"The American reader, mildly amused rather than convulsed with the drawings, will understand why even Englishmen have sometimes insisted that English humor is no laughing matter."
San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 28 '49 200w

RUSSELL, PHILLIPS. Woman who rang the bell; the story of Cornelia Phillips Spencer. 293p il $5 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 Spencer, Cornelia (Phillips). North Carolina. University—History 49-9505

This story of the University of North Carolina from its beginnings in 1795 is also a biography of an indomitable woman, Cornelia Phillips Spencer. Cornelia came to Chapel Hill as a child in 1826 and it is on her later letters, diaries, and articles, about her own life and the University she loved, that the author, her great-nephew, has based his book. Index.

Booklist 45:354 Je 15 '49

"Technically, Mr. Russell wrote the book; actually he did better—he let Cornelia write it, making up the body of the work from her letters, diaries, articles and books, supplying on his account no more than the continuity. This was clever, for although Mr. Russell is a skilful biographer, he could have written nothing half as moving as these fragments torn from the very tissue of Chapel Hill in its most poignant days." G. W. Johnson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Jl 3 '49 800w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich
Sat R of Lit 32:29 Jl 2 '49 200w

RUSSELL, WILLIAM RICHARD. Bolivar countries: Colombia, Ecuador, Venezuela. 308p map $4 Coward-McCann

918.6 Colombia—Description and travel. Ecuador—Description and travel. Venezuela—Description and travel 49-9902

"Russell has not seen fit to organize his materials in strict guide book fashion. His work is chiefly a personal travel account of Colombia, Ecuador and Venezuela with an appendix of the information relative to air and ship lines, visas and hotels which the expectant traveller is likely to want." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:32 S 15 '49

"The extraordinary extremes and diversity of the geography, with its equatorial coasts in sight of mountains higher than any in our country, and its multiplicity of independent valleys and of resources and cultural tones, are well reflected in this historical and travel account."
+ Commonweal 50:350 Jl 15 '49 70w
+ Kirkus 17:223 Ap 15 '49 170w

"Another 'Invitation to Travel' volume which upholds the high standard of excellence set by other works in the series. . . The book itself is breezily written and full of delightful anecdotes and pithy remarks on social customs." Joseph Borome
+ Library J 74:817 My 15 '49 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 28 '49 250w

"A novelist and a playwright, Mr. Russell humanizes his travel book by making frequent use of recorded conversations. Nor does he get lost in South American reveries. His appraisals are made from a popular Yankee vantage point. Hotel information is included."
Sat R of Lit 32:33 Ag 13 '49 150w

RUTLEDGE, NANCY. Emily will know. 187p $2.25 Doubleday 49-8220

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Ap 8 '49 30w

"Easy entertainment."
Kirkus 17:41 Ja 15 '49 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ap 10 '49 130w

"The style is rather hammy but the thrills are there." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p19 Ap 10 '49 120w

"Very familiar territory, covered in an expert, if over-italicized, fashion."
New Yorker 25:108 Ap 2 '49 80w

"We're afraid we weren't overly interested in who got what or whom." E. D. Doyle
— San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 8 '49 100w

RYAN, EDWARD JAMES. Comes an echo on the breeze. 202p $3 Exposition

Lincoln, Abraham—Fiction 49-2629

Historical novel of Abraham Lincoln's military experience in the Black Hawk war. Other characters are Jefferson Davis, Zachary Taylor and Ann Rutledge.

"This book is a novel, described as 'historically accurate in most details.' . . It will be difficult, of course, for most readers to tell what is accurate and what is not; but, at least, the author has caught the spirit of the man and his age. And that is something in itself." A. K.
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 31 '49 190w

"Here is an entirely new collection of Lincoln stories from the pen of one eminently qualified to write in this field." J. W. C.
Springf'd Republican p8C My 8 '49 240w

RYAN, ELIZABETH. Higgledy-piggledy room; pictures by Kurt Werth. 24p $1.25 Shady Hill press 49-49574

Two little Negro children playing in their room on a rainy day are told to tidy it up for the visit of a favorite uncle. It looked like too much of a job until they invented a game to make it seem fun.

"Recommended." Elizabeth Hodges
+ Library J 74:204 F 1 '49 70w

Springf'd Republican p10C D 19 '48 40w

"Pictured as Negro children, the delightful illustrations and text make an excellent picture book title for the parent's shelf. Needs to be pre-bound."
+ Wis Lib Bul 45:49 Mr '49

S

SAADIAH BEN JOSEPH, gaon. Book of beliefs and opinions; tr. from the Arabic and the Hebrew by Samuel Rosenblatt. 496p $5 Yale univ. press

181.3 Jews—Religion 48-6963

"Saadia ben Joseph was born in the Faiyum, Egypt, in 882, was the head, or Gaon, of the Jewish academy of Sura in Babylonia from 928 to 930, and died in 942. He was the greatest Jewish scholar of the period of the Geonim—609-1038, the author of the first Hebrew grammar and dictionary, also of numerous works on Jewish rituals, law, and philosophy. The Book of Beliefs and Opinions, his philosophical masterpiece, consists of an introduction—on true and false opinions—and ten treatises: on the creation, on God, on God's revelation, on the freedom of the will, on morals, on the soul and its immortality, on the resurrection, on the Messiah, on rewards and punishments after death, on the golden mean." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The present edition is a notable achievement of linguistic and historical scholarship."

+ Christian Century 65:600 Je 16 '48 250w

"Dr. Rosenblatt is to be congratulated on performing a conscientious piece of work. It was no mean task to prepare a faithful translation of Saadia's profound work, which would be comprehensible to the general reader with no previous preparation. The brief introduction contains some pertinent information of the author's life and works. . . The two indices, (I) Subjects and Names, and (II) Passages Cited, will greatly facilitate the use of the volume, and, finally, the rather brief glossary of some technical terms will surely be appreciated by the general intelligent reader." S. L. Skoss

+ Crozer Q 26:165 Ap '49 650w

"A translation which is complete, accurate, readable, and attractive. . . Rosenblatt has earned the gratitude of all students of medieval philosophy not only by giving them a fine translation but also by furnishing detailed synopses of the argument and useful indexes of subjects and scriptural passages. The book deserves to be widely read and studied." Ralph Marcus

+ J Religion 29:75 Ja '49 600w

"The present translation of The Book of Beliefs and Opinions is the first complete one into any modern language, and is admirably accurate and clear."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:284 S '48 200w

SABATINI, RAFAEL. The gamester. 310p $3 Houghton

Law, John—Fiction 49-10448

"A historical novel, tracing an amazing episode in the life of John Law, Scotch economist, gambler and financial wizard. Gaining the confidence of Philip of Orléans, Regent of France, he established La Banque Générale, got practical control of the French economy, by grandiose schemes obtained a monopoly of foreign trade, and then after a period of wild speculation and inflation, crashed." Library J

Booklist 45:383; 46:35 Jl 15 '49; S 15 '49

"Compared with the author's earlier books it lacks fire and drama, and if this rather than 'Scaramouche' had been his introduction to the American public it is doubtful if he would have won his immediate popularity. Nevertheless, readers to whom Law has been a mysterious figure in history will find rewarding biographical material in the necessarily romanticized account."

Christian Science Monitor p11 S 22 '49 250w

"Not the old cloak and sword Sabatini, but one with more serious intent to present facets of history."

Kirkus 17:311 Je 15 '49 180w

"It is a fascinating story of one of the first stock manipulators, and of France and its Court, 1715-1720, with plenty of intrigue, plus a poignant love story. Financial details may be difficult for some, but will be meat for others." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 74:1025 Jl '49 100w

Reviewed by E. B. Davis

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 O 2 '49 750w

"The author of such venerable adventure favorites as 'Scaramouche' and 'Captain Blood,' has told John Law's story in a way that, for 1949, seems oddly gentle and old-fashioned." Richard Match

N Y Times p6 S 4 '49 380w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p31 O 23 '49 300w

"Sabatini gives a wonderful picture of the French court, and he has portrayed with great skill and human understanding the people who take part in this dramatic story. . . 'The Gamester' is a fascinating story, the more so because it is fact; and Sabatini has given it additional color and romance by his re-creation of the personalities and motives of his characters, and by the engrossing sub-plot which he weaves into his narrative. It is full of excitement and suspense and human drama, and it is brilliantly and lucidly written." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 32:17 S 10 '49 700w

SABISTON, DOROTHY. Toward better race relations. See Young women's Christian associations

SACHANEN, ALEXANDER NICHOLAS. Conversion of petroleum; production of motor fuels by thermal and catalytic processes. 2d ed rev & enl 602p $11 Reinhold

665.5 Petroleum—Refining. Motor fuels 48-10189

"This second edition covers the progress made in manufacturing motor fuels during the last eight years, describing the development of catalytic cracking and alkylation and conversion of petroleum gas into fuel, via the Fischer-Tropsch process. Chapters on reactions of hydrocarbons and on synthetic gasolines have been revised and supplemented by new materials and data. Chapter bibliographies." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1940.

"Engineers and petroleum technologists familiar with the 1940 edition of Sachanen's well-known reference work will welcome this second edition which brings the subject up to date (as of late 1947, which is remarkably good considering the time necessary to prepare and print a book manuscript)." J. R. C.

+ Chem Eng 56:298 Ja '49 120w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:1671 N 15 '48 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:86 N '48

"The book gives a good summary of the fundamental information relating to thermal and catalytic cracking, as well as the reactions occurring in the other processes of refining petroleum. The author has deliberately avoided reviewing the enormous amount of the literature in patents, although appropriate reference to important portions of it is made as necessary in the presentation. Readers will find this second edition very helpful in obtaining a reliable picture of present day processes actually in use in the petroleum refining industry."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:509 D '48 260w

SADLER, SABRA S. Rheumatic fever; nursing care in pictures. 151p il $3.50 Lippincott

616.991 Rheumatic fever. Nurses and nursing 49-1037

"A guide for the parents of children who have rheumatic fever. It gives home care, food, entertainment and teaching of the invalids." Cleveland Open Shelf

"This is altogether a highly satisfactory book to be recommended unreservedly to everyone having home contacts with rheumatic fever." Dorothy Deming
+ Am J Pub Health 39:1057 Ag '49 230w
Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '49

SAFFRON, ROBERT. By-line for Josie; front. by Robert Hallock. 182p $2 Viking 49-11238

Josie was a very human youngster with a yearning to have a story printed in her father's paper with her own by-line. Her efforts to make good led her into many adventures.

"Read as a story of a girl who wanted to scoop the news and get her by-line, this passes muster. As a vocational story it falls far short, and rarely gets beyond the wishful thinking of what being a reporter ought to be."
+ — Kirkus 17:474 S 1 '49 120w

"Characterization and plot seem weak. Not a career book; light reading for girls 12-14. Read before buying." E. A. Groves
Library J 75:113 Ja 15 '50 80w

"Mr. Saffron knows his Josie: he writes her escapades with a completely modern touch and a nonsensical angle which is like a fresh wind among girls' books. . . We hope this writer has much more in mind in the way of stories which poke fun at the 'teens' and will be read by those in Junior High. His special talent is the kindly funny satire which is so hard to do acceptably to the victims, particularly when they are female." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 N 13 '49 270w
San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 13 '49 90w

"A lively, amusing story." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:30 N 12 '49 40w

SAHER, MRS LILLA VAN. Macamba. 264p $3 Dutton
49-1567

"On the island of Curacao in the Netherlands West Indies Macamba means a white man and often implies a foreigner. Most of the native born are of mixed blood—Indian, Spanish, Negro and Dutch. This short novel tells of Paul, the illegitimate son of a Jewish banker and a native woman of predominantly Indian blood. Emphasis is on Paul's feeling of inferiority, rather than on racial inequality. . . As a member of the underground in Holland during the war, his experiences intensified his extreme sensitiveness. But finally he triumphs with the help of a psychologist and the right girl." Library J

Kirkus 17:38 Ja 15 '49 180w

"Recommended." J. L. Ross
+ Library J 74:496 Mr 15 '49 130w

"Mrs. Van Saher, a student of medicine, was chiefly concerned in her first novel, 'The Echo,' with a psychiatric technique for plumbing the human soul. Now in 'Macamba,' though this book also concerns the soul's sickness, she has made her case history subservient to the story, and in so doing she goes a long step forward as a writer of fiction." Virgilia Peterson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Mr 20 '49 600w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 32:38 My 7 '49 140w

SAINT-FOIX, GEORGES POULLAIN, comte de. Symphonies of Mozart; tr. from the French by Leslie Orrey. 217p $3 Knopf
785.11 Mozart, Johann Chrysostom Wolfgang Amadeus 49-7408

"Analysis of instrumental works—symphonies, serenades, cassations—with emphasis on the last three symphonies. . . Published as Les Symphonies de Mozart (Paris, Mellottée, 1932), and under the above English title (London, Dodson, 1947) in the present translation by Leslie Orrey." (Library J) List of the symphonic works of Mozart. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:278 Ap 15 '49

"If you take the comment as you find it, the volume will fit pleasantly enough into the upper shelf, and come down handily when wanted for reference." W. P. Tryon
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 17 '49 390w

"Although limited to a definite audience, this is expert differentiation of periods and extreme sensibility of understanding of the subject."
+ Kirkus 16:639 D 1 '48 120w

"Top-drawer style. . . Requires technical knowledge on part of the reader. . . This first American edition is a good deal handsomer than its English cousin and promises considerably longer wear, but lacks the six illustrations. Recommended for all types of libraries." C. K. Miller
+ Library J 74:310 F 15 '49 130w

"Through this little book and the five-volume biography of which he is co-author, Saint-Foix himself has done as much as any living man in bringing about recognition of Mozart's genius. Orrey's translation here is fluent, and the volume is a welcome addition to Mozart literature in English. Only occasionally is there an awkward sentence structure, arising from Saint-Foix's rather disconcerting habit of shifting frequently from past tense to the historical present." D. L. Engle
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 6:464 Je '49 700w

Reviewed by B. H. Haggin
Nation 169:67 Jl 16 '49 800w

Reviewed by J. N. Burk
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p62 S 25 '49 650w

"M. Saint-Foix examines Mozart's symphonies with the sensuous delight of a horticulturist admiring a bed of roses. . . Too often true critical analysis is confused with pure description. . . To the musician such a report is unnecessary; at best it is a poor substitute to reading the score or hearing the music in concert or on phonograph records. To the layman the terminology is meaningless." H. G. Lawrence
N Y Times p17 Ap 24 '49 430w

"Much more satisfactory than the analyses, or the purple patches that take their place, are the historical sections where the author has the happy idea of running through, chronologically, some of the dicta of men like Fétis, Berlioz, Wagner, and others. Especially interesting are those on the three great last symphonies." D. G. Mason
+ Sat R of Lit 32:34 F 26 '49 650w

ST JOHN, ROBERT. Shalom means peace. 335p $2.95 Doubleday
956.9 Israel. Jews in Palestine 49-929

In a series of short chapters the author records his trip thru Palestine, just after the establishment of the new State of Israel. He met and talked with Jewish statesmen, leaders and members of Irgun, soldiers of the Haganah, and people living in the cooperatives, and he has recorded their stories and his own impressions. Index.

Booklist 45:169; 208 Ja 15 '49; F 15 '49

Reviewed by Keith Wheeler
Chicago Sun F 24 '49 550w
Foreign Affairs 27:692 Jl '49 30w

"The author . . . manages in this collection of thumbnail sketches, anecdotes and reports of conversations to give to his readers something of the fire and color which are part of the new country." M. C. Scoggin
+ Horn Bk 25:239 My '49 120w

"There have been more important books on Israel (or rather on the Palestine situation) and better books by St. John. Nonetheless, this is thoroughly readable, a human, personal portrait of the people who have performed the miracle of sacrifice and achievement, which has made Israel not a question mark, but a going concern."
+ Kirkus 17:18 Ja 1 '49 260w

ST JOHN, ROBERT—Continued

"'Shalom Means Peace,' despite a prose style which now and then becomes, at least for this reader, embarrassingly sugary, has authenticity about it. More than any other current book, it gives you the color and flavor of Israel today, down to the signs in the shop windows and the delightfully breezy English spoken by the younger set in Tel Aviv." Gerold Frank
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 F 20 '49 950w

"Foreign correspondent in the Balkans, radio commentator and lecturer, Robert St. John writes a readable, glossy journalese. When the occasion serves, he does not hesitate to mix melodrama with an unabashed romanticism. . . The reader who seeks enlightenment on the historical background of the Palestine question is given fair warning to go elsewhere: Mr. St. John is too intent on his portraits to pause for such imponderables as Britain's role. . . Zapora and Jerusalem and the teeming cafés of Tel Aviv are interesting enough. So are the author's side-trips to model housing units, farms and factories." Clifton Daniel
+ — N Y Times p10 Ja 30 '49 450w

"Though the writing is slick and glib, the book reflects some of the enormous vitality of the subject matter."
New Yorker 24:93 F 19 '49 80w

Reviewed by P. A. Sides
San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 20 '49 850w

"A thoroughly needed, enjoyable, and moving account of the people of the new state of Israel." B. C. Crum
+ Sat R of Lit 32:32 Mr 19 '49 750w

Wis Lib Bul 45:46 Mr '49

ST JOHNS, ADELA (ROGERS) (MRS RICHARD HYLAND). Never again, and other stories. 304p $3 Doubleday
49-8868

Eighteen short stories by a newspaperwoman. The themes are love, war, crime, commercial aviation, etc. The locales, which are all American, include Hollywood, Washington, D.C., and New York city. Personal notes before each piece tell how the stories happened to be written. All of the stories have appeared in Cosmopolitan, Good Housekeeping, Liberty, and the Saturday Evening Post.

"Not an important collection from the literary standard, perhaps, but a useful object lesson for aspiring writers who would see how it can be done."
Kirkus 17:156 Mr 15 '49 150w

"Her plots may conform to certain tested formulas, and have the slickness of the paper on which they are printed, but the workmanship is that of an expert in the field. Her writing has pace, zest and cogency—and no loose ends."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Jl 3 '49 160w

"Adela Rogers St. Johns, who has written dozens of short stories for the slick magazines, continues to pack a terrific emotional punch." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p22 Je 12 '49 290w

Reviewed by Hollis Alpert
Sat R of Lit 32:13 My 28 '49 950w

SAKAMAKI, KAZUO. I attacked Pearl harbor; tr. by Toru Matsumoto; introd. by Tsutae Nara. 133p il $2 Assn. press

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Japanese. Pearl harbor, Battle of, 1941 49-50159

An account of the personal feelings and experiences of a submarine commander of the Japanese navy, the first Japanese to be captured as a prisoner of the United States. It tells how he spearheaded the attack on Pearl Harbor, underwent a change of personality as a prisoner of war and returned to Japan where he was ridiculed and intimidated but finally won thru to a happy life. The book was first published in Japan under the title, Four years as Prisoner-of-War Number One.

Booklist 46:41; 140 O 1 '49; D 15 '49

"This is an appealing and an encouraging book. Appealing for its utter simplicity and directness. Encouraging for its revelation of the stages whereby an unthinking machine is transformed into a reasoning human being." Takashi Oka
+ Christian Science Monitor p20 Ja 3 '50 600w

"Americans have had very little real insight into what the Japanese are thinking, or even saying. Few of the books about post-war Japan were written by people who could talk to the Japanese in their own tongue. Even those by Japanese (like Masuo Kato's 'The Lost War') seem written from the American viewpoint—and from a far different mental plane than the present volume. However, if Sakamaki's book serves no other purpose than to convince Americans that democratization of Japan is far in the future it will have served well." Foster Hailey
N Y Times p19 Ja 15 '50 450w

New Yorker 25:61 D 24 '49 200w

Reviewed by Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p17a Ja 8 '50 240w

SAKRAN, FRANK CHARLES. Palestine dilemma; Arab rights versus Zionist aspirations. 230p maps $3.25 Public affairs press

956.9 Palestine—Jewish-Arab problem
49-7097

Mr. Sakran is a Christian Arab born in Palestine. He has lived in the United States since 1914. "This work is intended to present all the essential facts in the Palestine story, and the chief events which lead to the present crisis." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Henry Reiff
Am Pol Sci R 43:395 Ap '49 380w

"Many readers will have much sympathy with the author's contention as to the 'Arab side' of the case, but it is to be doubted that Mr. Sakran has contributed weightily to a solution of the problem." H. N. Howard
Ann Am Acad 264:143 Jl '49 270w

Booklist 45:156 Ja 1 '49

"Mr. Sakran is opposed to Zionism, and has written his book to show why he thinks the establishment of the present Jewish state in Palestine is wrong. Although he has written with a somewhat larger degree of tranquility and fairness than one often finds in books on this acutely controversial subject, he does not lead the reader to any comforting conclusion." R. H. Markham
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 18 '48 430w

Foreign Affairs 27:517 Ap '49 10w

Social Studies 40:144 Mr '49 10w

"The book is fundamentally a piece of Arab propaganda. The propaganda device of card-stacking is used throughout." Harry Rantz
— Social Studies 40:273 O '49 850w

SALAMAN, REDCLIFFE NATHAN. History and social influence of the potato; with a chapter on industrial uses, by W. G. Burton. 685p il $12.50 Cambridge

633.491 Potatoes—History 49-10392

"The history of this root, apart from its overwhelming significance in problems of population and economics and its bearing upon the future of this island race, is romantic, suprising and even mystical. From the green terrors of a Bolivian forest to the stern realities of life in Ireland, from the highlands of Tiahuanaco to the Wicklow hills, the story of the potato is to be traced through a diversity of cultures, rituals, tragedies and historical events." (Spec) Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Salaman's book is a complete and fascinating study, from the potato in art to its industrial uses, from Inca pottery motifs to subsidies in World War II. With wit and learning he traces the extent to which modern English social history has been shaped and altered by the cultivation of this simple tuber." F. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 29 '49 600w

"Perhaps the most striking chapters are those on the potato in Ireland. The assembly of quotations is remarkable, but Dr. Salaman's liking for the dramatic generalisation too often gets the better of him, and his grounding in economic history is not oversure."

Manchester Guardian p4 Jl 12 '49 550w

"Dr. Salaman, as a past Director of the Cambridge Potato Research Station, is naturally at home with the scientific side of his subject, but this forms only a very small part of his book. He handles the historical narrative vigorously and well with plenty of leisure for digressions and trifling ornaments. . . This is an extraordinarily interesting book. It is, perhaps, a tribute to the double nature of its hero that I can now enjoy my sautés with a more cultivated enjoyment, yet have dreams of post-Atomic Yahoos squatting round the rusty shellcases that serve them as potato cauldrons." Jacquetta Hawkes

+ New Statesman & Nation 38:178 Ag 13 '49 1050w

"This is not a monograph, much less a compendium of merely curious information, although it has some of the qualities of both. It is a collection of essays, written with taste and wit as well as wisdom, that will appeal to those who love the imaginative and the bizarre as well as those who love the merely truthful. A clever man could dine out on it for a season."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 N 20 '49 220w

"History, copiously annotated, written with grace and zest and in the grand manner." Russell Lord

N Y Times p12 S 11 '49 450w

"A great and erudite volume upon the potato. . . This is not a book for light-hearted or light-headed readers. It is a great work, in many respects a noble work, that will excite attention and arouse interest in many quarters, and especially among those to whom the significance of the homely potato has never been realised before." C. E. Vulliamy

+ Spec 183:210 Ag 12 '49 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p467 Jl 22 '49 1450w

SALEIL, JEANNE. House in the Cévennes; il. by the author. 208p $2.75 Macmillan

914.4 France—Social life and customs 49-8824

"The author's family were foreigners in the village in the Cévennes where they spent their summers. To be sure they were French, but they were city people, viewed with suspicion by the villagers, and on probation for several years. This is the story of their remaking of an old house, with the disapproved innovation of plumbing, and of their gradual sharing of the local life, with its feuds, superstitions, and staunch loyalities." Booklist

Booklist 45:253; 311 Ap 1 '49; My 15 '49

"If you are homesick for certain choice corners of southern France, or even if you have never walked under the massive Roman gateway of a forgotten town in the Midi, then here is your chance to savor the unspoiled life of the Old World. 'A House in the Cevennes' by Jeanne Saleil, portrays charmingly the grace and shrewd wit, the gaiety and the crabbedness of the French peasant." C. B. Burnett

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 My 12 '49 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '49

"In a minor key, but always a pleasant one."

+ Kirkus 17:172 Mr 15 '49 160w

Library J 74:1560 O 15 '49 30w

"A vivacious approach to life, a tacit judgment that it is the most absorbing drama imaginable, and an honesty so complete that it almost resembles cynicism—these are the foremost qualities of Miss Saleil's delicious portrait of a French village." Iris Barry

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 My 8 '49 800w

"Readers unacquainted with French village life, whether in fiction or the movies, may occasionally raise a smile or an eyebrow at some of the 'droller' characters in Fougayrolles. . . 'This chronicle,' writes Miss Saleil, 'meanders in time, heeding neither order nor date. . . But no matter.' Here the author errs. Should it occur to her to write another book, let her pay attention not only to order and dates—let her also have a story of more substance to tell." J. S.

N Y Times p30 Je 5 '49 320w

"Every now and then there comes along a quiet, gently amusing, warmly and well written book in which you'll find no startling expose of this or that matter concerning world affairs, no urgent message, but simply the reflection of a delightful personality against a charming background. . . A book of just this sort appears today. It is 'A House in the Cevennes.' " J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 2 '49 950w

"Francophiles are sure to find reading this a delightful, rewarding, heartwarming experience." R. C. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 32:16 Je 4 '49 500w

SALINGER, MARGARETTA M. See Flowers; the flower piece in European painting

SALT, LAURA E., ed. See Oxford junior encyclopaedia

SALTER, ANDREW. Conditioned reflex therapy; the direct approach to the reconstruction of personality. 359p $3.75 Creative age

616.8 Psychotherapy. Hypnotism 49-10644

"Controversial approach to the reconstruction of the nonpsychotic personality rejecting psychoanalysis as it has developed from Freudian concepts. Argues for psychotherapy based on hypnosis, which is seen as an aspect of conditioning. First erects the theoretical frame, emphasizing the roles of inhibition and excitation and their function in therapy. Remaining chapters deal with specific personality difficulties, citing case histories from the author's own experiences." Library J

"Exceptionally well written, the volume is within the grasp of anyone who can understand the title." Ralph Habas

+ Chicago Sun p10X N 27 '49 190w

Kirkus 17:385 Jl 15 '49 170w

"Too technical for general collections; possibly unwise for general readers unless read under specialist direction." R. E. Kingery

Library J 74:1198 S 1 '49 110w

"His book is a fascinating capsule epic of real life stories . . . laymen and doctors, both. . . Of course the Freudians are disturbed by the Salter teachings. But who shall decide when doctors disagree? Of course, the patients. There are millions of these to whom Mr. Salter can bring courage and honesty." Paul de Kruif

+ N Y Times p41 N 27 '49 550w

"Mr. Salter, a New York psychologist and author of 'What Is Hypnosis?', probably writes not for fellow therapists but for the vast lay audience interested in relief of emotional suffering. At all events, his manner of writing and the contents of his book are unscientific and bombastic." R. R. Grinker

— N Y Times p41 N 27 '49 500w

SALVADORI, MARIO GEORGE. Mathematical solution of engineering problems; with a collection of problems by Kenneth S. Miller. 245p $3.50 McGraw

510 Mathematics. Engineering 48-9478

"Text for college courses in engineering mathematics at the junior and senior levels. Covers the fundamentals and runs through a review of algebra, analytical geometry, and the calculus before going on to differential equations, elementary complex variables, Fourier series and harmonic analysis. Book is based on engineering problems rather than on a purely mathematical framework and contains over 1000 problems, two-thirds of which are practical, taken from various fields of engineering, physics and mechanics. Answers to alternate problems are listed." (Library J) Index.

SALVADORI, M. G.—Continued

Booklist 45:237 Mr 15 '49

"The fields of chemistry and chemical engineering are not . . . well represented, and one wonders why problems of interest to the aeronautical engineer could not have been included. . . The line drawings are good, the style is pleasing, and the book is satisfactorily indexed. The paper is bright and durable and the format meets the high standards of the publisher. Salvadori and K. S. Miller, who supplied a collection of problems to the work have made distinct contribution to engineering literature." D. S. Davis
+ — Chem & Eng N 27:706 Mr 17 '49 350w

"It would be difficult to find anywhere, in a single volume, all of the useful mathematical knowledge and techniques assembled, unified and so interestingly presented in this compact little book. This reviewer enthusiastically recommends it as a text book for engineering students, a refresher course for graduates, and a review and reference work for practicing engineers." D. B. Steinman + Eng N 142:79 F 3 '49 750w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 74:130 Ja 15 '49 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:8 Ja '49

SALYER, SANDFORD MEDDICK. Marmee: the mother of Little women. 209p il $3 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Alcott, Abigail (May) 49-7502

The life story of Abigail May Alcott, wife of Bronson Alcott, and mother of Louisa May Alcott. Illustrated with photographs. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 45:214 F 15 '49

Reviewed by W. K. Rugg
Christian Science Monitor p11 My 5 '49 240w

"This book is not brilliant, but it is well-written and an addition to high school as well as to public libraries." K. T. Willis
+ Library J 74:308 F 15 '49 80w

"She was an interesting woman, and could make an interesting book. This book, a nearly uncritical eulogy, is sentimental, priggish, and trite. . . The whole thing is incredible nineteenth-century sweetness and light. But 'Little Women' is primarily a book for the young, and 'Marmee,' though it will bore or annoy or highly amuse adult readers, may well find an honored place on the shelves of the children's room." E. H. Smith
— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 Mr 6 '49 550w

"Mr. Salyer's biography gives Mrs. Alcott a character and personality of her own, apart from her role as the mother of 'Little Women' and the wife of the idealistic Bronson Alcott. She must have been one of the pleasantest people in transcendental Concord. 'Marmee' is an intelligent and entertaining biography. The style is simple and the text shows evidence of sound but unpretentious scholarship." Vernon Parrington
+ N Y Times p4 F 20 '49 430w

"Mr. Salyer, who teaches college English, has done a bang-up piece of research, but has not forgotten that he is writing his book to be read. In consequence there is little about it of the 'smell of the lamp' which mars so many volumes whose source is professorial desk work. . . Mr. Salyer writes with understanding and with a good, warm feeling for what he is doing." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 14 '49 800w

"This is a good and entertaining biography. Sandford Salyer has admirable detachment in presenting Abba and Bronson, conveys the two strong personalities, and does not take sides. His text is simple and scholarly and all the details of life in Concord are here accurately." R. C. Benét
+ Sat R of Lit 32:27 Ap 30 '49 500w

Wis Lib Bul 45:65 Ap '49

SAMANS, CARL HUBERT. Engineering metals and their alloys. 913p $7.50 Macmillan

669 Metals. Metallurgy. Alloys 49-7458

"Primarily for student use this volume covers the basic principles of the subject and includes material on physical, production, and engineering metallurgy. Both ferrous and the seven important nonferrous metals are included. Many illustrations, charts, and diagrams." (Booklist) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Booklist 45:277 Ap 15 '49

"Although no new data are reported, the subject matter is fairly well up to date. The book will probably be of more value to newer students of metallurgy than to advanced students, although the latter may find it a useful source of knowledge on fields of metallurgy other than their particular specialties. . . It is not entirely free from confusing errors. . . Other defects are an unsatisfactory discussion of the virtues of rimmed steel, of aging in soft steel, and of the cold treatment of high-speed steel and, especially, an index which does not do justice to the really amazing amount of information collected in this book. Although these defects are annoying and regrettable, still the book on the whole, because of the sheer volume of good data it contains, furnishes a text of real value as a basis for classroom discussion." G. F. Comstock
+ — Chem & Eng N 27:1004 Ap 4 '49 400w

Chem Eng 56:282 Ag '49 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:9 Ja '49

SAMINSKY, LAZARE. Living music of the Americas. 284p $3 Crown

780.97 Music, American 49-10548

"Traces the cultural sources of music in Canada and the U.S., and in the Central and South American countries. Notes similarities and differences and the contribution of American music to the social values of the New World. Useful for the brief résumés of the work of many composers and the illustrations of themes from some of their compositions." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 46:79 N 1 '49

Reviewed by H. E. Bush
Library J 74:1908 D 15 '49 130w

Reviewed by Charles Seeger
Music Lib Assn Notes 7:110 D '49 1150w

"It was a fine idea to attempt a musical picture of the hemisphere, but the scientific portions of his book are little more objective than the musical ones. The picture remains obscure." Carter Harman
N Y Times p10 S 25 '49 450w

"While Mr. Saminsky has a flair for the unusual word which sometimes puzzles the reader, he writes with vigor and spontaneity. His book will be especially stimulating to the amateur in music appreciation because he encourages the reader to think for himself." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 O 23 '49 150w

"Whatever other services it may render, Mr. Saminsky's omnibus provides lovers of mixed and obscure metaphors with a source book whose contents will keep them occupied for many a merry hour." Cecil Smith
Sat R of Lit 32:35 O 29 '49 750w

SAMUELS, ERNEST. Young Henry Adams. 378p $4.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Adams, Henry 48-10525

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

Reviewed by W. S. Holt
Am Hist R 54:894 Jl '49 800w

Cath World 169:79 Ap '49 220w

"This scholarly volume supplies the factual account of Adams' early life which has long been needed to correct the distortions, suppressions, and errors of the first part of the ironic and self-mocking Education." Mason Wade
+ Commonweal 49:522 Mr 4 '49 490w

Current Hist 16:169 Mr '49 50w

New Statesman & Nation 38:132 Jl 30 '49 240w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 Mr 13 '49 220w

"This is a provocative and interesting volume, one that sheds much genuine understanding on the early life of one of our great historians. As such it will prove of interest to many teachers and students of American history." R. A. Brown
+ Social Studies 40:181 Ap '49 360w

"All that can be said is that this is a brave try. Of course it is useful. It fills in many gaps, explains many allusions, even to some degree explains some of the reflections and attitudes of The Education. But it still leaves the fundamentally critical work to be done. . . The value of [Professor Samuels'] work is seriously diminished by two grave faults. One (odd in a professor) is inaccuracy. . . Then Adams was an ironist, and Professor Samuels manifestly is not. He takes au pied de la lettre what is evident irony in Adams's defence of Bomba and Pio Nono. . . So Adams is, from time to time, solemnly rebuked as if he were a modern American 'liberal' going astray. Whether Adams was ever a liberal is doubtful."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p502 Ag 5 '49 1100w

"This book is the most thorough and perceptive examination of Adams' intellectual awakening yet achieved, and provides a background indispensable for full comprehension of a man both reticent and devious. No other biographer has gone so painstakingly into Adams' undergraduate life, his days in London, his work and schemes as a Washington correspondent, and his teaching at Harvard."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:53 Mr '49 360w

SANCHEZ VILLASENOR, JOSE. Ortega y Gasset, existentialist; a critical study of his thought and its sources. (Humanist lib) 264p $3 Regnery

196 Ortega y Gasset, José 49-10477

"A critical study of the thought, and the sources of the thought, of the contemporary Spanish philosopher by a young Mexican Jesuit." New Yorker

"A work of amazing erudition. Father Sanchez shows a prodigious knowledge of modern philosophy, particularly of Dilthey and historicism and of Heidegger. His opening chapter is a masterpiece." S. W. Cassidy
+ Cath World 170:156 N '49 300w

"Father Villaseñor's book is in many ways a brilliant and scholarly monograph. The author divides the work into two parts, the expository and the critical. But in reality the critique permeates the exposition, and almost from the first page the author seems as much concerned to refute the positions of Ortega y Gasset as to expound them. But he does expound them—quite accurately, I think—and shows their correspondence with, and their probable derivation from, the positions of existentialist writers." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 66:1234 O 19 '49 280w

"The author treats Ortega with full respect and fair appraisal of his achievement, but he deplores his failure really to come to grips with the major metaphysical problems of philosophy and to take a clear position. He admires in Ortega the skilled and prolific writer, but finds him superficial. This criticism is particularly interesting against a larger background." H. W. Steiger
Christian Science Monitor p15 O 20 '49 800w

"On the surface, the analysis is a dispassionate one, complete with scholarly trappings and an air of reasonableness; on not very close examination, however, it becomes apparent that the author is out for blood. . . Eventually, the book turns into a long metaphysical scolding, in which all final answers are blandly referred to a supernatural arbiter."
New Yorker 25:112 S 17 '49 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 N 6 '49 120w

"It is a rather disjointed and uneven piece of writing, since the author combines a pedantic textbook style with what seems to be an inability to come to a decision in his own mind as to the real importance of his subject. Ortega, accordingly, is, in one chapter, 'one of the most important cultural philosophers of our time,' 'a barometer of our culture', and, some pages later, 'fluctuating,' 'mentally inconstant', 'in no way a metaphysician', orginal only in form, not in content and full of 'vitalistic immorality'." W. H. H.
— Springf'd Republican p5D O 2 '49 210w

SANDBURG, CARL. Lincoln collector; the story of Oliver R. Barrett's great private collection. ltd autog ed 360p il $15 Harcourt

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham. Barrett, Oliver Roger 49-11761

"For 60 years Oliver R. Barrett has been collecting letters, documents, books, pictures, and memorabilia relating to the life of Abraham Lincoln. Since Barrett is a kindly and generous man, many a scholar has come to know the scope and richness of his collection, but to others it has been a matter of legend and mystery. Now, thru the work of his friend of many years, the mystery is dispelled, and anyone who reads may know what makes up the greatest of all Lincoln collections." Chicago Sunday Tribune

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun N 2 '49 470w

"If Sandburg had contented himself with mere description this would have been a book of limited interest. Fortunately, he has gone far beyond that, printing the full text of nearly 200 letters." P. M. Angle
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p3 N 6 '49 300w

"This is more than a source book, though it is that and in fine, sound measure. It is more than a picture album, though few books have been, as publishers used to say, so 'profusely illustrated.' It is a rippling, billowing, flapping, visible standard of America. . . With such magnificent material, it is obvious that between them, Lincoln, Sandburg and Barrett have produced a magnificent book, a treasury of Americana, a memorable representation of a people and a time." D. C. Mearns
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p4 D 4 '49 1800w

"This is more than a Lincoln book; it is a portrait gallery of mid-century Americans caught by the candid camera of contemporary letters. . . Here, in 'Lincoln Collector,' lavishly illustrated with photographs and facsimiles, is Lincolniana at its best, Mr. Sandburg at his happiest, 'revealing the people, the times, the speech and lingo, of the generation who knew Lincoln and that he knew.' " David Donald
+ N Y Times p3 N 6 '49 800w

"Though disjointed, it is still a valuable book. There are many fine and important letters in 'Lincoln Collector' that should interest any—well, Lincoln collector. There are also many fine portraits, some of them published for the first time. And then, as mentioned, you get a little about Oliver Barrett, as well."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 25 '49 500w

SANDBURG, CARL—Continued

"There is humor and playful nonsense, along with much that is portentous, in the book. It it 'not intended for solemn duffers and patriotic stuffed shirts.' It is good reading throughout, including the last eighty pages, which consist almost entirely of the documents themselves, putting in the reader's own hand the riches of the Barrett Collection." J. G. Randall

+ Sat R of Lit 32:29 N 19 '49 900w

SANDEMAN, EDWARD KENNETH. Radio engineering. 2v v1 775p $6.50 Wiley

621.384 Radio (49-1950)

"Written primarily for maintenance engineers at B.B.C. transmitting stations. Gives underlying mathematical or engineering theory necessary for practicing radio engineers. Book is mainly devoted to analysis of problems concerning broadcast transmitters and will be of special interest to broadcast engineers particularly those interested in design and broadcast transmitters." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1671 N 15 '48 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:93 N '48

SANDERS, IRWIN TAYLOR. Balkan village. 291p il maps $4 Univ. of Ky.

914.97 Dragalevtsi, Bulgaria 49-9009

"A study of the village of Dragalevtsy, Bulgaria, made first-hand while Mr. Sanders was a teacher in the American College in Sofia before the recent war. Professor Sanders (University of Kentucky), deals sympathetically with the peasant family and community life of a fairly primitive society." (Current Hist) Glossary. Index.

"No economist who is interested in international economic policy or in the economics of 'background countries' could make a mistake in spending an evening or two in the leisurely reading of Irwin Sanders' Balkan Village. For this unpretentious little book has some profound insights to contribute to the understanding of the tide of events not only in the little village of Dragalevtsy but throughout the Balkans and with appropriate modifications in China as well. It is based on a careful study of this Balkan village in the 'thirties and again in 1945." M. J. Bowman

+ Am Econ R 39:1006 S '49 550w

Reviewed by Percy Black
Am J Soc 55:203 S '49 900w

"The value of the book as a sociological study is great. As a political scientist, I myself consider this work of Professor Sanders a fundamental one for anyone who would study the Balkans from the viewpoint of political science." G. G. Gavriloff

+ Ann Am Acad 265:193 S '49 550w

"This is a most stimulating book. May I add that Balkan Village is not written in a pedantic style but in a very human way, and with genuine love for the villagers and their patiently laborious rhythm of life. Only by his remarkable quality as a writer was Sanders able to give us such a plastic picture of Balkan life past and present. I know Dragalevtsy only from a bus stop of a few minutes; it is Professor Sanders's merit that I am now as familiar with this place as I am with those Balkan villages where I stayed for weeks." Max Fischer

+ Commonweal 50:511 S 2 '49 1500w

"As a sociological study, it is detailed; as an exposition of the effects of communism on the Balkan peasants and vice versa, it is of present value."

+ Current Hist 17:37 Jl '49 70w

"Most recent books dealing with the far-off European peoples about whom Neville Chamberlain knew so little have been written by journalists fresh from a brief sojourn in a Balkan capital, and are crammed full of political misinformation and economic nonsense. 'Balkan Village' is a most welcome contrast. . . To his task he brings not only the professional training of a competent sociologist but a fluent speaking knowledge of Bulgarian, a readable English style, cool judgment, and a warm heart." R. L. Wolff

+ Sat R of Lit 32:33 Jl 2 '49 850w

"The book is written in an easy and charming style, and its value is enhanced by the reproduction of the author's photographs. Unfortunately, the 'Bibliographical Note' is worthless and fails to note that several bibliographies covering this field have appeared in recent years." J. S. Roucek

+ — Social Educ 13:350 N '49 250w

"Students of sociology and cultural anthropology, as well as those who are interested in Balkan life in general, will find in this book a wealth of timely and authentic information." A. I. Tannous

+ Social Forces 28:210 D '49 650w

SANDERS, THOMAS HENRY. Company annual reports to stockholders, employees, and the public. 338p $3.75 Harvard univ. Division of research

651.78 Reports. Corporations 49-7536

"Changing content and format of the various sections of corporation reports are studied here in their relation to the stockholder, management, labor, and the public. The material consists of analyses of the reports themselves and of the results of questionnaires sent by a group of companies to their stockholders and employees. These data are supplemented by the analysis of answers to questionnaires sent by the author to company managements and to investment analysts." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

"The study should have wide appeal. Company officers will be interested in the reactions of other executives to the problems of interesting and informing the various readers of annual reports. Investment analysts will find ammunition for their plea for accurate, complete, and informative material. Accountants will be particularly interested in the discussion of financial statements and accounting methods. The book is unusually well written." H. E. Dougall

+ Ann Am Acad 264:167 Jl '49 460w

"All members of the American Management Association will find this book valuable." C. O. Wellington

+ Management R 38:400 Jl '49 480w

"The study should be useful to executives of business enterprises, to investment bankers, and to those in the general field of public accounting."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:198 Je '49 240w

SANDERSON, ROBERT THOMAS. Vacuum manipulation of volatile compounds; a laboratory manual describing the application of high vacuum technique in experimental chemistry. 162p il $3 Wiley

542.2 Vacuum 48-11839

"Practical information which will enable the investigator, with average scientific training to construct and operate general purpose high vacuum apparatus for chemical research." (Library J) Index.

"Dr. Sanderson's little booklet is exactly what is claimed in the subtitle: a laboratory manual for vacuum techniques. It is written in such a fashion that it should be extremely useful for the beginner and yet it will be of some help to the initiated worker, primarily because of its well-chosen references to the original literature and a number of handy appendices." F. C. Nachod

+ Chem Eng 56:316 F '49 270w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1599 N 1 '48 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:94 N '48

SANDOZ, EDOUARD MARCEL. Squire of Ravensmark [il. by the author]. 217p $2.50 Houghton

49-8177

Story of thirteenth century England in which the hero is a young English squire, Gerald of Ravensmark. Captured by the French on English soil, Gerald is held prisoner by a wily Frenchman, who also holds the English castle and person of the beautiful young English heiress, Lady Elizabeth. This novel for older boys and girls describes the struggle for freedom of the two young people.

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Ag 20 '49 60w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p4 Je 30 '49 210w

"This is good fighting adventure, shedding light on a period of history not often found in books for young people." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:216 My '49 80w

"Little is gained in understanding of the period, there is little historical color, satisfactory description of costume and atmosphere are almost entirely absent, and the story and the characters are undistinguished."
— Kirkus 17:86 F 15 '49 130w

"Very well-written and exciting story. . . Natural conversations, excellent paper and print, and delightful illustrations. Recommended for older boys and girls." C. W. Field
+ Library J 74:739 My 1 '49 70w

"The book differs from most juveniles, inasmuch as it is an outright romance and in spite of some faults it is an interesting and fairly instructive story of the days of knights and barons. The author's illustrations harmonize with the text." M. P. Allen
+ N Y Times p22 Je 26 '49 130w

SANSOM, WILLIAM. The body. 215p $2.75 Harcourt
49-10096

A satirical novel portraying a middle-aged, middle-class Englishman suffering (and enjoying) the pangs of jealousy.

"As a study in jealousy it has no contemporary peer: the events that fan Henry Bishop's fire are morbidly conclusive for him, but for the reader they are brilliantly ambiguous. . . A serious, psychological novel, with sociological overtones and thriller undertones, by a man with superb control of his material and with a language and style that is simplicity itself." Harvey Breit
+ Atlantic 184:86 S '49 550w

Booklist 46:14 S 1 '49

Reviewed by M. J. Ward
Chicago Sun p6X S 4 '49 270w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 11 '49 240w

"This is a brilliant first novel by an English writer already distinguished for his short stories. It is perhaps the best thing I have ever read about that class of society known in England as 'the lower mids.'" John Cournos
+ Commonweal 50:537 S 9 '49 450w

"Highly sophisticated, subtle, this is for the discriminating reader."
Kirkus 17:306 Je 15 '49 130w

"Some superior observation of settings and characters have been lavished on a rather unrewarding theme. Not essential." E. F. Walbridge
+ — Library J 74:1025 Jl '49 90w

Reviewed by H. I'A. Fausset
Manchester Guardian p4 My 6 '49 90w

"A possible weakness in the book is that the wife is too obviously innocent, and thus the story is completely one of delusion—a delusion the reader never shares and which is only a memory for the subject himself as the story is a recapitulation of that error. In consequence, a certain suspense is lost, and the secondary characters who might have arrested one's expectant attention lose much of their importance as they go about their innocent affairs. So the story somewhat shrinks; it doesn't stretch the length of the book." John Farrelly
New Repub 121:19 Ag 15 '49 800w

Reviewed by Julia Strachey
— New Statesman & Nation 37:590 Je 4 '49 1050w

"The disruption of the passive, passionless life of a sadly ordinary man is subject to pitiless, if indulgent, scrutiny in this brief and adept novel. . . Probably the most vivid of descriptions ever given of a truly hideous setting is provided by the author when he catalogues the contents of that basement flat where the red-faced, irrepressibly genial automobile salesman, Diver, entertains Mr. and Mrs. Bishop and innocently feeds Bishop's jealous suspicions. . . And something near the ultimate in horror and humiliation overhangs the conclusion of this sharply intimate tale." Iris Barry
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 7 '49 550w

"This first novel has been eagerly awaited both here and in England. It will disappoint only those who respond to the slick. In his style and handling of character Sansom shows the remarkable precision and perception, the individuality that is so evident in his short stories. And he easily shows that he can hold his own with the best when it comes to narrative power and a sustained suspense." Herbert Barrows
+ N Y Times p3 Ag 7 '49 900w

"'The Body' is a rum sort of book, alternately gifted and pedestrian, charming and tasteless, with faults and virtues mixed in together like marbles in a bag and frequently indistinguishable from one another. Thus, though Mr. Sansom is to be congratulated on not having tried to write a 'War and Peace' the first time out, he has, nevertheless, a style that bristles with ambition and seems to demand something bigger in scale and brighter in color than the cramped, overcast setting into which he has here laboriously lowered himself." Brendan Gill
— + New Yorker 25:60 Ag 6 '49 950w

"In a way, of course, the book is a study of the English lower-middle-class mind, and the British reviewers have made that point. But the significant thing about it is Mr. Sansom's awareness of the truth that an emotion such as jealousy or hate can so easily become a thing in itself, a destroying growth yet one on which the mind comes to depend, so that when the cause is suddenly and dramatically removed, the mind finds itself almost helpless without it. It's because he knows this and makes it devastatingly and horrifyingly clear, that Mr. Sansom's novel is so much more than a mere horror tale, and therefore well worth the serious reader's time." J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 3 '49 900w

"A notable piece of work in which the brilliance and insight of his short stories have been richly extended. 'The Body' is a fine study of delusional jealousy, taut with anxiety and chagrin, and done in a lively, flesh-colored style that makes his characters fairly glisten with life." John Woodburn
+ Sat R of Lit 32:10 Ag 27 '49 850w

"As Mr. Sansom peers and probes among his bottles, nothing, from a hair-dresser's dummy to an ordinary telephone, escapes his fascinated scalpel. And because his fascination is real, much of his world is strangely illuminated—even for non-biologists. The result? For the most part, a very funny and readable book." Robert Kee
+ — Spec 182:696 My 20 '49 550w

Time 54:87 Ag 22 '49 450w

"The Body proves that Mr. William Sansom can successfully adapt that intensity of thought and vision so remarkable in his short stories to meet the demands of a full-length novel. The whole book is written at a high pitch of sensibility often achieved in a compressed form but seldom sustained throughout a longer work. Mr. Sansom adds to this rare power of concentration a sense of humour, acute observation, sound psychological insight and a distinguished descriptive prose style."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p277 Ap 30 '49 420w

SANTEE, ROSS. Bubbling spring [with il. by the author]. 300p $3.75 Scribner 49-5056

"A picture of the West just after the Civil War, depicting with authority the life of the early settlers, Indian life, buffalo hunts, development of the cattle industry and especially that most important early Westerner, the cowboy. The novel really gets under way when the author arrives at his specialty—cowboys, horses and cattle. There is no sustained plot, but book is crowded with thrilling incidents of a wide range. A love story develops toward the end." Library J

Booklist 46:35 S 15 '49

"Mr. Santee tells his story well. It has action, suspense, love interest, old-fashioned sentiment. It's a pleasant, easy western, a book to be read for fun." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 11 '49 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '49

"This tells its story with some humor, campfire talk and a comfortable aimlessness."
+ Kirkus 17:331 Jl 1 '49 140w

"While the novel is not the author's field, this book is entertaining and informative. The more than fifty illustrations by the author enhance the work." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 74:1096 Ag '49 130w

Library J 74:1558 O 15 '49 20w

"As every one in the American West should know by this time, Ross Santee . . . ranks high indeed not only as an artist but as a teller of simple and curiously charming tales. His is a deft hand at handling men, horses, cattle and dogs; there is nothing arty or strained or high-falutin in the man's work, and to connoisseurs he is the real thing. This is Mr. Santee's first full-length Western novel. . . For all its authenticity of detail the hero isn't quite believable. Mr. Santee seems to become just a bit winded on the long pull. . . For young Americans who may be wondering about the old West, and whose ideas thereof may have been gained from dude ranches and the common run of Western thrillers, this story of action piled upon action, ought to be both entertaining and informative." Stanley Walker
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 14 '49 380w

"'The Bubbling Spring' is good—it's almighty good!" Hoffman Birney
+ N Y Times p20 Ag 7 '49 320w

"Directly told, easy-going yarn, which has about it, in spite of the different background, a good deal that Marjorie Rawlings' 'The Yearling' had—say, a cross between 'The Yearling' and some of the tales of Eugene Manlove Rhodes. It could be a little too simple a tale for some sophisticated readers. But at the same time it could, and will, charm thousands who know the country of which Santee writes, who don't demand sophistication in every book they read, and who respect a writer who talks only about what he knows and has the talent to do it well." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 19 '49 800w

"Many of the drawings in this book belong with Mr. Santee's best work. Although this book can be read with an adult pleasure, perhaps above all it is meant for boys. Here, on something other than the Zane Grey level, is the Old West. Here is how it all was, and here is how any boy would want to have lived if the life had been his for the living. My own copy of the book is going forthwith to a twelve-year-old boy I know, and I would say to anyone into whose hands a copy of this book falls, go thou and do likewise." D. L. Morgan
+ Sat R of Lit 32:14 S 3 '49 700w

SAPIRSTEIN, MILTON RICHARD. Emotional security. 291p $3.50 Crown

131.34 Psychoanalysis. Psychology, Pathological
48-9193

"Dr. Sapirstein's book is a three-ring affair. Ring one is an attempt at the restatement of modern psychoanalytic theory. Ring two treats the problems of sex and marriage faced by the contemporary urban, sophisticated middle class. Ring three deals with certain specific areas of current psychoanalytic research, including war neurosis, psychosomatic manifestations, the relation between art and neurosis, and the armory of psychiatric therapy today." (Nation) Bibliography. Index.

"Ring one is perhaps least successful, although the discussion of anxiety and the defenses against it—flight, rage, or dependency—is illuminating. . . Dr. Sapirstein is much more at home in ring two. . . After these pleasures Dr. Sapirstein's third ring is somewhat of a let-down, though it contains many valuable things." David Riesman
+ — Nation 169:159 Ag 13 '49 1650w

"The author has a good deal to say about marriage and divorce, and says it well. Many of his observations reveal deep insight." J. F. Bender
+ N Y Times p23 Ja 16 '49 230w

SARAZEN, GENE, and others. Golf clinic. See Golf clinic

SARGEANT, WINTHROP. Geniuses, goddesses, and people. 317p $3.50 Dutton

927 Musicians
49-10549

"In the first section of this book, called 'Olympus by the Back Door,' Mr. Sargeant reminisces about various 'geniuses' (some of whom could be more accurately classified as plain eccentrics) with whom he rubbed shoulders while performing as a violinist with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra and, later, with the New York Philharmonic. The second section, in which Olympus is viewed from the journalistic sidelines, consists of studies of Toscanini, Frank Lloyd Wright, Artur Rubinstein, Rita Hayworth, and other celebrated people, and is prefaced by some categorical remarks about the habits and preferences of artists." (New Yorker) The nine biographical studies of the second section have appeared in Life magazine. No index.

Atlantic 184:100 N '49 240w

Reviewed by Herman Kogan
Chicago Sun p11X O 23 '49 200w

Kirkus 17:352 Jl 1 '49 180w

"Geniuses, Goddesses and People suffers from loose organization and uneveness of mood. If the reviewer may be permitted a suggestion it is that the author consider forswearing his competence with geniuses and goddesses in favor of his real brilliance with people." C. S. Spalding
+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 7:108 D '49 750w

"A brash and entertaining book."
+ Nation 169:355 O 8 '49 30w

"Mr. Sargeant makes no pretense of examining his subjects other than from the standpoint of good copy, and most of them are very good copy indeed. . . One some times wonders whether the men in the orchestra were quite the piquant characters that Mr. Sargeant makes them out to be—whether, for example, the German musicians used to carry around suitcases full of sauerkraut." Herbert Kupferberg
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 O 9 '49 320w

"Since Mr. Sargeant's most prolonged and intimate association has been with musicians, his pieces about them are by far the best in the collection."
New Yorker 25:110 S 17 '49 180w

"Mr. Sargeant admits frankly that it is not the intention in these profiles to be learned or profound. His object is to entertain and he has done it well." J. V.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 2 '49 400w

"All of the presentations are rich with anecdote, but they are much more than mere strings of chatter and personalia. They are never profound (and are never intended to be), but they are revealing, competent, and important. They are also excellent reading." J. T. Winterich
+ Sat R of Lit 32:46 O 8 '49 700w

SAROYAN, WILLIAM. Don't go away mad; and two other plays. 238p $3.75 Harcourt 812 49-11921

"Three plays and prefaces to them. Dont Go Away Mad is about six men dying of cancer, who seek meaning in life and try not to 'go away mad'; Sam Ego's House concerns moving a mansion (the United States) to a slum and rehabilitating it; A Decent Birth, A Happy Funeral is about three types—the show off, the questioner, and the unconscious man. All are allegory." Booklist

Booklist 46:155 Ja 1 '50

"To this reader the preface of the plays offer more stimulating reading than the plays themselves, altho there are often moments in 'Don't Go Away Mad' that clutch at one's mind and wrench it into action." Fanny Butcher

Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 11 '49 750w

"Recommended for drama collections in university and large public libraries." George Freedley

Library J 74:1910 D 15 '49 60w

"'Don't Go Away Mad' resembles 'The Iceman Cometh' of O'Neill, but in execution it is typically—if rather long-windedly—Saroyanesque. Against the grim background Saroyan has created some memorable characters and displayed his fine gift for lyrical dialogue. There are some eloquent and moving moments in the passages where the dying men recall the happiest experiences of their lives, and in drawing his protagonist, 'Greedy' Reed, Saroyan is at his best. . . 'Sam Ego's House' is a play of lesser quality. It seems both incomplete and unorganized. . . The third play, 'A Decent Birth, a Happy Funeral,' is put together with considerable attention to form and could be played without any difficulty. But nothing in the play is as amusing as the preface, in which Saroyan spoofs tragedies about abnormal people, and glorifies G. B. Shaw." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 Ja 15 '50 500w

"'Don't Go Away Mad' is grim, the situations drearily pathetic, the characters without hope, yet kindliness, even a touch of beauty and bravery, come through. The author, contrary to his usual practice, has evidently worked long and carefully on this play. It has form as well as atmosphere. Possibly it would not be able to sustain its mood for two hours in the theater, but it deserves a trial, and marks a heartening advance in Saroyan's attitude toward playwriting. The old Saroyan is at it again in the second play in the new volume." T. Q. Curtiss

+ — N Y Times p5 N 20 '49 1250w

New Yorker 25:151 D 10 '49 80w

SAROYAN, WILLIAM. Saroyan special; selected short stories; il. by Don Freeman. 368p $4.95 Harcourt 48-9565

Ninety-two stories selected by the author from his nine collections of short stories, which were published between 1934 to 1944.

Booklist 45:193 F 1 '49

"I myself find this book highly entertaining."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ja 2 '49 100w

SARTRE, JEAN PAUL. Nausea; tr. from the French by Lloyd Alexander [Eng title: Diary of Antoine Roquentin]. 238p $2.50 New directions
49-8942

"Sartre's first novel, published in France in the middle thirties, deals with a mysterious inner crisis in the life of Antoine Roquentin, who, after some years of travel, has buried himself in the dismal provincial town of Bouville. Roquentin has lately been subject to shattering attacks of 'nausea'—a species of d.t.'s without alcoholic cause—and he starts to keep a journal in the hope it will lead him to their source." Atlantic

"Within the limits of his subject, Sartre has not neglected the creative task. His ideas are brought to life with great intensity in the texture of Roquentin's experience, and there is a good deal of small incident which is gruesomely amusing. Nausea seems to me the best-written and most interesting of Sartre's novels." C. J. Rolo

+ Atlantic 183:86 Mr '49 750w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun My 18 '49 280w

"There is certainly none of the external drama of Sartre's later works here; there is also the same preoccupation with the physically distasteful; but the book holds an interest—for his followers—in its formulation of the theory for which he has become famous."

Kirkus 17:117 Mr 1 '49 190w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 25 '49 240w

Reviewed by Julia Strachey

New Statesman & Nation 37:362 Ap 9 '49 400w

Reviewed by Milton Rugoff

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 Je 12 '49 600w

"When an author inflicts his idle and arbitrary philosophic fancy on a helpless person whom he has invented for that purpose, a lot of talent is needed to have the trick work. One has no special quarrel with Roquentin when he decides that the world exists. But the task to make the world exist as a work of art was beyond Sartre's powers." Vladimir Nabokov

— N Y Times p3 Ap 24 '49 700w

"The early work of a foreign author who has since become celebrated is likely to seem thin when, as in this case, it is translated into English after his later books. 'Nausea,' however, is an exception. It is the most enjoyable book Sartre has ever written." A. J. Liebling

+ New Yorker 25:102 Ap 30 '49 1400w

Reviewed by Nathan Hale

San Francisco Chronicle p11 My 29 '49 750w

Reviewed by Gorham Munson

Sat R of Lit 32:8 Jl 9 '49 460w

"One of those rare books whose publication (in 1938) announced that a new genius was among us. Although so far M. Sartre has produced no other comparable with the major novels of Dostoevsky, it was possible to see in this work something of the quality of Letters from the Underworld. Here was the same honesty of self-revelation, something of the same insight into the mind at work, and here, also, a subtle observer of character and incident. The two works differ in their philosophical bases. Where Dostoevsky's imaginative force, allied with Christian mysticism, results in an almost unbearable revelation of motive and responsibility and the hidden darknesses of guilt and secret self-accusation, M. Sartre's atheist Existentialism makes for a surface hyper-consciousness, a pleasurable tingling of the skin rather than pity and terror felt in the solar plexus. It is its freedom from exterior concepts of duty that has made this philosophy so widely accepted today. . . Mr. Lloyd Alexander's translation although adequate as a whole, has in it small errors and inexactnesses that are often maddening." Olivia Manning

+ — Spec 182:524 Ap 15 '49 750w

"In spots the book has an ingenuity and sharpness of detail worthy of first-rate talent. But the paradox of the central vision in Nausea is so forced and barefaced that most readers will not be able to accept it as anything but a perversion of the truth, a degenerated twisting of the classic experience of Western man."

— + Time 53:101 My 2 '49 500w

"Mr. Lloyd Alexander's (presumably American) translation at times leaves something to be desired in smoothness; and, although the book is more successful in making clear M.

SARTRE, J. P.—Continued
Sartre's philosophic points than his later trilogy, Les Chemins de la Liberté, the generally pretentious tone of the book seems to claim merits that, it is difficult to avoid feeling, neither construction nor dialogue ever fully justify." John Lehmann
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p197 Mr 26 '49 600w

SARTRE, JEAN PAUL. Three plays; tr. from the French by Lionel Abel. 272p $3 Knopf 842 49-10394

Three plays on the theme of man's responsibility for his actions. In "Dirty Hands" a young intellectual is torn between theories and actions. In "The Respectful Prostitute" a woman makes an unsuccessful attempt to fight a Southern lynching, and then surrenders to a wealthy Southerner who promises her a beautiful house. In "The Victors" French resistance fighters face the necessity of sacrificing themselves or destroying their work. Two of the plays "Dirty Hands" (acting version: Red Gloves) and "The Respectful Prostitute" have been staged in New York.

Booklist 46:61 O 15 '49

Kirkus 17:346 Jl 1 '49 40w

"It is difficult to recognize Lionel Abel's Dirty Hands in Red Gloves produced on Broadway last year. It is incomparably better. The Respectful Prostitute is still a cause célèbre here, largely due to its innocuously translated title. The Victors is deeply moving. These plays are of first importance and are recommended for all drama collections from moderate to large." George Freedley
+ Library J 74:1328 S 15 '49 70w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Ag 28 '49 550w

New Yorker 25:138 O 15 '49 120w

Reviewed by Rochelle Gibson
Sat R of Lit 32:30 D 31 '49 500w

SARTRE, JEAN PAUL. What is literature? tr. from the French by Bernard Frechtman. 306p $4.75 Philosophical lib.
801 Literature—History and criticism 49-8495

"Sartre, the French philosopher identified with existentialism, first considers the meaning and purpose of literature and the role and responsibilities of the writer during the past three hundred years. In the final portion of the book he applies these historical generalizations to the specific responsibilities of the writer of today." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 45:389 Jl 15 '49

"A group of sparkling and provocative essays. They do not bear directly upon existentialism, but anything by Sartre has at least an oblique bearing upon it." W. E. Garrison
+ Christian Century 66:593 My 11 '49 150w

"Clearly Sartre has brought rather a spindly case into the court of esthetic jurisprudence. But before dismissing it, each reader will have to re-examine his own assumptions on the function of literature which is all to the good, because that is the kind of concern that helps to keep literature fresh and vital and exciting." Theodore Kalem
Christian Science Monitor p15 My 12 '49 850w

"Its language is at times polemic. Recommended for libraries where an interest in Sartre's plays and novels has been sharp." J. H. Berthel
Library J 74:661 Ap 15 '49 130w

"The prolific Jean-Paul Sartre favors us in this new work with his judgments upon two important topics: French literature both past and present, and the problems confronting the writer in our time. As is well known, the author has written widely in the field of belles-lettres and is the leader of a political and philosophical movement. His analyses, however frequently contestable, are worthy of careful attention." David Hecht
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 8 '49 400w

Reviewed by Gorham Munson
Sat R of Lit 32:8 Jl 9 '49 460w

Springf'd Republican p4D My 29 '49 360w

"Written with Sartre's characteristic energy and the faint overtones of sounder sense that he has acquired since World War II and the French resistance, it places his own writing in the same class with the work of André Malraux and Antoine de St. Exupéry—Frenchmen of action, compelled to do their work in a time of disintegrating values when any act had to be its own justification."
+ Time 53:104 My 2 '49 170w

SARZANO, FRANCES. Sir John Tenniel. (English masters of black-and-white ser) 96p il $2.50 Pellegrini & Cudahy
741.91 Drawings. Illustration of books. Tenniel, Sir John 49-1774

About half of the book is devoted to a study of the life and works of Sir John Tenniel, the British illustrator, best known for his political cartoons and his drawings for Alice in Wonderland. Included are over fifty pages of examples of Tenniel's work.

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 74:199 F 1 '49 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 D 26 '48 110w

New Yorker 24:94 F 19 '49 40w

Reviewed by Osbert Lancaster
Spec 180:532 Ap 30 '48 130w

"Miss Frances Sarzano brings him vividly to life. . . His collaboration with Lewis Carroll over the Alice books is dealt with amusingly and his straight books rightly assessed. Miss Sarzano feels, however, that his drawings suffered through the necessity of the wood-block, and that his few etchings exhibit the quality of his line to much greater effect. Few people would agree with her. In a way, given the extraordinary virtuosity of the wood-engravers of the time, Tenniel was the ideal wood-draughtsman."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p202 Ap 10 '48 420w

SASSOON, SIEGFRIED. Collected poems. 269p $3.50 Viking 821 49-7104

A complete collection of the poems of this English writer. Many of the poems are from volumes now out of print. Index of first lines.

Reviewed by Peter Viereck
Atlantic 184:69 O '49 240w

Booklist 45:207 F 15 '49

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun Ap 11 '49 410w

Reviewed by Henry Rago
Commonweal 50:71 Ap 29 '49 600w

"In his later verse, Sassoon loses some of his force and intensity, but develops a gentle wit and agreeable lyrical quality, in the best English tradition."
+ Kirkus 16:590 N 1 '48 120w

"This collection, an excellent library edition, makes it possible for a new generation to make its own judgment of such works as The Old Huntsman, Counter-Attack, Picture-Show, and The Heart's Journey." Gerald McDonald
+ Library J 74:497 Mr 15 '49 100w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 168:80 Ja 15 '49 330w

"What one misses most in the Siegfried Sassoon 'Collected Poems' is a comprehensive preface, a summing up. . . Sassoon's poems are more rewarding now than they were ten years ago; they can be enjoyed again today as they once were. A preface is needed to explain these things and record the data beneath such vicissitudes of fame and pleasure." Harvey Breit

N Y Times p13 Ja 2 '49 270w

New Yorker 24:72 Ja 29 '49 70w

"Siegfried Sassoon . . . is a particularly perfect example of the Georgian poet upon whose bucolic lyrics crashed a terrible war and who out of that war made more genuine poetry than he was ever able to make before or since. This is not news, of course. But the truth and proof of it are assembled with special force in Sassoon's Collected Poems." W. T. Scott

+ Poetry 74:41 Ap '49 700w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril

San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 13 '49 70w

"Because of Sassoon's dramatic presentation of his material he calls Hardy to mind. I find him a better poet than Hardy, broader in sympathy, less contrived, happier in conclusion, and in technique incomparably more polished. Sassoon is, with all else, an interesting poet. He summons our attention and holds it by the variety of his episodes and responses. We are fortunate to have this perspective of all Sassoon's poetical work in a single volume. No modern collection could be more valuable." Robert Hillyer

+ Sat R of Lit 32:28 Ja 29 '49 500w

"Mr. Sassoon gives us what may be accurately termed a large selection of his poems between about 1908 and 1940—a book for general reading, and one which has certainly not appeared before its due time. The extant small selections have tended to obscure the variousness of the poet's mind and his wide reflections of personal and public experience." Edmund Blunden

+ Spec 179:374 S 19 '47 700w

Reviewed by J. W. Bogan

Springf'd Republican p9B Mr 6 '49 150w

"When a poet's scattered emblems are collected before he himself is, it means something beyond the promise of more; it means achievement. He is established. When this happens the common reader, who from the first was won by a poet's personal vagaries . . . may take heart. Some of those learned critics who tried to chill his early pleasure were off the mark after all. . . There is no telling where a reader may fetch up when he goes out with this poet. There are the trees and the birds, of course, and they will be celebrated, as if this were still the eighteenth century. . . But what about the Miners? Isn't there a case for them, as well as for the wise thrush?"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p564 N 1 '47 1150w

SATURDAY EVENING POST (periodical). Sports stories; selected and with an introd. by Red Smith. 307p $2.50 Barnes, A.S.

Short stories—Collections 49-8403

"A collection of 21 stories, published 1932-1946, covering baseball, boxing, horse racing, tennis, etc." (Library J) Partial contents: One hit, one error, one left, by Ring Lardner; Ten rounds for baby, by Joel Reeve; Brooklyn Mick, by Eddy Orcutt; Champion's due, by C. F. Coe; Ninety and nine, by Sam Hellman; Golf is a nice friendly game, by Paul Gallico; The tennis racket, by Corey Ford; The amateur spirit, by Richard Macauley; See how they run, by G. H. Coxe; What's it get you? by J. P. Marquand.

Booklist 45:297 My 1 '49

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 74:738 My 1 '49 30w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 My 8 '49 180w

"The sports stories include a few near-classics, a little slick deadwood and, in the main, light and readable tales of struggles on the gridiron, the diamond, the links, the road, the racetrack, and the limed greensward, and in the squared circle. Among the near-classics I'd list James Thurber's 'You Could Look It Up,' William Fay's 'Hello, Joe,' and Stanley Frank's 'Name of the Game.'" R. L.

N Y Times p14 Ap 24 '49 200w

"Some of the tales are quite obviously dated. It is doubtful if the Post would print today Charles Francis Coe's prize ring yarn, 'Champion's Due' or Eddy Orcutt's 'Brooklyn Mick.' But for most, the Post formula of unrealistic treatment of a realistic theme has provided ample weatherproofing against the inroads of time." R. F.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 15 '49 400w

SATURDAY EVENING POST (periodical). Stories, 1948. 313p $2.75 Random house

Short stories—Collections (37-27266)

Contents: The stolen belt, by W. B. Mahoney; I am not a stranger, by James Street; The ransom of Peter Drake, by Jacland Marmur; The haunted meadow, by W. A. Powers; The senator's shadow, by Dana Burnet; Lonely lady, by Martha Gellhorn; The last man alive, by Conrad Richter; Call this land home, by Ernest Haycox; Sentence of death, by Thomas Walsh; Flashing spikes, by Frank O'Rourke; The lonesome bear, by Harrrison Kinney; Strange wedding, by I. A. R. Wylie; Alexander Botts vs. The income tax, by W. H. Upson; Scandalous conduct, by Robert Carson; Suicide flight, by Walt Grove; Surprise party, by Norman Katkov; Little Miss Nobody, by Patterson McNutt; Holiday of a star, by Phillis Duganne; Hornblower and the man who felt queer, by C. S. Forester; Brandy for the parson, by Geoffrey Household.

Booklist 45:337 Je 1 '49

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Je 12 '49 170w

"The present selection is no worse—and, here and there, much better—than some of its predecessors. That Miss Foley's faithful will stay away in droves goes without saying. It must be added, none the less, that the general reader will enjoy nearly all the current crop: the reader who is also a student of the short story is urged to buy, with no reservations." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p10 My 1 '49 500w

SATURDAY REVIEW OF LITERATURE (periodical). Writing for love or money; ed. by Norman Cousins; 35 essays. 278p $3.50 Longmans

808 Authorship. Rhetoric 49-10388

"A symposium of articles from the Saturday Review of Literature which discuss many aspects of writing as a profession and for a public. A notable company of contributors include Henry Seidel Canby, Jesse Stuart, Elmer Davis, Stephen Leacock, Phyllis Bentley, Edith Wharton, Saroyan, Ellen Glasgow, Pearl Buck, Thomas Wolfe, Maugham, Russell Maloney, James Truslow Adams—among others. And the discussions have a wide range; the impulses which cause a man to write; story writing schools and their validity; the making up of an index; writing to please yourself; authorship as seen by an author's wife; permanent fictional values; the effect of criticism on first novelists; and the specifics of writing biography, history, science and social science, poetry, essays, articles, humor, juveniles, editorials, criticism, etc." Kirkus

Booklist 46:6 S 1 '49

"This is a rich book. It is rich because the authors, no matter what their slant or purpose, and no matter what their lapses in actual practice, are writing here out of a sense of professional integrity. And being writers, they are able to communicate the urgency of this integrity in highly articulate, as well as individual style." Ruth Chapin

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 11 '49 1050w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 D '49

"By experienced practitioners, this assays both literary values and commercial factors and will be of primary interest to aspirants."

+ Kirkus 17:423 Ag 1 '49 170w

SATURDAY REVIEW—Continued
"Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 74:1087 Ag '49 130w

Reviewed by DeLancey Ferguson
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 O 2 '49 700w

"What you'll find in Mr. Cousins' carefully selected symposium is a series of chapters in which successful literary people tell how they work at their jobs." J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 10 '49 750w

Reviewed by Edmund Fuller
Sat R of Lit 32:36 S 10 '49 1050w

SAUL, FRANCIS WILLIAM. Pink pills for pale people. 204p il $2.50 Dorrance

614.26 Quacks and quackery 49-10277

"[An account] of the crude and often brutal things resorted to by doctors and surgeons down through the long story of the development of modern medicine. The fantastic ideas of the curing powers of remedies which had no possible medicinal value, the strong arm methods of amputations and other operations, and the flood of fads and fancies on which our forebears staked their lives, make up a tale which ought to be told." Churchman

"A readable, interesting and not at all harrowing account." H. J. Simpson
+ Churchman 163:17 O 1 '49 150w

"A rather pale example of the school of medical literature made popular by 'Devils, Drugs and Doctors' of some years ago. Dr. Saul evidently has produced this book mainly for his own amusement, and as a result it is not overly valuable but quite entertaining. There are a number of interesting bits of medical history and a few caustic reports on the cure-all devices foisted on our fathers and sometimes on us. The illustrations are unusually good." R. F. H.
— + Springf'd Republican p5D O 2 '49 90w

SAUNDERS, JOHN JOSEPH. Age of revolution; the rise and decline of liberalism in Europe since 1815. 311p $3.50 Roy pubs.

940.28 Europe—History. Liberalism 49-9007

"Bird's-eye view of man's attempt to reconcile the demands of social justice with the hard-won liberties of the French Revolution. Traces the decline of religion, the rising influence of science, and the growth of the cult of race which the author thinks have contributed materially to the decline of liberalism in Europe since 1815. . . Annotated bibliographies." Booklist

"Good reading, but requires familiarity with the period and its happenings for maximum enjoyment."
Booklist 45:353 Je 15 '49

"Uncritical readers of the 'Age of Revolution' may derive a wrong impression of some important aspects of modern European history; but critical readers, with a good background knowledge, will enjoy Mr. Saunders' concise and vivid presentation and his many stimulating thoughts." Ernest Pisko
Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 22 '49 750w

"Without being superficial, clear and lucid style makes it pleasant and stimulating reading for every educated person. . . Recommended for all public and educational libraries." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 74:894 Je 1 '49 80w

"Actually, much of the book is a good, straightforward historical manual, in which the details of political and military history are subordinated to a broad interpretation of the history of ideas. Mr. Saunders is a skillful and generally accurate expositor, with a gift for condensation. He supplies admirably balanced reading lists. All in all, this unpretentious book is an excellent introduction to modern European history, more useful for the general reader than our more labored and detailed American textbooks. It is a clear and simple history, not, as its subtitle would imply, an analysis of European liberalism." Crane Brinton
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Je 19 '49 360w

"Mr. Saunders' conclusions are not entirely new, but they are stated with concise vigor. . . Apparently his book was written in 1946, when the mood of doom prevailed. The regenerating forces of free society which reasserted themselves after 1946 in the English-speaking countries—forces rooted in 1689 and 1776—were hardly discernible in 1946. Thus Mr. Saunders ends with a gloomy prophecy, foreseeing the end of free society as it has grown since the Renaissance and Reformation, and the beginning of a new Middle Ages." Hans Kohn
N Y Times p4 Jl 3 '49 850w

"Unusually interesting and challenging is this relatively short history of European development and thought since the downfall of Napoleon. It represents the fine fruit of a marriage of abundant factual knowledge and a deep understanding of human motives. . . The tone throughout is balanced, fair, and mature. And the argument is convincing, for the method is to marshal the facts and let them speak for themselves." W. C. Langsam
+ Sat R of Lit 32:21 Jl 9 '49 900w

SAVOY, WILLARD W. Alien land. 320p $3 Dutton

49-8176

"Charles Roberts, with his almost imperceptible trace of Negro blood, had chosen to stand as a champion of that race. His son, Kern, whose appearance was even more white, was so cruelly hurt by the things that were done to him as a Negro that he chose to pass as white. Father and son split over this choice of races, but became reconciled after some years in which each in his own way worked for the cause of human rights." Booklist

Booklist 45:254; 281 Ap 1 '49; Ap 15 '49

"A novel which communicates an understanding of the heavy cross which discrimination places on a minority is necessarily of some value, but in this case the demonstration would have been more forceful and moving had the author succeeded in making his characters come to life as individuals, and had his philosophy of life and notions of sexual morality measured up to his zeal for social justice."
Cath World 169:319 Jl '49 200w

Reviewed by Nelson Algren
Chicago Sun Ap 20 '49 360w

"[This] book is persuasive propaganda for a good cause. It has power. It well describes scenes of difficult emotion." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 21 '49 550w

"As a novel it does not come off. Original style rarely penetrates journalistic formula. The love story is contrived. Too many of the essential characters, including the hero, lack a clearly discernible will, and their images evaporate. Real merit lies in the villains, the mouthpieces of whatever is morally out of joint about the different settings in which Kern Roberts is acted upon as he grows up on both sides of the color line. . . The intensity and honesty here will probably give perverse pleasure to the multitude of confirmed sadists who make it their business to keep the wounds open and smarting. . . I wish the love in it rang as true as the hate." Peter White
— + Commonweal 50:75 Ap 29 '49 550w

"A telling novel of living fear, hatred and bitterness redeemed by a love stronger than all these, this has, in spite of its drama, a sympathetic understanding of the problems involved."
+ Kirkus 17:67 F 1 '49 210w

"The newest Negro novelist, a public relations specialist assigned to Air Information Division, U.S. Air Force, is a young man who doesn't wince at delicate matters. As a writer he is no Fancy Dan. His style is more rugged than polished, but it carries conviction. It can also be subjective and probing." Arna Bontemps

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ap 17 '49 550w

"His reporting is as honest as his over-all purpose: the hate that flames on both sides of his grimly drawn color-line is both real and terrifying. . . Mr. Savoy pulls no punches on either side of his battle-line: his portrait of Kern's self-righteous father is no less merciless than his two-gun Sheriff; the scarecrows he sketches in Negro ghettos from Georgia to Harlem are as bitterly real as his white night-riders. The very intensity of 'Alien Land' may defeat its purpose; for all his sincerity, the author belongs with the pamphleteers rather than the novelists. He deserves a wide reading, none the less." C. V. Terry

+ — N Y Times p20 Ap 3 '49 320w

'There is passion in Savoy's writing, and though one is compelled by that, there is annoyance too. He seems to write so fast that he over-uses the dash instead of taking time with punctuation. Certainly that is understandable, but it does not let the reader be comfortable. This, however, is but a minor objection and once the resistance is overcome, the reader is carried along wherever the author chooses upon this exciting, as well as frightening journey." M. R.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 8 '49 700w

"In this first book the author has told an exciting story, filled with terror and violence. Occasionally he forgets that he is writing a novel and inserts a mile-long speech which suddenly, and disconcertingly, brings the action to a standstill. But when he returns to his story, the book is wonderfully alive, moving at a headlong pace." Ann Petry

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:16 Ap 30 '49 600w

Reviewed by W. R. Manchester

Springf'd Republican p4D My 20 '49 180w

Wis Lib Bul 45:89 My '49

SAXON, LYLE. Friends of Joe Gilmore; and, Some friends of Lyle Saxon, by Edward Dreyer; with 14 il. incl. 6 reproductions of pencil sketches by E. H. Suydam. 182p $4 Hastings house

B or 92 Gilmore, Joe. New Orleans—Social life and customs. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 48-28184

"Joe Gilmore was the late Mr. Saxon's Negro major-domo, valet, private bartender, and friend; he figures in this book—upon which the author was working at the time of his death—as the central character of a collection of anecdotes of bohemian life in New Orleans. . . In a section at the end, called 'Some Friends of Lyle Saxon,' Edward Dreyer has gathered up a few obiter dicta of the author's and has filled out the story of his last years." New Yorker

Booklist 45:177 Ja 15 '49

"It is Saxon's love of the absurd and the human that makes this little volume . . . both a rarity and a delight today. It is an inconsequential little book, if light-heartedness and love of living and attachment to friends are inconsequentialities. Saxon observes that those friends, whose escapades and serene disregard for the serious side of life are so happily chronicled here, marked 'the end of something or other' each one of them. And taken together they do mark the end of a special sort of gayety and intimacy that for so long set New Orleans apart." Hodding Carter

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 F 20 '49 550w

"The stories are largely concerned with drinking and partying and ribald carryings on, and some of them are of quite local reference, but Mr. Saxon's wit and literary grace are strong enough to make the book, which could have been annoyingly patronizing, a sympathetic and lively memoir."

+ New Yorker 24:82 Ja 22 '49 150w

"In the end, those who read because of their knowledge of the man will put down the book with regret that Saxon did not live to finish it. If he had, this would have been a memoir not quite like any that's ever been written. But all Saxon's friends will agree that even this much reflects delightfully what George Sessions Perry (a friend of Joe Gilmore), once described when he wrote, apropos Saxon, 'the rich, the easy, yet exquisite pleasure of the company of this lonely, generous man.'" J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 17 '48 750w

SAYE, ALBERT BERRY. Constitutional history of Georgia, 1732-1945. 521p $4.50 Univ. of Ga.

342.758 Georgia—Constitutional history 48-8620

"The story begins with 'The Genesis of Georgia' and proceeds, in the main chronologically, to 'The Constitution of 1945.' The study could quite properly be called a political or governmental history as well as a constitutional history of the state. Chapters are devoted to broad subjects like politics in the antebellum period, the nature of the federal union, and the Reconstruction period. . . The last five chapters deal with experience under the constitution of 1877 and its successor, the constitution of 1945." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography. Index.

"The volume is a noteworthy addition to the literature of state constitutional history and to the history of the South." Bingham Duncan

+ Am Hist R 54:699 Ap '49 320w

"The account is very well written, and occasionally includes quite revealing excursions into the whys and wherefores of Georgia's political and constitutional mores. . . While Professor Saye's discussions at times run to too great detail for the taste of those uninformed on Georgia history, the volume nevertheless presents a well-designed modern version of an approach to research in state government which has too long been neglected." J. M. Ray

+ — Am Pol Sci R 43:175 F '49 380w

"Professor Saye's account is generally accurate and often thoughtful. He has frequently gone beyond the documents to investigate how government actually operated. One could wish that he had extended this process further. . . Enough political and social history is introduced to give an adequate background for understanding constitutional developments, and in the early part of the study these things are well integrated. Later, however, one often wonders whether he is reading general history or constitutional history." C. S. Sydnor

+ — Ann Am Acad 262:213 Mr '49 360w

"As far as is possible with the changing materials of constitutional history, this book may be called definitive." E. K. Ware

+ Pol Sci Q 64:316 Je '49 500w

Social Studies 40:143 Mr '49 20w

"The research is sound and the presentation adequate, but the footnotes would have profited by another proofreading."

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:78 Mr '49 180w

SAYERS, DOROTHY LEIGH (MRS ATHERTON FLEMING). Creed or chaos? 85p $2.25 Harcourt

230 Theology 49-7768

Seven essays and addresses in which the author gives a consideration of dogma, and its value as the basic structure of Christian faith.

Booklist 45:233; 235 Mr 15 '49

Reviewed by Deborah Webster

Cath World 169:330 Ag '49 550w

"One of the most interesting of current religious books." J. O. Supple

+ Chicago Sun Mr 2 '49 170w

"Miss Sayers' excellences of wit and style enable her to skate over what seems, to this reader, to be some very thin theological ice. The thesis of the address which gives title to the volume runs through the whole. There must be either a dogmatic creed universally accepted or social chaos." W. E. Garrison

SAYERS, D. L.—Continued
Christian Century 66:466 Ap 13 '49 1000w

Reviewed by J. S. Bixler
Crozer Q 26:374 O '49 410w

"A highly individualistic, stimulating exposition with spiritual significance as well."
+ Kirkus 17:74 F 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by Perry Miller
N Y Times p13 My 29 '49 600w
New Yorker 25:95 Je 4 '49 140w

Reviewed by Riley Hughes
Sat R of Lit 32:15 Jl 16 '49 700w

"In a vigorous style, illuminated with humour, she discusses some of the great themes of the Christian religion, setting them in sharp contrast to the moral and intellectual confusion of the day. . . But she has many interesting things to say, and she says them with a robust and cheerful common sense which is refreshing. Miss Sayers never suggests that Christianity is cheap or easy, and emphasises its concern for truth and the real needs of man and society in this present day." Marcus Knight
+ — Spec 178:410 Ap 11 '47 400w

"Most of the essays included in this book have appeared before as pamphlets. It is easy to sympathize with the public demand which has led to their being reproduced. Miss Sayers has wisely refrained from editing them, and they have therefore kept the air of spontaneity which distinguishes the best journalism. . . The secret of the success of these pungent and well-reasoned essays is probably their intense concentration of purpose."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p270 My 31 '47 850w

SAYERS, DOROTHY LEIGH (MRS ATHERTON FLEMING). Man born to be king; a play-cycle on the life of our lord and saviour, Jesus Christ; written for broadcasting. 339p $3.75 Harper

792 Jesus Christ—Drama. Radio plays 49-11274

A life of Christ, presented in the form of twelve radio plays. They are: Kings in Judaea; The King's herald; A certain nobleman; The heirs to the kingdom; The bread of heaven; The feast of tabernacles; The light and the life; Royal progress; The King's supper; The princes of this world; King of sorrow; The King comes to His own.

Booklist 46:139 D 15 '49

"Miss Sayers somewhere says' 'I am a writer, and I know my craft.' She does indeed. To be sure, I prefer her mystery stories to her theological essays. Her style is a delight in any form of composition, but her mind seems to work more accurately when dealing with baffling mysteries of her own creation than when she attempts to diagram the mysteries of the cosmic order and the ways of God to man." W. E. Garrison
+ — Christian Century 66:1424 N 30 '49 1350w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 163:16 D 15 '49 180w

+ Kirkus 17:543 O 1 '49 200w

"This play-cycle of the life of Jesus Christ is deeply moving and monumental in scope. . . Recommended for drama and religious collections." George Freedley
+ Library J 74:1605 O 15 '49 40w

"Miss Sayers's purpose, to bring alive the gospel episodes by dramatizing them as though they were happening today, is excellent. Her accomplishment is something more than respectable. The handling of dialogue is picturesque and vivid. But the plays tire before they are through, and Jesus becomes an uninspiring, because bloodless, character. Perhaps these little plays need the theater to save them." J. H. Holmes
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p38 N 13 '49 230w

"The skill which Miss Sayers has developed as a writer of mystery novels is evident in many scenes, and her formidable scholarship displays itself throughout. On the whole, however, the attempt to treat the Gospel story as a contemporary event, conforming to the dogmas of a religion founded on that event, is unsuccessful." Thomas Sugrue
— + N Y Times p49 O 23 '49 290w
Wis Lib Bul p5 N '49

SCARBROUGH, GEORGE. Tellico blue. ltd ed 122p $3 Dutton

811 49-8797

"A native of the Tellico river land of eastern Tennessee, George Scarbrough, in his first book of poems, writes with love and loyalty of that region's scene and people." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Booklist 45:332 Je 1 '49
Kirkus 17:228 Ap 15 '49 150w

"Part Cherokee, the anomaly of his mixed ancestry colors his work perhaps more strongly than Mr. Scarbrough realizes. His poems, in image and symbol, are firm and sure; they are varied and original technically, and there is often evident a harsh, primitive emotion, flushed with darkness and anger, set against the controls of civilization: the sometimes too literary diction, deriving from the latter, runs counter to a mysticism that gives us not only the man-kept land but 'the land of the spirit.' " Ruth Lechlitner
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 21 '49 190w

"Like Frost, Mr. Scarbrough gives a deeper significance to a familiar landscape or fact, a double meaning to what seems on the surface a single observation. There are several influences apparent in these poems in addition to Frost—Housman, MacLeish, John Crowe Ransome—but this is understandable enough in a young poet, and I do not mean to imply that George Scarbrough is slavishly dependent on techniques which he obviously admires. He is, I feel, still experimenting to find his own idiom, and even when he sounds a little like someone else there is enough of his own real poetic quality and individuality to make the poem his own." S. H. Hay
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:38 Jl 16 '49 500w

SCARNE, JOHN. On cards; seventy-five il. by George Karger; incl. a photographic section on cheating at cards. 406p $3.95 Crown

795.4 Cards 49-4172

Besides the most up-to-date official rules, and tables of probabilities and percentages, this book contains information on methods of detecting cheating, and full guidance on the strategy and fine points of winning play. It covers Poker and its variations; Gin and its variations; all the Rummy games including Canasta; Pinochle; Black Jack; Chemin de Fer, and other games. Index.

Booklist 45:372 Jl 1 '49

"A fascinating, thrill-filled volume."
+ Chicago Sun p6X My 29 '49 90w
Kirkus 17:165 Mr 15 '49 100w

"Unquestionably considerable gratitude is due John Scarne for his exposure of the methods used by dishonest gamblers. . . The present volume continues his exposures, and will, one hopes, prove discouraging to card sharks. But with some sixty-five pages including George Karger's clear illustrations devoted to cheating, it may at the same time be discouraging to honorable card players whose pleasure may now become marred by hitherto absent suspicion." G. S. Hellman
+ — N Y Times p23 Je 12 '49 600w

"You won't find anywhere a more detailed, exact and sound book on any of the subjects here covered, nor better advice on what to do and what not to do if you like to play cards for money." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 11 '49 200w

SCHAAF, WILLIAM LEONARD, ed. Mathematics, our great heritage; essays on the nature and cultural significance of mathematics. 291p $3.50 Harper

510.1 Mathematics—Philosophy 48-7994

"Essays by different authors, in order to show what mathematics is, what it means, what it is trying to do, and what its cultural contribution is. These essays make the reader aware that mathematics is more than skill with numbers. It is an art and a form of logic. It shows the marks of social and technical evaluation, and is the servant of engineer and scientist, bringing many dreams to fruition." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 45:46 O 1 '48

"For the mathematically literate . . . this collection of essays on the nature and cultural significance of mathematics should be a pleasure, especially if taken a bit at a time."
+ Kirkus 16:250 My 15 '48 120w

"Seventeen delightful essays. . . Recommended." Julian Sohon
+ Library J 74:553 Ap 1 '49 70w

"The essays in this book are well chosen. Laymen who read them will obtain a good idea of the nature of mathematics, its cultural importance and a few of its more significant applications. Professional mathematicians will find in them many original ideas about their branch of science. For the most part the essays are devoid of mathematical symbols and advanced terminology."
+ N Y New Tech Bks 34:9 Ja '49
School & Society 68:240 O 2 '48 10w

SCHACTER, HARRY W. Kentucky on the march; foreword by Mark F. Ethridge. 201p $3 Harper

976.9 Kentucky 49-10473

The story of the work done by the Committee for Kentucky toward the democratic regeneration of that state. The author, a department store president, was chairman of the committee. Index.

Booklist 46:62 O 15 '49

Reviewed by Ben Kartman
Chicago Sun S 19 '49 110w

Reviewed by Baker Brownell
Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 6 '49 650w

Reviewed by Baker Brownell
Christian Century 66:1298 N 2 '49 850w

Reviewed by Courtney Sheldon
Christian Science Monitor p16 S 22 '49 450w

Kirkus 17:380 Jl 15 '49 130w

"This dramatic demonstration of democracy at work is ably and enthusiastically reported here by the president of the committee. Recommended for reading by civic groups and all concerned with community welfare." M. E. Monroe
+ Library J 74:1198 S 1 '49 130w

"A simple, unpretentious, and quite inspiring account."
+ Nation 169:286 S 17 '49 50w

Reviewed by H. W. Baehr
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 O 9 '49 600w

"Mr. Schacter emphasizes that the work is just beginning. It would seem that Kentucky's ambitious rejuvenation project deserves better writing than it gets in this book." George Barrett
N Y Times p38 O 23 '49 190w
Springf'd Republican p4D S 25 '49 240w

SCHAEFER, JACK WARNER. Shane. 214p $2.50 Houghton 49-11299

Western story.

"Altho 'Shane' is not another 'Virginian,' it has the same quality, dignity, and appeal which made Owen Wister's famous novel of years ago read by people who scoffed at 'westerns.' It's a tragic, taut little tale of a grim, unforgettable, mysterious and at times sinister figure of a man." Al Chase
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 N 13 '49 160w

"A real superiority here, narrative and literary."
+ Kirkus 17:521 S 15 '49 70w

"The author has created a tale which captivates the reader's attention from beginning to end. His skill in depicting a character, a situation, or a mood, with a minimum of words, gives the story a tightly-woven quality often lacking in present-day novels. The book almost demands completion in one sitting, a feat made possible by its short length. Recommended." J. E. Brown
+ Library J 74:1461 O 1 '49 130w

"For those who like this kind of book, this short special Western is just the kind of book they will like. Its pace is steady. Its tension is of the uncoiling spring variety. It is as clean as a hound's tooth, if you'll pardon the expression." Edmund Fuller
Sat R of Lit 32:58 D 3 '49 430w
Springf'd Republican p8C N 20 '49 100w

"The author's skill in depicting character, situation and mood gives the story a quality that makes it superior to most 'westerns.'"
+ Wis Lib Bul p11 D '49

SCHAFFTER, DOROTHY. What comes of training women for war [prepared] for the Commission on implications of armed services educational programs. 223p il $3 Am. council on educ.

355.34 Military education. Education of women 48-6120

"The present volume gives facts on the training of women for the armed services, and reviews the educational implications of that training as selected service women found it. Service histories, questionnaires, and interviews are among the sources of data. . . The report is presented in three parts: The Overview, Women in Military Aviation, and Women in Medical, Nursing, and Related Services, containing eleven chapters in all." U S Quarterly Bkl

---

Reviewed by E. K. Nottingham
Am Soc R 13:786 D '48 280w

"The report deserves close attention from all those concerned with the education or the employment of women."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:311 S '48 200w

SCHAPIRO, JACOB SALWYN. Liberalism and the challenge of fascism; social forces in England and France (1815-1870). 421p $5 McGraw

323.4 Liberalism. Fascism. France—Social conditions. Great Britain—Social conditions 49-2025

"This book is devoted to a study of the formation of the pattern of liberalism in England and France, where its ideals and policies became a model, followed more or less by the other nations of Europe. It also treats of the origins of fascist ideology in these countries. . . Chapters 13 to 15, dealing with the Heralds of Fascism, aim to throw a new light on Louis Napoleon, Proudhon, and Carlyle—the light of the present on the past. The system established in France by the strange and enigmatic Emperor cannot be understood without its being seen as a historic preview of the fascist state with its popular, even socialist, appeals cloaking a ruthless personal dictatorship." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"The shortcomings liberalism inherited from the nineteenth century are so widely recognized today that they are found in the catechism of every student of politics. In extricating himself from the run-of-the-mill criticisms of the moment to discern in English and French liberalism of the last century elements of enduring value, Professor Schapiro has raised the level of discussion to a new plane." David Easton
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:1063 O '49 700w

SCHAPIRO, J. S.—Continued

Canadian Forum 29:94 Jl '49 210w

Current Hist 16:343 Je '49 50w

"Altogether, in spite of good intentions, the book is disappointing: well worth reading and with many acute observations, but oddly inconclusive and with a rather sketchy historical background. But of course the professional historian is always shocked by the historical casualness of the political thinker." A. J. P. Taylor

— + Manchester Guardian p4 My 13 '49 300w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 169:428 O 29 '49 1200w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman

New Repub 121:17 Jl 4 '49 800w

"Professor Schapiro has managed, without damaging the basic unity of his book, to fulfill the promises of both title and sub-title. He has written both a tract for these troubled times and a social and intellectual history of the nineteenth century in two European countries which, along with the United States, did most to fashion the ways of democracy." Crane Brinton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 My 1 '49 1100w

"With the fast growing interdependence of the liberal nations today, it is a pleasure to read as timely a book as 'Liberalism and the Challenge of Fascism.' It will be hard to find another that will better explain to Americans —and to the British and French—the essence and the differences of liberalism in Britain and France." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p10 Ap 24 '49 850w

"As a digest of theories the book is admirable, but its many assertions of more than doubtful historical validity make it an unsafe guide for an important period in modern history." Paul Knaplund

Pol Sci Q 64:450 S '49 700w

School & Society 69:358 My 14 '49 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p660 O 14 '49 1200w

SCHAUFFLER, ROBERT HAVEN. Franz Schubert: the Ariel of music. 427p il $5 Putnam

B or 92 Schubert, Franz Peter 49-10139

Popular biography by the author of The Unknown Brahms, Beethoven, etc. The book is in two parts: Part I The man; Part II The music. Bibliography. Glossary. List of recorded works of Schubert. Indexes.

Booklist 45:273; 46:33 Ap 15 '49; S 15 '49

Chicago Sun p6X S 4 '49 140w

Reviewed by W. P. Tryon

Christian Science Monitor p15 N 10 '49 550w

"A thorough, definitive and highly readable study of Schubert."

+ Kirkus 17:223 Ap 15 '49 160w

"Despite a style in which the composer is called 'Franzl' and allusions are more likely to be whimsical than requisite, a true portrait emerges; and most comments on the music are worthwhile. Shows knowledge of and love for the man and his works. One only wonders how convincing this romantic writing seems to 20th century students and amateurs: will it further the common impression that music is non-essential?" George Hanson

+ — Library J 74:664 Ap 15 '49 130w

Reviewed by O. E. Deutsch

Music Lib Assn Notes 7:100 D '49 1650w

"What Mr. Schauffler has not been able to do perhaps cannot be done, and certainly has not been done by earlier biographers; he has not succeeded in making Schubert interesting as a human being. Realizing or sensing this, Mr. Schauffler has swelled the biographical section of his book with poetic quotations, long asides on local color, portraits of Schubert's friends, and blasts against music publishers. The inevitable result is that the dim, small figure of Franz Schubert (he was little more than five feet tall) tends to become lost in a welter of readable, sometimes fascinating, but always tangential matter." Herbert Weinstock

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S 4 '49 1050w

"Mr. Schauffler's new book shows evidence of extensive research. There are abundant quotations from Schubert's letters and from the correspondence of those who knew him. Numerous incidental details in his life are painstakingly recorded. It would appear that such an authenticated background would give the biography a convincing quality. Yet Mr. Schauffler's fanciful comments all but engulf the facts. . . A clear impression of Schubert is almost completely obscured in the maze of Schaufflerian prose and psychoanalytical speculation." H. G. Lawrence

N Y Times p27 Ag 28 '49 550w

"As he did so admirably in his biographies of Beethoven and Schuman, Mr. Schauffler gives the essence of the man and the essence of the musician." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p31 O 16 '49 400w

"The publisher's claim that this 'will immediately become the standard and definitive study' of Schubert's life and works is, to say the least, premature. It is in fact a charming book, full of delightful minutiae and great good sense. But it is no authoritative biography. That is yet to be produced." James Lyons

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:26 Ag 27 '49 650w

SCHELKUNOFF, SERGEI ALEXANDER. Applied mathematics for engineers and scientists. 472p $6.50 Van Nostrand

510 Mathematics. Engineering 48-9464

"Explanation of those branches of mathematics needed in mathematical physics and engineering. Author presents some of the most frequently used mathematical methods, starting with elementary applications of complex variables and ending with a concise account of Bessel and Legendre functions not limited to simpler types but made adequate for the most recent application. Problems. Diagrams. Bibliographies." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 74:201 F 1 '49 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:88 N '48

SCHENKKAN, ROBERT FREDERIC, and JURGENSEN, KAI, eds. Fourteen plays for the church. 268p il $3 Rutgers univ. press

808.82 Religious dramas 48-9148

"The editors' purpose is to present religious plays of high quality, and to enable the directors of church dramatics to produce these plays effectively. Notes and diagrams concerning production have been included in this book, together with illustrations of costumes and six pieces of music. The plays appear in three groups: plays for the Christmas season, plays for the Easter season, and plays for other occasions." Publisher's note

"The two previous compilations of such plays (Osgood's Old-time Church Drama Adapted, and Robinson's Harvard Dramatic Club Miracle Plays) have been out of print for some years, so this volume will doubtless find a welcome, especially from Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches, for these have usually preferred the miracles to the more dramatic modern religious dramas favored by most other denominations. Chief features of the plays in this collection are: their simplicity of dialogue and production requirements; their brevity (from 10 to 30 minutes each); and the helpful production notes, costume drawings and music for six chants." Fred Eastman

+ Christian Century 65:1304 D 1 '48 240w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 162:15 D 15 '48 120w

Reviewed by Fred Eastman

J Religion 29:81 Ja '49 250w

"It is an effective volume in compact style with production notes and illustrations. Recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 74:128 Ja 15 '49 60w

SCHERF, MARGARET. Gilbert's last toothache. 186p $2.25 Doubleday
49-7642

Detective story.

"Pretty determined humor and negligible detection." James Sandoe
— Chicago Sun Mr 4 '49 50w

"Merry and gay."
+ Kirkus 16:649 D 15 '48 80w

New Repub 120:26 Mr 21 '49 20w

"Billed as humor and homicide, this should give you a lift without scaring you unduly." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 F 27 '49 180w

"The mystery plot is less than watertight; but Miss Scherf has sense enough to write a humorous mystery with dry wit, and the result is often delightful." Anthony Boucher
+ — N Y Times p26 Mr 27 '49 130w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p24 Mr 27 '49 120w

"High-spirited."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:38 F 26 '49 40w

SCHERF, MARGARET. Gun in Daniel Webster's bust. 218p $2.25 Doubleday 49-10571

Detective story.

Booklist 46:50 O 1 '49

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun S 30 '49 50w

Kirkus 17:375 Jl 15 '49 70w

"This is undoubtedly Miss Scherf's funniest mystery to date. Even if she does seem a bit too free and easy at times with quips about the casualties, with general callousness all round, her dialogue contains a high percentage of bull's-eyes in the way of casual wit and humor." Will Cuppy
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 S 18 '49 150w

"Those who like their humor underplayed will not be too amused. The more indulgent will find that a certain warmth and naturalness make up for occasions when the author goes after laughs with hammer and tongs." Elizabeth Bullock
N Y Times p29 S 18 '49 140w

SCHERMERHORN, RICHARD ALONZO. These our people; minorities in American culture. 635p $4.50 Heath
325.73 Minorities. U.S.—Race question. U.S.—Foreign population
49-8456

An analysis of those minority groups that have the largest population base. Partial contents: The American Indian: a preliterate culture; The American Negro: his broken culture; Mexican and Spanish-speaking Americans: a mixed culture; Japanese Americans: a historic culture acclimatized and traumatized; The Italo-American: the latest arrival; The Polish American: peasant patriot; Czech and Slovak Americans: a dual culture; The Hungarian or Magyar American exponent of honor and sociability; The Jewish community: minority with bicultural status; Minority patterns of adjustment: uniformities and variabilities; Prejudice and its reduction; Programs and policies for minority problems. Index.

"That numerous slips of the pen crop up is probably inevitable in a work so studded with details. But such errors are few and trifling. Sometimes the author depends too heavily upon 'dated' studies. . . All in all, Schermerhorn's book has substantial merits. There are more brilliant and comprehensive works in this field, but as a textbook which moves toward a limited goal the volume is one of the most able presentations of the field that has been published in a long time." J. S. Roucek
+ — Am Soc R 14:439 Je '49 360w

"Excellent for school libraries and anyone concerned with inter-group relations."
+ Booklist 45:399 Jl 15 '49

School & Society 69:255 Ap 2 '49 80w

"For at least two decades the main object of teaching about group relations in America has been to prevent the formation of stereotypes—the substitution in our thinking of group evaluations for a realistic estimation of individual character. Now this up-to-date textbook for college students in many of its chapter headings encourages such group identification. . . Why the author does this is difficult to understand. . . Nor is it clear why he considers it necessary to devote the greater part of his book to a separate analysis of population groups about all of which excellent monographs exist, instead of adopting a functional treatment. For the general chapters of this work are excellent. . . The advantages of this textbook over others in wide use are that it is reliable in its descriptive and scientific information, that its case illustrations are numerous, appealing, and clear in their significance." Bruno Lasker
+ — Survey 85:334 Je '49 400w

SCHEVILL, FERDINAND. The Medici. 240p il $4 Harcourt
945.5 Medici, House of. Florence—History
49-50140

This essay on the political and cultural history of Florence under the Medici, is introduced with three chapters on the earlier history of the city, and another chapter on the Rise of Cosimo before coming to the Rule of Cosimo beginning in 1434. The story closes with the accession to power of the younger Medician line in the person of Duke Cosimo I in 1537. Bibliographical note. Index.

Christian Century 67:18 Ja 4 '50 360w

"A serious study, not a popular presentation, for permanent rather than immediate usage."
Kirkus 17:384 Jl 15 '49 150w

Reviewed by A. J. Gaines
+ Library J 74:1198 S 1 '49 130w

"Urbane and lucid chronicle of the Medici statesmen who directed Florentine affairs almost without interruption from 1434 to 1537, the last century of the republic." Geoffrey Bruun
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p14 D 11 '49 800w

"Not only great skill but wide knowledge was necessary to weave with clear pattern the colorful and complicated story of such a city and its rulers. The pattern emerges not only to tell the story of the past, but to astonish us suddenly with parallels, never obviously drawn, but often obliquely suggested, of what our own times have accomplished, or failed to accomplish, in packed parliaments, bribed committees, broken agreements and vengeful acts." Agnes Mongan
+ N Y Times p16 D 4 '49 470w

New Yorker 25:101 Ja 21 '50 200w

SCHIFF, LEONARD ISAAC. Quantum mechanics. 404p $5.50 McGraw 530.1 Quantum theory
49-999

"A textbook designed for graduate and advanced undergraduate students who are preparing for professional work in physics. In the first chapter the author outlines the experimental evidence on which quantum mechanics is based, criticizes the old quantum theory developed by Planck, Einstein and Debye, and shows how quantum mechanics avoids the difficulty of the old theory. The remainder of the book is devoted to the mathematical theories and techniques of quantum mechanics, and here the exposition is full and is supplemented by numerous worked examples. The author is Professor of Physics at Stanford University." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

SCHIFF, L. I.—Continued

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:1599 N 1 '48 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:28 Mr '49

"It would be a mistake to forget the nearly two hundred problems which come at the chapter ends. Most of these are much more than numerical exercises; some contain very useful results. There is a good index, and the book is rather free of errors; the reviewer noticed only a couple of obvious misprints. A little more space for graphs, diagrams, and writing out matrices would have been welcome; where these were given, they were excellent." P. Morrison

+ — R of Scientific Instruments 20:693 S '49 480w

SCHIFFERES, JUSTUS JULIUS. How to live longer; with a foreword by Ralph F. Sikes. 255p $3 Dutton

613 Diseases. Death—Causes 49-7110

"This book presents in brief form an account of the disease hazards to which people in the United States are most likely to succumb. By detailing the pertinent facts concerning these diseases, the personal responsibility which each one holds for his own life and good health is demonstrated." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by D. B. Nyswander

Am J Pub Health 39:803 Je '49 360w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '49

Kirkus 16:588 N 1 '48 90w

Reviewed by F. G. Slaughter

N Y Times p12 F 27 '49 180w

"Properly read and understood, 'How to Live Longer' is an encouraging book and not one to inspire fear, which is its best recommendation." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 4 '49 380w

SCHILLING, EDMUND, ed. See Dürer, A. Drawings and water colors

SCHILLINGER, JOSEPH. Mathematical basis of the arts [ms. prepared for printer by Arnold Shaw]. 696p il $12 Philosophical lib.

701.17 Esthetics. Creation (literary, artistic, etc) 48-8770

"An unusual new field which analyzes art structures by mathematical logic. It presents the author's method of rhythmic design and an integration of science and art. The demand will be very limited, but the material presented is most unusual and difficult to find in any other publication. Appendix of tables and projects; glossary." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 45:174 Ja 15 '49

"Difficult reading. . . A monumental work for which large university and research libraries may expect insistent calls." C. K. Miller

Library J 74:310 F 15 '49 150w

Reviewed by Joseph Yasser

Music Lib Assn Notes 6:465 Je '49 3350w

SCHILPP, PAUL ARTHUR, ed. Philosophy of Ernst Cassirer. (Library of living philosophers) 936p il $6 Lib. of living philosophers, inc, 101 Fayerweather East, Northwestern univ, Evanston, Ill.

193.9 Cassirer, Ernst 49-1874

A critical survey of the life and thought of the Swedish philosopher Ernst Cassirer. It consists of biographical information, twenty-three descriptive and critical essays by contemporary philosophers, a Cassirer essay, a bibliography of his work to 1946, and an index.

Booklist 45:385 Jl 15 '49

"Professor Schilpp deserves the highest praise for executing the plan of his series, i.e., securing from first-rate philosophers their reactions to the expositions and criticisms of competent readers. It is to be hoped that in succeeding volumes he will not hesitate to exercise his editorial prerogatives in dealing with his contributors." W. A. R. Leys

+ Christian Century 66:564 My 4 '49 700w

Reviewed by Arthur Child

+ — Ethics 59:293 Jl '49 1150w

Reviewed by Iredell Jenkins

J Philos 47:43 Ja 19 '50 5150w

"The portrait that emerges from the present volume is of a rare human being and a scholar of incredible breadth. Cassirer was one of the great historians of ideas. The catholicity of his achievement reflects the fact that in his intellectual make-up he stood, as James Gutmann says, 'in many traditions,' especially 'in the great tradition of philosophic humanism.' . . The present volume differs from its predecessors in a significant respect: the proportion of expository and historical matter is much greater, and the proportion of direct criticism is much smaller. To this extent it reflects Cassirer's own philosophic method." Justus Buchler

+ Nation 169:187 Ag 20 '49 1850w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 8 '49 120w

"This volume, issued after its subject's sudden death, contains no answer or rebuttal of the philosopher to the contributors of the essays on his thought. But Cassirer's philosophy is nevertheless pretty thoroughly explored from every angle, even at the cost of some wearying repetition." J. B. Noss

+ — Social Studies 41:44 Ja '50 420w

SCHLARMAN, H. Manual of die-head thread cutting. 266p il $3.50 McGraw

621.94 Taps and dies 49-7344

"A detailed description of the basic principles and methods of cutting threads by the use of self-opening die heads and chasers. The manual is intended to serve as a practical guide for the man on the job, and deals largely with the construction and operation of the machines and thread-gaging instruments. Special attention is given to methods of locating and eliminating the causes of poor workmanship, and to the proper maintenance of machines and tools." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 45:277 Ap 15 '49

N Y New Tech Bks 34:30 Mr '49

SCHLESINGER, ARTHUR MEIER, 1888-. Paths to the present. 317p $3 Macmillan

917.3 National characteristics, American. U.S.—Civilization. U.S.—History 49-7676

"A collection of essays on American history and on the nature of the American as a political animal. Professor Schlesinger, using our history as a sharp and handy instrument, pokes into such questions as why we are a nation of joiners, how political tides have ebbed and flowed in the United States, and what influence the city has had on our civilization, and discusses the absurdity of American isolationism in view of our active participation in 'nine world wars.' . . There is also an illuminating chapter on the part food has played in the making of America, and another, previously published in a different form, which measures the relative merits of the Presidents, according to the tabulated opinions of fifty-five eminent students of history and government." (New Yorker) Index.

"This is an unusual book. Combining sound scholarship and popular appeal, it should have a large influence among historians in bringing to their attention the possibility of securing a wider audience through use of the historical essay in presenting the results of their research in the field of American history." F. M. Anderson

+ Am Hist R 55:227 O '49 250w

Reviewed by H. D. Duncan

Am J Soc 55:311 N '49 240w

Reviewed by Dorothy Culp

Ann Am Acad 264:156 Jl '49 360w

Booklist 45:240 Mr 15 '49

Bookmark 9:28 N '49 20w

"This is history to warm the newspaperman's heart. 'Paths to the Present' is accurate enough as a title for Professor Schlesinger's book, but it does not adequately describe the historian's method. In most of these familiar historical essays, he stands on some great problem of today . . . and draws a fisherman's net down across the nation's history, gathering up all the issues, incidents and anecdotes bearing on it. By the time the catch is in, it would be a stern reader whose attitudes are not altered by the freshly mobilized evidence." S. R. Davis

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 3 '49 850w

Reviewed by Paul Kiniery

Commonweal 49:595 Mr 25 '49 330w

Foreign Affairs 28:161 O '49 30w

"Interesting as well as informative, since Prof. Schlesinger has a nearly infallible instinct for the telling detail and apt quotation. Excellent bibliography, with a running commentary, adds to value of book. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 74:380 Mr 1 '49 100w

"I was most impressed by a bold and suggestive attempt to chart the cycles of liberalism and conservatism in American politics, which excited a good deal of attention when it first appeared in the Yale Review, and a charming essay on predictions of American destiny entitled Casting the National Horoscope. Possibly the least successful of the chapters is the first, on the American character, which repeats much that is familiar and sound but adds little or nothing that is new." Richard Hofstadter

+ — Nation 168:363 Mr 26 '49 1100w

"The most provocative essay in his book deals with . . . the danger of isolating American history, the unity of American with English and European social and economic and political developments. . . Four essays on national politics are less rewarding than the other essays in the volume. . . Mr. Schlesinger is at his best in the vivacious studies of food as a factor in American history and of the habit of casting the national horoscope." H. S. Commager

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Mr 13 '49 1550w

"Thirteen thoughtful and interesting essays. . . [The author] does not attempt the elevated flights of a Froude or Morley, winging his way nearer the ground. Yet he is always entertaining and instructive; he shows a versatile eye, ranging from the role of food in American life to the role of immigration, and from the American passion for joining to the American spirit in war; and he throws out some general ideas of far-reaching significance. The most pleasing aspect of the book is Mr. Schlesinger's capacity for taking long, broad views." Allan Nevins

+ N Y Times p3 F 20 '49 1650w

"An unusual and animated book."

+ New Yorker 25:94 Mr 5 '49 160w

"Twenty-seven years ago Arthur Meier Schlesinger, then a young historian at the University of Iowa, published his 'New Viewpoints in American history,' a book that allowed a generation of aspiring scholars, high-school teachers, and inquiring laymen to keep abreast of the findings of professional historians. Now Francis Lee Higginson Professor of History at Harvard, Mr. Schlesinger has written a new 'New Viewpoints in American History,' which, in its maturity, penetrating insight, and dispassionate objectivity stamps him anew as the leading interpreter of America's past." R. A. Billington

+ Sat R of Lit 32:21 Mr 12 '49 900w

School & Society 69:326 Ap 30 '49 70w

Reviewed by Donald Derby

Springf'd Republican p8C Ap 3 '49 480w

"These essays make pleasant reading. The volume is designed for the general public rather than for specialists. Footnotes are omitted; but those interested in checking further may use the bibliographical comments at the back of the book." F. H. Harrington

+ Survey 85:336 Je '49 700w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:219 Je '49 240w

Wis Lib Bul 45:105 Je '49

SCHLESINGER, ARTHUR MEIER, 1917-. The vital center; the politics of freedom. 274p $3 Houghton

321 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. Liberalism. Communism. Totalitarianism 49-5453

"Mr. Schlesinger addresses himself to the familiar but ever urgent problem of the survival of liberalism and tolerance in a world confronted by problems that appear to require extremist solutions and assailed by the competing claims of Communism and Fascism. . . [His] essay is divided into four major sections. The first analyzes the confusion of politics in an age of anxiety; the second addresses itself to the failure of the Right, the third to the failure of the Left; a final section submits a program for the reinvigoration of democratic liberalism." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Index.

"Mr. Schlesinger is expertly clear and navigates smoothly a treacherously complicated course."

+ Atlantic 184:86 O '49 300w

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo

Atlantic 184:92 D '49 700w

Booklist 46:2; 28 S 1 '49; S 15 '49

"The strength of Mr. Schlesinger's tract is in the vigor of his attack. The questions raised by the book are in the area usually obscured by dust in the heat of battle. They can be raised only tentatively, since in all conscience, the reader ought to recognize that Mr. Schlesinger has not given his answers to questions from the ivory tower. He had a previous engagement at the hustings." S. R. Davis

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 S 15 '49 1800w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '49

"'The Vital Center's' most suggestive pages seem to deal with the lack of conviction with which the business man has defended his interests in the course of modern history. Valid but less startling are the resemblances noted by the author between the totalitarianisms of the Right and of the Left. But it is when he tackles the present and future that Mr. Schlesinger is often least convincing." E. S. S.

Commonweal 50:538 S 9 '49 420w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 17:284 N '49 750w

"This is a plea for freedom as a fighting faith, for democracy to recharge its moral energy, strengthen its recognition of the individual. A difficult but important book."

+ Kirkus 17:221 Ap 15 '49 410w

Reviewed by Donald Wasson

Library J 74:1318 S 15 '49 110w

"Fortunately there is more than enough in this book to wipe out the blemishes many times over—so much that is lucidly argued and richly packed with quotation and information. . . In effect, Schlesinger calls for a shift in alignment—not left against right, but the means against the extremes. Here is fresh thinking with a vegeance, and pamphleteering in the grand manner." Robert Bendiner

+ — Nation 169:267 S 17 '49 2000w

"'The Vital Center' commands attention for the penetration of its analysis, the lucidity of its presentation, the vigor of its argument. Its sophistication and brilliance remind us of the early volumes of Walter Lippmann, and its arguments and conclusions parallel those of 'The Good Society.'" H. S. Commager

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 S 11 '49 2500w

"Mr. Schlesinger's new book is a manifesto, written with the energy, boldness and certainty characteristic of manifestants, but with a good deal more wit than is to be found in most of the tribe. It is the turning of a much-trodden

SCHLESINGER, A. M.—Continued
worm, a defiant confession of faith in liberalism, that political philosophy which has been booted around by both radical and reactionary until its very name has become, if not exactly an epithet, at best a badge of futility and fatuity." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Times p6 S 11 '49 700w

New Yorker 25:87 O 1 '49 200w

Reviewed by R. H. Uhlig

San Francisco Chronicle p19 S 11 '49 800w

"This is a book which should be read not merely because of the brave eloquence of its author, but because of the conviction with which he reports the advent of a courageous mid-century generation equipped not merely with fears but a lucid and compelling faith." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 32:11 S 10 '49 1050w

Reviewed by Robert Cousins and S. T. Williamson

Sat R of Lit 33:33 Ja 28 '50 30w

"Perhaps it may be fair to say that unpredictability is one of the few traits most liberals seem to have in common. That makes writing about them difficult. But Mr. Schlesinger displays a sure-footed sense of direction in his own interpretation of liberalism and he writes with learning and ease. His book deserves to be read widely and with care." Donald Derby

+ Springf'd Republican p4D S 25 '49 550w

SCHLOAT, G. WARREN. Adventures of a letter [phot. by the author]. 48p $2 Scribner

383 Postal service—Juvenile literature 49-10459

Text and photographs showing what happens to an air mail letter from the time it is mailed by the author's son in Los Angeles until it is received in White Plains, N.Y., by Jack West who is recovering from the mumps.

Booklist 46:53 O 1 '49

"The style is so flat and uninspired that its competence in relation to the jobs of the employees, the equipment of the U.S.P.O., the various phases of the journey is not enough to offset it. There have been several books on this subject; this offers more photographs than any of its predecessors and is more up-to-the-minute than my favorite on the subject (Pogo's Letter) [Book Review Digest 1946]."

— + Kirkus 17:470 S 1 '49 120w

"Excellent informational material for many age groups and fields of study. Recommended highly, but single-stitched binding and board covers necessitate prebinding for library use." Harriet Morrison

+ Library J 74:1465 O 1 '49 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p8 N 13 '49 130w

SCHLOAT, G. WARREN. What shall I do? 89p il spir pa $2 Scribner

680 Amusements. Handicraft 49-7913

"The editor of the children's column in Look presents, in photographs and a minimum of text, step-by-step instructions for tricks, games, and things to make and do—such as juggling, indoor croquet, making a railway tunnel, a mask, and fudge. Practically all materials needed can be found in the home. For grades 4-7." Booklist

---

Booklist 45:266 Ap 1 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Jl 2 '49 90w

"Good readers can work things out for themselves, but there are some things that younger children can do with some adult help. A godsend for convalescent periods—and for busy parents at any time."

+ Kirkus 17:111 Mr 1 '49 160w

"Every step is made clear in excellent groups of good, big photographs. Most of them show G. W. S. 3d busy as a bee. His absorbed or very careful expressions will prove most encouraging to those who follow his father's clever, brief directions. . . Parents will appreciate the frequent reminders to clean up the mess. A grand book." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 17 '49 180w

+ Sat R of Lit 32:36 Ag 13 '49 80w

Springf'd Republican p5D Ap 17 '49 90w

SCHMIDT, ALOIS X., and MARLIES, CHARLES ANGELL. Principles of high-polymer theory and practice; fibers, plastics, rubbers, coatings, adhesives. 743p il $7.50 McGraw

660.284 Polymers and polymerization 48-10926

"Textbook for undergraduate or graduate chemical engineering students. Authors purpose to strike a balance among chemistry, physical chemistry, rheology, mechanics of materials and manufacturing techniques. Book covers principles of high polymer theory and practices which fosters basic understanding of the formation, properties, manufacture, development, fabrication and applications of all materials of high molecular weight, whether plastics, rubbers, fibers, surface coatings, adhesives or wood products." (Library J) Index.

"This textbook provides an excellent summary of the chemistry and physics of high polymers, particularly in regard to their use in the fields of fibers, plastics, rubbers, coatings, and adhesives. . . The book is very well written, with practically no errors. . . In some chapters the numerous equations would be much easier to follow if tables of nomenclature had been included. The book should be extremely useful, not only as a text but also to chemists and chemical engineers working in the plastics industry." C. C. Winding

+ Chem & Eng N 27:242 Ja 24 '49 400w

"For the serious students this book provides a valuable tool for preparation in entering the field of high polymer production and utilization, in giving him a thorough understanding of the principles involved. . . While the book is recommended for use either on the undergraduate or graduate level, it appears that it will be most useful as a textbook in a graduate course in high polymer chemistry." P. F. Bruins

+ Chem Eng 56:295 Ja '49 300w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 73:1281 S 15 '48 80w

"Most of the material presented will be of more use to men preparing for practical manufacturing and related work than to men preparing for theoretical research. Because of its broad scope and the abundance of technical data, the work should find some use in libraries as a reference book."

N Y New Tech Bks 33:92 N '48

SCHNEIDER, HERMAN, and SCHNEIDER, MRS NINA. How your body works; introd. by Milton I. Levine; with il. by Barbara Ivins. 160p pa $2.50 Scott, W. R.

612 Physiology—Juvenile literature 49-11536

Physiology text for ages nine to twelve. It covers "all processes of the body in its daily, normal functioning and [shows] how to maintain good health. Does not treat of old age, sickness, or infancy, nor give sex information." (Library J)

Booklist 46:146 D 15 '49

"This is, perhaps, the best of the superior 'Let's Find Out' series of first science books for children. [It is] an excellent physiology, carefully thought out and admirably presented."

+ Kirkus 17:605 N 1 '49 240w

"Excellent introduction to physiology. . . Many simple home experiments and clear line drawings by Barbara Ivins illustrate and clarify the points made. Approach is objective, style is readable, and facts easy to comprehend. Good table of contents and index. Highly recommended for ages 9-12." E. A. Groves

+ Library J 74:1918 D 15 '49 80w

SCHNIER, JACQUES PRESTON. Sculpture in modern America. 224p pl $7.50 Univ. of Calif.

735 Sculpture, American 48-11026

"The object of this book is to present a comprehensive survey of present-day American sculpture—to review the major schools or movements of contemporary sculpture, to describe the events leading to the establishment of these schools, and to show examples of the work of the leading exponents of the various movements. . . The text is to be considered no more than an introduction to the illustrations." (Pref) Indexes.

Booklist 45:133 D 15 '48

Kirkus 16:592 N 1 '48 150w

"A useful general reference and valuable addition to the student or collector's library."

+ School Arts 48:12a Ap '49 60w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:9 Mr '49 300w

SCHNITTKIND, HENRY THOMAS (HENRY THOMAS, pseud). Science subjects made easy; a guide to the 10 basic sciences [by] Henry Thomas. 513p il maps $3.95 Doubleday

500 Science 49-11061

Outline courses in the fundamentals of ten sciences. Each course is provided with review questions, brief biographical sketches, bibliography, and a survey of vocational opportunities. There is a general index at the end of the book. Sciences thus summarized are Astronomy, Geology, Geography, Chemistry, Physics, Mathematics, Biology, Anthropology, Physiology, Psychology.

Booklist 46:102 N 15 '49

"Dr. Thomas has done a useful job in summarizing in 30 to 40 pages each the basic ideas and subject matter of 10 different disciplines." L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p37 D 4 '49 100w

"With a hundred or so thumbnail biographies of great scientists, a gross or so descriptions of scientific careers, ten booklists, and at the end of each section, a 50 question quiz. The result may seem on the surface, a miracle of concision and organization, but underneath is a mass of ill-digested highlights that shed very little light indeed."

— + Kirkus 17:349 Jl 1 '49 130w

"The life sciences seem to be the weakest part of this far from robust book, and some of the zoological errors are grotesque. The common error that Darwin discussed man in the Origin of Species is repeated, and the anthropology section is a joke. . . It seems incredible that an established publishing house could sanction such a project as this, evidently prepared by someone who has never heard that 'a little learning is a dangerous thing.' " J. W. H.

— San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 6 '49 250w

SCHOENBERNER, FRANZ. Inside story of an outsider. 273p $3.50 Macmillan

B or 92 49-3851

"In 'Confessions of a European Intellectual' [Book Review Digest 1946] Mr. Schoenberner told the story of his youth in Berlin, and of the political and intellectual life in Germany and Central Europe. . . In [this book] he relates how he spent six years of poverty at the French Riviera before he was interned when the war broke out; how he succeeded in reaching this country; and finally how he became an American writer although he knew little English when he landed in New York in 1941." (Sat R of Lit) No index.

Booklist 45:392 Jl 15 '49

Reviewed by Florence Medow

Chicago Sun p6X Jl 3 '49 200w

"It is the attitude he exhibited under duress (especially when he was interned by the French authorities during the war) that makes this report so valuable a contribution to the prewar and war history of Europe. It is himself, as an individual, rather than the experiences he describes, that holds the reader. Mr. Schoenberner never lost his personal dignity; he continued to love beautiful things; he preserved his deep feeling for human values." E. K.

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 18 '49 600w

Current Hist 17:286 N '49 40w

"A beautifully written, profound book, which those who knew the old Europe will, perhaps, cherish most."

+ Kirkus 17:168 Mr 15 '49 190w

"A hundred years ago, a young German named Carl Schurz came to these shores in quest of freedom. Later on he expressed his thanks in a memorable eulogy of Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Schoenberner's book would, I think, have greatly pleased Schurz. Despite all its individuality and its quirks, its random maliciousness and its sweeping generalizations, it is by all odds the best account of the new German migration and its meaning. The author is warm-hearted, hard-headed and sincere." G. N. Shuster

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Jl 17 '49 750w

"Mr. Schoenberner hides his philosophy so adroitly under a well-knit mantle of anecdotes that one is apt to forget how much he has to say. His book should be given to all Europeans who have got their impressions of America from gangster movies and the books of Mr. Erskine Caldwell, and to all Americans who enjoy meeting an erudite, wise and witty man." Richard Plant

+ N Y Times p9 Je 19 '49 700w

New Yorker 25:85 Je 25 '49 200w

"The author, a former editor of Simplicissimus, one of the leading German literary and political reviews in pre-Hitler days, not only appears quite at home in this, his adopted, country; his book makes a first-rate contribution to American cultural life." David Hecht

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 9 '49 800w

"More personal and less anecdotal, more moving and less entertaining than his first, Franz Schoenberner's new book is never disappointing because it is written with that caustic Gallic-like esprit that is now so rarely found." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 32:28 Jl 2 '49 750w

"The experiences and observations of a highly intellectual and sensitive newcomer, arriving under abnormal wartime conditions, are told with an unusual understanding of the difficulties encountered by him and by the Americans who sponsored him. His efforts to conquer the English language as spoken by Americans, to find a job and adjust himself to it, are recounted with unfailing humor and perceptiveness. His appraisal of this country and his eagerness to contribute his energies to keep free democracy alive indicate that the United States is the gainer when men like Mr. Schoenberner become citizens." C. B. Mahon

+ Survey 85:451 Ag '49 750w

SCHOLZ, JACKSON VOLNEY. Johnny King, quarterback. 221p $2.50 Morrow

49-9795

"The story of a college backfield that was held together and fired into greatness by the intelligence of Johnny King. All four expected to play pro football, but an accident delayed Johnny's entrance into the pro game, and the other three made a sorry showing in their first year. How Johnny, with his friends' help, saved his father's lumber business from failure, and how he finally sparked the backfield to a great comeback, is told in this story." N Y Times

Booklist 46:50 O 1 '49

SCHOLZ, J. V.—Continued
Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun N 5 '49 50w
Reviewed by Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 13 '49 110w
Kirkus 17:431 Ag 15 '49 100w

"The football is authentic and the story convincing. Recommended for cautious buying by the children's room but for all teen-age collections." M. D. Read
Library J 74:1682 N 1 '49 40w
Reviewed by R. A. Brown
N Y Times p34 O 30 '49 90w
Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:30 N 1 '49 30w

SCHULZE, R. BURT. Aluminum and magnesium design and fabrication. 589p il $7.50 McGraw

673 Aluminum. Magnesium 49-6731

A study of light-metal design and fabrication. There are extensive treatments of cost analysis and forming with rubber on hydraulic presses. Index.

Booklist 46:117 D 1 '49
N Y New Tech Bks 34:98 N '49

SCHUMAN, FREDERICK LEWIS. International politics; the destiny of the western state system; maps by George D. Brodsky. 4th ed 1026p maps $5.50 McGraw

940.5 World politics. International relations. State, The. Nationalism and nationality 48-4757

The fourth edition of a textbook first published in 1933 is reorganized and has extensive additions to cover recent history. For earlier editions see Book Review Digest 1933, 1937 and 1941.

"While Schuman comes close to accepting the Marxist interpretation of history, he refuses to recognize the Soviet Union as the knight in shining armor among the nations of the world. . . Nevertheless, in his references to the United States and the other Western democracies and to the Soviet Union, and to events in which they have been involved, he indicates a definitely prejudiced attitude. It is an attitude more appropriate to political agitation and special pleading than to a textbook in international relations. It manifests itself not so much in misstatements of fact as in the choice of facts, the conclusions that are drawn on the basis of selected facts, and the inferences that are encouraged. . . For students with some background in history, political science, and economics, and considerable maturity of thought, Schuman's book is an intellectual challenge. For beginners, without adequate means of correcting its distortions, it is an unsuitable, even dangerous, book to use." L. M. Goodrich
— + Am Pol Sci R 43:153 F '49 1500w
Booklist 45:142 D 15 '48
School & Society 68:358 N 20 '48 90w

SCHUMANN, ELISABETH. German song; with 4 pl. in colour & 41 black-and-white illustrations [tr. from the ms. by D. Millar Craig]. (World of music) 71p $2.50 Chanticleer

784.3 Songs, German 49-7685

"This book makes no claim to be a comprehensive survey of the origin and development of German Song. . . But, though I have not lost sight of the way in which my subject is bound up with the history of music itself, I have confined myself mainly to an analysis, as adequate as possible, of the poetry and music of a considerable number of the masterpieces of German song literature and the characteristics of their creators." (Author's note) To the usual exponents of the art of the lieder—Schubert, Schumann, Brahms, and Wolf, the author adds the name of Richard Strauss, and her book is devoted mainly to a study of these five. Illustrated in color and in black and white. Index.

Booklist 45:212 F 15 '49
Christian Science Monitor p15 N 10 '49 240w
Reviewed by Catherine Keyes
Library J 73:1819 D 15 '48 40w

"As a long-time admirer of Mme. Schumann, certainly one of the great Liedersingers of our time, I approached her book on German Song with anticipation and no little enthusiasm. I am glad that she has written a highly personal book for the layman, reflecting some of her own enthusiasms, for there is much to be done in promoting popular understanding in this field of music." P. L. Miller
+ Music Lib Assn Notes 6:306 Mr '49 480w
Reviewed by Gerald Johnson
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 F 13 '49 190w
Reviewed by Howard Taubman
N Y Times p27 F 13 '49 70w

"Another instance wherein the content deserves more extended treatment. Mme. Schumann's panoramic account of the lied shows the subtle taste and acute intelligence which have long been evident in her recitals. Few singers can write with this perspicuity." Roland Gelatt
+ Sat R of Lit 32:62 Ja 29 '49 40w

"All lovers of Lieder will be anxious to read Madame Schumann's book if it is only to learn the personal preferences of so great an exponent of the art of singing. . . She writes with the intimate experience of a lifetime of these men's music, and most of us will be content to abide by her judgements of them. I only found myself in humble but impenitent disagreement with her on the question of Schumann's Dichterliebe. I cannot find 'the lyric purity tainted by the poet's irony' in that magic cycle, nor can I rate it beneath Frauenliebe und Leben as she does." Martin Cooper
+ Spec 181:878 D 31 '48 270w

"Mme. Schumann has found a good translator in Mr. D. Millar Craig. . . Pictorially she is less fortunate in that many of the woodcuts are in the sentimental vein of nineteenth-century German romanticism, and owe their inclusion to their period interest. . . Mme. Schumann has, however, a superb subject on which she can speak with authority and she shows herself a good critic, alike in her appreciation of Wolf and in a short chapter on interpretation. Not all performers have sufficient detachment or historical sense to have appraised so skilfully composers so different in their approach to poetry as Schubert, Brahms, Wolf and Richard Strauss. The lesser writers have perforce to be briefly summarized, so that, for instance, Loewe's ballads only get a sentence—they are a male perquisite, it is true—but deserve more, since they are a unique phenomenon in German Song."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p38 Ja 15 '49 240w

SCHWALBACH, JAMES ALFRED. Fun-time crafts; educational advisor, David W. Russell. [37p] $1.25 Childrens press

680 Handicraft 49-8992

Instructions for making things with scrap materials. Projects include kites, masks, accessories, tops, Christmas tree trimmings, junk jewelry, lamps, and dolls. For ages 6-10.

Booklist 45:378 Jl 1 '49
Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Jl 2 '49 50w

"Delightful little book of simple crafts for younger children." J. S. Watts
+ Library J 74:896 Je 1 '49 70w
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 My 15 '49 120w

SCHWARTZ, ANTHONY MAX, and PERRY, J. W. Surface active agents; their chemistry and technology. 579p il $10 Interscience

660.284 Chemistry, Physical and theoretical 49-8799

"This book summarizes systematically the achievements of the last three decades in developing a host of new products in the field. Laboratory synthesis, commercial production and uses are ably grouped in a novel system, according to the nature of the solubilizing group and the way it is joined. The discussion of the physico-chemical aspects of surface-active agents adds to the comprehensiveness and broad background of the book, even though most of the material could be found elsewhere." Chem Eng

"The book as a whole is well set-up, printing is good and no typographical errors have been noted. Indexing is good, which enhances the volume's value as a reference. In short, it is a pleasure to recommend this volume to anyone interested in the subject." N. B. Tucker
+ Am Chem Soc J 71:3581 O '49 350w

"The main contribution of the book is in giving us the processes for synthesizing and manufacturing which refers to over 1,500 patents, as well as the practical applications of surface-active agents. Evaluation of detergency is adequately discussed. The book is well indexed and should be a valuable addition to the library of every technical man and company interested in surface-active agents." R. S. Aries
+ Chem Eng 56:279 Ag '49 200w

"The book should be useful to graduate students in universities, and to research workers interested in detergency, wetting, foaming, emulsification, and spreading. The excellent treatment of the subject matter is further supplemented by many references to the current literature."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:283 Je '49 170w

SCHWARTZ, HARRY. Soviet economy; a selected bibliography of materials in English. 93p $2.25; pa $1.75 Syracuse univ. press

016.330947 Russia—Economic conditions—Bibliography. Russia—Economic policy—Bibliography 49-3845

"A bibliography in which the material, confined to items in English, is arranged by subject and provided with helpful comments." Foreign Affairs

Foreign Affairs 28:167 O '49 20w

"Every guide to material from or about the USSR has special interest today, even when it concerns secondary sources, and these selected descriptions of books, pamphlets, and magazine articles in English should contribute significantly to the American scholar's knowledge of the Soviet economy."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:59 My 14 '49 50w

SCHWARZ, KARL. Jewish artists of the 19th and 20th centuries. 273p pl $4.75 Philosophical lib.

709.03 Artists, Jewish 49-11463

"This book is an attempt to evaluate the contribution of the Jewish artists of the 19th and 20th centuries from the wealth of the available arts and their creations. Only the outstanding individuals have been singled out in order to explain by their lives and their work the development of Jewish art in a Christian world. The author made it a point to discuss the various artists in their environmental conditioning. In this sense this work is as much an illustration of modern art in general as Jewish artistic creativity in particular." (Publisher's note) Index.

"One wonders why such first-rate artists as Max Weber, Maurice Sterne, Max Band, Marc Chagall, Camille Pissarro, Jules Pascin, William Gropper, are characterized as essentially Jewish when actually the great beauty of their work is international and has no particular religious flavor. However, with this single reservation, this book can be highly recommended." Irving Stone
+ — Chicago Sun p12X D 4 '49 90w

Reviewed by Dorothy Adlow
Christian Science Monitor p15 N 17 '49 600w

SCHWARZ, LEO WALDER, ed. The root and the bough; the epic of an enduring people. 362p $3.75 Rinehart

940.5315296 World war, 1939-1945—Jews. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives
49-11316

"From the personal records and transcripts of interviews which made up the dreadful mosaic of persecution of 'inferior' peoples by the Nazis, Leo W. Schwarz has compiled thirty-three first-person accounts of those who came through with unbroken spirit. They cover life in the ghettos of Warsaw and Vilna and with the partisans in the forests of Russia and Poland. They tell of existence in the slave labor camps—Auschwitz, Allendorf, and the rest." (N Y Times) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 46:140 D 15 '49
Bookmark 9:54 D '49 40w

"Dramatic, poignant, authentic, this is moving reading—inspiring rather than harrowing, and reenforcing one's faith in the dominance of the right."
+ Kirkus 17:499 S 1 '49 140w

Reviewed by C. W. Roth
Library J 74:1318 S 15 '49 140w

"They are inspiring stories, and all true." Delbert Clark
+ N Y Times p20 O 30 '49 450w

"There is nothing depressing or pessimistic in this book. On the contrary, many of the stories have a heart-warming quality and even sardonic humor. And all the reports bear witness that the Nazi efforts to destroy the human spirit were markedly unsuccessful." I. B.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p35 N 20 '49 470w

SCHWEITZER, ALBERT. Goethe: four studies; tr. by Charles R. Joy. 116p $2.50 Beacon press

832.62 Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von 49-9881

"The present volume contains two very important new documents, never before translated into English: an essay on 'Goethe the Philosopher,' and an address 'Goethe as Thinker and Man,' both dating from 1932. The other two Goethe addresses appeared in print a year ago in partly abridged versions. . . To a certain extent, Schweitzer is creating in his own image a Goethe who is not so much the poet, the artistic genius struggling with his demon, as a Goethe who is a symbol and embodiment of a great ethical idea, the faithful student and philosopher of nature, the great exemplar of a rarely achieved balance between spiritual creativity and practical activity in selfless service to his fellowmen." N Y Times

+ Christian Century 66:862 Jl 20 '49 2050w

"Schweitzer's competence in so many fields—music, theology, philosophy—has this great value: that in his treatment of a specific subject he can put it into the framework of its cultural significance. This is the case with these four studies which stress the philosophical aspect of Goethe." H. W. Steiger
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 7 '49 850w

Reviewed by Max Fischer
Commonweal 51:271 D 9 '49 1250w

Reviewed by P. S. Miller
Crozer Q 27:89 Ja '50 450w

Reviewed by Franz Schoenberner
+ N Y Times p6 Jl 3 '49 950w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan
New Yorker 25:102 S 17 '49 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 30 '49 320w

Reviewed by J. M. Cohen
Spec 183:432 S 30 '49 180w

SCHWEITZER, ALBERT. Memoirs of childhood and youth; tr. by C. T. Campion. Am ed 78p $1.75 Macmillan

B or 92 49-10619

Informally written memoirs covering the author's life up to the age of nineteen. In addition to anecdotes and stories of school and home life there are little essays on his spiritual and philosophical beliefs.

Booklist 46:33 S 15 '49

"The little book on early memories is winsome and charming. Much of it, especially the earlier part, could be read by children, though it is not a juvenile. Its most understanding readers will be those who can look back upon their childhoods reflectively and from a considerable distance, as the author does on his." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 66:965 Ag 17 '49 250w

Library J 74:1559 O 15 '49 30w

"Dr. Schweitzer tells his story with frankness and simplicity, and though he takes many a good-humored poke at himself as an earnest young man, he respects that young man, and with reason."

+ New Yorker 25:66 S 3 '49 120w

Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich

Springf'd Republican p7C O 9 '49 270w

SCHWEITZER, ALBERT. Out of my life and thought; an autobiography; tr. by C. T. Campion; postscript by Everett Skillings. 274p $3.50 Holt

B or 92 49-9927

A reissue of Dr. Schweitzer's autobiography originally published in 1933 (Book Review Digest 1933). An added chapter by Everett Skillings covers the years between 1932 and 1949.

Booklist 45:365; 397 Jl 1 '49; Jl 15 '49

Chicago Sun p8X Jl 17 '49 60w

"Although Schweitzer's nine-tenths of this book has been available so long that under ordinary circumstances it would not rate a review, the remarkable wave of interest in his personality and work gives it much more significance than usually attaches to a new edition of an old book. . . This volume is, among other things, the story of Schweitzer's intellectual life. It is important as an introduction to the study of his principal works. Besides that, it is a superb introduction to the man." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 66:964 Ag 17 '49 900w

Kirkus 17:315 Je 15 '49 340w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p75 S 25 '49 850w

"This small book cannot be urged on the reader strongly enough. For one thing, the autobiography restores a balance about the man, and the sense of a too-crowded attainment . . . is diminished. For another, the book is done with such simplicity and honesty and innocence (though without naïveté) that Dr. Schweitzer becomes extraordinary once again—though this time by virtue of qualities that are man-size rather than superhuman." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p20 Jl 10 '49 550w

"This book, in which Dr. Schweitzer discusses each of his many lives, is a stirring lesson in the humanities."

+ New Yorker 25:67 Jl 30 '49 200w

"To his achievements should be added the writing of this book about himself which is everything an autobiography should be. Rich and lucid, humorous and humble, it is good to have back in circulation after all these years." V. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 2 '49 200w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 32:33 S 24 '49 450w

SCHWEITZER, ALBERT. Philosophy of civilization, tr. by C. T. Campion [rev. by Mrs Charles E. B. Russell]. 347p $5 Macmillan

901 Civilization—Philosophy 49-6468

"New, one-volume, American reprint of author's famous work, originally delivered as the Dale Memorial lectures at Oxford in 1922 and published in England [in two volumes, Decay and Restoration of Civilization, and Civilization and Ethics] with the as-yet unfulfilled promise of two more volumes to follow. In this work Schweitzer examines the decay of modern civilization and develops the thesis that its cause is man's failure to develop an optimistic philosophical and ethical world view. Here appears for the first time his idea of the 'reverence for life' as a basic ideal—the core of his whole philosophy." Library J

Booklist 46:100 N 15 '49

Christian Century 66:1394 N 23 '49 280w

Reviewed by H. W. Steiger

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 29 '49 800w

Churchman 164:17 Ja 15 '50 270w

Kirkus 17:451 Ag 15 '49 210w

"Now readily available for the first time to American readers, this book should be much more widely read. Yet it is difficult and not for popular consumption. Larger libraries will want to purchase." G. W. Wakefield

Library J 74:1198 S 1 '49 140w

"This book is important as a document of the deepest sincerity and obviously long years of reflection, although the sincerity has to break through a stuffy, long-winded Germanic academicism of language and an incredibly inept translation." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Times p6 O 9 '49 1350w

New Yorker 25:168 N 19 '49 160w

Reviewed by R. F. Henchey

Springf'd Republican p19A O 23 '49 330w

SCHWEITZER, ALBERT. Quest of the historical Jesus; a critical study of its progress from Reimarus to Wrede; with a pref. by F. C. Burkitt [tr. by W. Montgomery]. Am ed 413p $5 Macmillan

232.9 Jesus Christ 48-11436

"A survey of the persistent, learned, ingenious, and sometimes fantastic attempts which were made between 1778 and 1901 to arrive at the truth behind the Gospel narratives of Jesus's life, mission, death, and resurrection. From the pioneer, fragmentary essays of Reimarus, down to his own 'Sketch of the Life of Jesus,' Schweitzer makes his way through the thorny wilderness of German critical theology, past the remarkable reconstructions of the imaginative biographers fathered by Bahrdt, and across the Rhine—where he turns his deadly wit upon Renan's popular sentimentality and highly successful literary sleight-of-hand." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

"So competent is the writing, it's hard to realize that Schweitzer is not only theologian and philosopher, but an M.D., and one of the world's foremost interpreters of Bach's music to boot." M. R.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 3 '49 150w

"The whole performance is scholarly and urbane, and a fine example of critical exposition. It is a mystery story on the highest possible level, enlivened by Dr. Schweitzer's wit, and enriched by his effective command of simile and metaphor. One may think that his own arguments are as vulnerable as many that he attacks, that his conclusions are shot through with ambiguities; but his book affords a wide view of a whole library of critical theology, and is, as far as I know, the best introduction to its subject." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 32:27 F 12 '49 340w

SCOGGIN, MARGARET CLARA, comp. More chuckle-bait; funny stories for every-one [decorations by Saul Steinberg]. 285p $2.50 Knopf

49-11090

Twenty-two humorous stories in a companion volume to Chucklebait (Book Review Digest 1945). The stories are arranged under the following headings: Growing pains; Problem parents; For the love of sport; The way of a man with a maid; Minor mishaps; Our furred and feathered friends. Partial contents: One of our future poets, you might say, by William Saroyan; The convent stage, by Agnes Repplier; Mama and Papa, by Kathryn Forbes; Father writes his sermon, by Hartzell Spence: Guinea pig, by Ruth McKenney; Deck tennis, by C. O. Skinner and Emily Kimbrough; How the Pickwickians disported themselves upon the ice, by Charles Dickens; Mr. Collins' proposal, by Jane Austen; The first day, by George and Helen Papashvily; The pacing goose, by Jessamyn West; Saturday's child has far to go, by Robert Lawson.

Booklist 46:84 N 1 '49

"A good book for family reading aloud and one that libraries will want to have on their shelves." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 N 17 '49 180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 25:541 N '49 50w

Kirkus 17:477 S 1 '49 140w

"Young people will laugh well over this varied collection of funny stories. . . Irresistible line drawings." M. J. Meade

+ Library J 74:1830 D 1 '49 70w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ja 1 '50 140w

"Here is 'More Chucklebait,' a worthy companion to the first. In fact, it's even better, for there are twenty-two stories to 'Chucklebait's' twenty. . . Their humor is genuine, their appeal timeless. . . Primarily intended for teenagers, 'More Chucklebait' is for all who are young in spirit." A. N. Fedder

+ N Y Times p50 O 23 '49 180w

Wis Lib Bul p15 D '49

SCOTT, ALICE HOWARD. Picture dictionary for boys and girls; prepared under the supervision of Stella Stewart Center, il. by Anna Camesas and Mary Jungbeck. 316p $2.95 Garden City pub. co.

423 English language—Dictionaries 49-10608

"There are now word-books and dictionaries for all ages of children from pre-school up. This new one, fully illustrated in gay colors, contains 3,658 words and variants, through sixth-grade vocabulary, of which 1,700 have pictures. The words are explained by using them in brief sentences which both define them and make use of them. The definitions are very simple." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"The 1700 pictures are very lively and colorful, and the accompanying text will furnish the reader with recreation as well as instruction in the basic reading skills. Public libraries will need to have volume reinforced." Elizabeth Sussdorff

+ Library J 74:1609 O 15 '49 80w

"Children of sixth grade ought to be beyond such a book; but readers in the first three grades and also retarded readers should find it both useful and enjoyable. They would like especially the descriptions of words which can mean two things, and the showing of the more difficult tenses and plurals." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 N 13 '49 230w

SCOTT, ALMA OLIVIA (SCHMIDT) (GEORGIA TRAVERS, pseud). Wanda Gág; the story of an artist. 235p $3 Univ. of Minn.

B or 92 Gág, Wanda 49-50098

"A friend of many years tells the story of that brilliant printmaker who also was the creator of 'Millions of Cats' and other wonderful books for children. Mrs. Scott shows us the beginnings of Wanda's art in her Minnesota childhood, a simple, frugal but merry life which had its roots in her ancestors' native Bohemia. We see the development of her gifts through years of desperate struggle in her youth and in later years when success only stimulated her to further achievement and experimentation." (N Y Times) Index.

Booklist 46:127 D 1 '49

Bookmark 9:80 Ja '50 50w

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun p17 D 3 '49 350w

Reviewed by E. C. Ince

Christian Science Monitor p15 N 10 '49 550w

"Told objectively yet affectionately, it brings the whole charming Gag family into the narrative. It will not take the place of Growing Pains, but supplements it beautifully." Esther Gorey

+ Library J 74:1549 O 15 '49 70w

"Charming, unpretentious and well documented biography. . . The vein is a little rhapsodic and almost never critical. There is a Hänsel and Gretel lilt to the writer's prose. But there was much of Hänsel and Gretel in Wanda's background and in her own literary and graphic style. The many small chapter heads are chosen with discernment, and there are more than thirty full page half-tone reproductions." George Biddle

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 N 13 '49 950w

"It is a revealing record of a woman of great independence of spirit, originality and integrity, which is of interest to all aspiring young people, but especially to artists. It is well illustrated with Wanda Gág's own work and with interesting photographs." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p30 N 13 '49 180w

SCOTT, ERNEST FINDLAY. Purpose of the Gospels. 171p $2.50 Scribner

226 Bible. N.T.—Gospels—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 49-7687

"Tries to show that the deliberate writing down of the Gospels many years after Jesus' death was done to give reality to Jesus' actions and a firm foundation for our faith. Assuming that the purpose was a religious one, the author considers the four Gospels as a whole and ignores the discrepancies among them." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 45:274 Ap 15 '49

"While Dr. Scott may be too sanguine about the historical accuracy of the Gospels, his major thesis needs constant emphasis if we are to have a sound approach to Christian faith." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 163:18 N 1 '49 120w

Reviewed by F. W. Young

Crozer Q 27:85 Ja '50 400w

+ Kirkus 17:144 Mr 15 '49 120w

SCOTT, HUGH DOGGETT. How to go into politics; il. by Vana Earle. 197p $2.75 Day

320.69 Politics, Practical 49-8346

"Aimed at the veteran who resolved in the midst of war to go into politics once the fighting was over, but equally valuable to anybody including the voter. Begins with precinct work, moves on to the do's and don'ts, public opinion, making speeches, 'the care and feeding of legislation,' the force of women in politics. Appendices are a sample constitution and by-laws for a political group and some questions and answers on American government." Library J

Reviewed by D. E. McHenry

Am Pol Sci R 43:1298 D '49 230w

Booklist 45:307 My 15 '49

Kirkus 17:79 F 1 '49 130w

"Twice-urged for all collections." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 74:546 Ap 1 '49 130w

SCOTT, H. D.—Continued

"On the whole, this is a splendid book on the mechanics of the American political system, and a sort of Baedeker to success at the polls. Its chief fault is the emphasis placed on the form rather than the substance of politics. Mr. Scott neglects to point out that a candidate who violates all the rules but stands on the right side of most of the moral issues involved may still win through in the end." R. L. Neuberger

+ — N Y Times p4 My 1 '49 450w

"For anyone at all interested in politics it outlines the fundamentals better than anything I've seen. And, after all, you know you're getting advice from an expert, and, better still, from a man who is himself interested in seeing the best possible types of men and women become a part of the moving force of the political world." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 12 '49 850w

"The modesty and downright decorum displayed by Mr. Scott and the lack of inflammatory prose is little short of astounding, considering Mr. Scott's obvious partisan position. . . And speaking of Mr. Scott's language, we haven't been snarled in such a skein of purple patches and shredded words since we read Carl Van Vechten. . . No one can impugn Mr. Scott's endeavor to write an objective and simplified book on how to get launched into the political arena. Only when Mr. Scott sets out to justify the filibuster does he show any political sleight-of-hand and a tendency toward indulging in mumbo-jumbo." Gael Sullivan

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:17 Ap 30 '49 1000w

Springf'd Republican p8C My 15 '49 250w

Reviewed by Hillier Krieghbaum

Survey 85:280 My '49 50w

SCOTT, JAMES MAURICE. The will and the way. 251p $2.75 Dutton

49-6824

Roderick Haughton, a Scotchman, left a will which read in part: "I leave my fortune to whoever finds it." The novel describes the efforts of his five nephews to locate the fortune. Italy and some of the highest peaks in the Alps provide the scene.

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p54 D 4 '49 140w

"Mr. Scott is an English writer with a special appreciation for the sights and sounds of this particular locale. Without murder or violence, he makes this a pleasantly intriguing tale." Anne Richards

+ N Y Times p36 O 23 '49 140w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 32:27 D 24 '49 170w

"A novel with action, good characterization and excellent background." R. F. Henchey

+ Springf'd Republican p8C N 13 '49 170w

SCOTT, JOHN IRVING E. Negro students and their colleges. 179p $2.50 Meador

378 Students. Negroes—Education. Colleges and universities—U.S. 49-6113

Information on colleges and their requirements, compiled for Negro high school students still undecided about their careers. The book is divided into three parts: Choosing a college; Negro colleges; Other colleges. Part I discusses reasons for going to college, adjustments to be made and the necessary qualifications. Part 2 gives locations, physical plants, ratings, and curricula of Negro colleges. Part 3 gives enrollment of Negro students and their participation in class and extra-curricular activities, and number of Negro graduates in 175 interracial colleges. Colleges and universities in states having dual educational systems are not listed. Index of colleges.

"This book should be of real value to the school counselor or minister who is doing guidance work with Negro young people in college selection. It can be used more successfully by an experienced counselor in interpreting college than by a high school student himself, for it is entirely too general in the sections dealing with college life and choosing a school. . . A very valuable addition would have been a discussion of scholarships available and methods of self-help. However, when one considers the numbers of questions the average young person has unanswered concerning his choice of college and the apparent lack of guidance given in this very important field, one is grateful for an objective volume such as this aimed at a specific group of youth. By following it, general though most of the material is, a young Negro will be in a much better position than is the average student to choose intelligently an institution of higher education." C. E. Batten

+ — Crozer Q 26:377 O '49 350w

Current Hist 17:227 O '49 20w

SCOTT, JUDITH UNGER. Manners for moderns; il. by Ruth K. Macrae. 207p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.

395 Etiquet 49-7947

"Despite the usual 'chummy' vocabulary approach, this is a practical aid for the young person who craves a little social polish. It is co-educational, with a section each for boys and girls, and two chapters—Everyday etiquette and Travel etiquette—for both. The section for boys advises on clothes selection, personal grooming, and date etiquette, from twosomes to proms. The paragraph on drinking assumes that he doesn't. Not to be confused with an identical title issued some years ago by another publisher." Booklist

Booklist 45:264 Ap 1 '49

Kirkus 17:7 Ja 1 '49 170w

"Another manners book and a good one. Our teen-age girls and boys seem to be interested in the how, why, and when of good manners, and this book should prove very helpful to them. . . Recommended." M. A. Webb

+ Library J 74:558 Ap 1 '49 70w

SCOTT, NATALIE ANDERSON. The husband. 270p $3 Dutton

49-8577

A story of the tragic marriage between an apparently normal wholesome girl and a man who wrecks her character, her relations with her family, and her life, thru his power over her sexual appetites. The scene of the story is Massachusetts of two hundred years ago.

Booklist 45:296 My 1 '49

Cath World 169:318 Jl '49 170w

Kirkus 17:94 F 15 '49 220w

"It's unfortunate that The Husband isn't better written, for its picture of pre-Revolutionary America is lucid, if repetitive. And the suspense is magnetic—you won't want to put it down once you've got past the slow start. Cassie and her husband get my vote for, respectively, the most confused woman and the meanest man in recent fiction. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ — Library J 74:663 Ap 15 '49 90w

"The very blackness of the case posed here defeats its artistic purpose. Nor do we get deeply enough into the character of poor Cassie to become wholly convinced that her actions follow from the admitted unreason of passion. 'The Husband' is a well told tale that is unusual and intriguing as such, rather than an extension of one's understanding of matrimony and human nature." Mary Ross

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 My 1 '49 600w

"[The author's] style is lucid and disarming. Her mastery of understatement becomes terrifying. Rawson is as malignant a character as any in recent fiction. . . The setting is beautifully patterned. The research into a past era never intrudes to clutter up the story. All characters are sharply drawn and valid, and for some the reader feels compassion." Faith Baldwin

+ N Y Times p30 Ap 24 '49 450w

"The girl would be a ninny in any historical period."
— New Yorker 25:108 Ap 30 '49 120w

"'The Husband' is a psychological Grand Guignol so subtly and insidiously staged as to show up the average crime story as a clumsy bit of blood-letting pour le sport." A. F. Wolfe
Sat R of Lit 32:15 Ap 30 '49 650w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p7C Je 12 '49 370w

SCOTT, SALLY. Judy's baby; il. by Jane Toan. 45p $1.75 Harcourt
49-10416

Story describing Judy's feelings toward her baby brother. For ages 6-9.

"An appealing and rewarding little story."
+ Booklist 46:38 S 15 '49

"The author has been very skillful in handling the bewilderment and hurt and fear. Easy to read type and vocabulary. . . A book that can be given to children."
+ Kirkus 17:465 S 1 '49 130w

"Especially recommended for P.T.A. library shelves." Harriet Morrison
+ Library J 74:1334 S 15 '49 80w

"The text is perfectly suited for third and fourth graders to read to themselves. This is greatly to the author's credit. Unfortunately the people who most need to hear her message are not children at all but unimaginative parents. . . One wishes that 'Judy's Baby' were longer and a little more objective. Judy's feelings are described with sincerity but they would have a greater effect on the reader if they were more generally portrayed through action and behavior rather than by direct description." L. R. Davis
N Y Times p28 O 2 '49 170w
Springf'd Republican p7C O 9 '49 70w

"Children with or without the problem of a new baby will enjoy this beginning reading book."
+ Wis Lib Bul p10 N '49

SCOTT, WALTER DILL, and others. Personnel management; principles, practices, and point of view. 4th ed 648p il $4.50 McGraw
658.3 Employment management 49-7503

"Complete revision of a well established text. Valuable survey of current practices of 325 leading companies for the years 1930, 1940, and 1947. New chapters on 'The Labor Audit' and 'The Union Movement.'" (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1924.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
+ Library J 74:201 F 1 '49 30w

"The Appendices are of particular interest to teachers and practitioners. . . This survey should also be valuable to the personnel manager in checking his own practices with those of others in the field or as a selling aid to impress upon top management the need for additional personnel functions. The logical organization of the book around major topics should make it both a valuable handbook in the library of the practitioner and an excellent text for the instructor in personnel for either a beginning or advanced course." T. J. Luck
+ Management R 38:233 Ap '49 420w

SEALEY, WILLIAM CURTIS. Transformers; theory and construction. [246p] il $3 Int. textbook
621.3143 Electric transformers 48-10187

"Fundamental principles are presented; the material has been selected to show modern types of transformer construction and modern practice in transformer operation. Special transformers for unusual applications are treated, such as unit substations, rectifiers and network transformers, transformers for rotary converters, electric furnaces, street lighting, and instrument and relaying. Author is Engineer-in-charge, transformer design of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 74:130 Ja 15 '49 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:85 N '48

SEALOCK, RICHARD BURL, and SEELY, PAULINE AUGUSTA. Bibliography of place name literature, United States, Canada, Alaska and Newfoundland. 331p $4.50 A.L.A.
016.9294 Names, Geographical—Bibliography
49-7039

Annotated subject list of North American place names, arranged by state or province. Contains a detailed index, which brings out various types of names used. "To make it possible to sell this book at a moderate price, production cost was reduced by photographing the copy exactly as it came from the author." (Publisher's note)

"The volume serves admirably the primary aim expressed by the authors, to provide a work for convenient reference." A. E. Smith
+ Am Hist R 54:938 Jl '49 160w
Booklist 45:171 Ja 15 '49

"In the field of librarianship the word 'service' is often used, and two members of the profession have performed a signal service by the compilation of a bibliography of North American place-name literature. . . Annotations and a carefully prepared and detailed index greatly increase the value of the book. For all students undertaking place-name studies this bibliography will be a solid foundation on which to build."
+ Geog R 39:348 Ap '49 290w

"The compilers have done a thorough job, having gone far beyond the standard periodical indexes and booklists in their search for material. Even important newspaper articles and manuscripts are noted. Many entries have annotations and some include citations to reviews and criticisms. Well indexed. Important for reference collections." G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 74:548 Ap 1 '49 130w

"One-column items from The New York Times, some exploded pseudo science, and some purely romantic journalism might better, perhaps, have been omitted. This is, however, a librarian's rather than a scholar's bibliography; as such, it should prove useful."
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:133 Mr '49 280w

SEAMAN, MRS AUGUSTA (HUIELL). Vanishing octant mystery; il. by Ursula Koering. 206p $2.25 Doubleday 49-10702

Mystery story for ages 12-14.

"It is really remarkable that an author who has been writing exciting mysteries involving teen age girls for so long has kept so up to date on her modern young people. Although this is typical of the many she has written, it is still readable and something is happening every minute."
+ Kirkus 17:396 Ag 1 '49 130w

"This author has lost none of her flair for holding the interest of the teen-agers in her portrayal of Posey. . . Although appealing and entertaining, this does not measure up to her earlier fine mysteries with historical settings. . . Especially recommended for ages 12-14." S. J. Robinson
+ Library J 74:1466 O 1 '49 70w

"An interesting tale of vacation on the Jersey coast, well written, and with an unusual sort of mystery." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 O 30 '49 150w

SEATON, DON CASH. Safety in sports; with an introd. by Herbert J. Stack. 415p il $6; to schools $4.50 Prentice-Hall
796 Sports. Accidents—Prevention 48-11441

Deals with fundamental principles and the development of proper skills in many types

SEATON, D. C.—Continued
of games and sports, such as football, field hockey, hunting, badminton, basketball, boxing, group games, dancing, fencing, swimming, wrestling, coasting, ice hockey, skiing, archery, baseball, crew, golf, horseback riding, tennis. Chapter references. Index.

Booklist 45:189 F 1 '49

"Excellent handbook for P. E. instructors." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:380 Mr 1 '49 30w

SECHRIST, MRS ELIZABETH (HOUGH). Once in the first times; folk tales from the Philippines; retold; il. by John Sheppard. 215p $2.50 Macrae Smith co.
398.2 Folklore—Philippines 49-6315

"Legends and folk tales from the Philippine Islands collected and retold for children for the first time. May have some interest for the student of folklore." Booklist

Booklist 46:105 N 15 '49

"Altogether most of the stories are sensible, grave without being somber, amusing without being very lighthearted."
+ Kirkus 17:395 Ag 1 '49 120w

Reviewed by Alice McQuaid
+ Library J 74:1541 O 15 '49 100w

"Good reading for ages 8-11 and valuable addition to the storyteller's shelf. An attractive book. Recommended." Clara Adams
+ Library J 74:1762 N 15 '49 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ja 1 '50 60w

N Y Times p22 N 13 '49 110w

"As far as this reviewer knows, this is the first authentic collection of the folk tales of the Philippine Islands. . . The drawings and the map are done by an artist who was in the Philippines during the war. This is an excellent translation and a valuable book." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:23 N 12 '49 180w

Wis Lib Bul p11 N '49

SEDGES, JOHN, pseud. The long love. 311p $3 Day
49-10703

The story of a long and happy marriage between two people of dissimilar backgrounds and temperaments. The scene is New England; the time, the last forty years.

Booklist 46:5; 63 S 1 '49; O 15 '49

"Flat, self-conscious prose. It must be possible to write with verve about adultery-free matrimony." Mary Sandrock
— Cath World 170:314 Ja '50 210w

"There is a captivating charm about this novel that should appeal especially to married couples, whether young or old." E. U.
+ Chicago Sun p9X N 20 '49 100w

Reviewed by M. W. Stoer
Christian Science Monitor p16 N 11 '49 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '49

"This should prove a very popular book with the conservative reader who is demanding a story with sound principles, who likes faintly nostalgic background details. Frankly, I felt this an oddly old fashioned story of a marriage."
+ Kirkus 17:442 Ag 15 '49 300w

"Recommended for its well told story and sympathetic characterization." R. P. Tubby
+ Library J 74:1204 S 1 '49 70w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 O 16 '49 500w

Reviewed by Andrea Parke
N Y Times p36 O 16 '49 180w

New Yorker 25:130 O 15 '49 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 27 '49 300w

"Edward is—not too good, no one can be too good—but too perfect. His faults are not acknowledged so consequently he is without flaw. And in spite of all the delicate detail lavished on the relationship, life does not breathe in him. Many of the contributing characters—mainly relatives, for the Haslatts live a good deal to themselves—have greater warmth. One must admire the selectivity of a master craftsman who has refused to cut sharply and polish more than the two figures of man and wife. Unfortunately, in the process they have become museum pieces, precious, protected, and rare." Josephine Lawrence
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:16 O 15 '49 650w

Springf'd Republican p8C N 13 '49 230w

"Recommended."
+ Wis Lib Bul p11 D '49

SEELEY, REGINALD SIDNEY KINGSLEY. Function of the university. 79p $1.50 Oxford
378 Colleges and universities [48-4039]

"This book of lectures delivered at the Canadian Hazen Conference at North Hatley in June, 1947, composed with no thought of subsequent publication, does not pretend to be a systematic treatise on higher education. The lectures maintain that the true purpose of a university education can only be fulfilled if it is restricted to a comparatively small body and that only a fairly small proportion of the population can benefit by the kind of education which a university has to offer." School & Society

"There is much wisdom in this little book." J. M. Fogg
+ Crozer Q 26:377 O '49 200w

School & Society 69:326 Ap 30 '49 90w

Survey 85:408 Jl '49 20w

SELDEN, SAMUEL, ed. International folk plays; with an introduction. (Carolina playmakers ser) 285p $5 Univ. of N.C. press
812.08 Dramas—Collections 49-8165

Contents: Home-longing (Norway), by Gerd Bernhart; Tarantula (Denmark), by Kai Jurgensen; Black Piet (South Africa), by Robert Schenkkan; Fleas and Figs (Syria), by Mary-Averett Seelye; The wandering dragon (China), by T'ang Wen Shun; The courting of Marie Jenvrin (Canada), by Gwen Pharis; The red velvet goat (Mexico), by Josephina Niggli; Wherefore is this night (United States—Jewish), by Violet Fidel; Washed in de blood (United States—Negro), by Rietta Bailey.

Booklist 45:351 Je 15 '49

Kirkus 17:164 Mr 15 '49 100w

"With a sound and illuminating introduction by the editor, [this is a] well-chosen anthology. . . Highly recommended for drama collections in universities and colleges, public, high school and theatre school libraries." George Freedley
+ Library J 74:665 Ap 15 '49 110w

Reviewed by Gordden Link
Sat R of Lit 32:30 Ag 13 '49 600w

SELDES, GEORGE. The people don't know; the American press and the cold war. 342p $3 Gaer
940.55 Europe—Politics. Press—U.S. U.S.—Foreign relations 49-11609

"Seldes, editor of the newsletter In Fact, recently visited western and southeastern Europe. This is not an account of his observations, however (except in a chapter called 'I Heard the People Singing Behind the Iron Curtain'); most of the text is an angry analysis of American newspaper coverage of such events as the trial of Cardinal Mindszenty, the death of Jan Masaryk, and the revolutions in Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia." Library J

"Seldes' own economic and political views are intruded throughout; but the evidence he presents will be of interest to all concerned with the state of public opinion." H. W. Hart
Library J 74:1601 O 15 '49 130w

"Even if we were to admit all Mr. Seldes's charges—which nobody in his senses would do, because most of them are essentially false and all of them are overdrawn—it could still be said that the press nearly everywhere else in the world is incomparably worse. The American press needs critics. So does every institution in a free society. It is regrettable that Mr. Seldes, who certainly is one of the most energetic and prolific critics, is politically motivated throughout." E. D. Canham
— + N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 Ja 29 '50 700w

"The book is immensely verbose and vitriolic. But as Mr. Seldes slows down toward the end, he offers more considered judgments. . . After belaboring the American press, he observes: 'It would take a journalist from Heaven, or at least from Mars, to write the true story—inside or outside Europe.' Nevertheless, Mr. Seldes undertakes the heavenly or Martian role and offers the 'truth' about Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Italy and other places on the basis of his own travels." L. M. Lyons
— + N Y Times p14 O 30 '49 460w

"Those who are familiar with Mr. Seldes's past writings need not be warned that he looks upon Soviet Russia, whether through innocence or guile, with much the same sympathy as Henry Wallace. During the war, for example, Russian soldiers and civilians 'gave their lives to help save the British Empire.' Not, apparently, to save Russia. Mr. Seldes does not so much as mention, even as a possibility, the thought that Soviet Communism might be a menace. Mr. Seldes ends with a ten-point challenge to editors and publishers that contains much food for thought. But as usual it is contaminated with much that no one not pretty deeply committed to the Soviet gospel can accept." Herbert Brucker
Sat R of Lit 33:18 Ja 14 '50 800w

SELEY, STEPHEN. Baxter Bernstein: a hero of sorts. 239p $3 Scribner
49-9608

"This is a somber novel of the psychological self-examination of Baxter Bernstein. Baxter hoped to run away from the world during World War II and find peace and time to write. His failure to achieve this peace or to accept life even on his own terms is subtly and devastatingly portrayed." Library J

Reviewed by Henry Kreisel
Canadian Forum 29:189 N '49 350w

"Unsavory reading. P. L.'s beware!"
— Kirkus 17:279 Je 1 '49 170w

"Frankness may offend. Specifically for the mature reader." E. P. Nichols
Library J 74:1026 Jl '49 80w

"As is sometimes the case in books about no-gooders, Baxter's adventures with women make for the highspots of the story. Mr. Seley is a bit more reticent than one might expect, but even so, Baxter has his moments." Herbert Kupferberg
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ag 14 '49 410w

"In writing a novel about a writer who is writing a book about himself, Mr. Seley is faced with a technical problem of objectivity which he does not quite solve. The faults of Baxter Bernstein as a character seem curiously related to those of Stephen Seley as a writer. Self-consciousness is the paramount fault. . . 'Baxter Bernstein' is, however, not without impact. The writing has at times a Falstaffian gusto which, combined with a certain musical repetition of motifs, rises to produce a state of intense emotional torment, and the eruption of language with the rich use of slang makes it a peculiarly American work." Hilda Osterhout
— + N Y Times p5 Jl 10 '49 550w

"The suspicion grows on one that Mr. Seley originally conceived his book as a sympathetic portrait of a young novelist groping his way to maturity through a wilderness of confused and confusing experiences. Gradually it became clear that these experiences, with all the ironic self-revelations they engendered in the hero, could be depicted more successfully in satire than in the traditional Künstler roman, and Baxter began the long descent, another unhappy victim of Dedalism." Milton Crane
— Sat R of Lit 32:29 Ag 27 '49 850w
— Time 54:82 Jl 18 '49 330w

SELLARS, ROY WOOD, and others, eds. Philosophy for the future; the quest of modern materialism. 657p $7.50 Macmillan
146 Materialism 49-9126

"The philosophy of materialism, as presented by a number of philosophers and scientists, to form a handbook of thoughts on the old philosophers and their theories, plus current contributions by specialists in physics, mathematics, biology, anthropology, psychology, existentialism." (Current Hist) Index.

Booklist 45:385 Jl 15 '49
Christian Century 66:1361 N 16 '49 280w
Current Hist 17:38 Jl '49 40w
Kirkus 17:171 Mr 15 '49 170w

"With some rare exceptions the philosophical food offered to the reader of this volume consists chiefly of another program concealed amidst much sectarian polemics. Both ingredients can be obtained elsewhere in profusion." Ernest Nagel
New Repub 121:18 S 5 '49 1150w

"Some of the chapters could have been written by party-liners, while others are popular accounts of recent scientific findings which read as though their authors had no conception that their contributions were to be used in the service of any particular philosophy. Chapters on the method of science and its presuppositions are singularly absent. When will the materialists learn that not everyone who disagrees with them is a subjective idealist?" J. K. Feibleman
N Y Times p12 Jl 17 '49 700w

"The essays on science are uniformly excellent although some are more technical than others. The essays on philosophy proper are for the most part profound and provocative, although one or two perhaps betray evidence of confusion or of hasty composition. Some in both fields have a clear Marxist orientation. In general, and without further or detailed elaboration, it may be said that the volume as a whole constitutes a major contribution to philosophy." Robert Bierstedt
+ Sat R of Lit 32:32 S 24 '49 600w

SELLEGER-ELOUT, MRS J. M. Marian and Marion; tr. by Hilda Van Stockum; il. by B. Midderigh-Bokhorst. 177p $2 Viking 49-8404

Story of a little Dutch girl who helped rescue an American girl from a shipwreck and became very attached to her. The little American shocked the sturdy Dutch villagers by wanting to be a dancer, and her friend, Janne, took a hand in the events which finally helped her realize her ambition.

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 170:210 D '49 40w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton
Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 28 '49 270w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 25:198 My '49 90w

"A fresh and convincing story, sparkling with humor and depicting with great skill two contrasting natures." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:215 My '49 120w

"An utterly charming and wholly satisfying story for little girls."
+ Kirkus 17:110 Mr 1 '49 150w

"Recommended for ages 9-12." D. M. Blasco
+ Library J 74:826 My 15 '49 100w

SELLEGER-ELOUT, J. M.—Continued

"The group known as 'middle age' children in America may here share the lively storytelling of one of the most popular modern Dutch writers for boys and girls. They are lucky in a translator who knows American children well, and has herself written popular books in English; also that the many Dutch illustrations have been kept." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 My 8 '49 140w

"The youngsters of the 'Here and Now' school who like only stories about their own experiences and their own friends will not care very much for this, but little girls of 9 to 12 who like their stories slightly old-fashioned and original will thoroughly enjoy it." V. H. Mathews

+ N Y Times p24 My 1 '49 200w

"This is a well-plotted and well-told adventure story. The illustrations are most satisfying."

+ Sat R of Lit 32:38 My 21 '49 190w

SELSAM, MILLICENT (ELLIS). Play with plants; pictures by James MacDonald. 63p $2 Morrow

635 Botany—Juvenile literature. Plants—Juvenile literature 49-10008

Simple experiments showing how to grow new plants from roots, stems, leaves, and seeds. All the experiments can be done at home, and the materials are easily available. For grades three to seven.

Booklist 46:17 S 1 '49

"Even an adult may be tempted to start sweet potato vines and carrot foliage with the aid of careful directions and detailed line drawings in this small book." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 25:421 S '49 60w

"It is excellently presented and makes an original sort of hobby book for youngsters; it should appeal to class room teachers in connection with class projects. The type is fairly large and easy to read, the works, except for a few plant names, familiar and easy to pronounce; the book is small and easy to handle as a guide book. There is a great demand for simple nature study books for the between ages so there should be an excellent market for this."

+ Kirkus 17:395 Ag 1 '49 180w

"Recommended especially for ages 6-10 but of interest to anyone who likes to grow things." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 74:1610 O 15 '49 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 O 16 '49 190w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R of Lit 32:50 N 12 '49 30w

SELTMAN, CHARLES THEODORE. Approach to Greek art. 132p 111pl $6 Studio

709.38 Art, Greek 49-668

A study of Greek art from 1650 B.C. to 850 A.D. Emphasis is on coins, gems, and metal work, with some material on sculpture and painting. The author is fellow of Queens' College, at Cambridge. Index.

Manchester Guardian p3 O 8 '48 120w

"Well-organized, written and produced." Lincoln Kirstein

+ New Repub 121:25 D 12 '49 60w

"This is as attractive and comprehensive a critical appreciation of Greek art throughout its history as could possibly be put into 120 pages of text. In addition the photographs are mostly new and admirable." C. M. Woodhouse

+ Spec 181:774 D 10 '48 750w

"The basis of the book is learned and profound and it contains the result of a great deal of original research. No one who was not intimately familiar with every facet and detail of Greek art could have written it. And in its short compass it contains a vast amount of important information and profound thought. It is, however, not primarily a book for the specialist, but for the general reader who knows little of Greek art but seeks to learn the rudiments of what it was and what were the thoughts that inspired it."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p608 O 30 '48 650w

SELZNICK, PHILIP. TVA and the grass roots; a study in the sociology of formal organization. 274p $3.75; pa $2.75 Univ. of Calif.

338.975 Tennessee Valley authority 49-3145

"The author, who had access to TVA personnel and files while preparing this study, briefly outlines the history of the Tennessee Valley Authority and discusses the background of the Act. He also describes the policy-shaping roles of the three directors: [Arthur E. Morgan; David E. Lilienthal; and Harcourt A. Morgan]. (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Orvis Collins

Am J Soc 55:419 Ja '50 1050w

"Although theory and author emerge from this trial run with some scars on the theory and some traumatic reporting by the author, Selznick's concepts and methodology provide significant patterns for many useful additional studies in administration." W. S. Sayre

Am Pol Sci R 43:1031 O '49 1300w

Am Soc R 14:824 D '49 150w

"Challenging study. . . At one level it is an illuminating and sophisticated analysis of the results of the Tennessee Valley Authority's policy of administering its program, particularly in the agricultural field, through the use of local institutions. At this level the book is a very stimulating, even if somewhat overdrawn, account of how administrative policies are formulated and how the units in an organization jockey for control of administrative decisions. . . The study also proceeds on a second level, that of sociological theory. . . This reviewer is not convinced that Selznick's generalizations are any more scientific, and they are certainly more obscure, than those of less theoretically inclined students who have concerned themselves with admiinstrative constituencies and the relationship of administrative agencies to pressure groups." C. H. Pritchett

+ — Ann Am Acad 265:176 S '49 480w

Booklist 46:7 S 1 '49

"A unique and extensive sociological analysis of the formal organization aspects of TVA. His study is keyed to the significance of TVA for democratic planning based on its methods and nature, instead of its program. . . The study is useful in clarifying the administrative implications and certain pitfalls of decentralized, grass-roots doctrine for democratic planning. There is some question whether the implied synonymity of decentralization and democratic planning is valid per se. One wishes that the author had included a more detailed vivisection of the organizations through which TVA worked." R. H. Uhlig

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 3 '49 650w

SEMAT, HENRY. Physics in the modern world. 434p il $5 Rinehart

530 Physics 49-8625

"A college text intended to provide students of the humanities and social sciences with a broad survey of the subject. The book includes the usual topics found in introductory physics texts . . . but special emphasis is placed on the applications of these laws to everyday phenomena which will be of interest to non-science students. The mathematical knowledge required has been kept to the level of high-school algebra and geometry." (N Y News Tech Bks) List of books for supplementary reading. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 45:350 Je 15 '49

Reviewed by Julian Sohon

Library J 74:1103 Ag '49 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:42 My '49

SENCOURT, ROBERT, pseud. See George, R. E. G.

SENDER, RAMON JOSE. The sphere; tr. by F. Giovanelli. 264p $3 Hellman, Williams 49-2751

"Some brilliant, if abstruse, metaphysics are expounded aboard a transatlantic liner during a symbolic voyage that encompasses a mutiny, a couple of murders, and a shipwreck. The most voluble passenger is a Spanish refugee whose particularly anguished outlook has led him first to plan suicide and then to commit murder." New Yorker

"Anxious to examine metaphysical and ethical problems at their most complex, Mr. Sender has self-consciously complicated his account of the human condition. His spherical system (hence the title) lies hidden behind a veil of verbal inanities, equations of antinomies like being and non-being, past and future, love and hate. So anxious is he to demonstrate the primacy of mystical intuition, with its identification of all opposities, that the poor reader—with his usual instruments of reason and perception—can be certain of nothing in action, character, or dialogue." Murray Krieger

— Christian Science Monitor p14 My 24 '49 490w

"The framework in which 'The Sphere' is conceived is couched in the terminology of a text book, but it is set forth without clarity. Using Saila as a vehicle for his ideas, Sender expounds his theory partly in the fabric of his hero's thought, partly in italicized passages preceding each chapter. But Sender, unlike a scientist, allows for no arguments against his theory. And because he creates no foil for Saila, 'The Sphere' lacks the vitality of the successful novel of ideas such as Huxley's 'Point Counter Point.'" Hilda Osterhout

N Y Times p6 My 1 '49 800w

New Yorker 25:113 My 21 '49 160w

"The author deals with his materials in a masterly manner. His novel is freighted with complex symbolism and yet in some ways it is brutally realistic. At times it is also brutally satirical. In an immediate sense, it concerns politics and war. On a deeper level, however, 'The Sphere' is a novel of universals—of crime and of death, of love, of authority and of submission, of reason and of faith, of man's place in the universe." D. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Je 19 '49 400w

"There is a heady, fleur de mal quality in this, an irresistible power, and an undulating prose rhythm. Humor pierces the gloom, too, as the passenger list narrows down to 'Mr. What,' 'Professor However,' and 'Mr. Cash.' . . There are almost too many jagged facets to this problem. Settle for sensation rather than solution." C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 32:28 Je 4 '49 140w

SERVICE, ROBERT WILLIAM. Songs of a sun-lover [poems]. 184p $2.50 Dodd 811 49-11320

"Now in his seventies, in these verses Service sings an encore to the popular program which began in 1907 with The Spell of the Yukon." Booklist

Booklist 46:94 N 15 '49

"He is not at his best as a lyric poet; many of the short poems in 'Songs of a Sun-Lover' are feeble light verse and sentimental doggerel—mere typewriter exercises. . . However discouraging the songs of daily trivia are, we are occasionally reminded of the narrative power of the author of 'Dangerous Dan McGrew' and 'The Lady Named Lou.' His zest for dramatic rhyming is evidenced in 'Wrestling Match.'" A. M. Sullivan

— + Sat R of Lit 32:26 N 26 '49 450w

+ Springf'd Republican p7C N 6 '49 240w

SETTLE, RAYMOND W., and SETTLE, MARY ANNA (LUND). Empire on wheels. 153p il $3.50 Stanford univ. press

388.3 Russell, Majors & Waddell company. Russell, William Hepburn. Majors, Alexander. Waddell, William Bradford 49-8175

"Study of the firm of Russell, Majors & Waddell and pre-railroad transportation in the far West. Interprets the personalities of the men, the intricate ramifications of their firm, and the value of their operations to westward migration and settlement and to military operations on the plains." (Booklist) Selected bibliography. Index.

Booklist 45:307 My 15 '49

"This book is a sound and sober account. No words are wasted, there is no attempt to dramatize anything. The authors had access to much that had been hitherto unavailable and they have made the best possible use of it, especially in making clear, perhaps for the first time, the whole complicated business of Russell and the stolen bonds." S. H. Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 S 11 '49 1100w

SEUSS, DR, pseud. See Geisel, T. S.

SEVERN, DAVID, pseud. See Unwin, D. S.

SEWARD, WILLIAM. Teamwork in industry; a tested program for worker-management co-op. [pub] in assn. with Modern industry magazine. 206p $3 Funk

658.3 Industrial relations 49-5375

"Guide to sound human relations practices in industry. Based on personal experience and firsthand reports from a number of plants that have worked out satisfactory solutions to what the author considers the weakest link in labor-management relationships. Written from the point of view that management, in general, has failed to deal effectively with the human element." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 46:9 S 1 '49

"Nothing new here and this would be just another book on the subject, except that Mr. Seward has gone out in the field and collected examples of companies which follow these good principles and how they do it. Wind up is a ten-point program in organizing a human-relations plan in industry. Clear and practical presentation." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 74:1098 Ag '49 100w

Reviewed by Wallace Clark

Management R 38:572 O '49 700w

Reviewed by Palmer Harman

N Y Times p29 Ag 28 '49 260w

SEXTON, GEORGE FRANKLIN. Making money on the races. 246p $5 Amerpub, 225 W. 34th st. N.Y. 1; for sale by Greenberg

798.4 Horse racing. Gambling 49-5364

"This book is written for the turf fan who wants to play the races and have at least a fair chance to win some money. It is also for the player who is in search of a system that he can play for a steady profit from racing. Perhaps none of the systems in this book is the perfect one for any reader. But an industrious system student should have no trouble constructing the perfect system for himself by expanding on one or more of the methods to be outlined in the pages that follow. It does not necessarily follow that these systems will win only during the seasons suggested." (Foreword) Includes diagrams of major tracks. No index.

"For those who attend horse races in the same frame of mind as those who invest conservatively in stocks and bonds, this is a true investor's guide. Written in a sound, sober and logical style, it deals with the difficult subject of profitable betting in a dignified and studious manner. . . Luck, hunches and guesswork are no part of Mr. Sexton's systems. If one's only interest in horse racing is prudent investment, this is clearly the manual he has been needing for years." C. W. W.

SEXTON, G. F.—Continued
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 11 '49 400w
Springf'd Republican p19A O 23 '49 60w

SFORZA, CARLO, conte. Italy and Italians; tr. by Edward Hutton. 165p $3 Dutton
914.5 Italy 49-8837
"A survey of the present Italian Foreign Minister's native land that could serve as a footnote to his more formal 'Contemporary Italy.' Count Sforza has travelled and lived much abroad, principally because he could not stay in Italy under Mussolini, and he has encountered many misconceptions about his country in the minds of foreigners—from the widely held belief that Italians are congenitally lazy to the theory that they have no talent for democratic government. In this book, he is at pains to correct some of these misconceptions." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 45:311 My 15 '49
Reviewed by G. S. Hooker
Chicago Sun Je 9 '49 430w
Current Hist 16:344 Je '49 60w
Foreign Affairs 28:165 O '49 30w
Kirkus 16:197 Ap 1 '49 170w

"A book which all who love the literature, history and people of Italy can read with pleasure. Its principal characteristic is a devotion to what is real and permanent as distinct from passing phases, aberrations and hysterias, which have been no less frequent in Italy than in other nations." Vincent Sheean
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je 12 '49 1250w

" 'Italy and Italians' is based on a series of lectures Sforza gave at the University of California during the war. Each of its twenty-six chapters has an entity of its own, but each contributes to the effect of the whole and the whole emerges as a magnificent picture of Italy today, explained by the Italy of yesterday." Quentin Reynolds
+ N Y Times p1 My 8 '49 1700w
+ New Yorker 25:114 My 14 '49 100w
Reviewed by René Albrecht-Carrié
Pol Sci Q 64:608 D '49 650w

"One may not share the author's liberal clerical convictions. Nonetheless, all will have to agree that his book possesses both erudition and charm. It deserves your attention." D. H.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 10 '49 200w

"A few of the judgments expressed may be partial; many are wise and revealing. But neither breadth of scholarship nor accuracy of judgment seems vitally important in pages like these. . . These essays do not pretend to the analyst's objectivity. They are the love poems to Italy regained of a man who has given bitter proof of his right to say that he loves his country." Garrett Mattingly
+ Sat R of Lit 32:14 Je 4 '49 600w
Reviewed by F. W. Riggs
Survey 85:499 S '49 650w

SHACTER, MRS HELEN (SEIDMAN). How personalities grow. 256p il $3 McKnight
137 Personality 49-7684
Practical aid for young people on the fine art of living with ourselves and others. Partial contents: Personalities vary in many ways; People are fundamentally alike; Our desire for approval: a social need; Our desire for success: another social need; Sexual needs involve other needs; Solving problems versus evading problems; Evasion through misrepresenting reality; Defense through retreat from reality; When illness is a way out; Fears—recognized and unrecognized; Successful living is social living. For high school age. Index.

Booklist 45:214 F 15 '49

"How Personalities Grow is valuable as a first book on understanding people for anyone of high school age or over. It is written in the second person and in a popular style that makes reading very easy. . . Some very appropriate photographs throughout the book add to its attractiveness and interest. . . Perhaps the book is somewhat weak on the positive side of solving problems, but it does give an understanding of behavior that results when problems are not solved. It would be very good for supplementary reading in personal and family relationship classes." Myrtle Mainquist
+ — J Home Econ 41:271 My '49 250w

"Not breezily written, but of genuine interest. . . Recommended for all high school and young people's libraries." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 74:558 Ap 1 '49 80w
School & Society 70:319 N 12 '49 370w

SHAPLEN, ROBERT. Corner of the world. 246p $2.75 Knopf
49-8716
"A sequence of five stories, all reflecting the hangover of war, the aimlessness and bitterness and only rarely faith of a few in outposts overseas. In Shanghai, it is Sergeant MacKenzie, recently discharged, who is quickly lost in erotic pursuits; in India, Archer Grayson, newspaperman, whose disenchantment is close to despair, loses his life in a communal riot; in Saigon, a Frenchman breaks with his illusions; in Manila, Colonel Delaney is tempted by easy money and easy women; and in Macao, 'A Corner of the world', Dr. Richter—looking for peace after a decade of escape—finds his lost faith in an act of love which costs him his life." Kirkus

Reviewed by John Dowling
Chicago Sun p6X My 29 '49 270w
Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 9 '49 260w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '49

"The climate of tension here is at all times communicative, the episodes absorbing and affecting."
+ Kirkus 17:184 Ap 1 '49 130w

"The sticky desperation of tropical life and love-making are conveyed very well indeed. Not all libraries will care for it." E. F. Walbridge
+ — Library J 74:736 My 1 '49 100w
Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 121:27 Ag 1 '49 200w

"Five stories that are noteworthy. That Robert Shaplen has successfully conveyed the atmosphere of such notoriously atmospheric places as Shanghai, Saigon and Macao, the contrast of torpor and violence, sensuality and decay, rank fertility and casual death, is not too remarkable. That he has caught the moods and manners of an American GI, or a colonel, or a correspondent (such as he himself was) in such settings is also not extraordinary. But that he has also been able to capture Asiatics and transplanted Europeans, their hopes and fears as well as words and acts, and that he has through them touched some of the conflicts that make the world so uneasy today is a notable achievement in a first book of fiction." Milton Rugoff
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 22 '49 800w

"I wish Mr. Shaplen had developed a more personal idiom in his own writing—the blend is altogether too standardized and smooth here—and had not stressed the sexuality of the Orient in such colorful terms. But 'A Corner of the World' is still a thoughtful and sensitive book." Maxwell Geismar
+ — N Y Times p6 My 15 '49 600w

"Mr Shaplen's plots all bear a marked resemblance to one another, and his sudden strokes of violence seem arbitrary, but his background and his style are distinctive."
+ — New Yorker 25:113 My 21 '49 140w
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 19 '49 550w

"There can be no quarrel with Mr. Shaplen's considerable talent as a storyteller or the courage and incisiveness of his comment. He has said some important things, and said them very well, at a time when they are much needed in this or any corner of the world." John Woodburn

+ Sat R of Lit 32:13 Jl 2 '49 950w

+ Time 53:113 My 16 '49 650w

SHARP, PAUL FRANCIS. Agrarian revolt in western Canada; a survey showing American parallels. 204p $3 Univ. of Minn.

338.1 Agriculture—Canada. Canada—Politics and government 48-3731

"The Agrarian Revolt in its first four chapters deals with the rise of the farmers organizations and the beginnings of political action in the Canadian West between 1900 and 1914. In the next three are described the entrance of the Nonpartisan League of North Dakota into Saskatchewan and Alberta and the effects of the First World War on the farmers' movement. The last three chapters recount the irruption of the organized farmers into provincial and federal politics between 1919 and 1921 and the disintegration of the movement by 1926, and examine the effects of the revolt on subsequent political development." Canadian Hist R

"Very useful book on the history of the Progressive movement in Canada during the 1920's. . . He makes the point that this 'frontier' did not come to an end in the United States in 1890 but extended northwards into Canada where consequent problems of production, transportation, relations with eastern industrial areas were markedly similar to those in the western United States. All this is to the good. But, in stressing the similarities the author does not always give the same weight to the dissimilarities. He is not unaware of them; he simply does not give them the emphasis which, in the opinion of this reviewer, they deserve." G. F. G. Stanley

+ — Am Hist R 54:393 Ja '49 900w

Reviewed by C. P. Loomis

Am J Soc 55:108 Jl '49 550w

"Quite satisfactory, though there are some patent shortcomings. . . Mr. Sharp's best chapters describe the Non-Partisan League." C. A. M. Ewing

+ — Am Pol Sci R 43:381 Ap '49 550w

"This scholarly monograph is as timely as it is excellent. . . A bibliography, which approximates completeness, and a full index round out a well-documented, well-organized, well-produced book, on which author and press are to be complimented." W. L. Morton

+ Canadian Hist R 29:317 S '48 650w

"This is a useful book which traces the political activities of farmers in western Canada from the period of settlement to the progressive party. The author has based his work on the files of newspapers and periodicals as well as more obvious published and unpublished sources. Canadians will be particularly grateful for the addition of material dealing with the life of Henry Wise Wood. Concern with political activities has involved a neglect of economic problems. . . The limitation greatly impairs the value of the book, but the author may rightly claim that he has been concerned with 'a survey' rather than exhaustive study." H. A. Innis

+ — J Pol Econ 57:257 Je '49 200w

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:463 D '48 300w

SHARPE, DORES ROBINSON. Call to Christian action. 123p $1.50 Harper

261 Sociology, Christian 49-11241

In seven chapters based on his Rauschenbusch lectures, the author discusses the possibility of more positive action by the Protestant churches in our modern civilization. Contents: Why does Protestantism hesitate?; The church must understand the social and economic causes of sin and misery; The church must awaken the conscience; The church must bring the judgment of conscience upon society; The church must establish friendship for labor; The church must establish a world Protestant union; The church must strive to realize the will of God in society.

Booklist 46:151 Ja 1 '50

"This is liberal socially-minded Protestantism at its best, by an author primarily concerned with the effect of our urbanized society upon the soul of man."

+ Kirkus 17:648 D 1 '49 160w

Wis Lib Bul p6 D '49

SHARPE, MRS RUTH COLLIER. Tristram of Lyonesse; the story of an immortal love; with il. from original paintings by Richard Sharpe. 785p $5 Greenberg

49-2446

A retelling of the story of Tristram and Isolde, which is a sort of composite of all the versions of the tale.

"This is straight never-never land, where the heroes are brave and good, the villains blackly evil, and the women beautiful as well as fragile. Throughout fair Tristram fights for his homeland, peace and Ysolt. A lush, sensual, detailed, full-bodied and adventuresome panorama that will appeal to those who wish to go back to these fabled times."

Kirkus 17:188 Ap 1 '49 130w

"The Sharpes have made no ignoble use of the Tristram legend. Their craftsmanship has been studiously careful, their ideal high. . . The story Mrs. Sharpe tells is a good one—though I suspect it would have been twice as good had it been half as long. And if the words of Alfred Lord Tennyson, and more recently of Edwin Arlington Robinson, which have clothed the Tristram legend in beauty, make Mrs. Sharpe's able effort strike somewhat thinly upon the ear, it is scarcely her fault. Her prime disadvantage is that giants have passed this way!" F. H. Bullock

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Jl 17 '49 700w

"Mrs. Sharpe's version is unexpectedly American. Hers is the established, popular concept of the courtly Middle Ages, with its talismen, broken coins, love potions, and velvets embroidered with gray pearls. . . All of this will appear conspicuously unmedieval to some readers, however diverting it may be to others; and so will Mrs. Sharpe's happy ending." Lawrence Lee

N Y Times p18 Ap 17 '49 320w

"Richly embroidered and competently cinematic version of this old legend. After going to unnecessary lengths to establish Sir Tristram's preëminence as an artist, poet, scholar, and swordsman, she pushes him stoutly through a series of resounding Arthurian routines, none of which has ever been dulled by repetition. The author . . . has inexplicably felt compelled to append a sugary ending. In spite of this deviation, the book, which trundles along in a stately, if sometimes fustian, prose, might bring back happy childhood hours for those not resolute enough to look up the classic texts."

— + New Yorker 25:100 Ap 23 '49 180w

"Despite all the eloquence, despite all the recorded deeds, the story never moves, nor does the reader's blood. The whole book is static—as still as a heavy tapestry in a windless room. We read of passion, but we do not feel it. We hope from page to page that interest will quicken, but boredom grows. . . There is no pleasure in speaking unfavorably of a book on which so much sincere labor has so obviously been spent. This is an instance when I should much rather be wrong than right." B. R. Redman

— Sat R of Lit 32:30 Je 11 '49 550w

"Mrs. Sharpe employs plenty of 'swounds,' 'miladys' and airy 'whilsts' in her endeavor to write with rhythmic simplicity of the medieval bards, but the result is merely contrived, unnatural and embarrassingly pretentious." L. S. Munn

— Springf'd Republican p4D My 29 '49 240w

SHAW, EILEEN (MRS WILLIAM DYER GRAMPP). Crescent moon. 313p $3 Morrow
49-8011

"Around a small town setting author has woven a series of sketches about unhappy people who dream of a new life, yet are held back by their own fears—'people who do the things they do because of the way they are, not where they are.' Central character is a young girl, aware of, and resenting the weaknesses of her elders." Library J

Booklist 45:243 Mr 15 '49

Chicago Sun p8X Mr 6 '49 200w

" 'A Crescent Moon' is a first novel which evidences at the same time both astringency and understanding. There is an individual flavor that is not quite beautiful, but pleasing, like the delicate angularity of a young girl; and a reality about the background that penetrates the reader's consciousness and stays there. In spite of much merit, however the great emphasis on frustration leaves an effect of distortion." W. K. Rugg
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 3 '49 240w

Kirkus 16:647 D 15 '48 160w

"This first novel lacks the unity necessary to make it convincing. Will not be missed in most fiction collections." M. A. Johnson
— Library J 74:313 F 15 '49 80w

"Miss Shaw writes well, and almost always entertainingly. Several scenes stand up from the quieter plateaus of the rest of the novel in bright peaks of eloquent narrative. Among them are the amusing account of Mrs. Wiles learning to drive—or almost; and the story of the half-mad Bess Peabody's visit to the city." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 F 27 '49 500w

Reviewed by J. P. Quehl
N Y Times p22 Ap 10 '49 270w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Mr 27 '49 430w

"The town is well observed, well felt, but the tragedies are minor. Characters grow dim and motives thin. The whole project is somehow undernourished."
— + Sat R of Lit 32:29 Mr 26 '49 150w

" 'A Crescent Moon' is a true picture of life as it is lived in small towns all over America today." Ethel Dexter
+ Springf'd Republican p8B Mr 13 '49 270w

SHAW, GEORGE BERNARD. Quintessence of G. B. S. [his] wit and wisdom; selected and with an introduction by Stephen Winsten. 404p $3.75 Creative age 828 49-10648

Quotations from the writings of George Bernard Shaw arranged by subject. Partial contents: The influence of art; As a youth; Women; Country life; Education; A world-betterer; Professions; Religion; Foreigners; Growing old; Mainly about people. No index.

Booklist 46:79 N 1 '49

Reviewed by R. B. Nye
Chicago Sun p73 D 7 '49 70w

Kirkus 17:382 Jl 15 '49 220w

"Recommended for reference, drama and theatre collections in college, university, and medium to large public libraries." George Freedley
+ Library J 74:1200 S 1 '49 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p31 N 6 '49 50w

"Mr. Winsten has selected his topics arbitrarily, titled the entries poorly and neglected to put down their dates, and tricked out the whole with a florid and rather proprietary introduction, but he has performed a service in reminding us again, in case we need reminding, of Shaw's genius."
New Yorker 25:124 O 22 '49 140w

Reviewed by W. R. White
San Francisco Chronicle p27 O 16 '49 650w

"In spite of how bewildering 'The Quintessence of G. B. S.' may prove to new or casual readers of Shaw, it is a beckoning and a dazzling volume. Some of its bright sayings may have lost their luster and their value when snatched out of context. Nevertheless its rewards are many, particularly to anyone who knows Shaw's work and has followed his careers." J. M. Brown
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:54 N 12 '49 1200w

SHAW, GEORGE BERNARD. Sixteen self sketches. 207p il $3.50 Dodd
B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. [49-5735]

"Handful of reminiscences, some of them reprinted letters and magazine pieces, some of them corrections of his biographers' mistakes." Spec

Reviewed by C. J. Rolo
Atlantic 183:87 My '49 900w

Booklist 45:261 Ap 1 '49

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 50:130 My 13 '49 850w

Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 74:1328 S 15 '49 20w

"Some of the essays are old, most of them new; all of them are written in the familiar nervous and impatient prose, and are interspersed with family album photographs. The book is a welcome concession to our curiosity; it is as if the lion had yawned, genially, and allowed us to inspect a few of his teeth." A. M. P.
+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 15 '49 390w

Reviewed by Stephen Spender
Nation 168:503 Ap 30 '49 1250w

Reviewed by J. W. Aldridge
New Repub 120:21 My 23 '49 430w

Reviewed by Kingsley Martin
New Statesman & Nation 37:304 Mr 26 '49 500w

"Fascinating reading and will be indispensable to any one who seriously considers 'the problem' of Shaw." J. W. Krutch
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Mr 27 '49 1250w

"These chapters of autobiography tell us little that has not been already published about Shaw. As he himself says in the most revealing of them—a biographical account which Shaw describes as the kind that Frank Harris ought to have written about him—there is really nothing to say about Shaw because he has himself told us many times in his published works all that is interesting about himself or at least what he intends to be known. The book is worthwhile because it gathers together for those who are not close students of Shaw's works facts about his childhood and parentage, the main stages of his career and many interesting oddments about his friends and his attitude toward life." Kingsley Martin
+ N Y Times p3 Mr 27 '49 1100w

Reviewed by Hamilton Basso
New Yorker 25:105 My 7 '49 800w

"A good many readers, I believe, will find the most interesting sketches—some recent, several dating back half a century and pitched in here to fill gaps—to be the ones in which Shaw discusses his childhood, his parents, his upbringing. Here, reflected in his own mirror, is Shaw the boy, from which Shaw the man grew." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 4 '49 1000w

Reviewed by Hesketh Pearson
Sat R of Lit 32:19 Ap 2 '49 700w

Reviewed by Cyril Ray
Spec 182:368 Mr 18 '49 750w

Springf'd Republican p18A Mr 27 '49 480w

Time 53:106 Ap 4 '49 500w

"At the end of it all the reader cannot but make a fresh surrender to 'G.B.S.' Heartless he may be, a man stronger in antipathies than in sympathies, adroitly coloured to catch the best light of the time, apparently unable to perceive virtue in heroism, he is yet a remarkably chivalrous controversialist, always seeking out the most formidable among possible opponents, and he is, even while contemplating the doom of mankind, unfailingly gay."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p166 Mr 12 '49 1350w

"Although there are some arid and perverse passages here, they are decidedly in the minority. In this book the reader must choose for himself amid the sheer exuberance of the riches provided; here is Shaw's plenty." H. T. Perry

+ — Yale R n s 38:749 summer '49 1000w

SHAW, LLOYD. Round dance book; a century of waltzing; with a foreword by Thomas Hornsby Ferril; with over a hundred old-time American round dances and circle mixers. 443p il $5; ltd autog ed $7 Caxton printers

793.33 Dancing. Waltzes 49-7327

Manual for the dancing instructor, recreation leader, and folk-dance groups. Gives some history of the round dances, followed by explicit directions for the dancing of each type. Especial attention is given to the waltz, the schottische, the mazurka, the polka, and the two-step. Variations of these dances are also discussed. Contains some music, photographs, and an index.

Booklist 45:238 Mr 15 '49

"There is no question of Mr. Shaw's authority. As superintendent of a Colorado school, his personal zeal for riding, skiing, dramatics, and folk-dancing led him to place them in the school curriculum to such good effect that they gained him two honorary doctorates, magazine fame, and the supervision of cowboy dancing for the film, Duel in The Sun. . . There are fewer photographs than in Cowboy Dances, but the descriptions I have read show the same unfailing clearness of explanation that made the former book so useful." N. R. Clifton

+ Canadian Forum 29:71 Je '49 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '49

Kirkus 16:566 O 15 '48 160w

"Delightful, personal, chatty manual—one which is sound technically, but has an approach so disarmingly friendly that the reader is almost unaware of the historical material incorporated in it. . . Teachers will welcome this manual; one does not have to be experienced to enjoy it or to teach or learn from it. Recommended." Genevieve Oswald

+ Library J 73:1819 D 15 '48 140w

Reviewed by Rosalyn Krokover

Sat R of Lit 32:26 Ap 30 '49 70w

School & Society 69:47 Ja 15 '49 20w

Wis Lib Bul 45:45 Mr '49

SHAW, MILTON C., and MACKS, E. FRED. Analysis and lubrication of bearings. 618p $10 McGraw

621.822 Bearings (machinery). Lubrication and lubricants 49-6219

"A comprehensive technical treatise designed for use both by advanced students of engineering and practicing engineers. Instead of assuming a bearing rotating at constant speed, under ideal dynamic conditions, the authors have endeavored to present an analysis of bearing conditions as they actually exist in operating machinery. . . The selected bibliography runs to nearly 400 entries and contains references to books, periodicals and a few patents." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 46:117 D 1 '49

N Y New Tech Bks 34:66 S '49

SHAWE-TAYLOR, DESMOND. Covent Garden. (World of music ser) 72p il col pl $2.50 Chanticleer

792 London. Covent Garden. Music—London 49-7677

A history of Covent Garden from the first theater, 1732-1808, to the third theater, since 1939. The emphasis is on the musical history, and the great singers who have appeared at Covent Garden in opera. Index.

Booklist 45:212 F 15 '49

"Especially recommended for college and public libraries." Catharine Keyes

+ Library J 73:1819 D 15 '48 40w

"Mr. Shawe-Taylor writes gracefully and with humor; he has been an avid opera-goer in the later years, and he gives us frank, fair, and well-considered opinions of the artists and productions he has heard and seen. His book can hardly fail to interest the opera-minded." P. L. Miller

+ Music Lib Assn Notes 6:306 Mr '49 170w

"To crowd the two hundred-odd years of a playhouse's history into seventy pages calls for discrimination; to achieve it elegantly, without 'listing,' calls for wit. Mr. Desmond Shawe-Taylor, as readers of this journal already know, can provide both; and since he has applied them equally to the selection of the seven delightful colour prints and the twenty-eight black and white illustrations; and since the publishers responded with good reproductions and an agreeable format, Covent Garden makes an admirable memento for opera-goers." Richard Lister

+ New Statesman & Nation 36:556 D 18 '48 600w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Ap 24 '49 160w

Reviewed by Howard Taubman

N Y Times p27 F 13 '49 50w

"The author tells amusingly of the more miscellaneous entertainments given in the earlier Covent Garden theatres. To most readers the main interest of his narrative will lie in the history of the last sixty years or so during which Covent Garden achieved its international fame—a fame that has persisted until the very recent past and still hangs like an embarrassingly rich jewel round the neck of the present more modest management. . . The copious illustrations have been well chosen, though many readers might have preferred to sacrifice the reproductions of modern sets in return for more pictures of the great figures of the past."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p300 My 29 '48 700w

SHEEAN, VINCENT. Lead, kindly light. 374p $3.75 Random house

B or 92 Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand. Evil, Non-resistance to 49-9824

"This book, like many others by Vincent Sheean, is intensely personal, a record of emotional experience in the search for his own soul and a road to the world's salvation. Its theme is the answer which traditional Hindu philosophy offers to this quest, especially as that was taught concretely and dramatically by Mahatma Gandhi." (Nation) Bibliography. Index.

Atlantic 184:88 S '49 180w

Booklist 45:365; 392 Jl 1 '49; Jl 15 '49

Bookmark 9:5 O '49 40w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun p8X Jl 17 '49 600w

Reviewed by Robert Peel

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 4 '49 1100w

Reviewed by J. H. Titus

Churchman 163:15 D 1 '49 180w

"Sheean's new book is a touching assertion that religion is necessary for man and it is a tribute to Gandhi as a great spiritual leader. In many details the author is both loquacious and confused. His own philosophy is un-

SHEEAN, VINCENT—Continued
comprehensive and flimsy. I am afraid his popularization of Gandhi's way of Peace will cause some spiritual confusion instead of establishing clear insight." Max Fischer
— + Commonweal 50:394 Jl 29 '49 750w

"Not easy reading, but a book that will capture the imagination of those whose interests lie in esoteric and metaphysical fields, and the many who are reaching for guidance."
Kirkus 17:261 My 15 '49 350w

Reviewed by Swami Nikhilananda
Library J 74:375 Mr 1 '49 210w

"The greater part of what Mr. Sheean sets down as fact is true, if not always exact. There are specific statements that cannot be substantiated. . . These various illustrative exceptions are not meant to deny that his presentation has value; they are only to constitute a mild warning that readers in succumbing to his vigorous and graceful prose should not abrogate normal critical caution. He is so much oftener right than wrong, and so sympathetic and friendly to a great people and culture only now rising into the American view, that I for one hope his book will be widely read." W. N. Brown
+ — Nation 169:88 Jl 23 '49 1150w

"It gives me much pleasure to recommend Vincent Sheean's book on Mahatma Gandhi, 'Lead, Kindly Light,' to American readers. . . Mr. Sheean, besides his close grasp of the essentials of Hinduism has shown remarkable insight into Hinduism as practiced by the masses. It is in the latter field that visitors and supposed 'experts' from abroad have had their maximum chance for malicious propaganda." V. L. Pandit
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Jl 17 '49 1250w

"The seventy four pages describing Sheean's progress to faith are subjective, honest and revealing; here is a monograph, in effect, on Western man in pain. These pages constitute a poignant sequel to Sheean's 'Personal History,' and this section is the heart of the book. It is Sheean at his best, writing about himself in the perspective of universal problems. The book as a whole, however, lacks unity and is of uneven quality." Louis Fischer
+ — N Y Times p3 Jl 17 '49 500w

New Yorker 25:63 Ag 6 '49 90w

"This is a completely honest book and so worth the time of anyone who is troubled about today's world, as all must be. Sheean, moreover, puts his points with remarkable effectiveness; he has never written with greater clarity or point. Take it as the story of a great man and his work, or as the enormously revealing record of a conversation; it's a good book either way." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 26 '49 1000w

"The omissions in 'Lead, Kindly Light' are the accident, as it were, of a powerful spotlight concentrated in one main place. . . But in a book so singleminded and deeply felt it would be niggling to call these faults anything but minor. 'Lead, Kindly Light' most certainly realizes all of its author's major intentions." J. G. Hitrec
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:11 Jl 16 '49 1000w
Time 54:81 Jl 18 '49 800w

SHEED, FRANCIS JOSEPH, ed. Guest-room book. 334p il $3.50 Sheed

820.8 American literature—Collections. English literature—Collections 48-8927

A book for bedside reading. Partial contents: Etiquette for guests, by J. B. Morton; Etiquette for hosts, by E. L. Adams; Letters to a financée, by G. K. Chesterton; Tarantella, by Hilaire Belloc; The women of Horace, by Alfred Noyes; A song about Wordsworth, by J. B. Morton; The jazz, by G. K. Chesterton; Murder in a nunnery, by Eric Shepherd; The moon's funeral, by Hilaire Belloc; The death of Ronsard, by D. B. Wyndham Lewis; The death of Monica, by St. Augustine; Taking the veil, by Katherine Mansfield; Thomas Bailey Aldrich, by Alfred Noyes; The professor and the cook, by G. K. Chesterton; Conversation pieces, by J. B. Morton; The devil's man, by Leonard Feeney. Index of authors.

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 Mr 27 '49 100w

"A pleasant bed-table miscellany. . . There are, however, a few items for the guest who doesn't care whether he gets any sleep or not, among them an essay on death by St. Augustine and a detective story that takes from eleven-thirty until about two-fifteen to get through."
+ New Yorker 24:167 N 20 '48 90w

SHEED, FRANCIS JOSEPH, comp. Saints are not sad; forty biographical portraits. 441p $3.75 Sheed

922 Saints 49-11681

Brief biographies of forty saints from St Paul to St Teresa of Lisieux. Among the authors of the sketches are C. C. Martindale, S.J.; Alban Goodier, S.J.; and Hilaire Belloc. No index.

Commonweal 51:247 D 2 '49 10w

Reviewed by J. W. Chase
N Y Times p54 D 4 '49 180w

SHEEN, FULTON JOHN. Peace of soul. (Whittlesey house publication) 292p $3 McGraw

239 Roman Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works 49-8376

"Probably the most persuasive speaker for Roman Catholicism in America today, Monsignor Sheen has paraphrased the title of a still best-selling book by the late Rabbi Liebman to analyze the inner troubles of frustrated post-war man. Instead of ignoring the teachings of Marx, Freud and other modern 'ists' as apologists have heretofore done, he has used them to implement his arguments to make religion up-to-date, attractive, and necessary to the unhappy, God-repelling souls of the present." Library J

Booklist 45:274 Ap 15 '49

"The author assembles his data skillfully, co-ordinating the various elements into an organized and balanced whole; and he puts his finger on an important truth, frequently overlooked, that naming the source of mental disturbances is not quite the same as effecting the cure. To be sure, some of Monsignor Sheen's statements will be set aside as unconvincing, others may be easily misunderstood; but many readers will find this to be the book they have been waiting for. As it stands it is a good sized volume that will look like fairly heavy reading to the average person—a fact which will make for limited success in carrying its message to those who need it most. If the author would publish a summary with index, it could confidently be classed as required reading for all psychiatrists and as recommended reading for all persons who are searching for peace of soul." Joseph McSorley
+ — Cath World 169:155 My '49 250w

"The writing is clear and forceful, the logic frequently brilliant, but the intellectual workout brooks no distractions. This is a rewarding experience for any reader and those of other religions or of none will enjoy it even when in disagreement." J. O. Supple
+ Chicago Sun Ap 15 '49 650w

Reviewed by Pierre Van Paassen
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 D 25 '49 150w

"The book is a frank and forceful plea for converts to the Catholic faith. Not only Catholics but all who are interested in discovering what is the point of view of one of our leading Catholic thinkers will be interested in this book."
Kirkus 17:146 Mr 15 '49 210w

"This treatise is not written in a popular style, but is rather directed at the more intelligent and educated group of readers. Recommended." H. G. Kelley
+ Library J 74:493 Mr 15 '49 110w

"On the whole, this is interesting reading, and I think many able physicians would not dissent from a great deal that is said. . . It is because Monsignor Sheen's book fires away lustily at the Old Adam that it will receive merited attention, and not because it contributes a great deal to the solution of the problem indicated." G. N. Shuster
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk p9 My 29 '49 900w

"Those who wonder at the frequent successes of the author in bringing well-known persons into the Catholic Church will find in those chapters an interesting reflection of his persuasion." Philip Burnham
+ N Y Times p3 Ap 10 '49 950w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 8 '49 600w

"The title of this book prompts an immediate and obvious association with 'Peace of Mind,' that phenomenal best seller by another distinguished clergyman. If the wide distribution of that book is at all indicative of the general search for tranquillity, this one is bound to be the object of a great deal of attention. . . Not all readers will find fulfillment of the title's promise, but in any event they will glimpse a Catholic point of view on how one faith resolves some of its holders' mental conflicts and frustrations." W. S. Lynch
Sat R of Lit 32:41 Ap 16 '49 650w

Reviewed by J. W. Culver
Springf'd Republican p8C My 1 '49 650w
Time 53:80 Ap 18 '49 750w

SHELLEY, PERCY BYSSHE. New Shelley letters; ed. by W. S. Scott. 170p il $3 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 49-10753

"The present collection of letters of the Shelley circle appeared first a few years ago in a limited three-volume edition with considerable running commentary from their editor, Mr. Scott. He now reissues them in a compact form, printing them in their correct sequence and substituting for the somewhat provocative commentary a brief factual introduction. . . The letters in question are owned by the family of Thomas Jefferson Hogg. . . The writers are for the most part Shelley, Mary Shelley, Peacock, Leigh Hunt, in correspondence with Hogg, and the letters range from January, 1811, to April, 1844." Times [London] Lit Sup

"Although the interest of the letters is largely domestic, and although certain minor errors can be traced in Mr. Scott's transcription of them, the book is an essential addition to Shelley literature." A. M. P.
Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 18 '49 360w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 O 16 '49 700w

Reviewed by Emery Neff
N Y Times p10 S 18 '49 470w
San Francisco Chronicle p29 O 23 '49 90w
Times [London] Lit Sup p682 D 4 '48 900w

SHEPARD, FRANCIS PARKER. Submarine geology. 348p il maps $6 Harper

551.46 Geology, Submarine. Ocean bottom 48-7851

"This work by the Professor of Submarine Geology at the Scripps Institute of Oceanography, University of California, is a major contribution to its field. It embodies the results of many original investigations carried out by the author, some of them with the aid of newly developed and still secret instruments and techniques. In addition, earlier investigations and hypotheses are reviewed and evaluated, particularly in such chapters as the one on the origin and history of the continental shelves. The illustrative matter includes reproductions of many excellent photographs of shore and submarine formations. A list of references to other literature accompanies each chapter." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Taken as a whole, Submarine Geology is an excellent exposition of the accumulated facts which are set forward without bias in the opening sections of each chapter. Shepard gives his preferred explanations of them, but there is nothing to prevent the questioning reader from placing his own interpretations upon them." H. C. Stetson
+ J Geol 57:443 Jl '49 750w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 74:201 F 1 '49 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:87 N '48
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:271 Je '49 380w

SHERA, JESSE HAUK. Foundations of the public library. (Studies in lib. science) 308p il $5 Univ. of Chicago press

027.474 Libraries—New England 49-8133

"The origins of the public library movement in New England, 1629-1855." (Subtitle) Selected bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by M. M. Willey
Am Hist R 55:231 O '49 400w

"Concise, scholarly, readable, this fills a long-felt need for an account of early library history in the U.S."
+ Booklist 45:255 Ap 1 '49

"This book is a fine contribution to the cultural history of our country. Mr. Shera is to be congratulated on having produced it at a time when he was carrying a heavy load, first in wartime Washington and later during a period of transition at the University of Chicago Library." J. T. Babb
+ Library Q 19:287 O '49 650w
School & Society 69:440 Je 18 '49 40w

"By writing the history of the public library movement as a portion of general intellectual and cultural history, Mr. Shera has performed a distinguished service and has contributed a foundation stone for the cultural history of the nation as a whole. The book is not an easy one to read; it is, for example, freighted with statistics which might better have been placed among the interesting appendices, with the illustrations, and reproductions of important documents."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 5:219 Je '49 280w

SHERIDAN, JUANITA. Chinese chop. 221p $2.25 Doubleday 49-50122

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p40 D 23 '49 80w
Kirkus 17:592 O 15 '49 80w

"A pleasant and readable mystery. Miss Sheridan reduces the possible suspects to so small a number that there's not much of a puzzle. But motives and identities are introduced which hold a few surprises for the reader, and in the end he's not disappointed."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 D 18 '49 190w
N Y Times p14 D 18 '49 90w

"In spite of all the complications, not very exciting."
New Yorker 25:131 D 17 '49 130w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p27 Ja 8 '50 150w

SHERIF, MUZAFER. Outline of social psychology; with an introd. by Gardner Murphy. 479p il $4 Harper

301.15 Social psychology 48-7372

"This work is an attempt to build an introductory text around the author's theory that social behavior springs largely from the way in which the individual perceives the world. The idea that the principles of human behavior are essentially principles of social perception . . . was expounded by Muzafer Sherif in his earlier work, Psychology of Social Norms. In the book under review he has balanced this explanation of human behavior by a considerable increase in emphasis on the power of human motivation and particularly of biological demands." (Ann Am Acad) Indexes.

SHERIF, MUZAFER—Continued

"The presentation shows the development of the book out of lecture notes, and the style is frequently classroom style. The clarity of the presentation is unfortunately not even. There are statements of surprising lucidity as well as statements which are so involved that they may present difficulties to students in an introductory course. Great emphasis is placed upon experimental verification of theoretical material and on the presentation of data which will strike students and instructors as pertinent in terms of modern concern." Otto Pollak
Ann Am Acad 263:264 My '49 440w

Reviewed by F. B. Parker
Social Forces 28:92 O '49 950w

"The author's special interest in formation of group standards or norms seems, to this reviewer, to have led him to overemphasize certain aspects of his research and to include needless details on how he and his colleagues conducted their experiments in the autokinetic effect. The studies of the impact of technology might have been strengthened through inclusion of additional discussions of the American and European observations. However, Dr. Sherif may have felt that this information was easily available to his reader." Hillier Krieghbaum
Survey G 37:484 N '48 430w

SHERRILL, HENRY KNOX, bp. Church's ministry in our time. 162p $2 Scribner
261 Church. Christianity 49-7686

This volume contains the Lyman Beecher Lectures delivered at Yale university in April 1948. Contents: The spiritual state of the world; The spiritual state of the churches; If God be for us; The Master and the fellowship of the spirit; A lesson from history; The minister. Index.

Reviewed by J. O. Supple
Chicago Sun Mr 2 '49 70w

"There is nothing new, but much that is permanently sound in these pages."
+ Churchman 163:15 Je 15 '49 60w

"Bishop Sherrill is critical without being caustic, because his criticism is the result of his convictions and his dreams, rather than of his despair—which is just about the last word properly to be used of his lectures. He is kindly in his diagnosis, realistic in his ideals, practical in his prescription." R. E. Keighton
+ Crozer Q 26:278 Jl '49 300w

"There is nothing startlingly new either in the Bishop's diagnosis of the world's ills or in his suggestions for a cure, but it is reassuring to have the leader of this great Church revealed as such a clear-eyed, broad-gauged, deeply spiritual man. It is a book which clergymen of all denominations and many Protestant laymen will find helpful and stimulating."
+ Kirkus 17:145 Mr 15 '49 120w

Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich
Springf'd Republican p5D Ap 17 '49 300w

SHERRY, EDNA. No questions asked. 216p $2.50 Dodd 49-8222

Mystery story.

"Miss Sherry's ladylike version of police work is unconvincing in spots." Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ap 10 '49 90w

"Uneven but interesting suspense stuff."
+ — New Yorker 25:108 Ap 2 '49 80w

"We weren't overly impressed with the plot of this one, seemed rather thin, for some reason—but we did find the characters pretty darned interesting." E. D. Doyle
— + San Francisco Chronicle p28 My 1 '49 50w

"Good marks."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:30 Ap 9 '49 40w
Wis Lib Bul 45:89 My '49

SHERWOOD, JOHN. Dr Bruderstein vanishes [Eng title: Disappearance of Dr Bruderstein]. 190p $2.25 Doubleday 49-9733

Mystery story.

Kirkus 17:259 My 15 '49 100w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ag 21 '49 90w

"Those who are easily surfeited by the British brand of whimsy humor may have their fill early in the book. Others may feel that things are more chopped off than wound up at the end, and that only the guardian arm of the author could rescue the hero from some of the fixes he finds himself in. Still, most readers should have a good, fast time." E. B.
+ — N Y Times p15 Jl 31 '49 140w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 14 '49 90w

SHERWOOD, MARGARET POLLOCK. Pilgrim feet. 512p $3 Montrose press, 89 Montrose av, Wakefield, Mass.
49-1722

This novel follows the story of Miriam Ware from childhood days in Vermont, and thru the years in Rome and Florence as she strove to master her chosen art of sculpture.

"'Pilgrim Feet' has many perceptive passages and descriptions of quiet beauty, both of the New England countryside and of Italy. It is a very long book, and its preoccupation with the adventures of the spirit makes it preeminently a novel for a rather special group of readers."
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Jl 3 '49 400w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
— Springf'd Republican p8C My 15 '49 300w

SHERWOOD, ROBERT E. Peace on earth. See Peace on earth.

SHEVKY, ESHREF, and WILLIAMS, MARILYN. Social areas of Los Angeles; analysis and typology; pub. for the John Randolph Haynes and Dora Haynes foundation. 172p maps $4 Univ. of Calif.
309.1 Social surveys. Los Angeles—Social conditions

"A technical description and interpretation of the social pattern of Los Angeles, making use of a new method of area analysis based on the relations of status, urbanization, and segregation. Comparative and experimental in its method, the research summarized in this volume is part of a larger effort toward a definition of problems associated with urban growth and development." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

"Recognition should be given to the splendid first chapter of this volume which provides some very interesting observations on the growth of Southern California. The remaining methodological analysis, however, cannot be equally recommended." E. G. Erickson
— + Am Soc R 14:699 O '49 700w
San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 4 '49 170w

SHIPLEY, JOSEPH TWADELL. Trends in literature. 457p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

809 Literature—History and criticism 49-9184

"Trends in Literature is a survey of the various forces and attitudes that have shaped the world today and have therefore determined the nature of our literature. Recognizing that the same forces determine man's thinking, his politics, his social attitudes, even his scientific emphases, Dr. Shipley points out the identical trends in these fields, and in the other arts—music, painting, sculpture—as well as literature." (Publisher's note) Index.

"Tone is energetic, controversial, blunt. . . Principal usefulness of the book would seem to be as a bibliographical introduction to certain currents in contemporary opinion." H. W. Hart

Library J 74:734 My 1 '49 100w

"The present volume gives ample evidence of wide reading. Shipley ranges from Shakespeare to Satre, from Plato to Freud, from Goethe to Elinor Glyn. Yet what he does with this material seems to me far from impressive." Charles Weir

— N Y Times p20 My 15 '49 320w

SHIPPEN, KATHERINE BINNEY. Bright design; il. by Charles Michael Daugherty. 207p $3.50 Viking

530.9 Electricity—Juvenile literature. Physicists. Physics—Juvenile literature 49-8405

Traces the developments in the discovery of electrical energy and its uses from medieval times to the present. The method the author has chosen is to center her stories around the men and women who aided in the discoveries. For grades seven to ten. Suggestions for further reading. Index.

Booklist 45:299 My 1 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Je 11 '49 200w

"A book for every library and every home where there are young people from 12 to 18, and one into which the elders will look as well." A. T. Eaton

+ Christian Science Monitor p4 Je 30 '49 410w

"Older boys and girls about to begin the first bewildering lessons in physics will find this book easy reading and highly profitable. It will give them the total picture they'll need before they're likely to have any enthusiasm for going into details."

+ Commonweal 51:192 N 18 '49 200w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 25:295 Jl '49 140w

"Boys and girls who today more than ever are fascinated by the subject will want this book for themselves, so that they may reconstruct the past of what is perhaps a new story of physical energy." J. L. G.

+ Kirkus 17:113 Mr 1 '49 130w

"An alive book on the history of magnetism and electricity. . . This book certainly has a place to fill but must be introduced to young folks and pushed by librarian or teacher." Mildred Ross

+ Library J 74:828 My 15 '49 110w

"Miss Shippen is curator of social studies at the Brooklyn Children's Museum. There she gave a series of talks on electrical energy and the men who have traced its patterns, which were the basis of this book. So it has that invaluable background of having been worked out aloud with the young people themselves. Its mean appeal will be for junior-high age and older." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My 8 '49 430w

"The subject-matter of this book is unusual, the approach challenging and the style pleasing. Teen-agers reading it, and many older ones as well, will gain an appreciation of historical continuity as they see how one scientist furthers or builds upon the work of another. They will be impressed with the value of freedom as they read of scientists who brought their skill to America to escape tyranny in their native lands. The illustrations add greatly to the attractiveness and value of the book." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p24 My 1 '49 230w

"The author has done an imaginative job on this abstract subject—with a great deal of human drama that is sure to exhilarate teen-agers."

+ New Yorker 25:184 D 3 '49 80w

"This is a book that has great value, both as science and as history." M. G. Davis

+ Sat R of Lit 32:35 N 12 '49 180w

Wis Lib Bul 45:91 My '49

SHIPPEN, KATHERINE BINNEY. Moses; front. by Lili Cassel. 132p $2 Harper

221.92 Moses—Juvenile literature 49-11591

The story of Moses, from his first flight out of Egypt to his death on Mount Sinai. For grades 6-9.

"A beautifully written biography and a stirring account of the Exodus"

+ Booklist 46:130 D 1 '49

+ Commonweal 51:187 N 18 '49 80w

"One of the world's great stories, well told."

+ Kirkus 17:510 S 15 '49 100w

"Dramatically told, it still leaves something to be desired in the characterization of Moses himself." M. G. Davis

Sat R of Lit 32:48 N 12 '49 50w

+ Wis Lib Bul p13 D '49

SHIPTON, CLIFFORD KENYON. Isaiah Thomas, printer, patriot, philanthropist, 1749-1831. 94p il $5 Ptg. house of Leo Hart, 1776 Clinton av, N, Rochester 1, N.Y.

B or 92 Thomas, Isaiah 48-7989

"The career of Isaiah Thomas makes a typical American success story. . . At the age of seven Thomas was apprenticed to an ignorant and lazy Boston printer; some fifty years later, at the close of the eighteenth century, he had one of the largest fortunes in the United States, controlling five bookstores, three newspapers, and a magazine. . . His busy presses supplied all America with every kind of printed matter from almanacs to Bibles. . . His History of Printing in America is still useful, and the American Antiquarian Society which he founded still makes a notable contribution to the study of early American history and printing." U S Quarterly Bkl

"Although From 'Prentice to Patron' by Annie Russell Marble is perhaps more popularly written, this new life of 'the father of the modern American printing and publishing business,' while intended for printing experts, contains much freshly acquired material interesting to the general reader." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 25:298 Jl '49 90w

"Although Mr. Shipton disclaims any intention of writing a definitive biography of Isaiah Thomas, it is doubtful if, when the definitive work comes to be written, it will be as lively and unpretentiously informative as this small volume." J. C. Miller

+ New Eng Q 22:428 S '49 400w

"Mr. Shipton's volume is scholarly without being dull. It is suggestive and stimulating. The student of the history of printing and the bibliophile will find this a work of the first importance." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p52 N 13 '49 270w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:54 Mr '49 200w

SHIRLEY, DAME, pseud. See Clappe, L. A. K. S.

SHISTER, JOSEPH. Economics of the labor market. 590p $4.50 Lippincott

331.112 Labor supply—U.S. Industrial relations. Trade unions 49-8765

"This text examines the principle features of the labor market, taking into account particularly the advances in knowledge and ap-

SHISTER, JOSEPH—Continued
proach made in this field in the past decade or so. Following an over-all picture of the labor force and its industrial and occupational distribution, the institutions of the labor market are examined and its operation analyzed. A comprehensive study of the why's and wherefore's of a wide variety of significant labor problems." Management R

"The volume presents more than a mere summary of the important work done on the subject; it offers an integrated study of the whole field of labor economics. . . Professor Shister reveals wide knowledge, considerable insight, and an intimate acquaintance with the literature of the field manifested in his judicious selection of material. The book is highly recommended to those interested in the recent developments in labor economics." S. A. Levitan
+ Ann Am Acad 266:207 N '49 380w
Management R 38:584 O '49 70w

SHOEMAKER, ROBERT HILLES. Best in baseball. 250p $2.50 Crowell
796.357 Baseball—Biography 49-11704

"A collection of stories about 16 of baseball's most colorful players. . . From Ty Cobb through the one and only Babe Ruth down to present-day heroes—Stan Musial, Ted Williams, Hal Newhouser—is presented enough baseball history to show why it is our national game." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 46:127 D 1 '49

"The kind of book that will supply the answers to a lot of arguments."
+ Kirkus 17:475 S 1 '49 110w

"Although material on most of the people can be found elsewhere, there is so much demand for it that a collection like this is always welcome." Esther Corey
Library J 74:1553 O 15 '49 80w

SHORT, LUKE, pseud. See Glidden, F. D.

SHOTWELL, JAMES THOMSON. Balkan mission. 180p il $2.25 Columbia univ. press
914.96 Balkan states 49-9838

"Narrative of the author's journey through the Balkans in 1925 on behalf of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Mixed with a picture of conditions after World War I, there is [a] travelogue and commentary on the people." (Current Hist) Index.

"The reader will find Professor Shotwell's book a well-written and fact-laden story of the Balkans in 1925. His brief commentaries on individual Balkan peoples and on their and general world problems are simultaneously thought-provoking and instructive, especially so when the present material is looked at from the perspective of contemporary developments in that tragic region." W. S. Vucinich
+ Ann Am Acad 266:234 N '49 600w
Current Hist 17:99 Ag '49 40w

"When Dr. Shotwell confines his narrative to his mission, which was to organize the Balkan section of the Economic and Social History of the (first) World War and to explain the purposes of the Carnegie Endowment, he writes with discrimination and sense. It is a pity that this is not more often."
— + Times [London] Lit Sup p676 O 21 '49 750w

SHOTWELL, JAMES THOMSON, and SALVIN, MARINA. Lessons on security and disarmament from the history of the League of nations; pub. for the Carnegie endowment for int. peace. 149p $2.25 King's Crown press
341.12 Disarmament. League of nations. International cooperation 49-8455

"In compact form, a wide range of [the League of Nations'] activities relating to disarmament and security is covered with clarity and perspective. The purpose is twofold: (1) to correct the common idea that all the effort of the League was futile, by setting forth the work at Geneva in its true proportions; and (2) to draw some lessons for the guidance of the United Nations. Therefore, the points covered are chosen with reference to discussions now before the U.N." (Ann Am Acad) No index.

Reviewed by L. L. Wright
Am Hist R 55:183 O '49 300w

"Stimulating and provocative little volume." A. J. Hotz
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:853 Ag '49 370w

"In these days of so many offhand pronouncements on world affairs, some cynical, some idealistic, it is good to come upon this little volume with its realistic account and assessment of the work of the League of Nations." P. S. Peirce
+ Ann Am Acad 265:216 S '49 490w
Current Hist 16:287 My '49 40w
Foreign Affairs 28:157 O '49 20w

SHOUISKY, JUDITH S., and MCGIBENY, RUTH THOMPSON. Ali of Baku. 213p $2.50 Crowell
Children in Azerbaijan 49-8504

A story of a Mohammedan boy in the republic of Azerbaijan in 1918. Ali wanted to be a doctor to prevent unnecessary deaths like those of his parents. He was delighted to be sent to his uncle in Baku; because he thought he might attend school there. Instead his uncle sent him begging in the streets until Ali ran away and found a happier home and the chance for an education. For grades 6-8.

"The story of Ali's fortunes and misfortunes is action-filled and absorbing; there is a good deal of misery and cruelty which may be distressing to the more sensitive reader."
Booklist 45:321 My 15 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Ag 6 '49 270w

"This is a tremendously interesting story because of the varying and contrasting facts and elements it introduces."
+ Kirkus 17:85 F 15 '49 150w

"Story of Ali's adventures while trying to realize his ambition to be a doctor is full of action and excitement, and told against a colorful background little known in literature. Characterization is sincere and unsentimental." H. M. Brogan
+ Library J 74:964 Je 15 '49 200w

"Very dull story." C. W. Field
— Library J 74:964 Je 15 '49 160w

"Both background and adventures ring true, and it is exciting enough so that one does not take time to refer to the glossary provided. One has to admit, however, that it all happened in 1917. Internal politics in Azerbaijan may be much the same today, but one wishes that some foreword might have caught us up on the time element." L. S. Bechtel
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Je 5 '49 360w

"The authors take no sides except against ignorance, superstition, greed, in whatever race or religion it appears. Ali's story is entirely believable, rich in action and detail, overflowing with all kinds of people, rewarding reading for many besides the boys and girls from 12 up for whom it was planned.' " G. C. Castor
+ N Y Times p24 My 1 '49 220w
Wis Lib Bul 45:108 Je '49

SHROCK, ROBERT RAKES. Sequence in layered rocks. 507p il $7.50 McGraw 552 Geology. Rocks 48-7904

"A description of the principles and methods utilized in determining the order of succession of bedded and layered rocks where the strata is steeply inclined or vertical. The book is planned for use as a text by advanced geology students, and as a manual of practical information for practicing geologists. It is for the latter group, particularly the petroleum and mining geologists, that the author has included detailed discussions of rock features and structures, and numerous photographs and diagrams of layered rocks." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

"The book is descriptive and extremely well done. . . The completeness of the work would have been tremendously enhanced if the author had included such allied subjects as sedimentation rates, the problem of geologic time, evaluation of geophysical well logging in determining sequence, and a fundamental discussion of time, lithologic, and fauna surfaces." N. A. R.
+ — J Geol 57:99 Ja '49 150w
Library J 73:1095 Ag '48 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 34:23 Mr '49

"The work is designed primarily for graduate students and field geologists, but will be helpful also to some undergraduate students under guidance."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:502 D '48 200w

SHULMAN, IRVING. Cry tough! 348p $3 Dial press
49-7948

"When Mitchell Wolf was released from the reformatory he intended to make up with his family, get a job and become a useful citizen. He thought of this as the sensible, the easy way to resolve his mixed-up life. He got home to find that his sister was engaged to a cop, that his old friends were feeling their way into the more lucrative rackets and that his family's respectability seemed drab and plodding. Vacillating, he tried working, then petty crime, and then again he went to work. Ironically, it was through his second job—procured laboriously for him by his father—that he drifted into big-time lawlessness, and the seductive luxuries that he could never afford on a salary." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"A novel that comes closer to being an unintentional takeoff on James T. Farrell than it does to being a report on juvenile delinquency." Nelson Algren
— Chicago Sun p8X Ap 10 '49 370w

"Writing beautifully in certain scenes, such as the description of a Friday night ritual meal of an orthodox Jewish family, Mr. Shulman is at the same time awkward in moving from one scene to another, and unsure in portraying exactly what kind of person his protagonist is. Though somewhat uneven 'Cry Tough' is a striking, compassionate and unsentimental treatment of a frequently romanticized subject."
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Mr 20 '49 300w

"There is little doubt that Mr. Shulman has a thorough knowledge of the habitat in which he traces the progress of his young jailbirds who live in the vicinity of Pitkin Avenue. He is also fairly convincing in detailing the emotional conflicts that beset Mitchell Wolf. . . Ironically, Mr. Shulman is at his best not with the various blends of criminal sadism but in his periodic references to the behavior of law-abiding people. . . It is a pity that Mr. Shulman concentrates on the tiny criminal minority of Brownsville, magnifying them out of all proportion to their importance there." Murray Schumach
+ — N Y Times p20 Ap 3 '49 270w

Reviewed by Patricia Sides
San Francisco Chronicle p15 My 15 '49 320w

"In the course of this chronicle there is enough blood, violence, sordidness, and filth to pave Brownsville's Pitkin Avenue. The documentary accuracy of this I do not doubt. Nor do I question the genuineness of Mr. Shulman's indignation, or the importance of such an exposé. The trouble is that it has been done quite a number of times now, including one by Mr. Shulman himself. Nothing new in insight or interpretation is added." Edmund Fuller
— Sat R of Lit 32:32 Ap 23 '49 700w

SHULTZ, MRS GLADYS (DENNY). Widows wise and otherwise; a practical guide for the woman who has lost her husband. 285p $3.50 Lippincott
396 Widows 49-11275

"The purpose of this book is to prepare the average widow as far as can be done for the various contingencies that are likely to arise." (Pref) Partial contents: A word about funerals; You need a lawyer!; Recovery takes time; Meet some widow exploiters; Living within your income; There's a career for you; When you're mother and father too; You and your grown children; Should you re-marry? Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:115 D 1 '49

"Recommended."
+ Wis Lib Bul p7 D '49

SHURR, GERTRUDE, and YOCOM, RACHAEL DUNAVEN. Modern dance; techniques and teaching. 191p il $3.75 Barnes, A.S.
793.307 Dancing—Study and teaching 49-8347

Describes in text and photographic diagrams movements for the dance beginner: warm-ups, exercises, and various techniques. Could be used in physical education classes. Glossary.

Booklist 45:310 My 15 '49

"Well illustrated and descriptive volume which will prove of value to modern dancers. Recommended for dance or calisthenics collection." George Freedley
+ Library J 74:960 Je 15 '49 20w
School & Society 70:16 Jl 2 '49 10w

SHURTLEFF, BERTRAND LESLIE. Two against the North; a story of Huskie and Spareribs; jacket drawing and il. by Diana Thorne. 274p $2.50 Bobbs
Dogs—Legends and stories 49-10423

The heroes of this adventure story of a man-hunt in Alaska are the two dogs, Huskie and Spareribs, who were featured in the author's earlier novels for young people, Long Lash and Short Leash (Book Review Digest 1947, 1945).

Booklist 46:50 O 1 '49

"One of the season's better books for older boys."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 13 '49 80w

SIBERT, HAROLD WARD. High-speed aerodynamics. 289p $6; to schools $4.50 Prentice-Hall
629.1323 Aerodynamics 48-4707

"Information on high-speed aerodynamics phenomena designed so that engineers will find it useful while care has been taken to include all steps necessary for easy comprehension by the undergraduate student, both of which may not have had extensive training in higher mathematics. The minimum prerequisites are differential and integral calculus and a knowledge of elementary aerodynamics. Charts, graphs, tables, and problems." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 74:201 F 1 '49 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:81 N '48

SIBLEY, ELBRIDGE. Recruitment, selection, and training of social scientists. 163p pa $1.50 Social science research council
307 Social scientists. Social sciences—Study and teaching 48-9155

"In this Social Science Research Council bulletin Dr. Sibley demonstrates that the students of social science entering the graduate schools are not markedly inferior to those in natural science. . . More and better social scientists are needed but the facilities for training greater numbers are limited. A number of suggestions are offered to improve the situation and eventually to obtain pioneers in these relatively young fields of research. More care should be taken in admitting students to these graduate departments; elimination should be more swift. Efforts should be made during college years, if not before, to acquaint able students with the need and nature of social science research and to prepare them for it. In the graduate schools more emphasis, as in the natural sciences, should be placed upon participation in well-planned projects than in endless lecture courses, reading assignments, and sporadic conferences." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

SIBLEY, ELBRIDGE—Continued

Reviewed by W. D. Wallis
Am Anthropol 51:314 Ap '49 500w

"This monograph is recommended for study by graduate deans, department heads, faculty, and graduate students. It is well written; its reasoning is close; its message is of vital importance to every professional social scientist. Finally, it puts in print a number of things which need to be said of the abilities, training, and potentialities of social scientists, as well as of the handicaps under which they work in comparison with the natural sciences." A. B. Hollingshead
+ Am J Soc 54:568 My '49 1500w

"The author asserts that it is research and not general education that is under consideration, and proceeds to view research narrowly and as chiefly quantitative. He does not recognize that personal maturity is more important to a social scientist than to a natural scientist, nor does he sufficiently recognize that general education at the graduate level is necessary if we are to ask the right questions in research. Valuable as this study is, it is to be hoped that educational policy will have a broader base." Warner Moss
Am Pol Sci R 42:1255 D '48 310w

Reviewed by J. E. Pomfret
Ann Am Acad 261:196 Ja '49 450w

"Whether or not one accepts either Dr. Sibley's ends or his means, one will readily admit that he has thrown much light upon the present state of graduate study, and has offered much incisive criticism of inertia and traditionalism."
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:450 D '48 330w

SIEGELE, HERMAN HUGO. Concrete construction; a practical book of instruction for form builders, concrete workers and other building tradesmen, particularly carpenters and builders. 159p il $2.50 Drake, F.J.
693.5 Concrete construction 48-23719

"Most of this book deals with the temporary construction or form building that is necessary in concrete construction. Parts of the text were taken out of the author's three books, Carpentry (Drake, 1944), Building (Drake, 1944), and Quick Construction (Drake, 1945). These parts were rewritten or revised and a number of new lessons added on concrete forms and construction." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1671 N 15 '48 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:68 S '48

SIEGFRIED, ANDRE. Canada, an international power; tr. from the French by Doris Hemming. new rev ed 283p maps $3.50 Duell
917.1 Canada 49-2222

"The author states that he has rewritten the first edition [Book Review Digest 1937] although he has retained its general structure." Booklist

Booklist 45:283 Ap 15 '49

"The interest which is bound to attend such a book here is that it enables Canadians to see themselves through the eyes of an outsider, albeit a friendly one. Covering as it does many aspects of Canadian life—it is divided into sections on the demography and the geographical, economic, and political aspects—the book must at least cause Canadian readers to ask themselves whether they and their institutions are as Professor Siegfried describes them. He indulges in some pretty broad generalizations. Some are of a brutal frankness that no Canadian would risk publicly." A. Andras
+ — Canadian Forum 29:67 Je '49 550w

"Mr. Siegfried's book induces thought and the desire for study. In some ways it is provocative, but that is all the more reason for reading it and joining with him in the search for a just balance between the old and the new." Leila Flower
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 18 '49 650w

"Two chapters have been added... Whilst they add to the book's value, the general impression is not one of profundity, perhaps because we have read and learnt a lot about Canada in recent years. This analysis by a Frenchman of much discernment remains, however, both interesting and stimulating."
+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 4 '49 90w
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 Ap 24 '49 50w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 32:26 Jl 2 '49 20w

"Professor Siegfried has written easily the best study of relations between the two groups in Canada, Le Canada—Les Deux Races (1907). The present book, valuable as it is, falls short of equal discernment in grasping the nature of Canada and Canadian policy." Graham Spry
Spec 183:116 Jl 22 '49 420w

Reviewed by Irving Dalliard
Survey 85:394 Jl '49 190w

SIEMEL, SASHA, and others. Jungle wife. 308p il $3.50 Doubleday
918.1 Matto Grosso, Brazil. Hunting—Brazil 49-7563

"With a houseboat as a home, a boa constrictor as a pet, and a tiger hunter as a husband, Edith Siemel found herself on the Upper Paraguay River in June 1940, where she was to remain for several years. She not only raised three children and sewed on her family's buttons, but sparred with jungle bad men and vied with her husband as an accomplished hunter of jungle wild life." Publisher's note

Booklist 45:113; 209 D 1 '48; F 15 '49

Reviewed by Marvin Quinn
Chicago Sun p8X My 22 '49 180w

"There are not many truly wild spots left in the world, but the Matto Grosso is one of them; and Edith Siemel's story of family life where-the-tigers-roar is as convincing a collection of jungle tales as has appeared in many a day... The only flaw to the telling is that injected, one suspects, by the third name among the authors. A false note of coyness, a certain amount of padding, and rather inane conversations slow up the story of a highly adventurous life." H. C. M.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 F 17 '49 330w

"Mrs. Siemel manages an infectious gaiety, and the ability to make fun of herself and her adventures... The understanding, amused instruction and quiet tolerance of her husband is a pleasant note, and description of life in the jungle is full of vitality and information."
+ Kirkus 16:652 D 15 '48 180w

"Style is uneven and not commendable but material is excellent." H. S. Taylor
Library J 74:197 F 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by Margaret Hubbard
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 F 13 '49 650w

Reviewed by Russell Owen
N Y Times p26 F 13 '49 220w

"All in all, the book is quite absorbing, and would be completely so were it not for the stilted conversation which occurs throughout. The domestic scenes are downright painful, and read like a bad imitation of Noel Coward at his worst. The intimate dialogues between Mrs. Siemel and Rupert, a pet boa constrictor, are impossible." P. A. S.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ap 17 '49 450w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich
Sat R of Lit 32:29 Jl 2 '49 140w
Survey 85:450 Ag '49 200w
Wis Lib Bul 45:46 Mr '49

SIENESE paintings; with an introd. and notes by Tancred Borenius. 24p 10 col pl pa $1.95 Pitman

759.55 Paintings, Italian

"In this book, we have ten full-page reproductions in color of the work of certain Sienese painters in the National Gallery of London. There is Duccio's famous Annunciation, Ugolino's Deposition, Niccolo di Buonaccorso's Marriage of the Virgin, Sassetta's Charity of Saint Francis and His Vision and Saint Francis' Treaty With the Wolf of Gubbio, Matteo di Giovanni's Madonna of the Girdle, and four other paintings of sacred subjects by other artists. Tancred Borenius supplies not only an Introduction on the Sienese school but also notes for the individual paintings." Commonweal

Booklist 45:356 Je 15 '49

Reviewed by John Cournos
+ Commonweal 50:74 Ap 29 '49 230w
San Francisco Chronicle p23 Je 26 '49 110w

Reviewed by L. R. Sanders
Sat R of Lit 32:33 My 7 '49 40w

SIGGIA, SIDNEY. Quantitative organic analysis via functional groups. 152p $3 Wiley

547 Chemistry, Analytic—Quantitative. Chemistry, Organic 49-4432

"Gives a series of working methods for determining organic compounds by the functional groups on the molecule. The general principle of all the described procedure is the determination of an acid, base, oxidant, or reductant, or gas consumed or liberated by the reaction of the sample with a reagent. May be used as a textbook or laboratory manual in quantitative organic analysis." (Library J) Index.

"While the book is sketchy, and there are numerous omissions, it is nevertheless the first work of its kind. If used with this in mind, it is a contribution to the rapidly developing field of organic analysis and is recommended to those concerned with work of this nature." A. I. Gebhart
+ — Chem Eng 56:256 D '49 500w

Reviewed by Julian Sohon
Library J 74:1103 Ag '49 70w

"The book is intended for advanced students and analytical chemists already at work in laboratories and industry."
N Y New Tech Bks 34:52 Jl '49

SILK, LEONARD SOLOMON. Sweden plans for better housing. 149p il maps $4 Duke univ. press

331.833 Housing—Sweden 48-8682

A study of Sweden's experience with the housing problem. Considers it in respect to general economic conditions and policies, and compares it with the situation in the United States. Selected bibliography. Index.

"The treatment is too cursory to be satisfactory, and the writing so inept that even the author's main thesis—that Sweden has arrived at a public utility concept in the financing of its housing—fails of clear documentation. Relatively little attention is paid to sociological, architectural, city planning, and other related aspects of housing. Twenty-three fine photographs enliven the text, but do not warrant the high price for which this thin volume sells."
— + Am Soc R 14:192 F '49 120w
Booklist 45:368 Jl 1 '49
Current Hist 17:285 N '49 60w

Reviewed by H. F. Hohman
J Pol Econ 57:254 Je '49 1100w

Reviewed by C. K. Agle
N Y Times p30 Ja 16 '49 800w

"Silk's book is readable, and a competent job by one who tried to avoid the pitfalls of 'ikonomics' while not being tempted into the blanket condemnation of the mythoclast. The only major criticism is that he has given only honorable mention to Sweden's important land-purchase policies, her housing for the elderly, her public-housing undertakings, some of the architectural features germane to Scandinavia, particularly balconies, and the unique social services connected with the projects, all of which would seem to be relevant in a book on housing in this fascinating country." Charles Abrams
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:23 My 14 '49 800w

"One's first thought upon laying this book down is very likely to be that the cause of housing everywhere would be greatly helped if Mr. Silk could write a similar little volume on every country with a housing movement. He manages, in non-technical language, to acquaint the reader thoroughly with the evolution and the financing of Swedish housing." B. J. Hovde
+ Survey 85:121 F '49 850w

"The book is illustrated with pictures of modern housing in Sweden. It should be of interest to housing administrators, legislators, and all the general public who are interested in housing problems, and who wish to learn of how another country with a primarily capitalistic economy is attempting to solve its housing needs."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 4:484 D '48 250w

SILLIMAN, LELAND. Purple tide; il. by Joseph Bolden. 216p $2.50 Winston 49-8521

"A school and sports story of a boy who had to wait until his senior year before he made the football and baseball teams." Library J

"The best part of the story deals with the coaching sequences and the games themselves. The rest seems largely a vehicle for sports scenes and sports talk."
+ — Kirkus 17:111 Mr 1 '49 70w

"Good, accurate sports information and nice school atmosphere. Recommended for older boys' collections in the children's room and for teen-age collections." M. D. Read
+ Library J 74:828 My 15 '49 60w

"Teen-age boys and girls will enjoy this fast-moving story. . . The author, drawing upon his rich personal background as an athlete and coach, has woven a yarn which will delight every reader who has ever watched or participated in a high school baseball or football game." H. B. Lent
+ N Y Times p14 My 29 '49 130w

SILVER, ABBA HILLEL. Vision and victory. 232p $2.50 Zionist organization

956.9 Zionism. Palestine—Politics and government 49-9683

A collection of addresses delivered between 1942 and 1948 by the American leader of Zionism.

Booklist 45:385 Jl 15 '49

"The oratorical genius of Abba Hillel Silver has long been one of the assets of the American Jewish community. Dr. Silver matches erudition and profundity with a vivid and strikingly original style. His speeches in this volume, dealing mainly with the need for an independent Israel, belong in the highest tradition of polemics." A. L. Sachar
+ N Y Times p40 N 27 '49 750w

SILVER, JAMES WESLEY. Edmund Pendleton Gaines; frontier general. 291p il maps $4.50 La. state univ. press

B or 92 Gaines, Edmund Pendleton
49-48267

Biography of General Gaines, which traces his ancestry back to the battle of Agincourt,

SILVER, J. W.—Continued
and takes full cognizance of his military services in the United States during the first half of the nineteenth century. In his discussion of his subject's relations with Mexico and Indian tribes Gaines is shown as a maker of history. The facts of his marriage to the notorious Myra Clark Whitney are sketched briefly. Index.

Current Hist 17:354 D '49 60w

"Mr. Silver has dredged up and brought together the scattered material on the many activities of this remarkable man to form the first biography of him worthy of the name. The book is a judicious and reliable one, and one that can be read." W. B. Hamilton
+ N Y Times p20 Ja 8 '50 360w

"One of Gaines's 'radical' ideas was his conception of the essentiality of rail transportation to the nation's defense and growth. Altogether he was a lively, controversial, and significant figure, and Dr. Silver has rendered a signal service to history by resurrecting him."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:28 Ja 21 '50 190w

SILVER, SAMUEL, ed. Microwave antenna theory and design [prepared under the supervision of] Office of scientific research and development, National defense research committee. 623p $8 McGraw

621.384135 Radio—Short wave. Radio antennas 49-7345

"The present volume provides a comprehensive survey of the fundamental theories and principles of design for various types of microwave transmitting and receiving antennas. The treatment is technical and mathematical, and includes a review of those elements of electromagnetic theory and physical optics, essential to an understanding of the subject. Two chapters dealing with the methods utilized in determining antenna characteristics have been included." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

N Y New Tech Bks 34:28 Mr '49

"The book is, of course, based on field theory, and the treatment is necessarily mathematical. It is addressed to physicists and advanced engineers in the field."
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:284 Je '49 280w

SIMKHOVITCH, MRS MARY MELINDA (KINGSBURY). Here is God's plenty; reflections on American social advance. 184p $2.50 Harper

B or 92 Social work. Greenwich house, New York 49-48097

"With the acclaim and respect of her work in social service behind her, the retired head of Greenwich House, N.Y.C., writes of the many interests in her career, of the roots of her activities, and of the full years she has known. There are memories of her parents and school, a European interlude, and graduate studies and the early days of her work with the College Settlement, on Rivington Street, in 1898,—all of which contributed to her vital part in low rental housing, the problems of recreation and work in the arts, the questions of welfare and community organization." (Kirkus) Index.

Booklist 46:2; 96 S 1 '49; N 15 '49

"Mrs. Simkhovich's book brings to the literature of social work nothing startling or new, but it does contribute the sort of sanity and perspective that will always be needed. Among its virtues is the fact that in not a single phrase of it does she descend to the use of social workers' jargon." Laura Haddock
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 14 '49 420w

"Her recall is mellow and gracious in tone reflecting much of the personality so many have known; her backward look balances well the personal with the professional aspects of her life. A book for backgrounding in settlement work, for a perspective on the vital questions of the recent past and their importance in the future."
+ Kirkus 17:458 Ag 15 '49 150w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p34 N 13 '49 500w

Reviewed by Lucy Freeman
N Y Times p44 O 30 '49 170w

School & Society 70:256 O 15 '49 60w

"Mrs Simkhovitch's story reads easily; it is written with humor and shows that 'God's Plenty' exists in America, not only in a material development but also a spiritual one." Gerard Swope
+ Survey 85:690 D '49 250w

SIMMONS, JAMES STEVENS, ed. Public health in the world today; assistant ed, Irene M. Kinsey; with a foreword by James Bryant Conant. 332p il $5 Harvard univ. press

614 Public health 49-2317

"Chapters on public health, ranging from child care to veterans and the aged, by 24 specialists, to show the progress of science and society in raising health standards." (Current Hist) No index.

"Twenty-four distinguished contributors provide timely information in this symposium devoted to community, national, and world health." I. V. Hiscock
+ Am J Pub Health 39:801 Je '49 270w

Current Hist 16:289 My '49 30w

"Some of the articles are fairly specialized, statistical in presentation; others are of general accessibility; but the volume as a whole is designated towards a professional market."
Kirkus 17:105 F 15 '49 170w

Reviewed by Albert Deutsch
Sat R of Lit 32:29 Jl 16 '49 250w

School & Society 69:255 Ap 2 '49 60w

"Not a textbook, this is a symposium to be read casually, not systematically; to start one thinking rather than to settle doubts." Haven Emerson
Survey 85:280 My '49 500w

SIMMONS, RICHARD F. Custom built rifles. 184p il $3.85 Stackpole & Heck

623.442 Rifles 49-11528

"On the theory that men vary in size and shape, it is claimed that a made-to-order rifle is preferable to an over-the-counter job. Information on desirable features, and how to get them. For special collections." Library J

Booklist 46:169 Ja 15 '50

"The author is well qualified as a gun expert. . . The book is illustrated with reproductions of actual photografs, among them a number of close-up views that show the fine detail of hand engraving and inlay work on the most expensive arms." J. A. Menauge
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 N 13 '49 150w

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 75:49 Ja 1 '50 40w

SIMON, J. LOUIS. It's your business. 199p $3.50 Fairchild

658.01 Business 49-1843

Advice on operating a successful small business, presented mainly in the form of case-histories. The thirty cases represent major types of business activity and many types of establishments. Each one contains information on investment, income and expenses, financing, labor, and records. There are chapters on business methods and business failure. No index.

"Suggestive rather than definitive book on operating a profitable small business. . . Some sections do not fulfill the promise of the headings."
Booklist 45:309 My 15 '49

Reviewed by Julian Sohon
Library J 74:1103 Ag '49 40w

Management R 38:403 Jl '49 140w

"Anybody planning to set up a little business of his own will profit from Mr. Simon's practical wisdom." Palmer Harman
+ N Y Times p12 Je 12 '49 90w

Springf'd Republican p5D Ap 17 '49 180w

SIMONDS, HERBERT RUMSEY, and others. Handbook of plastics. 2d ed 1511p il $25 Van Nostrand

668 Plastics 49-946

"The purpose and scope of the volume have not been materially changed in this edition. It still provides a comprehensive survey of the chemistry, properties, uses, and manufacture of plastics materials and products. It is approximately 500 pages longer, a reflection of the tremendous development of the industry since the first edition was published [Book Review Digest 1943]. All of the chapters have been revised, some of them very substantially; and there are new chapters on adhesives, cost accounting, the plastics industry throughout the world, and patents. The last provides a classified listing of United States patents granted 1938-1945. The bibliography, glossaries, lists of trade-marks and names, and the extensive tabulations of technical data have all been revised." N Y New Tech Bks

"The handbook is encyclopedic in its coverage of the plastics industry and, for its size, well balanced in details presented. Unavoidably perhaps, several items have been described which have not been offered by the industry for at least a year prior to publication of the book. . . The handbook is recommended for salesmen, executives, technical service personnel, students, and younger chemists and engineers establishing themselves in the industry." Thomas Boyd
+ Chem & Eng N 27:1470 My 16 '49 250w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:27 Mr '49

SIMONS, KATHERINE DRAYTON MAYRANT (DRAYTON MAYRANT, pseud). Running thread. 328p $3 Appleton

49-3883

Romantic tale of a pretty young Irish girl from the Aran Islands who landed in Charleston, South Carolina in 1858. The story is of Dinah's love for a fine young Southerner, and of her faithfulness during the hard years of the Civil war.

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 21 '49 160w

Kirkus 17:94 F 15 '49 150w

"Recommended to lovers of historical fiction." Katharine Shorey
+ Library J 74:1024 Jl '49 110w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Jl 10 '49 200w

"Drayton Mayrant has now performed the singular feat of writing a Civil War novel without once mentioning the name of Abraham Lincoln. Otherwise her narrative is distinguished only by a prose style with all the raw power of a charlotte russe." Richard Match
— N Y Times p25 Jl 10 '49 380w

New Yorker 25:65 Jl 9 '49 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 21 '49 220w

"As a guess—though not a wild one, I submit—I would estimate that 'The Running Thread' has been published no less than 200 times in America during the past decade. . . Miss Mayrant's rewrite of the Dear Old Plot is lush with magnolia blossoms, characters out of Ye Olde Time stock shows, and just no end of Southern Chivalry." V. P. Haas
— Sat R of Lit 32:31 Ag 20 '49 290w

SIMPSON, GEORGE GAYLORD. Meaning of evolution; a study of the history of life and of its significance for man. 364p il $3.75 Yale univ. press

575 Evolution 49-10946

"A non-technical analysis of evolution and its relation to ethics." (Nation) Index.

Booklist 46:117 D 1 '49

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison
Christian Century 67:50 Ja 11 '50 1800w

"A work of richness and value which deserves wide reading—though fundamentalists will not be pleased." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 74:1199 S 1 '49 90w

Nation 169:450 N 5 '49 50w

"This is an important book, bold, well written, authoritative and worthy of wide attention." H. M. Parshley
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p46 D 4 '49 1350w

"This book is, without question, the best general work on the meaning of evolution to appear in our time. . . Excellent balance characterizes Mr. Simpson's over-all plan as well as his analyses of individual problems. . . I venture to predict that despite its inauspicious start, 'The Meaning of Evolution' will be read, praised, referred to, quoted and accepted for many a year to come." Bernard Mishkin
+ N Y Times p46 N 20 '49 450w

New Yorker 25:87 Ja 28 '50 160w

Reviewed by C. O. Dunbar
+ Yale R n s 39:344 winter '50 1050w

SIMSON, OTTO GEORG VON. See von Simson, O. G.

SINCLAIR, MRS KATHLEEN HENRIETTA (NASH-WEBBER) (BRIGID KNIGHT, pseud). Southern Cross. 305p $3 Doubleday

49-7140

Elizabeth, the heroine, was born in a concentration camp during the Boer war, but for the first years of her life she thought she was English, and belonged to the Shaw family. Then an embittered Boer aunt appeared and took her home. At seventeen Elizabeth married Petrus, whose mother, Gertruida, was almost as bitter against the English as Elizabeth's aunt. The novel extends thru two wars and ends with World war II, when Petrus and Elizabeth are made happy by the capitulation of stern Gertruida to her granddaughter's marriage to an Englishman.

Booklist 45:129; 193 D 15 '48; F 1 '49

"The tone of this novel is warmhearted and sincere. The people described are good to know, and their basic attitudes are Christian. But it is unfortunate that a book so full of worthy sentiments should have so little literary merit. The writing is painfully undistinguished."
+ — Cath World 168:494 Mr '49 200w

"The story contributes to an understanding of the young nation at the tip of Africa. But perhaps, as a South African, the author has hesitated to take up the cudgels for the liberal view she espouses. At any rate, milk and honey are substituted for vitality in the characters who plead the cause for which Miss Knight is concerned, and her novel creeps, instead of sweeping, to a conclusion."
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 27 '49 390w

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '49

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 25:161 Mr '49 150w

Kirkus 16:577 N 1 '48 160w

Library J 74:1557 O 15 '49 30w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ja 30 '49 280w

"Brigid Knight's latest novel falls automatically into the Good Works division. With some gentle philosophy, a number of authentic pictures of her chosen territory and any amount of good-will, she sets out to explain

SINCLAIR, K. H. N.-W.—Continued
the ingredients of South African feeling toward Britain. The theme closest to the heart is the resolving of English-Boer differences. To illuminate this subject, without appearing to lecture, she has wrapped a family saga around the bare bones of her Cause. . . Perhaps the author's style (which is built for pleasant, easy entertainment) has been over-worked to cover so much ground, such deep-rooted loyalties. In any case, the book proves that sincere enthusiasm can be convincing without being in the least infectious." Isabelle Mallet

+ — N Y Times p16 Ja 9 '49 400w

New Yorker 24:93 F 5 '49 120w

"Though Elizabeth is a strong, vital figure, and though Gertruida crystalizes the dangerous, unstable character of fanatic nationalism and racism, the over-easy handling of character and plotty situations produces a novel which seems contrived. Confronting us, as it does, with some platitudes, some clichés, the writing is often too sweet. Still, this carefully constructed novel is occasionally lovely, and I wish that penetrating, profound thinking were as prominent in it as its faith." N. G. Chaikin

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:11 Ja 8 '49 470w

Times [London] Lit Sup p629 S 30 '49 240w

Wis Lib Bul 45:47 Mr '49

SINCLAIR, UPTON BEALL. O shepherd, speak! 629p $3.50 Viking

49-9981

This tenth volume of the Lanny Budd series, which its author "hopes will be the last," ends with an interview with Stalin and Lanny's report of it to the new President of the United States, Harry S. Truman. Index to the World's End series.

Booklist 45:326; 46:14 Je 1 '49; S 1 '49

Reviewed by Eleanor McNaught
Canadian Forum 29:165 O '49 370w

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Chicago Sun Jl 21 '49 550w

Reviewed by O. D. Hormel
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 11 '49 1200w

Kirkus 17:255 My 15 '49 340w

Reviewed by L. R. Etzkorn
Library J 74:1026 Jl '49 130w

"Mr. Sinclair's materials are interesting if generally not new to any diligent reader of the newspapers. His rambling, inconsecutive use of them is oft-times wearying. But one cannot fail to be impressed, as always, by his deep and urgent sincerity, at the same time that one is both amused and disheartened by his familiar and apparently incurable naivete." F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Jl 24 '49 900w

"The heart of the book—and the heart both of the series and of Mr. Sinclair himself—is the story of the effort of Lanny and his friends to organize a propaganda campaign, through the American press and radio, for the avoidance of World War III. Adventure is here, at last, subordinated to unmitigated preaching—and the result is the richest segment of the whole undertaking, although this would not be Mr. Sinclair if it were not also the most labored." Perry Miller

+ — N Y Times p5 Jl 24 '49 900w

"Mr. Sinclair has treated our era more as a cyclorama than as a complex succession of events, but he sometimes makes it coherent, and he should receive credit for completing the most inclusive, if not the most conclusive, literary assault on the past forty years that will probably ever be made."

New Yorker 25:61 Ag 6 '49 160w

"Mr. Sinclair has completed an immense and a superb job. And he has earned himself a distinguished place in the history that he has illuminated so beautifully. No prophet is needed to assert that unborn generations will be grateful to him for so splendid a portrait of the times in which he and you and all of us have lived and suffered—and have held out a hope for a finer and juster world to be." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 24 '49 950w

"Thus we conclude the saga of Lanny Budd. A few littérateurs have laughed up their sleeves at it. The fact remains that for purposeful productivity Sinclair can teach the younger fry a lesson. Every experienced literary workman knows the vital energy poured into these books. Shaw's tribute to them as a history of the times is valid. They are as accurate as any other equivalent survey notwithstanding the 'fiction' classification, and are richly creative in insight and interpretation." Edmund Fuller

+ Sat R of Lit 32:17 Jl 30 '49 850w

Springf'd Republican p7B Ag 14 '49 270w

Time 54:84 Jl 25 '49 600w

SINDONI, ANTHONY M. Diabetic's handbook: how to work with your doctor; treatment by diet and insulin; introd. by Rufus S. Reeves; with a foreword by Charles C. Wolferth. 194p il $3 Ronald

616.63 Diabetes 48-7567

"This Handbook has been written in the expectation that its exact and complete information will enable the diabetic to live a normal, useful, and happy life through understanding his condition and cooperating with his physician. . . At the beginning of the Handbook are questions that usually are asked by the person who wants to survey the field at a glance. The answers show the necessity for constant guidance by the patient's physician. The subsequent portions explain in detail the significance of diabetes and the facts concerning its various aspects. They are so arranged that the diabetic can readily inform himself as to proper measures he and those who care for him should take in order to give at all times the fullest cooperation to his physician in the task of living with the disease." (Pref) Index. This book is a revision of the author's earlier text: Diabetes; a Modern Manual (Book Review Digest 1937).

"This handbook's range of topics is equally as extensive as that of several others recently reviewed; its scope is wider than that of some other handbooks on the same subject. The presentation is unusual in its emphasis upon the prevalence of diabetes and some of its public health aspects. . . Generally speaking, this handbook lacks the compactness and brevity as well as the excellent illustrations of practical techniques that contribute to the appeal of some other manuals. However, its thorough treatment of the essential phases of diabetic self-care and its easy reference arrangement make a contribution to diabetic literature." H. L. C. Wilkerson

Am J Pub Health 39:248 F '49 320w

Booklist 45:227 Mr 1 '49

SINGLETON, CHARLES SOUTHWARD. Essay on the Vita nuova; pub. for the Dante society. 168p $3 Harvard univ. press

851.15 Dante Alighieri—Vita nuova 49-7205

"An eminent Dante scholar here undertakes a re-examination of the Vita Nuova to correct misinterpretations that have crept into it. . . Primary among meanings subjected to analysis are the mysteries of the number 'nine'—always a fascinating subject for interpretation—and the Vita Nuova as a theory of love in an original sense of the word, as a beholding of how things may be in order of their rightness. Subjected to critical analysis is the looseness of the analogies that have been and are constantly being drawn with elements of the Vita Nuova; these tend to become a part of it, and thus distort Dante's portrayal." U S Quarterly Bkl

"A note can hardly suggest the richness of Professor Singleton's concise essay. . . 'An Essay on the Vita Nuova' is a striking example of the maturity American criticism has reached. Historical groundwork, structural analysis, and ideological commentary converge to create a total effect. It is true that, in this essay as in many others, the reader is left to assess the essential value by himself. . . But if the artistic evaluation remains implicit, its terms are clearly established." Paolo Milano

+ Nation 168:423 Ap 9 '49 1000w

"Some scholars will not agree with the author's premises and analyses, but no one will deny his scholarly approach, his authority gained by a lifetime of study in the field, and his intimacy with the vast store of materials on the subject."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:158 Je '49 210w

SINGMASTER, ELSIE (MRS HAROLD LEWARS). I heard of a river; the story of the Germans in Pennsylvania; il. by Henry C. Pitz. (Land of the free ser) 209p $2.50 Winston

48-9347

"Seventeen-year-old Hannes, a German Lutheran, flees from the hunger and terror of 17th century Germany with a group of Swiss Mennonites to settle in what is now Pennsylvania. Attempts to steal the rifled gun he brings with him and the final improvement of the gun provide the motivating force for this story of happiness gained through freedom in America." Library J

"The thread of story is somewhat tenuous, but it holds together the minutely detailed record of the German-Swiss pilgrimage, unique in the history of this country's settling."

+ — Kirkus 16:485 S 15 '48 130w

"Rather slow reading... Recommended for junior high school." Elizabeth Burr

Library J 73:1828 D 15 '48 80w

"Leans a little too heavily on period detail but will be richly rewarding in helping young people to realize the meaning of America." E. L. Buell

+ — N Y Times p14 Ja 2 '49 340w

SIREN, OSVALD. Gardens of China. 141p il 219pl $30 Ronald

712.2 Gardens—China Agr49-79

"The author, formerly on the staff of the National Museum in Stockholm, has spent many years in China as a painting and sculpture expert. In this volume, Dr. Sirén turns his attention to China's garden art, examples of which he abundantly found in Peking parks and in the gardens of Suchou. The author's thesis is that the Chinese garden has to be characterized as a work of the creative imagination, and that it is as very nearly a work of art as an alive arrangement can be." Atlantic

"Dr. Sirén traveled camera in hand and recorded manifold specimens of this art-in-nature and nature-in-art. He writes simply and his pictures are unpretentious and functional. There are [more than two hundred] plates (about a dozen in color) which make the book indispensable to people interested in the Oriental sensibility, art forms, and flower arrangements."

+ Atlantic 184:87 S '49 200w

"For landscape architects, designers, collectors of Orientalia, this book is well worth the price. [More than two hundred] superb plates, many in color, immortalize the unique quality of the Chinese garden, while the text, urbane, scholarly, imbued with the understanding love of the gardens which he feels are symbolic of an ancient people, gives the reader a sense of being taken behind the walls."

+ Kirkus 17:321 Je 15 '49 130w

"Handsome color prints, drawings and diagrams further enhance the value of this volume by scholar, formerly of the University of Stockholm. Expensive book which 'belongs to the borderland between the respective histories of art and civilization in the Far East. . .' Recommended if budget permits such purchase." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 74:1325 S 15 '49 100w

"The principal but not the only attraction of this magnificent volume is the illustrations, consisting of more than 200 full-page photographs supplemented by plans and colored plates. The text provides not merely an admirable account of the theory and history of gardening in China, but also an invaluable interpretation of the illustrations throughout the volume. The book's appeal is by no means limited to gardeners, amateur or professional. Orientalists will welcome the extensive quotations from the 'Yuan Yeh,' earliest Chinese treatise on gardening, here published in translation for the first time." R. C. Bald

+ N Y Times p7 S 4 '49 320w

"The best way to make up your mind about a book like this is to have a look at it in your bookstore. Those who cherish an enthusiasm for gardens of all sorts, and perhaps already know a little something about the Oriental principles of gardening, will find the volume, I believe, one they'll want to have, regardless of price. It should be added that the design and manufacture are of the finest." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 17 '49 1250w

SISKIND, CHARLES SEYMOUR. Direct-current armature winding; theory and practice. 149p il $3 McGraw

621.3132 Armatures—Winding 49-5313

"The author has simplified the problem of understanding direct current winding by pointing out that all of them can be analyzed into two fundamental types: the lap and the wave. Both the exposition and the drawings are based on this analysis. Although written from a practical standpoint, the book is not a complete manual of d-c armature winding practices. Apparently the author's chief purpose was to make certain that his readers understand the principles of d-c windings rather than to give them details of shop operations. The final chapter of the location of short circuits and other troubles describes repair shop practices but it is relatively brief. No discussion of rewinding techniques is included." N Y New Tech Bks

"An introductory and very practical text. It is written in a simple and direct style which adapts itself both to classroom use and self-instruction." R. R. Hawkins

+ Library J 74:1608 O 15 '49 70w

"An excellent introductory presentation of the subject."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 34:65 S '49

SITWELL, EDITH. Canticle of the rose; poems: 1917-1949. 290p $3.75 Vanguard

821 49-50410

A collection of Edith Sitwell's poems from 1917 to 1949. Some of the poems appeared in Street Songs, and Green Song and other Poems, but the volume includes also some of her older poems which are hard to find in American libraries.

"She is one of the truly great poets of our time and it is valuable to have, as an introduction, her notes on the technical aspects of her own poetry." Gerald McDonald

+ Library J 74:1909 D 15 '49 80w

"This is the true flowering branch springing fresh from the old, unkillable roots of English poetry; with the range, variety, depth, fearlessness, the passion and elegance of great art." K. A. Porter

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 D 18 '49 2700w

"At a time when British verse and prose are suffering from the diseases of anemia and cancer (caused, I would say, by political bruises and frustrations), it is more than salutary to read a new book of Edith Sitwell's poems. Even in a few of her later poems, in which she tends to become a shade too oracular, the accents of major poetry are overheard; they are in the tradition of much that is valuable in English poetry; they are uneven in quality and bold in spirit." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Times p5 D 11 '49 750w

SITWELL, EDITH—Continued
Reviewed by I. L. Salomon
Sat R of Lit 33:13 Ja 14 '50 650w
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p634 S 30 '49 900w

SITWELL, SIR OSBERT, 5th bart. England reclaimed, and other poems. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 122p $2.75 Little 821 49-11762

A selection from the author's poetical works written during the thirty years from 1918 to 1949.

"Sitwell's patronizingly ironical portraits of British rural and village characters together constitute the 'England Reclaimed' that makes up more than half of the volume. The poet speaks not infrequently of his love for these characters; but he does not show it. . . But plowing doggedly on, I came to 'Part Three: Poems of the Wars.' This was different. Here irony finds a worthier mark and takes on a deeper tone. The words are still urbane enough, but they carry thoughts that flash and burn. The man is a poet after all, and perhaps something of a prophet." W. E. G.
+ — Christian Century 67:18 Ja 4 '50 420w

"The book is far from brilliant, but it has much of the quiet charm of old England."
Kirkus 17:504 S 1 '49 100w

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald
Library J 74:1909 D 15 '49 140w

"This is a rather innocent-looking book with a title that puts one off, but before we are done with it, we have recognized in Sir Osbert a strong, subdued poetic fire, a hatred of injustice, and at times an almost savagely ironic understanding. The book improves as we read it. Sir Osbert's is an easily readable kind of poetry which also sounds well when it is heard." Richard Eberhart
+ N Y Times p5 D 11 '49 420w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril
San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ja 8 '50 50w

Reviewed by I. L. Salomon
Sat R of Lit 33:14 Ja 14 '50 270w

SITWELL, SACHEVERELL, ed. Audubon's American birds. See Audubon, J. J.

SITWELL, SACHEVERELL. Selected poems; with a pref. by Osbert Sitwell. 192p $2.50 Macmillan (for Duckworth)
821 [49-3306]

Selections from the poems of the youngest of the three Sitwells, chosen by his brother and sister. The poems are arranged in fourteen sections, each representing some facet of the author's imagination. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '49

"The youngest of the writing Sitwells has made more of an impression on readers with his valuable researches into the arts and his delightful prose 'entertainments' than with his poetry. This selection, by his sister Edith and his brother Osbert, of his poetic contribution does not demonstrate a large or strong poetic talent."
New Yorker 24:95 F 12 '49 60w

"Mr. Sitwell handles with versatility themes from the countryside and from the arts: Nietzsche, Daumier, and Mantegna are among the many names cited in his titles; but resonance and emphasis are lacking. The cause is partly a defect of structure. . . A second and related cause is the unusual degree of variation which he permits in length of line and accent, a variation which is musical enough (for Mr. Sitwell has a good ear), but gives the feeling of a brilliant improvisation rather than of a sharply conceived whole." Richard Ellmann
— + Poetry 74:304 Ag '49 490w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril
San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 13 '49 60w

"His verse contains passages with great beauty of image and beauty of sound, but only a thoroughly Sitwellized reader could feel that Sacheverell is a poet who must be read complete, or even that single longer poems very often sustain themselves as unities. Their forms break and waver like objects seen under running water, while the assured voice of the poet goes on and on, insatiate of the lovely sounds he makes." R. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:15 Mr 19 '49 850w

"It is to be hoped that this neatly produced, conveniently sized edition of the selected poems of Mr. Sacheverell Sitwell will reach a wide public, and serve finally to consolidate his position as a poet of major significance. . . Mr. Sitwell excels in the purely descriptive, but not only in the description of what is seen; his work contains mysterious atmospheres, subtle feeling, the ever-changing lights and temperatures of the surrounding airs. All is uttered with the centaur's voice, or in the strange, almost ineffable tones that issued from the masks of antique mimes. . . From the work in this volume alone there can be little doubt that posterity will find a place for him."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p710 D 18 '48 1000w

SJAHRIR, SOETAN. Out of exile; based upon letters by Soetan Sjahrir rewritten and ed. in Dutch by Maria Duchâteau-Sjahrir; tr. with an introd. by Charles Wolf, jr. 265p $3 Day
991 Netherlands East Indies 49-7495

Memoirs of a political leader of Indonesia, the former Premier of the Indonesian Republic. "The greater part of the book was written in prison and exile as letters to his wife and friends in Holland. To the original text, Sjahrir has added a long new section covering events in Indonesia during and since the war, and his own participation in them." (Publisher's note)

Reviewed by K. P. Landon
Ann Am Acad 264:139 Jl '49 900w
Booklist 45:261 Ap 1 '49
Christian Century 66:529 Ap 27 '49 210w

"Here is one of the great books of modern Asia. It belongs close to the autobiographies of Gandhi and Nehru." Robert Peel
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 17 '49 1750w
Commonweal 49:573 Mr 18 '49 200w
Foreign Affairs 27:693 Jl '49 80w
Kirkus 17:73 F 1 '49 180w

"This is a leisurely reflective book, designed to provoke thought rather than to list concrete facts, and therefore requires diligence in the reading. It is a valuable but not a popular book. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 74:380 Mr 1 '49 70w

"Mr. Sjahrir is shrewd, intelligent, and objective. He has done a real service to his country in publishing this book; it is bound to win sympathizers to the Indonesian cause. Charles Wolf, Jr., himself an author of a book on Indonesia, 'The Indonesian Story,' has provided a good translation." Younghill Kang
+ Nation 168:420 Ap 9 '49 1200w

Reviewed by Richard Watts
New Repub 120:24 My 9 '49 900w

"The key to the whole book—and to the whole situation in Asia—is the serene and firmly grounded hope of Sjahrir and men like him. What still looks to Europe and America like chaos looks to these men, who combine understanding with action, like the beginning of better things. Americans who read the book will see why." Owen Lattimore
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Mr 13 '49 950w

"Mr. Sjahrir's letters are the more remarkable, and the more interesting part of the book. They show a first-rate mind at work. . . Charles Wolf Jr., a former United States Vice Consul in Batavia, and now a graduate student at Harvard, has done an excellent translation and written an illuminating foreword. Sjahrir's own description of the birth of the Republic and its struggle, which makes up the second part of the book, is good current history, although written in an entirely different mood from that of the letters." Foster Hailey

+ N Y Times p3 F 27 '49 950w

Reviewed by Virginia Thompson
Survey 85:183 Mr '49 420w

SKAAR, GRACE MARION. Very little dog [il. by the author]. [20p] $1 Scott, W.R.
49-10987

Picture-book showing all the things the little dog did in order to become a great big dog. For ages 2-4.

Reviewed by E. W. Kunkle
Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 13 '49 60w

"The brief, simple text is pleasantly rhythmical and has, like the drawings, genuine humor." A. T. Eaton
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 D 13 '49 80w

Kirkus 17:508 S 15 '49 110w

"Not an important book, but there is good story quality and a real appeal for the nursery age. Illustrations simple yet effective." M. A. Herr
+ Library J 74:1828 D 1 '49 60w

Reviewed by E. L. Buell
N Y Times p11 D 25 '49 100w
Springf'd Republican p8B S 18 '49 40w

SKELTON, RUSSELL ROY. Route surveys. 531p il maps $4.50 McGraw 625.1 Surveying. Highway engineering. Railroads—Surveying 49-10367

"Many of the older textbooks on this subject place the emphasis on railroad surveying. This new one, in spite of its brevity, covers both highways and railways, but gives somewhat more space to highways. Another feature is that it does justice to the relatively new technique of aerial surveys. Somewhat more than half of the space is occupied by useful tables." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 74:1608 O 15 '49 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 34:77 S '49

SKIDMORE, HOBERT DOUGLAS. O careless love. 253p $2.75 Doubleday
49-9556

The events of four summer days in the 1920's in the village of Felicity, West Virginia. Emily, a pretty girl from a mountain home, arrives by bus, having been put out of another town. Some people disapprove of Emily, others take her part, but almost everyone feels her influence. The town matriarch befriends her, and after her death Emily departs to marry another stranger to Felicity.

Booklist 45:346; 376 Je 15 '49; Jl 1 '49

Reviewed by E. B. Thompson
Chicago Sun Jl 5 '49 220w

"The book has humor and wit and irony. It has some of the plaintive beauty of the folksong from which it takes its title. Casual in movement, loose in structure, it is written with imaginative power, out of a rich knowledge of the human heart." H. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 28 '49 850w

Kirkus 17:217 Ap 15 '49 220w

"Light, diverting and well done, this will add zest to a summer reading list." E. P. Nichols
+ Library J 74:1027 Jl '49 70w

"A novel with a fresh and fascinating surface and deep rhythms flowing underneath. . . 'O Careless Love' is rich in lore about the ways and emotions of its people, full of the mountain and its speech and saturated with the mystic beauty of a world which is not the world of the everyday for most of us. Mr. Skidmore writes it with a skill that is really sumptuous." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Je 26 '49 700w

"The critical may find the construction of the novel rather aimless, but only the heartlessly critical will let that keep them from enjoying the characters and the dialogue. The pleasant, personal quality in the writing makes the reader feel, by the time the story is over, that he knows well the people of Felicity. And they are wonderful people to know." W. F. Weaver
+ N Y Times p4 Je 26 '49 500w
New Yorker 25:62 Jl 9 '49 170w
San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 21 '49 390w

"Gentle, tenuous, done with delicacy and subtle symbolism."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:33 Jl 30 '49 140w

SKILLIN, EDWARD S., ed. Commonweal reader. See Commonweal (periodical)

SKILLING, HUGH HILDRETH. Exploring electricity; man's unfinished quest. 277p il $3.50 Ronald 537 Electricity 48-9405

The story of electricity from the time of Thales (600 B.C.) to the atom bomb. It is written in narrative style suitable for the layman. Contains brief biographical sketches of the scientists included. Index.

Booklist 45:173 Ja 15 '49

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 74:201 F 1 '49 70w

"Recommended." Julian Sohon
+ Library J 74:553 Ap 1 '49 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 34:21 Mr '49
School & Society 68:327 N 6 '48 50w

SKINNER, CORNELIA OTIS (MRS ALDEN S. BLODGET). That's me all over. 312p $3.50 Dodd
817 Humor 48-9213

"All the favorite absurdities from Dithers and jitters, Soap behind the ears and Excuse it, please! along with Tiny garments; and illustrations by Alajálov." Subtitle

Booklist 45:180 Ja 15 '49

Reviewed by Simon Harcourt-Smith
New Statesman & Nation 38:708 D 10 '49 40w

"In this collection you'll find exactly those Skinner bits you have so often remembered and wished you could put your hand on. . . Unless you have the whole list of Miss Skinner's books on your shelves, then you'll want this anthology on them. And if you happen to know anyone whose sense of humor is right for Miss Skinner—enough iron in it, say—well, it would be hard to find a better gift." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 27 '48 350w

SLAUGHTER, FRANK GILL. Divine mistress. 340p $3 Doubleday
49-11286

"Period historical romance. . . The setting shifts from a Priory in Padua, where young Antonio Servetus is studying for holy orders in 1562—to Spain of the Inquisition—and England. Servetus was a teacher of anatomy, and the chance discovery of the Botticelli Birth of Venus fired his imagination so that almost he found himself in love with the image. The appointment of a new Prior, his suspicions of Servetus as author of a revolutionary monograph on the circulation of the blood, the transfer of Antonio to Venice, then to Spain as Queen's physician, and the confused ro-

SLAUGHTER, F. G.—Continued
mance with Lucia Bellarmi, whose family owned the Botticelli, and whose grandmother had been the model for the Venus [follows]. The romance comes to a head when they escape together, aided by the queen, from the clutches of the Inquisition." Kirkus

"The over-all effect is somewhat pedestrian despite the fact that the narrative is well loaded with action. The question naturally rises, therefore, as to why this effect in the light of a relatively competent job of writing. The answer, I think, may be found in the mechanical nature of the plotting." Henry Cavendish

— + Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 20 '49 550w

Kirkus 17:517 S 15 '49 190w

Reviewed by Richard Match
N Y Times p36 O 16 '49 400w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 33:33 Ja 7 '50 140w

SLIGH, NIGEL. Copperbelt. 215p $2.75 Putnam
49-48115

A novel of love and labor troubles in a Central African copper mine. Mr Ludlum, the owner, comes out to settle the strike but dies of blackwater fever while on a safari with his wife. The workers, disbelieving his death, riot. Some of the white people take shelter in the hotel's laundry house. There the hotel owner dies in action as he always wanted to do; a young Belgian girl, Annette, regains her lost faith; Irvine the engineer falls in love; and Mrs Ludlum realizes the lonely life that stretches before her.

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 6 '49 230w

"This reviewer gladly concedes that Mr. Sligh has an eye for color and an ear for a neatly turned phrase. What's more, he knows his Rhodesia, despite one or two lapses. But in his next book he should tell a Sligh story the Sligh way—and tell it through to its organic end. In 'Copperbelt' he seems to have lost patience, leaving his characters in mid-air, his strike unresolved, and his reader with a disagreeable feeling of truncation. Come to think of it, that word 'disagreeable' is really a backhanded compliment: if Mr. Sligh didn't write so well one wouldn't feel so displeased." John Barkham

— + N Y Times p31 S 25 '49 380w

"Gone-native stuff. Sultry, scorched, and primitive. Drenched in quinine; overloaded with stock-company derelicts."

— Sat R of Lit 33:29 Ja 14 '50 80w

Springf'd Republican p19A O 23 '49 70w

SLOAN, HAROLD STEPHENSON, and ZURCHER, ARNOLD JOHN. Dictionary of economics. (College outline ser) 268p $3; pa $1.50 Barnes & Noble
330.3 Economics—Dictionaries 49-9904

"Twenty-four hundred terms and phrases commonly found in economic discussion and writing. Based on American usage. Covers economic history and theory, international trade, finance and exchange, international commercial policy, public finance, fiscal policy, taxation, money, credit, and banking. Also includes words and phrases in certain specialized areas and descriptions of important American statutes and judicial decisions and of American and international regulatory agencies." Booklist

"The volume should find its way to the desk of many workers in the economic and business vineyard. . . The user interested in economic theory is likely to be somewhat disappointed. A good standard textbook would index the majority of economic terms included, as well as some omitted. . . The authors do not claim that the volume is the final word. It may be hoped that in subsequent editions some of these weaknesses will be corrected, because a volume of this type can be a useful tool to a wide range of scholars and practitioners." E. P. Schmidt

Ann Am Acad 266:207 N '49 360w

Booklist 46:28 S 15 '49

Management R 38:581 O '49 50w

"A reference service of maximum utility to the broadest possible constituency."

+ School & Society 70:79 Jl 30 '49 30w

"In addition to being useful to laymen and to college and university students in economics and political science, the dictionary will prove helpful as a reference tool to secondary-school teachers and students in courses in economics, American problems, American government, and business education. The fact that some of the terms may become obsolete in one year or ten years does not detract from its continuing contribution to economic understanding." H. C. Muth

+ School R 57:576 D '49 900w

Special Libraries 40:416 D '49 90w

SLOBODKIN, LOUIS. Bixxy and the secret message [il. by the author]. 94p $2 Macmillan
Pigeons—Legends and stories 49-11317

Bixxy was an absent-minded army carrier pigeon, with a fondness for salted peanuts. One day when he was carrying a top secret message Bixxy's fondness for peanuts caught him in New York city. How he got into serious difficulty with some tar and started to walk with his message, was rescued by Eddie, a cub scout, and what happened then, make up this story for ages eight to twelve.

Booklist 46:130 D 1 '49

"Humorous, original tale."

+ Bookmark 9:57 D '49 40w

Chicago Sun p9X N 13 '49 200w

"This is good fun for Cub Scouts and others." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 25:528 N '49 80w

Kirkus 17:324 Jl 1 '49 190w

"Hilarious story for Cub Scout consumption. . . Recommended." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 75:51 Ja 1 '50 80w

"It's a lively tale for boys of 8 to 12—though it is to be hoped that young readers will not imitate the spelling 'Cooney' Island and 'Allantic' Ocean on the end-paper maps." Marjorie Burger

+ N Y Times p58 N 20 '49 160w

"Louis Slobodkin has written a delightful and amusing story, illustrating it with his own sprightly pictures."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 N 13 '49 120w

"If this isn't a true story, it might easily be. It will undoubtedly be accepted as a true story by the delighted boys and girls who read it. . . Nothing could be funnier or truer to little-boy nature than the Cub Scout—their intense curiosity, their excitement when the 'brass hats' appear on the scene, their excellent discipline. Eddie's mother is exactly the kind of mother that all Cub Scouts should have."

+ Sat R of Lit 32:38 D 10 '49 470w

SLOBODKIN, LOUIS. Sculpture; principles and practice. 255p il $5.95 World pub.
731 Sculpture 49-6605

"Instruction and appreciation become one in this book that demonstrates by word, diagram, and photographs, the progressive steps of creative sculpture in a variety of mediums. . . Armature construction and anatomy, modeling tools and materials, ideas and techniques are discussed and illustrated in chapters that cover the following subjects: First Sculpture, Modeling a Head from Life, Modeling a Figure from Life, Permanent Materials, Plaster—An Intermediate Material, Composition in Sculpture, Carved Mediums of Sculpture, Terra Cotta, Cast Stone, Cast Metals, Reliefs—High and Low, and Architectural Sculpture." (School Arts) Index.

Booklist 46:79 N 1 '49

Christian Science Monitor p15 N 17 '49 90w

"Written in the conversational, easy-to-follow style of an artist who understands teaching principles, this book is useful to beginners and skilled sculptors because of the broad scope of subject matter, from first sculpture to advanced architectural types, all based on the same sound fundamentals."

+ School Arts 49:2a N '49 200w

SLONIMSKY, NICOLAS. Music since 1900. 3d ed rev & enl 759p $7.50 Coleman-Ross co, 25 W. 45th st, N.Y. 19

780.9 Music—History and criticism 49-9661

"Arranged in three parts: 'Tabular View of Stylistic Trends in Music' (controversial); 'Descriptive Chronology' (the heart of the book); and 'Letters and Documents' (ranging from the Black List of the Catholic Church to official Soviet pronouncements). Emphasizes dates of composition and performance and the inception of new styles and idioms. This volume supersedes the smaller second edition (1938) although the biographical section is omitted, having served its purpose. The index is greatly enlarged and improved." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1937.

"That paradox among library tools—a thoroughly delightful, yet indispensable and reliable reference book. Written by an authority." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 74:1030 Jl '49 140w

"It is a pleasure to see a new edition of Mr. Slonimsky's well-known book. The first two editions (1937 and 1938 respectively) proved their usefulness at once, and this one will do no less. . . . Curious, too, it is to note some of the 1937 events recorded in the 1938 edition, but now dropped from the new book. Was their evolutionary power completely vitiated during the past decade? . . But as a whole the book is too rich and helpful to critize very severely. The author has a veritable passion for chronology, even if he must invent weird terms to explain it or grasp at 'straw' dates to augment it. He is astonishingly industrious and maintains a high level of accuracy." E. N. Waters

+ — Music Lib Assn Notes 6:616 S '49 1350w

"This mass of fact is enlivened both by Slonimsky's trenchant descriptions and by shrewdly chosen excerpts from contemporary publications." Roland Gelatt

+ Sat R of Lit 32:56 D 31 '49 180w

SLURZBERG, MORRIS, and OSTERHELD, WILLIAM. Essentials of radio. 806p il $6; text ed $4.80 McGraw

621.384 Radio 48-6873

"Useful as a beginner's textbook for home study or school. Minimum knowledge of mathematics required. Textbook format; appendix of useful tables and symbols." Booklist

---

Booklist 45:237 Mr 15 '49

"Recommended as a home study text."

+ Bookmark 9:11 O '49 30w

SMITH, AUSTIN EDWARD, and HERRICK, ARTHUR DONALD, eds. Drug research and development [by] Edgar B. Carter [and others]. 596p $10 Revere

615.072 Drugs. Pharmacology 48-9112

"Twenty one chapters on the drug business covering the advances made in the last decade on research, development and marketing of drugs and pharmaceuticals." (Library J) Partial contents: The modern drug formula, by A. D. Herrick and A. Smith; Development of biologicals, by C. R. Linegar; Labels and labeling, by J. G. Searle; Packaging and storage, by R. H. Rhodehamel; The product and the patent law, by Edward Thomas; Drug trade-marks and labels, by W. J. Derenberg; Drug regulation, by A. D. Herrick; Advertising, by C. S. Downs; Retail price maintenance, by I. W. Digges. Bibliography. Index.

"In the opinion of the reviewer, the volume meets admirably a definite need in the manufacture of pharmaceuticals. The styles of the various contributors are excellent. This book is a valuable addition to the library of every worker in the field of medicinal chemistry and pharmacology." J. C. Krantz

+ Chem & Eng N 27:547 F 21 '49 250w

"Smith, Herrick, and some 18 collaborators set out to make generally available a good over-all working knowledge of the procedures used in developing and marketing pharmaceuticals, particularly from the drug manufacturers' point of view. They have succeeded admirably. . . Gathering a group of experts of the caliber of the authors was in itself no mean feat. They have put together a work that possesses rather surprising continuity. It is written in good, clear, understandable English, with most of the technical terms unique to a specialty defined as they are used—for which the reviewer was, on occasion, grateful. There is a good index and a brief, highly selective bibliography." Darwin Vexler

+ Chem Eng 56:295 Ja '49 500w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 74:201 F 1 '49 100w

"This volume will be useful to physicians and pharmacists, research workers, the advertising counsel, to wholesalers and retailers of drugs, and to schools of pharmacy."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:117 Mr '49 240w

SMITH, CARMICHAEL, pseud. See Linebarger, P. M. A.

SMITH, CICELY FOX. Painted ports; il. by C. Walter Hodges. 212p $2.50 Oxford

[49-8007]

A continuation of the author's The Ship Aground (Book Review Digest 1941). This is an account of what happened to Barty Dale when he became an apprentice seaman aboard an English ship in the days when pirates sailed the seas. Grades seven to nine.

Booklist 45:266 Ap 1 '49

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 25:216 My '49 80w

Kirkus 17:85 F 15 '49 90w

Reviewed by M. A. Herr

Library J 74:500 Mr 15 '49 90w

"There is little plot except the sheer adventure; the end is far too happy a coincidence; and the tale is written in the first person. However, the excellent style and colorful backgrounds make it an above average pass-the-time book. The book-making demands a word. Mr. Hodges is tops. His jacket is the most beautiful in many a moon. The typography, printing, paper and size are quietly superb, making current books of the same price range look tawdry by comparison." L. S. Bechtel

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Ap 24 '49 150w

"Without a strong story line the tale depends for suspense on a succession of incidents which may grow monotonous to the critical reader but which with salty atmosphere and colorful characters will provide enjoyment for most boys of 11 to 14." F. C. Smith

+ N Y Times p30 F 27 '49 200w

"The tale is well written, the atmosphere vividly conveyed, and the characters well drawn, but the book, as a whole, lacks the well-integrated, unifying plot that makes the Stevenson classic such absorbing reading." E. R. S.

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:39 Jl 9 '49 180w

Wis Lib Bul 45:50 Mr '49

SMITH, DONALD PRITCHARD. Hydrogen in metals. 366p $10 Univ. of Chicago press

669 Metals—Hydrogen content. Hydrogen
49-7079

"One of the monographs in the University of Chicago Institute for the study of metals series. It is a critical study dealing with absorption, retention and evolution of hydrogen by massive solid metals; with solubility and supersaturation and with effects upon metals and hydrogen." (Library J) Bibliography and indexes.

"This book is highly recommended as a valuable tool for those concerned with the theoretical or practical aspects of hydrogen-metal relations." H. E. Cleaves
+ Chem & Eng N 27:637 F 28 '49 300w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 73:1599 N 1 '48 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 34:10 Ja '49
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:120 Mr '49 220w

SMITH, DOROTHY EVELYN. My lamp is bright. 378p $3 Dutton
49-9905

Character study of Christine Bentley, beginning with her childhood in Victorian England, and ending with her marriage in middle age to the man she had loved since she was eight.

Booklist 45:383; 46:14 Jl 15 '49; S 1 '49

"Occasional touches of oversweetness and of burlesque that is not plausible enough are small defects in a novel in which the detailed Yorkshire background is integrated with a story that constantly moves forward and characters that are presented with feeling and humor."
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 21 '49 170w
Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '49

"A Victorian sentimentality here, which matches the mood of place (English) and period, and gives this its appeal chiefly for a conservative, feminine audience."
+ Kirkus 17:258 My 15 '49 170w

"Characters are well depicted, the story is interesting, but methodical and leisurely. Will appeal to women." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 74:1026 Jl '49 80w

"A book which makes very worthwhile if nostalgic reading. . . Mrs. Smith's new novel offers a thoroughly readable, warmly sympathetic, somewhat romanticized [story]." Blythe Morley
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 31 '49 700w

"It may come as a surprise to some readers that sibling rivalry, emotional frigidity and alcoholism are quite at home in an almost 'old-fashioned' melodrama of a woman who has to wait half her lifetime before she is free to marry the man she first loved as a young girl. . . Throughout this prize array straight from an analyst's notebook runs the hopeful thread of Kit's steady love for a farmer. Needless to say, the romance runs true to form, and the whole—despite the macabre characters—runs entertainingly along." J. P. Quehl
N Y Times p14 Jl 31 '49 270w

"Here is a pleasant, sentimental Victorian novel—Victorian both in its setting and in its author's romantic conception of plot. . . As a welcome relief from stream-of-consciousness analyses of tortured people in torturous situations, this gentle, leisurely, and idealistic book will entertain many readers, particularly feminine ones." S. H. Hay
+ Sat R of Lit 32:30 Ag 27 '49 320w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn
Springf'd Republican p8B S 4 '49 180w

"A sentimental but exceedingly competent novel."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p677 D 4 '48 110w

SMITH, ELVA SOPHRONIA, and HAZELTINE, ALICE ISABEL, comps. Just for fun; humorous stories and poems; decorations by Leonard Weisgard. 332p $2.75 Lothrop

817.08 Humor
48-9561

A collection of humor—fiction, drama and poetry—for the whole family. Grouped under such headings as Haps and mishaps; Tall tales; Unnatural history; Adventure here and there.

Booklist 45:162 Ja 1 '49

"Excellent collection, which has good indexes of authors and titles." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:48 Ja '49 80w
+ Kirkus 16:622 D 1 '48 120w

"Since there is always a place for good reading-aloud material, particularly that with a humorous slant, this anthology will probably be welcomed in most libraries." A. B. Weber
+ Library J 74:204 F 1 '49 110w

"Teachers and storytellers should get some new ideas from a book where Shakespeare, Emily Kimbrough, Mark Twain, Robert McCloskey, Oliver Wendell Holmes and the Benets happily rub shoulders." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 F 27 '49 180w
N Y Times p32 Mr 6 '49 110w

"This fresh and zestful collection of funny poems and stories had a double value. It could, and almost certainly will, be the center of highly amused groups of boys and girls at home, in school, in the public libraries and out of doors. Through its happy selection it introduces to those who share it the best of the humorists who write for young people. . . Leonard Weisgard's black and white sketches would be more effective if the publishers had selected better paper." M. G. Davis
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:44 F 12 '49 180w

SMITH, EUNICE YOUNG. Jennifer wish; il. by [the author]. 250p $2.50 Bobbs 49-8278

The story of a happy family who spent a summer on an Illinois farm in the early 1900's. As the summer draws to a close the four lively children feel that they cannot bear to be cooped up in a town again. When the news comes that the farm is for sale and they can buy it, the summer has a happy ending. Grades four to seven.

Booklist 45:285 Ap 15 '49

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun Jl 30 '49 70w

"Not an important book but one that 9-11-year-old girls will enjoy." Elizabeth Johnson
Library J 74:667 Ap 15 '49 70w

"Not many writers can remember the summer of 1908 and make it come to life with interest for children of eight to eleven years old in 1949. This author-artist has done it well, chiefly because of the remarkable conversation of all this happy family. . . The pictures are uneven, but have a definite nostalgic charm and feeling for childhood." L. S. Bechtel
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 My 8 '49 200w

"There is a good deal of warm family life in this story, in what seems today like the safe setting of 1908. . . A little less of the gentle haze of distance might have shown more human friction, as well as vitality, in the life of this family. The illustrations have much of the charm of pleasant summer weather in the country." Marjorie Fischer
+ — N Y Times p29 Ap 3 '49 180w

SMITH, GEORGE DUNCAN, ed. Teaching of the Catholic church; a summary of Catholic doctrine. 2v $12.50 Macmillan

230.2 Roman Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works
49-1499

"About twenty years ago Canon Smith edited a series of booklets, under the title of The Treasury of the Faith, covering the ground of Roman Catholic dogmatic theology. These essays, in some cases revised and with three substitutions of new work for old, appear now in two volumes. In their new form they provide in 1,300 well-filled pages, with a full index, an encyclopaedic treatment of their subject." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Index.

"The book bears the marks of being completely authoritative, since it carries the full ecclesiastical sanction of the censor and vicar general of the diocese of Westminster; second, that it covers the whole ground of Catholic doctrine; and third, that the exposition is in as clear and intelligible terms as the intricacy of the material permits. It will be understood that the word 'Catholic,' in the title and in this comment is used with the specific meaning of 'Roman Catholic,' to the exclusion of the Eastern Orthodox and other churches which claim to be equally, or more, Catholic. . . The work will be very valuable not only to Roman Catholics but also to other kinds of Catholics and to Protestants who seek reliable information as to Roman Catholic doctrine." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 66:305 Mr 9 '49 280w

"This summary is distinctly one that no library worthy of any serious reputation can afford to lack. . . The publisher of The Treasury of the Faith Series has been numerously complimented on its contribution at the time each book was issued; in making the series available in two volumes Macmillan has performed a notable service to readers, Catholic and non-Catholic alike." J. G. Brunini

+ Commonweal 49:500 F 25 '49 420w

"Both because many of the original essays are now out of print and because there is definite value for reference purposes in bringing them all together in one publication, this work should be welcomed by all Catholic scholars and others who wish to learn from an authoritative source what the Catholic Church really teaches. . . What the Catholic Church teaches about God, Christ, the Virgin Mary, the Church, the sacraments, man, sin, death and immortality are outlined clearly and succinctly. While the book has a solid basis of scholarship, one does not have to be a trained theologian to understand it."

+ Kirkus 17:142 Mr 15 '49 190w

School & Society 69:88 Ja 29 '49 40w

Springf'd Republican p22A F 20 '49 240w

"A very useful work for reading and reference. The educated Roman Catholic laity, in particular, can be congratulated on possessing such a handbook, but others also will employ it as a work of consultation for which no equivalent has so far been easily available."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p13 Ja 1 '49 370w

SMITH, GOLDWIN ALBERT. History of England. 877p maps $6.75; college ed $5 Scribner

942 Great Britain—History 49-4036

A comprehensive history of England from its earliest beginnings to the year 1948. The author is associate professor of history at Wayne University, Detroit. The book contains 20 maps, a 30-page bibliography, and an index.

"The author has produced an indispensable volume, complementary to, but not displacing, G. M. Trevelyan's similar history—still a standard work although completed a generation ago. Mr. Smith's own book excels particularly in its treatment of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, while the older one excels in the highly intuitive and artistic treatment of the eariler centuries." Leila Flower

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 19 '49 490w

"An excellent book for private libraries, where extensive and detailed treatments of England's history cannot be given due space. A book to own."

+ Kirkus 17:537 S 15 '49 160w

"An excellent work of synthesis and original research, clear, direct, and comprehensive; of particular value for personal use or a college text. Demurrers: Stevenson was hardly a writer about 'the Imperial destiny'; Beerbohm's essay is 'A Clergyman,' not The Clergyman; 'house of lords' and 'house of commons' are distracting to the eye." E. F. Walbridge

+ — Library J 74:1091 Ag '49 130w

"His book is an admirable example of contemporary professional history, addressed no doubt basically to the college student who 'takes' the history of Great Britain, but still a book which the general reader interested in getting a background in depth for the understanding of current international affairs can read with profit. It will be a most valuable 'refresher' for all those whose notions of British history were formed a generation ago." Crane Briton

+ Sat R of Lit 32:14 D 31 '49 900w

"Readable, fluent, lively."

+ Wis Lib Bul p6 N '49

SMITH, MRS HANNAH (MERRIAM). For heaven's sake. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 266p $3 Little

B or 92 49-6049

An autobiography which describes the childhood of the daughter of a "True Believer" minister.

Booklist 46:140 D 15 '49

Chicago Sun p9X D 18 '49 150w

"Not far beneath the humor and ripple of the surface narrative, there is always [a] serious undercurrent of sensitive perception. The result is good entertainment—and something more." M. W. Stoer

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 D 19 '49 500w

Kirkus 17:456 Ag 15 '49 200w

"Mrs. Smith tells the story of her childhood with imagination and understanding. . . 'For Heaven's Sake' is fun to read and interesting as a picture of the evolution of a little sect and of an honest and spirited little girl." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p15 D 11 '49 700w

Reviewed by Charlotte Capers

N Y Times p14 D 18 '49 150w

Wis Lib Bul p5 N '49

SMITH, HARRY ALLEN. We went thataway; il. by Leo Hershfield. 256p $2.75 Doubleday

817 Humor 49-11513

A humorist's trip West to investigate the "Western Menace" for the members of the Mount Kisco philosophical society. He starts out with a Great Lakes cruise from Buffalo to Duluth and then continues by car thru South Dakota, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Texas, and Oklahoma visiting dude ranches, local characters and scenic wonders.

Booklist 46:122 D 1 '49

Kirkus 17:462 Ag 15 '49 160w

Reviewed by F. S. Nugent

N Y Times p6 O 30 '49 650w

"An important contribution to American humor." R. J. Collins

+ Springf'd Republican p7D D 11 '49 210w

SMITH, HELEN R., ed. Laughing matter; il. by Kurt Wiese. 166p $2.50 Scribner

808.87 Humor—Juvenile literature 49-11540

Collection of stories and verse, folk tales, and excerpts from longer stories, all humorous, for grades three to five.

Booklist 46:105 N 15 '49

Chicago Sun p6X N 13 '49 60w

+ Commonweal 51:191 N 18 '49 20w

"Good story hour material."

+ Kirkus 17:508 S 15 '49 60w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 Ja 1 '50 100w

SMITH, HERBERT MAYNARD. Henry VIII and the reformation. 480p $8.50 Macmillan

942.052 Henry VIII, king of England. Reformation [49-7242]

"Dr. Maynard Smith's new work, 'Henry VIII and the Reformation,' is a continuation of his 'Pre-Reformation England' [Book Review Digest 1938]. . . In his new volume, the author describes how the 'Church in England,' independent, at least in theory, under the distant supremacy of the papacy, became eventually the 'Church of England' under Royal Supremacy: 'isolated in Christendom, a national church with an ethos of her own.' His ultimate theme is, moreover, that this process did not destroy nor limit the Catholicity of the English Church." (Christian Science Monitor) Bibliography. Indexes.

"The chief virtue of the sketch of Henry is the chief virtue of the whole book: a mature, temperate, independent, and discriminating judgment which makes this study an exceptionally reliable guide to a difficult period. . . One gathers that the final draft must have been prepared at some distance from the British Museum or the Bodleian, so that some book titles were unchecked and some quotations accepted at second hand; the technical scholarship is, for the most part, impeccable." Garrett Mattingly

+ Am Hist R 54:871 Jl '49 700w

"H. Maynard Smith, who 'has studied most modern authorities and is not in entire agreement with any of them,' enters the lists as a champion of the Henrician religion. He has few good words for Henry VIII, but the church that monarch created—or rather 'reformed'—is extolled. . . The key to the Reformation in England, according to Smith, is that it was thoroughly orthodox and thoroughly English." W. S. Hudson

Christian Century 66:437 Ap 6 '49 700w

"The political history of the Reformation, centering round Henry's powerful 'egoism' and blind self-will, the combined ambitions of Henry and Wolsey, and all that followed, are analyzed with an expert lucidity that gives the book an unquestionable period value." Leila Flower

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 F 19 '49 480w

"Dr. Maynard Smith writes as an Anglican scholar. In some details other experts may disagree with a few of his conclusions or interpretations, but his narrative is clear, judicious, balanced and unprejudiced, and his book most readable, of the kind that keeps reviewers from going to bed betimes. He has a nice sense of character, though he might with advantage have given more pictorial detail and on occasion he shows a gentle irony. . . The final masterpiece on the English Reformation has yet to be written; and probably it will come rather from the literary artist than the historian and in the form of drama rather than of history, biography, or fiction. . . In the meantime, Dr. H. Maynard Smith's Henry VIII and the Reformation is likely to remain one of the sanest and most readable guides for the common reader and for the student." G. B. Harrison

+ Commonweal 49:496 F 25 '49 800w

"In this volume Canon Maynard Smith covers familiar ground, but he does so in a way which holds one's interest, and his book is easy to read." F. J. Smithen

+ Hibbert J 47:312 Ap '49 1300w

"A carefully written attempt to refute the charge, which has been circulated quite widely by the Vatican during the past four centuries, that the Church of England was born out of wedlock. . . The book also contains good all-round views of Henry, Wolsey, and the unfortunate Miss Boleyn."

+ New Yorker 24:94 F 12 '49 120w

"He packs both the political and the religious sections of his survey with deft miniatures of the famous and the obscure, with telling phrases, meaty judgments, and brilliant analyses of character, among which the pivotal ten pages on the most baffling and complex character of all, Henry VIII himself, are a little masterpiece." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 32:42 Ap 16 '49 550w

"A carefully balanced, very readable account, and . . . all save the rare specialist will read this book with interest and may well find their understanding and sympathies deepened by it. It is particularly useful as containing, besides the narrative, a judicious account of the universities and of the evolution of the English Bible. It breathes throughout a spirit of wide tolerance—a tolerance so wide, indeed, that we seem occasionally to catch an echo of Pooh-Bah's assumption of the general rectitude of all concerned in every action. But the fault, if fault it be, is an amiable one." David Knowles

+ Spec 181:816 D 17 '48 900w

Time 53:103 F 14 '49 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p92 F 5 '49 900w

SMITH, HOLLAND MCTYEIRE, and FINCH, PERCY. Coral and brass. 289p $3 Scribner

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Pacific ocean. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. U.S. Marine corps 49-7218

Memoirs of the part played by the Marines in the Pacific as set down by their commanding officer along with his side of several controversial questions concerning the conduct of the war. Index.

Booklist 45:169; 190 Ja 15 '49; F 1 '49

Canadian Forum 29:96 Jl '49 90w

Reviewed by Keith Wheeler

Chicago Sun Ja 18 '49 600w

'Swashbuckling, tender, rollicking, reverent, acrimonious, sentimental—its shifting moods come crashing through virile, colorful, stormy pages teeming with tremendous enthusiasm, controversy and bombast." Harlan Trott

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 21 '49 390w

Kirkus 16:651 D 15 '48 280w

"A thoroughly controversial—and an immensely readable book. Recommended for all collections." A. J. Gains

+ Library J 74:57 Ja 1 '49 130w

Nation 168:137 Ja 29 '49 90w

"The celebrated General Holland M. ('Howlin' Mad') Smith returned from the Pacific in mid-1945 conscious, as he tells us, of duty well done. Whether he has done his duty, alike by his country and his own reputation, equally well in contributing this rambunctious, explosive memoir to the history of the Pacific war and the flames of inter-service jealousy is, perhaps, another question." Walter Millis

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ja 16 '49 1300w

"It will probably be a surprise to most people to learn that Holland M. Smith is a quiet-mannered, long-headed man, who was placed in charge of Marine forces during the Central Pacific drive because of his long study of amphibious war and his capacity for intricate strategic planning. He is forthright, but not notably more so than other officers of a service whose tradition is hard-hitting—whether with verbs or violence. It is accordingly somewhat unfortunate that, as a literary amanuensis Mr. Finch has chosen to emphasize the extrovert, even the controversial, features of a career that really included more thinking than action." Fletcher Pratt

N Y Times p5 Ja 16 '49 800w

New Yorker 24:94 F 5 '49 160w

Reviewed by Mike Capraro

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 30 '49 650w

"This book is one man's story, and that man tells it in his own way. His literary weapon bears no resemblance to that favorite of the Marines, the high-precision rifle. General Smith uses a shotgun, and with fine impartiality; no sooner has he let go a blast at the Army than he gives the Navy the other barrel. Yet it would be inaccurate to say that he is anti-anything; Holland Smith is simply pro-Marine. . . Rambling, repetition, and sloppy editing mar the literary performance; yet the general's collaborator, Percy

Finch, has succeeded in conveying the flavor and personality of the man." F. O. Hough
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:19 Ja 22 '49 750w
U S Quarterly Bkl 5:221 Je '49 280w

SMITH, HOMER WILLIAM. Kamongo; or, The lungfish and the padre. rev ed 151p $2.50 Viking
818 Evolution. Lung-fish 49-16261

"A reissue with textual changes." (Publisher's note) An earlier edition of this semifictional dialog on evolution appears in Book Review Digest 1932.

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 F 27 '49 70w

"This is no dry treatise on science versus religion, but a beautifully written, utterly fascinating book, part fiction and part philosophy, done in a style that makes it worth the intelligent reader's time for that alone, yet at the same time an honest, forthright and brilliant statement of the viewpoint of 'pure science.'" J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 1 '49 800w

"A fine piece of writing." B. R. Redman
+ Sat R of Lit 32:40 Ap 23 '49 100w

SMITH, HOWARD KINGSBURY. State of Europe. 408p $3.75 Knopf
940.55 Europe—History 49-11351

A combination of history and political survey of Europe and the United States during the four postwar years. The author is chief of the European News Bureau, Columbia broadcasting system. Index.

Booklist 46:76; 95 N 1 '49; N 15 '49
Bookmark 9:80 Ja '50 40w

Reviewed by Irving Pflaum
Chicago Sun p38 N 7 '49 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Thompson
Chicago Sunday Tribune p12 D 11 '49 400w

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby
Christian Science Monitor p16 N 8 '49 950w

"Absorbingly interesting, provocative, demanding reading. But it must be read."
+ Kirkus 17:502 S 1 '49 200w

"This is an important book and one that could be read with profit by American and Russian, by democrat and communist." J. H. Berthel
+ Library J 74:1674 N 1 '49 170w

"An earnest, provocative, and informative study of Europe from the end of the war till April, 1949. Mr. Smith is profoundly concerned for the future of Europe, as is almost every visitor to that continent who has studied conditions from any closer vantage-point than the luxury hotel or the window of a touring-car. . . Mr. Smith's great virtue, other than caring profoundly about what is happening in the world, is that he sees that most questions have at least two sides and tries to present them both." Raymond Swing
+ Nation 169:546 D 3 '49 1150w

"This forthright book, capping his unique broadcasts, places Howard K. Smith, it seems to me in the forefront of the new generation of American foreign correspondents, a worthy successor to Sheean, Gunther, Barnes, Thompson, Swing, the Mowrer brothers and others who kept this country so well informed between the wars. . . The book jolts one, and that can be painful. Useful and beneficial, too, perhaps." W. L. Shirer
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 6 '49 1650w

"He writes from firsthand knowledge and with the historic background always in view. . . The book is a tour de force, as it compresses the history and a contemporary description of every European country within an amazingly small compass. Therein, to this writer, is its value, aside from the fact that it will harm none of us to read a liberal and friendly interpretation of what is happening behind the Iron Curtain." H. L. Mathews
+ N Y Times p18 N 6 '49 600w

"A sober and mature book on international affairs that is almost guaranteed to make a lot of people uncomfortable."
New Yorker 25:152 D 10 '49 170w

"The pattern of treatment is familiar enough, but it becomes an exceptional achievement through Howard K. Smith's grasp of the realities that dominate the unhappy continent." Louis Wasserman
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 25 '49 1000w

"The best chapters in Mr. Smith's book are those which deal with the cold war and the difficulties arising from it. A steadfast liberal, he writes here with an analytical clarity of vision unmarred by propaganda or hysteria." Percy Knauth
+ Sat R of Lit 32:17 N 19 '49 1050w

SMITH, IRA LEPOUCE, and SMITH, HARRY ALLEN. Low and inside [with il. by Leo Hershfield]. 243p $2.50 Doubleday
796.357 Baseball 49-8968

A collection of anecdotes and jokes about baseball. They date from about 1880 to 1914. No index.

Booklist 45:351 Je 15 '49

"Humor—yes, of an odd sort; interest—yes, for fans; real baseball—rarely; but after this the straight game might seem a trifle dull."
Kirkus 17:169 Mr 15 '49 160w

"A fascinating and hilarious collection. It is something that should be sandwiched in between Marcel Proust and 'Forever Amber' on every bookshelf." Tallulah Bankhead
+ N Y Times p7 My 29 '49 700w

SMITH, IRA ROBERT TAYLOR, and MORRIS, JOE ALEX. Dear Mr. President; the story of fifty years in the White House mail room. 238p $3 Messner
B or 92 Presidents (U.S.) 49-6882

Ira Smith went to the White House as a clerk; but was so successful in helping Mrs McKinley with her mail that handling the President's letters became his new job. For fifty years he read the presidential mail. Now, retired and living in California, he writes his impressions of White House people and events, from the McKinley administration to President Truman's fourth year in office.

Booklist 46:2; 81 S 1 '49; N 1 '49

Reviewed by Rod Nordell
Christian Science Monitor p18 O 27 '49 350w

"Small talk, which provides amusing, indirect reflections of the great."
+ Kirkus 17:422 Ag 1 '49 160w

"With J. A. Morris as collaborator, Mr. Smith has written a gay, informal and chatty account of his more than fifty years in the White House. . . Highly recommended." L. R. Etzkorn
+ Library J 74:1199 S 1 '49 130w
Library J 74:1616 O 15 '49 20w
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 N 6 '49 330w

"Mr. Smith does not attempt to delve into the thinking of the nine Presidents about whom he writes. Rather, he tells you about their relationships with their families, their secretaries, their pets—about their working habits, their moods, their 'peeves.' One closes his book with the conviction that Presidents are as human as the rest of us." G. G. Tully
+ N Y Times p29 O 23 '49 600w
Springf'd Republican p8C O 30 '49 360w

SMITH, JAMES EUGENE. One hundred years of Hartford's Courant, from colonial times through the Civil war. 342p $5 Yale univ. press
071 Courant, Hartford, Connecticut 49-11937

"Though other Colonial newspapers were founded before it, the Hartford Courant today remains the oldest American newspaper that has been published without interruption. This is the story of that paper, from the day in 1764 when Thomas Green issued the first copy until the end of the Civil War. . . . The author, Dr. J. Eugene Smith, is President of the Willimantic State Teachers College in Connecticut." (Publisher's note) Bibliography. Index.

SMITH, J. E.—Continued

"Dr. Smith's style is not lively or anecdotal. . . But he is readable and the average citizen needn't bother with his seventy-four pages of notes, conveniently located at the back of the volume." R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p51 D 4 '49 380w

"This is much more than a detailed and inclusive history of the oldest American newspaper published without interruption since its establishment in 1764. It is the story of the microcosm of Connecticut, and by extension of the American Union, for the succeeding century."
+ Sat R of Lit 33:27 Ja 21 '50 180w

Reviewed by M. Russell
Springf'd Republican p8B D 18 '49 240w

SMITH, JESSICA. People come first. 254p $2.75 Int. pubs.

914.7 Russia—Description and travel. Reconstruction (1939-)—Russia 48-11403

A picture of the Soviet people in the immediate postwar days, stressing their war losses and weariness. It is the author's opinion after her fourth trip to the Soviet Union, that the people have "the will for peace."

"The book is romantic and uncritical, reflecting these qualities engendered by the party. If corrected by knowledge of the party's role and of the work of the Ministry of the Interior, it is well worth reading, especially to catch the vigor and enthusiasm of Soviet cadres." P. B. Anderson
+ — Ann Am Acad 264:133 Jl '49 500w
Foreign Affairs 27:687 Jl '49 40w

Reviewed by Harrison Salisbury
N Y Times p16 D 12 '48 600w

"Miss Smith's observations on Soviet life deserve serious consideration. Unfortunately, however, the author's uncritical acceptance of all official party declarations in regard to current Soviet policies and institutions vitiates in the extreme the value of her story." D. H.
San Francisco Chronicle p18 F 13 '49 250w

SMITH, LILLIAN EUGENIA. Killers of the dream. 256p $3 Norton

325.26 South—Social conditions. Negroes—Segregation 49-6772

"Using the Freudian method, the author of Strange Fruit lays bare the weaknesses, errors, and anxieties of the South, dwelling on the triangulation of sin, sex, and race segregation, 'the hard, bitter facts of life.' Drawing on her own recollections and her wide reading, she cites examples of the evils of segregation for both white and colored people, and gives the history of race relations from pre-Civil War days. Her intention seems to be by use of the shock treatment to force Southerners to reexamine both traditions and facts." Booklist

"This is a blunt, fearlessly written book couched in swiftly moving prose that is alive with feeling; 'hard, bitter facts are discussed in it that neither children nor fools can be nourished on.'" C. J. Rolo
+ Atlantic 184:96 D '49 650w
Booklist 46:24; 59 S 15 '49; O 15 '49

Reviewed by T. H. Wright
Chicago Sun p9X O 30 '49 450w

"No questions of prudence interest Miss Smith. Being a Freudian, she is under a compulsion. Her book will please some readers, puzzle others, and move still others to anger. But the rebel against authority cannot but write her fiery words about 'sin, sex, and segregation.' Believing in love, she finds ample justification for hate. No European reader of this book would recognize the south should he afterwards visit it. Nor do I recognize it, though I know the south well and was born there a generation earlier than Miss Smith. The most appropriate comment on the book can be given in the exact words of the author (page 84): 'Exaggeration? Perhaps. Whenever one puts a belief, a way of life, into quick words, of course one exaggerates.'" Ellsworth Faris
— Christian Century 66:1457 D '49 1150w

"As one born and bred in the South and deeply loyal to her native region, Lillian Smith's probing of its prejudices is not only more courageous but more compassionate and more understanding than could possibly be the case with a non-Southerner. Her book is a brave and perceptive consideration of the factors that have made 'Strange Fruit' and 'Tobacco Road' tragic symbols of a region. It goes beyond mere exposure to explore origins, to find the causes behind accepted customs." O. D. Hormel
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 5 '49 900w
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '49

"The fallacies in Miss Smith's analysis and program are fairly obvious. The Freudian analysis by itself is not satisfying. Her generalizations about Christianity (the Church's fear of knowledge, its opposition to freedom, etc.) are both culpably ignorant and reckless. . . Sadly enough, her positive philosophy is anything but a philosophy. It is the sort of vaguely optimistic, pragmatic faith in salvation through the social sciences which, despite the great passion for justice, love for humans, and beauty of mind Miss Smith exhibits in her book, leads with frightening certainty to that one Sin Against the Holy Ghost which so terrified Miss Smith as a child, the sin of despair." William Pfaff
Commonweal 51:299 D 16 '49 800w

"A book for all who are concerned with the future, rather than the past. The psychological foundations are explored of those conditions which produced Strange Fruit. For those to whom Strange Fruit was more of a message than a story, this book is must reading."
+ Kirkus 17:446 Ag 15 '49 500w

"While vague at times, this is an honest book written in Miss Smith's customary excellent style." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 74:1602 O 15 '49 100w

"Lillian Smith, herself a Southerner who loves the South, speaks in this book 'as one who talks to one's family in a crisis, uncovering experiences which our health as human beings requires us to understand.' Much of what she says, it need hardly be pointed out, is applicable also, in greater or less degree, to the North. She has made her case." H. R. Cayton
+ Nation 169:475 N 12 '49 1350w

"Brave, honest and heart-breaking book. However, it is no general thesis and antithesis that warms her pages. It is rather the detailed and specific life of the Deep South, her own region, fully experienced by a personality much enriched by cultures from afar: this is the real matter." Vincent Sheean
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p1 O 23 '49 1300w

"The book is absorbing and effective when Lillian Smith is in control of her almost religious fervor; when she is carried away by fervor, the book deteriorates." Bucklin Moon
+ — N Y Times p3 O 23 '49 750w

"When she comes to a summing up of the economic side of segregation, Miss Smith resorts, with rather unhappy results, to parable form, outlining the unspoken agreement arrived at by Mr. Rich White and Mr. Poor White at the expense of the Negro. This very tangible presentation of a situation so clearly rooted in intangibles is one of the few shaky spots in an otherwise persuasive and important piece of work."
+ — New Yorker 25:135 N 5 '49 160w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 27 '49 950w

"This is an honest book written from an honest heart. It has come out of great tribulation and an honest searching for truth. The author has psycho-analyzed her own soul with great integrity, and, in doing so, has torn away the masks for the rest of us." H. P. Rainey
+ Sat R of Lit 32:21 O 22 '49 700w

" 'Killers of the Dream' will undoubtedly offend many people besides the advocates of white supremacy, for it is a disturbing and an outspoken book. It is certainly not nourishment for 'children nor fools,' but it is a courageous, honest and absorbing attempt to throw light into some very dark places."
+ Springf'd Republican p7D D 11 '49 330w

"Here is an intensely sincere, highminded author wanting desperately to bring about reform in an area which desperately needs reform, and yet the method she is using seems likely to be utterly ineffective. It has all the faults of both the intellectual and the emotional approach and the virtues of neither. She works hard enough at trying to arouse guilt in the reader—but will she bring about change in behavior?" Nina Ridenour
+ — Survey 85:613 N '49 1000w

"Killers of the Dream is badly organized, excessively repetitious and too persistently eloquent; reading it is somewhat like eating seven courses of soufflé."
— Time 54:82 O 31 '49 750w

SMITH, MORTIMER BREWSTER. And madly teach; a layman looks at public school education. (Humanist lib) 107p $2 Regnery

370.1 Education—U.S. Education—Philosophy 49-11902

"A primer for parents which tells in plain language what every mother and father ought to know about our public schools. Analysis written by a 'layman and amateur' who happened to serve as a member of a board of education." Publisher's note

Booklist 46:116 D 1 '49

Reviewed by Benjamin Fine
N Y Times p7 Ja 1 '50 100w

"The book is subtitled 'A Primer for Parents.' Let us hope that a sufficient number of parents regard it as such and begin to take an interest in the school affairs within their own community." E. M. T.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 D 25 '49 450w

Springf'd Republican p10B Ja 1 '50 200w

SMITH, NICOL. Golden doorway to Tibet; photo. by Loren Tutell. 288p $3.75 Bobbs

915.46 Tibet—Description and travel 49-9146

Anecdotal, popularly written account of the author's trip thru Kashmir and the borders of western Tibet.

Booklist 45:374 Jl 1 '49

"This glibly-written report scratches only the surface, boring us with insignificant details and lengthy yarns about trivial servant troubles. The reader would remain almost unaware of the splendors of this Himalayan region, were it not for the beautiful photographs taken by Loren Tutell, which indeed constituted the best feature of this book." M. F.
— + Commonweal 50:349 Jl 15 '49 360w

"Interesting enough, but superficial, certainly no substitute for a book such as Pallis' Peaks and Lamas." Donald Wasson
Library J 74:817 My 15 '49 90w
Library J 74:1561 O 15 '49 50w

" 'Golden Doorway to Tibet' is generously illustrated with as good photographs as ever came out of Tibetan country—impressive masses of mountains, stretches of desolation, lamaseries, castles and palaces, a variety of racial types and a still greater variety of the picturesque persons whom Nicol Smith brings very much to life in his anecdotes." Rodney Gilbert
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je 19 '49 550w

"Some of the people and events in 'Golden Doorway to Tibet' might bring an incredulous smile to other eastern travelers. A reader with a casual interest in the East will regret that the author has not made more of a singular opportunity." M. J. Tweedy
N Y Times p14 Je 12 '49 500w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 14 '49 1050w

"A rousing travel-adventure story in the old tradition. . . Readable as all get-out." Horace Sutton
Sat R of Lit 32:35 Jl 2 '49 100w

SMITH, RALPH ELBERTON. Customs valuation in the United States; a study in tariff administration. 380p $7.50 Univ. of Chicago press

336.262 Tariff—U.S. 48-10944

"The primary purpose of this book is to make available a body of information on the problem of valuing imports for tariff purposes. With some changes in form and content it represents essentially the author's doctoral dissertation written at the University of Chicago. . . The work is divided into four parts—an introduction, a historical section, a section on contemporary valuation law and problems, and a summary and conclusion. The introduction attempts to indicate the nature and significance of the problem at hand. The historical section begins with a review of the origins of dutiable value and valuation procedures in the United States and traces the significant developments up to the present. . . Part III attempts to present a representative description of customs valuation as it exists today. Its primary objective is to provide an analysis of each of the several forms of dutiable value currently in effect in the United States. . . A final chapter in Part III presents a brief discussion of valuation methods in foreign countries and of international efforts to prevent the use of valuation procedures as tools of administrative protection. Part IV is a condensation of the findings of the entire study and suggests certain changes in valuation methods in the United States." (Pref) Bibliography. Table of cases cited. Indexes.

"One leaves these pages, not only with a better knowledge of customs valuation, but also with an increased understanding of the problems of administration with which the Bureau of Customs and its predecessors have had to deal." Weldon Cooper
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:172 F '49 380w

"[The book] is detailed and scholarly. It is an expansion of a doctoral dissertation, but is easy to read in spite of its technical character. . . The proposals for valuation reform are pertinent and sound." H. R. Enslow
+ Ann Am Acad 263:245 My '49 320w
Columbia Law R 49:732 My '49 130w
Foreign Affairs 28:162 O '49 10w

"This study is a timely guide to students of tariffs, international trade, and economic history. The analysis of more than a hundred significant cases resolved by the courts provides the customs broker, the lawyer, and the importer with an up-to-date compendium of professional guidance through the mazes of accumulated definitions and interpretation."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:93 Mr '49 240w

SMITH, ROBERT ERNEST. Machining of metal. rev ed 224p il $3.50 McKnight

621.75 Machine shop practice 49-8406

"Describes in very simple language, and with illustrations, the lathe, shaper, milling machine, surface grinders; power hack saw and metal cutting band saws, and gives steps for their proper operation." (Library J) Reference list. Index.

Booklist 45:397 Jl 15 '49

SMITH, R. E.—Continued
"Excellent as a text book." Julian Sohon
+ Library J 74:1103 Ag '49 40w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 74:1915 D 15 '49 60w

SMITH, THEODORE TOWNSEND. Electricity for students of science and engineering. 410p $5 Int. textbook

621.3 Electric engineering 49-2852

"Written as a text for upper-class undergraduates who have had a year of physics and a year of calculus. Starts with the concept of an electric charge, alternating and oscillating currents, long line transmission, thermionic vacuum-tube circuits, and electric waves." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Julian Sohon
Library J 74:1103 Ag '49 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 34:38 My '49

SMITH, WALTER HAROLD BLACK. N.R.A. book of small arms; 4v, v2 Rifles [ed. by Charles Baynard Lister]. 546p il $12.50 Military service; $10 Stackpole & Heck

623.4 Firearms (46-1188)

"This volume [attempts] to cover the essential facts regarding the rifles of the world, both military and sporting. . . The volume is not a primer of gun manufacture but a reference book for those who already have a working knowledge of small arms." (Foreword) The volume is divided into three parts: The evolution of shoulder arms; Types of rifle actions; and The modern rifle. In the last part the material is arranged by country of manufacture. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 45:277 Ap 15 '49

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson
Library J 74:380 Mr 1 '49 40w

"The book is well indexed, elaborately illustrated and, for all its technical data, is so written as to be easily comprehensible to the non-technical reader."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:289 Je '49 240w

SMOTHERS, FRANK ALBERT, and others. Report on the Greeks. See Twentieth century fund

SMYTH, RICHARD C., and MURPHY, MATTHEW JOHN. Bargaining with organized labor [pub] in assn. with Modern industry magazine. 302p $3.75 Funk

331.116 Collective bargaining 48-11663

"Basic factors relating to the economic, psychological, and sociological aspects of collective bargaining. . . These factors are reported as observed by outstanding representatives of industry, organized labor, and research and educational institutions. The author's analyses of these three aspects of negotiating and living under a labor contract are among the highlights of this volume." (Management R) Index.

Booklist 45:205 F 15 '49

"Presented in an able, understandable fashion. . . The book should help to create a better understanding of labor relations facts within our democracy." A. A. Desser
+ Management R 37:651 D '48 460w

"The refreshing characteristic of this book is its accent on reasonableness. . . Although [the authors] have done a painstaking job of selection and have put the pieces together in a manner that makes for easy comprehension, the lack of fresh approach to the bargaining process is probably the book's chief weakness. . . Within the limits of what it sets out to do—namely, to help acquaint management representatives with the how and what of contract negotiations—the book succeeds admirably." A. H. Raskin
+ — N Y Times p16 Mr 27 '49 320w

SMYTHE, FRANCIS SYDNEY. Valley of flowers. 325p col pl $5 Norton

915.42 Botany—Himalaya mountains. Himalaya mountains. Mountaineering. Apine flora 49-8900

The author, an English mountaineer and amateur botanist, describes his four months spent collecting plants along the northern border of India in 1937. During that time he also did some mountain climbing. The volume includes a list of Plants from the Bhyundar Valley and neighborhood collected in 1937. Index.

Booklist 45:333 Je 1 '49

"If I were going mountain climbing I would put my whole confidence in Mr. Smythe. He is completely at ease when confronted with overhanging glaciers, avalanches, hurtling stones that send out sparks, and vertical cliffs where he edges sidewise on an inch-wide ledge. . . But, alas, he writes according to his own iron training as a mountaineer. He records every detail step by step to his adventures—and then when it comes to the heights of the story he is too casual and neglects the details that would make the adventures more real for the general reader. . . Two mechanical aids would have added greatly to the clarification of this book. It needs a good map and a picture of the fearless author who personifies men defying eternity." Rutherford Platt
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 My 22 '49 700w

"Refreshing and unpretentious book. . . Mr Symthe is a truly modest man, and this not entirely because of his intimate acquaintance with physical danger. For it appears that he, like so many who venture into the abode of snow—Hindu, Tibetan or European—has felt God's presence, and measured his littleness on the scale of exaltation. These refined qualities, like the grain of fine timber, show up on every page of his writing." E. B. Garside
+ N Y Times p32 Je 19 '49 800w

"His narrative, in which climbing far overshadows specimen-hunting, is forthright and engrossing, and gains a good deal of impact from the strangeness of the world of the high Himalayas, where the stars and the sun seem miraculously bright, silence is a tangible entity, and ice-strewn precipices can become scalable paths."
+ New Yorker 25:102 My 28 '49 100w

"To read this volume is to discover some of that precious 'peacefulness of spirit' which the author sought and found among the flowers of the Bhyundar valley and the peaks of the Garhwal Himalayas." M. L. M.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Jl 31 '49 200w

SNEED, JAMES RICHARD. How to live effectively. 112p $1.50 Revell

252 Sermons 49-7363

Seven sermons by the minister of the First Methodist church, Los Angeles. They are the author's instructions for effective living. Contents: How to regain our spiritual poise; How to recover our lost ideals; How to help other people effectively; How to re-establish our departed confidence; How to tell right from wrong; How to succeed in our human relations; How to make our Sabbath spiritually creative.

Booklist 45:274 Ap 15 '49

"They make a small book, for so large a subject, but it contains much wisdom in few words, and the clarity and directness of its style give it the superficial impression of being less deep than it is." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 66:178 F 9 '49 110w

SNOW, EDWARD ROWE. Strange tales from Nova Scotia to Cape Hatteras. 322p il $4 Dodd

917.4 Atalntic ocean. Shipwrecks. Adventure and adventurers 49-11938

Twenty-three stories of shipwrecks, rescues, mutinies, and murders, collected by the author while on a hiking tour of the Atlantic coast.

Bookmark 9:81 Ja '50 50w

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun p67 D 16 '49 70w

Reviewed by W. B. Hayward
N Y Times p37 N 27 '49 200w

"Mr. Snow examines old legends, now retells familiar tales, always approaching his subject with enthusiasm and usually producing new, if not conclusive evidence. . . Such material readily lends itself to conjecture, and if some of these accounts give the impression of hasty preparation, Mr. Snow again has done a good service in bringing them to light." D. B. B.
+ — Springf'd Republican p10B D 25 '49 360w

SNYDER, LOUIS LEO, and MORRIS, RICHARD BRANDON, eds. Treasury of great reporting; literature under pressure from the sixteenth century to our own time; with a pref. by Herbert Bayard Swope. 784p il $5 Simon & Schuster

808.8 Literature—Collections. Reporters and reporting 49-11865

"An anthology of newspaper and magazine articles—as well as some radio broadcasts—in which most of the celebrated practitioners in the field of journalism, from Daniel Defoe to Meyer Berger and Rebecca West, are represented. . . Many of the most momentous events of the past three hundred and sixty years are covered here." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 46:155 Ja 1 '50

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p9X N 20 '49 450w

Kirkus 17:422 Ag 1 '49 190w

"The huddling together of stories that are reporting by any definition, and that rank high in the matter of craftsmanship, reveals the impossibility of lifting the craft into an art. Cheek by jowl in this volume are Herbert L. Matthews's story of the bombing of Barcelona and Bob Considine's story of the Louis-Schmeling prize fight. From the standpoint of craftsmanship they are both superb stories written by men under terrific tension who, by their mastery of words, manage to convey that tension to the reader. But one was witnessing a gigantic tragedy, the other a commercialized sport. The upshot is that the reader who has been deeply moved by the Barcelona story is a bit ashamed of himself for being moved by the prize-fight story. . . Still, they are both good reading. So, indeed, is most of the book. 'A Treasury of Great Reporting' is not all great, and not all reporting, but there is in it little indeed that is not interesting. And among the best things in it are the 51 illustrations." G. W. Johnson
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 D 4 '49 1200w

"Is the book 'A Treasury of Great Reporting'? I think not. It is an anthology of exciting nonfiction thrillers. Our papers would be dull, indeed, without the Meyer Bergers, the Hal Boyles, the Ernie Pyles. But today there is an equal if not greater need for the James Restons, the Bert Andrewses, the Alistar Cooks. . . Yet there is no place for them in 'A Treasury of Great Reporting.' That is the basis of the most serious complaint against this book. If the authors had called it almost anything else, there would have been no fundamental complaint. . . Aside from this fundamental objection, 'A Treasury' is a workmanlike job." John Desmond
+ — N Y Times p49 N 13 '49 800w

"The book turns out to have been an excellent idea all around, for reporting, because of its brevity and the necessity for telling the whole story at one shot, lends itself extremely well to the arbitrary limitations of an anthology."
+ New Yorker 25:157 N 12 '49 130w

"All in all, this is a splendid book—one that should be used as a text in schools of journalism. And aside from its possibilities in the classroom, it is excellent reading for anyone, in newspaper work or out of it." E. J.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 27 '49 500w

SNYDER, RICHARD CARLTON. Most-favored-nation clause; an analysis with particular reference to recent treaty practice and tariffs. 264p pa $2.75 King's crown press

337.91 Tariff. Commercial treaties 48-8535

"This monograph is devoted entirely to those agreements under which a nation may bind itself to grant to another nation tariff terms (and other commercial privileges and immunities) at least no worse than it grants to any other country: the 'most-favored-nation clause.' The clause has this generally-accepted meaning, despite the variety of interpretations surrounding it and notwithstanding the lack of fixed formulae or wordings. Students of international relations and trade have been aware of the importance, and of some of the implications, of such treaties both to economic and to broader political relationships among governments." (Am Pol Sci R) Bibliography.

"Noticeably lacking in the book is the recognition that the American interpretation of equality of treatment in the reciprocal trade agreements program went considerably beyond the conventional interpretation of the unconditional most-favored-nation clause. . . The defects are minor. The book as a whole is most useful and is carefully written." Carl Kreider
+ — Am Econ R 39:1039 S '49 850w

"The present study is most valuable as a careful and well-documented reference work on a somewhat technical subject. . . The manuscript contains much of the academic paraphernalia associated with a Ph.D. thesis; it is hard going at times. Professor Snyder, however, while modest in his pretensions in giving us what he calls an introductory analysis, has certainly written one of the most complete and up-to-date discussions of this subject." J. W. Robinson
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:156 F '49 650w

"Richly documented and fortified by a most comprehensive bibliography, the study is authoritative. That it is not readable is beside the point, for few would attempt a continuous perusal. Rather, any question of interpretation will find elaborate analysis somewhere within its pages." L. M. Sears
+ Ann Am Acad 262:196 Mr '49 380w

Reviewed by V. H. Holloway
Crozer Q 26:182 Ap '49 500w

Current Hist 15:294 N '48 50w

Foreign Affairs 27:504 Ap '49 10w

"The text is written in language familiar only to the specialist."
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:474 D '48 270w

SNYDER, RICHARD CARLTON, and WILSON, H. HUBERT, eds. Roots of political behavior; introduction to government and politics. 694p $5.25 Am. bk.

320.8 Political science 49-795

"To provide the materials for a basic course on 'the forces and factors behind political institutions' as a supplement to and possibly a partial synthesizing of the courses built on the institutional approach, Richard Carlton Snyder and H. Hubert Wilson have edited [this] new volume of readings. . . The articles, representing all the social sciences and written for the most part by a notable galaxy of both American and British contemporaries, are grouped into twelve sections ranging all the way from 'The Human Equation in Politics' to 'The American Ideology' and 'The American Character.' The only official document included is the 'Charter of the Organization of American States.' The articles bristle with provocative content as they develop the close relationships between politics and the other social sciences." Am Pol Sci R

"The editors have been brilliantly successful, not only on conceiving and blueprinting their new approach, but also in assembling this large collection of stimulating and, above all, pertinent articles. Excellent introductions for each section and article supply a unifying warp. To many it will appear that this book and the course based upon it might better be a conclusion for seniors than an introduction for freshmen." A. J. Lien
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:846 Ag '49 300w

SNYDER, R. C.—Continued

"All selections are contemporary, the overwhelming majority are by Americans, and they all, whether by Americans or not, bear upon the American scene. The book is thus narrower than the title. But the selections are viable and provocative. . . It is worth observing that the publishing job is excellent." T. V. Smith
+ — Ethics 59:300 Jl '49 110w

"It would be highly useful as a supplementary text in political science. A partial solution to the problem of materials for the all too few integrated social science courses (often given under the title of 'Contemporary Civilization') is provided by these readings. In those junior colleges where the social science courses are not departmentalized to a great extent, this volume is likely to be particularly welcome." H. A. Bone
+ Social Educ 13:393 D '49 220w

Reviewed by N. D. Palmer
Social Studies 41:43 Ja '50 650w

SNYGG, DONALD, and COMBS, ARTHUR WRIGHT. Individual behavior; a new frame of reference for psychology. 386p $3.50 Harper
137 Individuality 49-8454

"Presents a brief but comprehensive outline of a new way of looking at behavior which has recently aroused a great deal of interest among psychologists as a means of understanding the behavior of particular individuals." School & Society

"This volume is an important contribution both to the practice and theory of a changing psychology." Nathaniel Cantor
+ Am Soc R 14:566 Ag '49 1000w
School & Society 69:255 Ap 2 '49 50w

SOBEL, BERNARD, ed. Theatre handbook and digest of plays; pref. by George Freedley. 6th ed rev & augmented 897p $4 Crown
792.03 Theater—Dictionaries. Drama—Dictionaries. Actors and actresses 48-4836

Sixth edition of a compendium on the theatre. "The book contains plot synopses of over 1000 plays from antiquity to the present; bibliographies and biographies; glossaries of every imaginable subject connected with the stage. It would be worth owning if only for its special articles, such as those on acting by Raymond Massey and Tallulah Bankhead; on critics and criticism by John Mason Brown; on the flossier side of first nights by Lucius Beebe; on radio by Arch Oboler, television by Gilbert Seldes, motion pictures by Hunt Stromberg; and on things in general by William Saroyan." (Theatre Arts)

"At last a revised edition in compact and handy form of one of the most useful theatre handbooks available. The biographies have been rewritten and brought up to date and are of considerable value. My original bibliography has been enlarged by the editor and considerably improved." George Freedley
+ Library J 73:1821 D 15 '48 70w

"An excellent reference compiled by a distinguished laborer in the Broadway vineyard." R. G.
+ Sat R of Lit 31:33 O 30 '48 80w

"The appearance of the sixth edition of this work, revised and bigger than ever, is a fine occasion to bring it to the attention of anybody who might have missed it. . . The style is lively, the facts as accurate and well-indexed as anybody could hope for."
+ Theatre Arts 32:94 O '48 120w

SOBEL, MRS HELEN (MARTIN). All the tricks! with post-mortems by Charles H. Goren and Howard Dietz [produced under the editorial supervision of Elliott W. McDowell]. 245p $2.75 Greenberg
795.41 Contract bridge 49-10646

Assuming some knowledge of bridge on the part of the reader, the author describes her winning methods and variations of play. The author is Women's national bridge champion, holding more than 2000 master points.

Booklist 46:41; 45 O 1 '49

"Stimulating and provocative."
+ Kirkus 17:494 S 1 '49 90w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 7 '49 120w
Springf'd Republican p9D D 4 '49 120w

SOBY, JAMES THRALL. Contemporary painters. 151p il $3.75 Museum of modern art 759 Painters 49-4425

"One of the most discerning writers on modern art discusses a group of present-day artists, in a casual survey that ranges from such Europeans as Max Beckmann and Georges Rouault to such younger Americans as Jack Levine, Hyman Bloom, and I. Rice Pereira. . . There are sixty-five plates." New Yorker

Reviewed by Dorothy Adlow
Christian Science Monitor p13 Je 2 '49 40w

"Ever since certain disaffected critics began hurling their spitballs at modern art, the public has awaited a book to dissipate these attacks. James Thrall Soby, who conducts an art column for one of the literary periodicals, who serves in official capacities for the Museum of Modern Art (and edits certain of their catalogs) and whose previous books have suggested the tone if not the temper for such an effort, certainly possesses some of the ammunition required for an effective counter-charge. Unfortunately, he fails to array his forces properly and thus leaves another gap through which the chirping enemies may pour. Indeed, preferring the rôle of gentleman-critic, Mr. Soby altogether shuns the battle." Jerome Mellquist
Commonweal 49:595 Mr 25 '49 550w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut
Library J 74:1325 S 15 '49 80w

"Useful group of essays. . . The general reader will find this book interesting and informative. I warmly recommend it to college teachers as supplementary reading for students in courses of modern painting." S. L. Faison
+ Nation 168:133 Ja 29 '49 1150w

"The book is episodic and lacks any central thesis, but Mr. Soby's separate appraisals are unfailingly wise and enlightening, and he has exceptional ability at describing the evocative effect of an artist's work."
+ — New Yorker 24:118 D 18 '48 120w

"'Contemporary Painters' is not entirely satisfactory even as a presentation of various little-known movements and men. It is rather a teasing introduction to them." John Coolidge
Sat R of Lit 32:31 My 7 '49 800w

SOKOLOFF, BORIS FEDOROVICH. Miracle drugs. 308p il $3 Ziff-Davis
615.329 Antibiotic substances 49-10442

"Simply written story of man's war against microbes and viruses with the aid of antibiotics and sulfonamides. More technical than the popular De Kruif titles but also for the layman. Poorly indexed." (Booklist) Bibliography.

Booklist 46:29 S 15 '49
Kirkus 17:318 Je 15 '49 120w

Reviewed by R. R. Hawkins
Library J 74:1608 O 15 '49 110w

"The history of the work done by Pasteur, Lister, Ehrlich, Fleming, and others is well told and so simply that anybody with a high-school education ought to understand it. As a practical bacteriologist, Dr. Sokoloff knows what to emphasize and what to subordinate. Far too much space is given to the methods whereby penicillin is commercially produced. The presentation of the details retards the progress of the reader so that his interest necessarily flags. Nearly one-third of the book is given over to penicillin as a result, and nothing new is told about it. . . Unlike most popularizers of science, Dr. Sokoloff has carefully documented his book and supplied it not only with a good bibliography of technical literature on the various subjects that he discusses but also with an analytic index that ought to be a help to the reader who wants to get a special piece of information quickly." Waldemar Kaempffert

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:30 S 24 '49 450w
Survey 86:46 Ja '50 40w

SOMERVILLE, JOHN. Philosophy of peace. 264p $3 Gaer
341 Peace. Ideology. World politics 49-8943

"'A layman's guide to the conflict of ideologies and the prevention of war in this atomic age,' by 'a plain American scholar,' which soon resolves itself into a moderate but quite thorough-going apologia for Soviet Russia, whose policy 'is exactly the opposite of the Nazi-Fascist Democracy.' Since the death of Roosevelt, Prof. Somerville believes, U.S. foreign policy has been 'to find excuses for Fascism and to get tough with Russia.' He deplores this." Library J

Christian Science Monitor p16 Jl 14 '49 650w
Reviewed by E. F. Walbridge
Library J 74:661 Ap 15 '49 130w

"Dr. Somerville is quite wrong in assuming that in arguing for the Soviet Union's peaceable intentions, he faces an uphill struggle. On the contrary, people are still more than ready to be persuaded that such intentions are there. The trouble is that Dr. Somerville's case is so weak, as he presents it, that his book is more likely to fortify than to weaken the beliefs that he is endeavoring to combat." Max Beloff
— N Y Times p6 Je 26 '49 1050w

"The book will either be conspicuously ignored or violently denounced. A better approach would be to judge it for what it is: the work of a professor of philosophy who has gotten rather badly mixed up in the fields of politics and international affairs." August Heckscher
Sat R of Lit 32:14 Je 18 '49 750w
Reviewed by C. S. Ascher
Survey 86:43 Ja '50 600w

SOMERVILLE, JOHN ALEXANDER. Man of color, an autobiography; a factual report on the status of the American Negro today. 170p $3.25 L. L. Morrison, 1915 S. Western av, Los Angeles 7
B or 92

"A Jamaican man of color describes the difficulty he had in becoming accustomed to the idea of racial segregation for which he was completely unprepared when he arrived in San Francisco at the age of nineteen. This autobiography tells the pleasant story of Dr. Somerville's boyhood, of his successful efforts to get a college education that would make him financially independent of employers, and of his attempts to help overcome the inequalities between white and colored men." Booklist

Booklist 45:375 Jl 1 '49

"It is a simple book, notable more for its hints of pathos and tragedy than for its literary excellence. . . Dr. Somerville's book is still another call to all Americans to put into practice a better sense of race relations, based on the oneness of all humanity." DeWitt John
Christian Science Monitor p18 S 16 '49 600w

SOPER, EILEEN ALICE. Dormouse awake; il. by [the author]. 33p $2 Macmillan 49-8561

A picture-book that tells what the dormouse found at the foot of the rainbow.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 25:210 My '49 60w

"Story is simple, with a surprise ending; Wind-in-the-Willows atmosphere. . . Recommended, as is, for home libraries and prebound for primary classrooms and public library picture-book shelves. Not a must, but an attractive addition." S. J. Johnson
Library J 74:827 My 15 '49 70w

"Readers of 4-8 will delight in the story, and adults reading to the youngsters will enjoy its wider implications. Captivating illustrations mirror the freshness and color of the English countryside." H. K. Lippmann
+ N Y Times p19 Jl 31 '49 180w

SOPHOCLES. Oedipus rex; an English version by Dudley Fitts and Robert Fitzgerald. 109p $2.50 Harcourt
882.2 49-11321

A new translation of the Oedipus Rex by two American poets. They use for the most part pentameter blank verse of variable feet.

Booklist 46:121 D 1 '49

"A smooth flowing 'Oedipus Rex.' Its smoothness derives from its normal oral word order, and not from any slavishness to meter." L. T. Heron
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p5 N 20 '49 60w
Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 169:601 D 17 '49 140w

"We cannot yet expect complete success. The Fitts-Fitzgerald version flows strongly, but has some sinister mistakes in it, particularly in the choruses. This is too dangerous, for producers are now making the choruses audible. . . Still, this translation deserves both emulation and praise." Gilbert Highet
+ — N Y Times p29 O 30 '49 250w
Reviewed by T. H. Ferril
San Francisco Chronicle p25 Ja 8 '50 20w

SORENSEN, MRS VIRGINIA (EGGERSTEN). The evening and the morning. 341p $3 Harcourt 49-8515

After a long absence from the little Utah town where she had spent her earlier years, Kate Alexander returned to visit her daughter and her grandchildren. A vindictive old woman betrays Kate's secret, that Kate's daughter was the child of her lover. As Kate dreams over the days of her youth, bringing things up to date, she finds that her revealed secret is a help, rather than a hindrance.

Booklist 45:234; 296 Mr 15 '49; My 1 '49

"Except for an occasional lapse, such as making Kate too oratorical, the narrative, moving forward by indirection, insinuates into the reader's consciousness the deep and interlocking complexities of its background and characters, and the grave beauty with which they are unfolded."
+ — Christian Science Monitor p15 My 12 '49 240w
Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '49

"The story is valuable perhaps primarily as a study of a way of life, written by someone who has been on the inside, and specifically of what that inheritance of traditional mores can mean to a woman's growth. The relationship of mother to daughter and to granddaughter is interestingly handled, though Kate's long periods of introspection slow the pace of the story."
+ — Kirkus 17:119 Mr 1 '49 200w

"All of the characters in 'The Evening and the Morning' live with the vitality and realness of any one's next-door neighbors in any American small town. The superficial customs of a Mormon community may differ from those of many towns, but the underlying pattern is universal, and has been wonderfully caught by Virginia Sorensen's thoughtful and loving narrative style." Blythe Morley
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ap 24 '49 700w
Reviewed by Ruth Page
+ N Y Times p30 Ap 24 '49 270w

SORENSON, V. E.—Continued

"Mrs. Sorensen's interworking of reminiscence and contemporary domestic detail is painstaking, but it keeps her narrative down to a crawl."

New Yorker 25:108 Ap 30 '49 110w

Reviewed by Anne Comfort

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 8 '49 900w

"A fine and in every way distinguished work, as satisfying a novel as I have read in several years, and one which abundantly realizes every promise of Virginia Sorensen's first three novels." D. L. Morgan

+ Sat R of Lit 32:13 Ap 23 '49 750w

Reviewed by A. L. Zinsser

Springf'd Republican p4D My 29 '49 240w

SOROKIN, PITIRIM ALEKSANDROVICH. Reconstruction of humanity. 247p $3 Beacon press

301 Sociology. Culture. Personality 48-6371

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

Foreign Affairs 27:332 Ja '49 50w

Reviewed by Lewis Mumford

J Religion 29:301 O '49 1200w

"The curious emptiness of the book can be understood only if the book itself is viewed as a prospectus—an account of the chief features of Professor Sorokin's forthcoming work, circulated for the purpose of obtaining financial support. That the book is in fact a prospectus can be readily shewn. . . We may ask whether Professor Sorokin's altruistic, ideational order, as it might actually be realized, would in fact be more peaceable than the present order. . . Altruism is not synonymous with good nature. Professor Sorokin's own attitude—the ease with which he denounces scientists as murderers and evildoers, the complacency with which he contemplates the expropriation and even the assassination of the 'rich men' who might oppose his schemes—is a proof that men are not always content with the generosity of offering good bargains, but, when they are refused, are apt to become choleric." Lucius Wilmerding

Pol Sci Q 64:116 Mr '49 1250w

"With much of the author's reasoning the reader may be inclined to agree. He will, however, be tempted to ask how the betterment of man can best be effected. Here occurs the surprising spectacle of a social engineer delivering a Sermon on the Mount. . . Although Dr. Sorokin so ambitiously proposes to make yogis of us all, his claims for his book are modest. It is, he says, only a nontechnical tentative outline of a field in which research is just beginning."

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:359 S '48 350w

SOULE, GEORGE HENRY. Introduction to economic sciences. 154p $2.50 Viking

330 Economics 48-10337

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"This book succeeds on the descriptive side but falls short of the mark in its analytical efforts. The reader learns a great many interesting facts and figures but is given inadequate guidance in utilizing them. In view of the title, it is also necessary to add that this book does not provide an adequate introduction to either the scope or method of modern economics. It does, however, raise or rather provoke some important questions of analysis. . . Several of the chapters are well worth reading. The book as a whole cannot, however, be recommended as an introduction to a college course in economics." H. M. Somers

— + Am Econ R 39:982 S '49 2500w

Reviewed by W. F. Ogburn

Am J Soc 55:114 Jl '49 230w

"Polemics apart, leading facts and aspects of our national income are interestingly presented. As is to be expected, the style of writing is rapid, vivacious, and simple. Yet it attains a clarity which often turns out to be more apparent than real. . . The value of the book to beginners and general readers is impaired by gaseous ignoratio elenchi directed at 'the economic fundamentalist.'. . In order to condition the reader for 'planned economy,' it should not be necessary to promote misimpressions about what economists now teach or what the classical school taught." Bruce Knight

— + Ann Am Acad 262:222 Mr '49 440w

Reviewed by W. T. Easterbrook

Canadian Forum 29:20 Ap '49 290w

Social Studies 40:288 O '49 20w

"Although Soule's book may be highly recommended for its exposition of the theory of employment, it is not a complete 'introduction to economic science' because it does not contain any analysis of the price system. . . There is no doubt, however, that the ground Soule does cover must be understood by our citizens if our democracy is to deal successfully with the complex economic problems that confront it." I. B. Kravis

+ — Springf'd Republican p10B F 13 '49 300w

"Fresh in approach and generally persuasive, Introduction to Economic Science should prove stimulating and illuminating to scholars as well as laymen in its field."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:63 Mr '49 260w

SOWERS, MRS PHYLLIS (AYER). Elephant boy of the teak forest [il. by Margaret Ayer]. 169p $2.50 Messner

Children in Siam 49-10658

A story of Siam for younger boys and girls. Its hero is Prad who with his father worked with the elephants in the teakwood forests, getting out the teakwood logs. Glossary.

Booklist 46:70 O 15 '49

"In such a story there is room for much interesting information about the unusual life of a strange land of temples and plantations, which yet holds people who have much in common with ourselves. Margaret Ayer's drawings add to the story's reality." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 25:532 N '49 120w

Kirkus 17:360 Jl 15 '49 90w

"A good purchase for fifth-graders." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 74:1828 D 1 '49 80w

"It is far from being 'another Kim' as the jacket claims, but boys and girls of ten to twelve will enjoy it as an introduction to Siam." L. S. Bechtel

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p16 N 27 '49 190w

"The background of the story has vitality, but the book suffers from the weakness common to so many tales about foreign countries. The background is actually stronger than the story, and the latter seems contrived only to bring out the customs of the country." Phyllis Fenner

N Y Times p18 Ja 22 '50 150w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis

Sat R of Lit 32:46 N 12 '49 40w

SPALDING, WILLARD B. and MONTAGUE, JOHN R. Alcohol and human affairs; with an appendix on tobacco and narcotics. 248p il $1.64 World bk.

613.81 Alcohol—Physiological effect 49-9238

"Excessive drinking of alcoholic beverages is a source of so much physical and mental illness that it has been called America's Number 4 public-health problem. The aim of this book is to present factual information drawn from numerous reliable sources." (School & Society) The senior author is dean of the College of education at the University of Illinois; the junior author is a physician and member of the educational advisory committee of the Oregon state liquor commission. The book is intended for teen age students. Brief bibliography.

"In their presentation the authors help to perpetuate the stereotypes traditionally put forth by vested interests groups engaged in the prohibition argument. Against these limitations the authors take a foreward looking attitude toward the modern medical treatment of the alcoholic, describing various forms of therapy, the Alcoholics Anonymous program, and the growing interests on the part of state and local governments to set up adequate treatment facilities." Joseph Hirsh

+ — Am J Pub Health 39:1192 S '49 370w

"There is no better time for a citizen to give to this program the attention it merits than while he is still at school."

+ School & Society 69:342 My 7 '49 60w

"Considering the paucity of scientific writing on alcohol available at the high-school level and the universality and acuteness of the educational problem in this area of teaching, Alcohol and Human Affairs fills a dire need. The school board which hesitates to approve this textbook for use in the schools will be guilty of serious evasion of its responsibility and, perhaps, an even more serious bias in its thinking. Those persons who have faith in bibliotherapy may also find this book a valuable item to pass along to their adult friends whose drinking habits or opinions they would like to modify." W. C. Kvaraceus

+ School R 57:574 D '49 1350w

SPANN, JOHN RICHARD, ed. Christian faith and secularism. 296p $2.50; pa $1.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

211 Christianity. Secularism 48-10655

A symposium composed of twenty-two essays in which different contributors study the ills of present-day society. "Part I defines secularism as an evasive, often unconscious, philosophy which does not deny but ignores the presence and ethical influence of a living God. Secularism depends upon education, science, personal aggressiveness, and organized power, while ignoring the spiritual and ethical forces of Jesus Christ. Part II discusses some of the influences of secularism upon the creative forces of our contemporary culture. Part III is a study of its impact upon political life, and Part IV evaluates the effects of secularism upon some of our economic and social issues. The last, and largest, part of the volume presents the importance of 'Christianity's Witness in a Secular World.'" (Foreword) Biographical notes on contributors. No index.

"Meeting the problem which most concerns religious men today, it is pertinent, thorough and penetrating." J. H. Titus

+ Churchman 163:17 F 15 '49 170w

"This book is certainly interesting. It will afford every reader new points of view. The contributors are eminent and competent." W. K. Wright

+ Crozer Q 26:75 Ja '49 800w

"Preachers and lecturers, dealing with contemporary problems will find much ammunition and illustrative material in this book."

+ Kirkus 16:505 O 1 '48 190w

SPEARS, HAROLD. Some principles of teaching; il. by the author. 147p pa $1.65; to schools $1.25 Prentice-Hall

371.3 Teaching 49-8537

"Attempts to . . . review some of the leading principles that have stood out as beacons to teachers and administrators. The author presents eighty-nine principles or guiding rules for effective teaching. A discussion of its significance and implications follows the statement of each principle. It must be pointed out, however, that Spears does not claim to have originated the rules, merely to have selected them 'from the tongues and actions of teachers as they ply their trade day in and day out in classrooms all over America.'" School R

"This small handbook should find its way into faculty meetings, administrative conferences, campus classrooms, and pockets of individual teachers to help stimulate a continuous search for better schools. The drawings by the author are very amusing."

+ School & Society 70:96 Ag 6 '49 50w

"Throughout the book the wide experience and understanding of the author reveals itself. . . The author recommends the book for use by the teacher in training, the experienced teacher in service, and graduate students. The volume can serve as a handbook for faculty meetings, administrative conferences, curriculum workshops, and committee meetings, and for the use of individual teachers." J. J. Valenti

+ School R 54:449 O '49 800w

SPECTOR, IVAR. Introduction to Russian history and culture. 454p il maps $6; college ed $4.50 Van Nostrand

947 Russia—History. Russia—Civilization 49-11108

"Dr. Spector traces main currents of Russian history from the beginning of the Rurik Dynasty, 862 A.D., to the present. Because current events and culture in Russia are so closely interwoven, the author explains he has emphasized not only the formal history but the cultural background of the people. The book has two parts, with 1917 as the dividing line. It includes maps, illustrations, bibliography and index, and the USSR Constitution as amended February 25, 1947." San Francisco Chronicle

Reviewed by L. T. Heron

Chicago Sunday Tribune p6 N 20 '49 50w

Current Hist 17:354 D '49 50w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 N 27 '49 120w

SPELLMAN, HOWARD HILTON. Corporate secretary's manual and guide. See Doris, L., and Friedman, E. J.

SPENCE, HARTZELL. Happily ever after; drawings by Dean Fausett. (Whittlesey House publication) 259p $3 McGraw

B or 92 Country life 49-10961

"How the author and his wife struggle with barren acres, countless repairs and a procession of hired helpers to make a home out of a huge, dilapidated, Virginia estate is recounted in breezy style and with pleasant musings on the joys of country living." (Bookmark) For earlier works see One Foot in Heaven, and Get Thee Behind Me (Book Review Digest 1940, 1942).

Booklist 46:79 N 1 '49

Bookmark 9:28 N '49 50w

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks

Chicago Sun p9X D 18 '49 160w

Christian Science Monitor p11 D 22 '49 200w

"An impressive report on all too human problems, this has a large audience for its history of mishaps, mischances and eventual happiness."

+ Kirkus 17:414 Ag 1 '49 190w

Reviewed by George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 16 '49 320w

"'Happily Ever After' adds up to pleasant enough light reading, seasoned freely with mildly amusing humor and frequent anecdote, but it is in no sense a memorable book." A. C. Gordon

+ N Y Times p16 N 20 '49 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 N 6 '49 250w

"Mr. Spence has made of their tribulations a humorous story which nevertheless carries his audience through every heart-breaking episode." J. F. S.

+ Springf'd Republican p8C N 13 '49 190w

"Good reading."

+ Wis Lib Bul p7 N '49

SPENCER, CORNELIA, pseud. See Yaukey, G. S.

SPENCER, THEODORE. Acre in the seed. 68p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

811 49-10866

A collection of very short poems subtitled Sestets for a summer. The book was ready for the printer only a few days before Professor Spencer's death.

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun p53 D 5 '49 80w

"His generous spirit and stimulating wit are living qualities in this series of highly concentrated sestets which Untermeyer has called 'thumbnail epics.' Coming upon this form of verse near the end of his life he has clearly found delight in exploring the wide reaches of freedom that are possible within its narrow confines."
+ Library J 74:1327 S 15 '49 70w

Reviewed by Ruth Lechlitner
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 D 11 '49 360w

"In a period when the poetic fashion both in technique and topic combine to make the besetting temptation of the contemporary poet one of trying to write more profusely and completely than his actual vision justifies, one welcomes a poet who has the strength of character to resist and to risk a charge of triviality rather than face an inner conviction of dishonesty; indeed, 'An Acre in the Seed' has better right to be called 'experimental' than many a more spectacular work; over and above their intrinsic worth, these sestets should suggest possibilities to other poets which they have not found hinted at in the recent past elsewhere." W. H. Auden
+ N Y Times p7 O 9 '49 900w

"Professor Spencer, just before his recent, untimely death, hit upon a six-line stanza which he varied delightfully and which proved a versatile carrier of his wit and perception. The 'sestets' in this volume set one another off well and are often far more serious than they seem."
+ New Yorker 25:130 D 17 '49 50w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch
+ Yale R n s 39:364 winter '50 280w

SPENDER, STEPHEN. Edge of being; poems. 57p $2.75 Random house

821 49-8835

A new volume by a contemporary English poet, for some years a resident of the United States. The volume includes the poem: Returning to Vienna, 1947, previously published, as well as others which first appeared in English and American magazines.

Booklist 45:352 Je 15 '49

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '49

"Deeply affected by the war and its aftermath, Spender appears in this latest volume as a changed poet. Something has been lost, something gained. The purely lyrical mellifluousness is not what it was; but the poems show a bony structure, a skeleton as it were, and the germs of metaphysical thinking that were almost entirely lacking in the earlier work. Perhaps even more interesting than the deepening and hardening of Spender's gift is the almost miraculous manner in which he has caught the sense of speed and dispersal, the centrifugal force of this period."
+ — Kirkus 17:196 Ap 1 '49 190w

"There will be no unanimity of opinion on what advance or retrogression his latest book exhibits. To me it is a high spot in his career, marked especially by such poems as 'Returning to Vienna, 1947', and 'Time in our Time.'" Gerald McDonald
+ Library J 74:958 Je 15 '49 70w

Manchester Guardian p4 D 16 '49 550w

Reviewed by Rolfe Humphries
Nation 169:44 Jl 9 '49 70w

"The Edge of Being is full of anxious rhetoric and uncertainty of vision. There are always nice lines and passages in Spender, and in this book there are some of a certain strength, as if the iron had entered in; but the lyric style that went to pieces ten or more years ago has not by brave efforts been reconstituted." Robert Fitzgerald
— + New Repub 121:18 Ag 8 '49 60w

"Though this volume contains no startlingly magnificent poems, it does contain a handful of impressive lyrics which show that Spender is still seriously concerned with the improvement of his poetic craftsmanship." David Daiches
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Je 26 '49 750w

"There are many moving passages, particularly in his poems on the London bombings. And yet the book is a great disappointment. What is most disappointing about it is that a poet who has seemed on the edge of becoming himself—Stephen Spender—is still the member of a 'school.'" Lloyd Frankenberg
— + N Y Times p4 My 15 '49 900w

"The nearer Mr. Spender allows himself to approach simplicity and actuality, the better he is. His tendency toward the large subject, the magniloquent line, and the baroque point of view often throws his music, as well as his thought, out of gear."
New Yorker 25:103 Je 11 '49 60w

"Mr. Spender may be in a minor phase, but it is that of a major poet. If he perseveres in the directions of precision in subjects and of rigor in form, I can see no reason why he must remain, as he is nowadays, most moving when confessing failure to keep pace with the violent pressure of creative and uncreative times." Frank Jones
+ Poetry 74:348 S '49 1400w

"One cannot be indifferent to the emotion that informs his poems on the Battle of London, in which he was a civilian participant. But an effort to approximate the poet with the average man, like 'The Conscript,' does not come off; it is defeated by its own sensitivity; the identification is impossible. But other poems in 'The Edge of Being' are better." G. P. Meyer
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:19 Je 4 '49 400w

Reviewed by Barbara Cooper
Spec 183:898 D 23 '49 450w

Times [London] Lit Sup p826 D 16 '49 900w

SPER, FELIX. From native roots; a panorama of our regional drama. 341p il $4 Caxton printers

812.08 American drama. Folk drama 49-1009

"Felix Sper has performed, in this book, a trying task: the analyzing and codifying of American regional drama. . . What [he] has done is to discuss the plays in terms of their regions. Thus, there are plays about the men and women of the plains and prairies, the mountain folk of Kentucky and Tennessee, the hill folk of the Ozarks, the plain people of Pennsylvania, the Creoles and the Cajuns. . . Dr. Sper works on the theory that 'the seeds of a native or regional drama have been dormant in the American soil for more than a century. What prevented its emergence was the lack of a sense of place.'" N Y Times

"A sketchy and far from definitive study that will interest regional lore addicts more than dramatists."
Kirkus 16:566 O 15 '48 130w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Jl 17 '49 450w

Reviewed by E. J. R. Isaacs
N Y Times p25 Mr 13 '49 320w

School & Society 69:303 Ap 23 '49 50w

SPERO, STERLING DENHARD. Government as employer. (Remsen press publication) 497p $5.65 Chemical pub. co.

351.1 Civil service—U.S. Trade unions—U.S. 48-10699

"Study of the history and present state of labor relations in the public services. Includes an analysis of the legal rights of public employees, an account of the rise of trade unionism in the various branches of the service, a history of the teachers' unions, and a description of present labor policies in federal, state, and municipal governments." Nation

"The book is packed full of interesting and useful information. The reader will find abundant material on such diversified topics as the Lloyd-La Follette Act of 1912 ('the most important single piece of legislation on the books affecting the rights of federal employees'), the Boston police strike and its nationwide effects, the Tennessee Valley Authority's agreements with its employees, Postmaster-General Burleson's attacks on unions, loyalty investigations, and the present numerical strength of government unions. . . Never before has the general subject of this book been so fully and well covered." M. N. McGeary
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:145 F '49 500w

Reviewed by J. M. Ray
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:828 Ag '49 750w

"The author, though obviously sympathetic toward the organization of public employees, presents a well-balanced treatment of his subject. . . Noticeably lacking in the book is any substantial treatment of or reasoned conclusions concerning the impact and significance of the civil service system in relation to unionism and union activities in the public service. . . This latest of Dr. Spero's contributions on the subject of the organization of government employees will be welcomed by all who are in any way concerned with the problems with which he deals." L. M. Short
+ Ann Am Acad 263:252 My '49 360w

"Despite the scope of his task, Spero has produced a book which is sound in its viewpoint and accurate in its presentation. When added to his earlier writings, this book furnishes an excellent picture of trade-unionism in the public services." Taylor Cole
+ J Pol Econ 57:364 Ag '49 650w

"A detailed and valuable study."
+ Nation 168:137 Ja 29 '49 70w

Reviewed by Louis Stark
N Y Times p16 Ap 10 '49 700w

"Dr. Spero's book represents an important contribution to the understanding of a difficult field in labor relations." Philip Taft
+ Pol Sci Q 64:440 S '49 750w

SPERRY, ARMSTRONG. Black falcon; il. by [the author]. 218p $2.50 Winston 49-11410

The story of a young American, Wade Thayer, in the War of 1812, and in the battle for New Orleans. Jean Lafitte's part in the battle is part of the story.

Booklist 46:130 D 1 '49

Reviewed by Polly Goodwin
Chicago Sunday Tribune p14 N 6 '49 250w

"A magnificent, jingling, swashbuckling yarn that will grip the attention of practically any reader from twelve up."
+ Kirkus 17:513 S 15 '49 120w

Reviewed by Esther Gorey
Library J 74:1548 O 15 '49 50w

"A touch of love at the beginning and end will please the girls. Recommended." C. W. Field
+ Library J 75:113 Ja 15 '50 70w

"Boys will surely like Mr. Sperry's drawing of the character of 'The Black Falcon,' as pirate and would-be patriot. They will find the blow by blow description of the Battle of New Orleans interesting and thrilling; Andrew Jackson becomes a great hero as he leads his strange lot of insufficient troops in a gallant fight for the new republic." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 13 '49 230w

"Mr. Sperry writes as beautifully as he illustrates. This is an exciting junior novel." Howard Pease
+ N Y Times p42 D 4 '49 110w

"The battle scenes are dramatic and convincing." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:30 N 12 '49 30w

SPERRY, WILLARD LEAROYD. Jesus then and now; thoughts on the continuity and survival of the Christian religion. 224p $2.50 Harper

270.1 Church history—Primitive and early church. Christianity 49-9936

"The author, dean of the Harvard Divinity School, in four lectures delivered to students reviews the early history of Christianity, explaining why it took root and spread so rapidly during the first three centuries. He discusses the tendency of believers of all times to transform the historical Jesus to a 'Christ of the Creeds.' Two chapters of reflections on present trends in theology complete the book. Deploring the anti-intellectualism of neo-orthodoxy, its stress on the worthlessness and helplessness of man, Dr. Sperry makes clear his own belief in the efficacy of mental and moral effort." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 46:90 N 15 '49

"The book represents a rich and seasoned vindication of the liberal tradition with respect both to Jesus and to the church, but also betrays areas where the conversation with neo-orthodoxy can be fruitful for both sides." A. N. Wilder
+ Christian Century 66:1041 S 7 '49 1250w

"This is a great little book. It deserves to be read and reread. In fact it must be reread if the reader is to realize the values of the book for an approximation of their worth. At the first reading one is impressed by the magnitude of the issues presented, by the vast range of the author's thought through main phases of human religious and intellectual experience, and by his inerrant sense for the meaningful association of related ideas. His exceptional command of memorable literary formulations of significant points of view, in both poetry and prose, is obvious from the very first. Thereafter the author deserves a thoughtful rereading to enable one to follow intimately the steady progression of his line of reasoning." H. R. Willoughby
+ Crozer Q 27:54 Ja '50 1100w
Kirkus 17:296 Je 15 '49 110w

SPICER, BART. Dark light. 244p $2.50 Dodd
49-10610

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun S 9 '49 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 S 18 '49 160w

"The qualities of warmth and humanity in this first mystery novel are so appealing that one finds especially unfortunate the author's intrusive imitation of the more routine tough stuff, among these a foolish amorous sub-plot and a clumsy over-long dénouement in which a confession is extorted by pure brute violence. Mr. Spicer is too able and understanding a writer to become just another hard-boiled cliché monger." Anthony Boucher
+ — N Y Times p25 S 25 '49 180w

"A first mystery cast in the familiar hard-boiled mold but handled with unusual care and discernment."
New Yorker 25:111 S 10 '49 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p33 O 16 '49 120w

"Current 'Red Badge' prize winner up to snuff in action, characters, background, and writing—although plot is not entirely opaque."
Sat R of Lit 32:37 S 17 '49 40w

SPICER, DOROTHY GLADYS. From an English oven. 123p il $3 Womans press

641.631 Cookery. Baking 48-11230

"Cakes, buns and breads of county tradition, with legends and festivities associated with their origins and use." (Subtitle) Some of the material has appeared in the American home and The Cracker baker. Selected bibliography. Indexes.

SPICER, D. G.—Continued

"The book has literary style (which most cookbooks lack); it has human interest; it gives recipes which have names that are familiar to all readers of English fiction." F. L. Harris

+ J Home Econ 41:329 Je '49 270w

"Miss Spicer has not delved as deeply as one might wish into the origins of such things as Yorkshire parkins, Palm Sunday pies, and wakes cakes, but she is informative in a chatty way that should give pleasure even to those not venturesome enough to try out the ancient recipes."

New Yorker 25:99 F 26 '49 100w

"Anyone who delights in giving her family and friends culinary surprises will welcome 'From An English Oven.'" S. M. Neal

+ Springf'd Republican p7B Ja 2 '49 360w

SPIEGEL, HENRY WILLIAM. Brazilian economy; chronic inflation and sporadic industrialization. 246p $4.50 Blakiston

330.981 Brazil—Economic conditions 49-352

"New book on the Brazilian economy. . . The author has drawn heavily upon works in Portuguese not available generally to readers in this country. Although attention centers upon an analysis of the economy and its development, the reader is made aware, particularly in the Introduction and in Part II, dealing with population and labor, that the social and political problems are closely interwoven with the economic. Part I deals with income, prices, and finance; while foreign trade and investment, agricultural problems, and industrial development are treated in other broad divisions of the study." J Pol Econ

"This is a very valuable contribution to the growing literature on the economic problems of the other American republics. . . With regard to most subjects with which the author deals, the statistical material is very sketchy. Dr. Spiegel does a valuable job in trying to assess the value of the available data, and to use them to get a general picture of the economy of the nation. . . This volume is a trail blazer in its field. It is a very readable and very useful work not only for those particularly interested in Latin American affairs, but for anyone who is interested in the basic problem of the development of 'backward' countries." R. J. Alexander

+ Am Econ R 39:765 Je '49 1150w

Foreign Affairs 27:695 Jl '49 10w

"Like all investigators of Latin-American problems, the author has struggled against the inadequacy of reliable statistics. He has succeeded, nevertheless, in assembling from governmental, private, and quasi-governmental sources much statistical data bearing on the economy. He has estimated national income and federal, state, and municipal revenues and has used these and other estimates judiciously. . . Works like this will help drive home to American economists the complex nature of the economic and social problems in an area whose economies we frequently consider to be at a relatively simple stage in their evolution." W. H. Delaplane

+ J Pol Econ 57:358 Ag '49 850w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:199 Je '49 320w

SPILLER, ROBERT ERNEST, and others, eds. Literary history of the United States. 3v v 1 and v2, 1422p; v3 (bibliography) 817p $20 Macmillan

810.9 American literature—History and criticism 48-11370

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"Though it must be assumed that the critical evaluations represent some degree of consensus, or at least that every contribution had to run the gauntlet of criticism by the whole staff, nevertheless the chapters generally have the flavor of vigorous independent expressions of their authors' views with no flattening out or watering down. Wecter on Mark Twain is a good example. . . But the treatment of specifically religious data in this survey does not seem to me to be on the same high level of competence with the rest of it. . . There is room for someone to write a corresponding 'Literary History of Religion in the United States.'" W. E. Garrison

+ — Christian Century 66:207 F 16 '49 1400w

"In a book such as this the contributors are at their most serious and judicious, and the result is that there is less humor in this account of American literature than the subject merits, less of the sap that runs in its tree." Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p11 F 3 '49 1400w

"The Literary History of the United States should be accepted exactly as the editors and contributors present it, as a redefinition. In many cases, what is said is not new, but a reiteration; but in no way is this a condemnation, since history has established the need of frequent restatement." E. A. Cooper

Commonweal 49:453 F 11 '49 850w

Reviewed by Marcus Cunliffe

School & Society 70:57 Jl 23 '49 1450w

"Some readers may be slightly displeased with the book for at times recording the literary past in a tone which, entirely without the editors' intention, suggests that the final value judgment has now been made. The volumes will probably be most used as a reference work, and the index to the two volumes of literary history makes such reference use easy. No matter how readers may feel about lengthy literary histories in general and about some individual parts of this one, all will agree that no reader interested in American life and letters, and no library whatever, can afford to be without these three volumes."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 5:19 Mr '49 750w

"The new work is the result of careful planning, and it is in nearly every respect far better than the 'Cambridge History.'. . It is a book for which every serious student must be profoundly grateful; but it is not a definitive literary history, and he who uses it should know its weaknesses as well as its strength." J. B. Hubbell

+ — Yale R n s 38:558 spring '49 1600w

SPITZ, DAVID. Patterns of anti-democratic thought. 304p $4.50 Macmillan

321.6 Democracy. Authority. Political science 49-8944

"David Spitz, of the political science department of Ohio State University . . . examines the various assumptions held by critics and deriders of democracy, with particular emphasis on recent American thinkers." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) He "breaks down anti-democratic theory into two categories: those claiming democracy to be (1) impossible, or (2) undesirable. Treated as typical of (1) are: Burnham's organizational theory and Lawrence Dennis' power theory. In (2) are considered: Cram's concept of the 'best', Grant's Nordic superiority (racial), E. M. Sait's biological aristocracy, the 'natural aristocracy' of Santayana and Monsignor Sheen, the restrictive authoritarianism of Irving Babbitt, and hosts of others, including W. Lippmann. Each argument [is] analysed and refuted." (Library J) Bibliographical notes. Index.

"A calm, thorough, reasoned discussion of the major types of anti-democratic thought, and of their inadequacies and excesses. Mr. Spitz uses chiefly modern American thinkers for analysis and illustration, though he does not use them to urge that our system of government is endangered, or that totalitarianism is imminent." T. I. Cook

+ Am Pol Sci R 43:1271 D '49 850w

"One wonders, among other things, why, in this connection, the use of John Dewey's seminal defense of the democratic idea and the discussion of clericalist perversions of it should be so limited. However, by bringing proposed alternatives to democracy to the question of logic and of fact, Mr. Spitz has rendered the democratic cause a service which teachers of political science could well emulate." H. M. Kallen

+ — Ann Am Acad 265:219 S '49 500w

Booklist 45:328 Je 1 '49

Reviewed by R. D. MacCann
Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 28 '49 950w

Foreign Affairs 28:162 O '49 40w

"The analysis here is both painstaking and profound, and the book, if largely limited to students of political theory, is a rewarding one."
+ Kirkus 17:131 Mr 1 '49 120w

"A keen analysis and scholarly criticism. . . An important defense of democratic philosophy." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 74:376 Mr 1 '49 140w

Reviewed by Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.
Nation 169:141 Ag 6 '49 200w

"Though this book makes no new contribution to democratic theory, it marshals the evidence in as able a defense of it as has appeared in a long time." George Soule
+ New Repub 121:25 Ag 1 '49 850w

"This is a scholarly and important book. It is an incisive analysis of anti-democratic political philosophies, as developed by their American exponents. Dr. Spitz brings out clearly the common link between writers as varied as Burnham, Santayana and Irving Babbitt: all of them assume political behaviour to be governed by iron laws far more rigid than those of the most vulgar Marxist. . . One does not have to accept the reactionary view that these faults make democracy unworkable or intolerable to know that they are faults. If Dr. Spitz had not had to make his case for democracy by indirection, in a running commentary upon its critics, he might have laid more stress on these faults and their possible cures. All the same, his book makes a real contribution to political analysis."
+ — New Statesman & Nation 38:596 N 19 '49 270w

"Mr. Spitz writes with detachment and analytical skill, knowing that the best way to indicate democracy is not by throwing brickbats but by answering logic with logic. . . The analytical approach leads the author into the establishment of categories which sometimes overlap and which might be disputed; it compels him, moreover, to deal with individuals apart from their backgrounds and often without reference to the totality of their thought. Thus, beside such admitted exponents of the anti-democratic cause as Lawrence Dennis and James Burnham appears George Santayana, whose philosophy as a whole can hardly be taken as inimical to the free society as we know it." August Heckscher
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 My 29 '49 550w

"Dr. Spitz's scholarly study, closely argued and highly readable, will be found helpful in clearing up some of the misunderstandings beclouding and confusing the American democratic scene." Hans Kohn
+ N Y Times p44 Je 19 '49 650w

"A useful book, and a unique one."
+ New Yorker 25:67 Jl 9 '49 190w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Je 5 '49 150w

"The book is concerned with ultimate principles of political and social life; the analysis is painstaking, honest, and logical. The book makes its appeal directly to the mind and only indirectly to the heart or will. It will outlive the tracts for the times that make the big noise of empty barrels." M. R. Konvitz
+ Sat R of Lit 32:13 Jl 16 '49 600w

Reviewed by Hugh Wilson
Survey 85:449 Ag '49 700w

SPONG, RICHARD MILLER. See if he wins. 273p $3 Sloane
49-11514

Novel of the war-time black market in Paris in 1944. Tom Sword, an American corporal AWOL, gets caught up in the black market operations and falls in love with a French girl. Gradually he gets in so deep that he cannot pull out, and eventually he is caught.

"Richard Spong, assistant professor of journalism at Michigan State College, is a new and promising young writer. He spent two and a half years in a tank destroyer battalion and six months in Counter Intelligence. He knows his brass hats and his black markets and he knows how to write. Except for a momentary lag—a much-peopled description of Tom's college life of love and liquor (always liquor)—the intriguing story moves swiftly toward pending disaster with mounting suspense and excitement." E. B. Thompson
+ Chicago Sun p74 D 14 '49 450w

"Public libraries may not approve."
Kirkus 17:332 Jl 1 '49 160w

"Plenty of depth and feeling here and considerable writing know-how, but plot and language will not be comfortable for many readers. Still recommended." R. E. Kingery
+ — Library J 74:1096 Ag '49 70w

"A competent, often graphic, first novel. . . The story is good in detail, but weak in structure, and too ambitious." J. F.
+ — New Repub 121:36 N 14 '49 100w

"A first novel which is at once somber and exciting. . . As a story of suspense, 'See If He Wins' never lets up, for Mr. Spong knows how to pile one situation on another until their sheer weight brings on the inevitable catastrophe. Whether it involves a hold-up in a Paris alley, an illicit attempt to deliver contraband cognac to a distrustful customer, or a deal to get Army gasoline with doctored-up papers, 'See If He Wins' has the acceleration of a swift-moving detective story." Herbert Kupferberg
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 N 13 '49 550w

"Since books almost as flimsy as this one have enjoyed popular and critical favor, Mr. Spong is entitled to expect readers. But the generation whose views he presumes to share should be wary of his idea that only acceptance matters, or that the mark of acceptance is anguish. It is a piece of ritualistic nonsense that seems to me to make a disaster out of a novel that is otherwise merely unsuccessful." Eric Larrabee
— N Y Times p48 N 20 '49 400w

New Yorker 25:162 N 19 '49 100w

"It is unfortunate that the book has had to be entirely focused about Tom, who is consistently out of place in the situations the author has chosen for him. This flaw seriously disturbs what might otherwise have been a realistic picture of one segment of GI life in Paris during the latter phases of the war, for, beyond this, Mr. Spong has written for his first novel with considerable sharpness and verve." Hollis Alpert
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:16 D 10 '49 800w

Springf'd Republican p3D Ja 22 '50 150w

SPOOKS and spirits, and shadowy shapes; il. by Robert L. Doremus. 167p $2 Aladdin
Ghosts—Juvenile literature 49-11186

A book of stories about ghosts and witches, for ages 6-9. The stories are: It was so spooky! by E. L. Brock; The friendly ghost, by Elizabeth Yates; The witch in the wintry wood, by Aileen Fisher; Thirteen witches, by Elizabeth Coatsworth; The ghost of Mad Maurice, by R. D. McCrea; The Floogles are detectives, by Gertrude Crampton; A strange surprise, by Adele De Leeuw; Shamus and the black cat, by M. R. Walsh. There is one poem: Ghost in the orchard, by Aileen Fisher.

Booklist 46:86 N 1 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun O 22 '49 40w

Kirkus 17:425 Ag 15 '49 110w

"A pleasantly shivery collection. . . Recommended." Juanita Walker
+ Library J 74:1827 D 1 '49 40w

"An easy-reading collection for 8-to-11-year-olds who are not yet ready for the kind of ghost stories that their iron-nerved big brothers and sisters revel in." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p50 O 23 '49 140w

Wis Lib Bul p10 N '49

SPORT (periodical). Twelve sport immortals. See Heyn, E. V., ed.

SPRIGGE, ELIZABETH. Strange life of August Strindberg. 246p il $3.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Strindberg, August 49-10225

Sober, sympathetic and as non-sensational as possible, this is a full length "story" of the life of this Swedish genius, dramatist and poet, philosopher and scientist, hater and lover of women. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 46:33 S 15 '49

"Elizabeth Sprigge, a very versatile English author, has a good knowledge of the Swedish language, and the quality of her book lies in the ample use of Strindberg's letters and other Swedish sources. She tries to use her highly emotional and contradictory material (biographies by his first and second wives, apologies of Strindberg and pamphlets against him) in a fair and unbiased way. Unfortunately, she has only a vague admiration for the poet and seems to have no very precise ideas about his specific poetic qualities and limitations. Her book is more useful as an analysis of the human being Strindberg than as an appreciation of his writing." Max Fischer

+ — Commonweal 50:562 S 16 '49 390w

Reviewed by Kappo Phelan

Commonweal 50:606 S 30 '49 1000w

"The author has concentrated her study on the man himself rather than on his literary work. What criticism she does attempt is vague and uncertain. Miss Sprigge does well in analyzing a literary genius considerably more difficult than most."

+ — Commonweal 51:244 D 2 '49 70w

"Reasonably frank in marital details of this great mysogynist. Carefully documented. Recommended for drama, theatre, literature and Scandinavian collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 74:1328 S 15 '49 90w

"What Miss Sprigge has given us is a wholly uncritical biography. She is a learned and enthusiastic Strindbergian who has had access to material which has only recently been made public in Sweden. Yet for all her learning her book is scarcely satisfactory as biography." Walter Allen

— + New Statesman & Nation 37:84 Ja 22 '49 1000w

"The McGill life of Strindberg nineteen years ago attempted to combine the narrative with extended analyses of the various books and plays, and discussions of the complex nineteenth century philosophic and esthetic influences which played upon the bedeviled Swede. Confusion often resulted and the continuity of the story was lost. Miss Sprigge does not make this error. She sticks to the main outlines of Strindberg's life, and the result is a more lively and readable book, a more human character." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Ag 7 '49 1200w

"[An] admirable biography. . . As a biographer, Miss Sprigge has an ideal approach to a difficult subject. . . In her foreword, Miss Sprigge says that she has composed her biography principally from reading the previous biographies and comparing Strindberg's letters with his works. She has also made personal investigation among his relatives and friends and obviously brings to her book considerable personal enthusiasm." Brooks Atkinson

+ N Y Times p1 Ag 7 '49 1650w

"Miss Sprigge, a British novelist and theatrical producer, has not had to dramatize Strindberg's life. He took care of that. It is possible that she overestimates the staying power of his writings, but there is no doubt that she is right about his being a lasting influence, for his mark is apparent in the work of many of the best modern playwrights, among them Eugene O'Neill, Thornton Wilder, and Sean O'Casey."

New Yorker 25:65 S 3 '49 180w

Reviewed by J. B. Geary

San Francisco Chronicle p20 S 25 '49 800w

Reviewed by Russell Rhodes

Sat R of Lit 32:17 Ag 20 '49 1000w

Reviewed by D. S. Savage

Spec 182:158 F 4 '49 500w

"The book bears evidence of a very thorough knowledge of the dramatist's life and includes much material, chiefly from interviews with his children and from letters he sent and received. . . But while the life was most certainly strange, this book does little to clarify the mystery. Perhaps that is always true of genius. More disappointing though is the fact that while various plays, novels and collections of short stories are referred to, too little explanation of them is given to allow the general reader to judge for himself how much of genius and how much of poseur Strindberg had in him." H. L. Varley

+ — Springf'd Republican p7C O 16 '49 310w

Time 54:83 Ag 15 '49 1100w

SPRIGLE, RAY. In the land of Jim Crow. 215p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

325.26 Negroes—Segregation. U.S.—Race question 49-8834

A Pulitzer-prize winning reporter tells of his experiences traveling thru the South disguised as a Negro.

Booklist 45:329 Je 1 '49

Reviewed by T. H. Wright

Chicago Sun My 10 '49 150w

"The author does not pose as a social reformer. He suggests no remedies for any bad conditions, and is even reticent about saying that conditions are bad. He is an honest and competent newspaperman whose formula is to go where important things are happening and report what he sees. He saw plenty. It is for others to say what ought to be done about it." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 66:686 Je 1 '49 300w

"A protest which is never bitter, and which cannot fail in its appeal to personal as well as democratic decency."

+ Kirkus 17:130 Mr 1 '49 200w

Reviewed by M. E. Monroe

Library J 74:818 My 15 '49 100w

Nation 169:19 Jl 2 '49 70w

"One can only regret that limiting his report to the most 'evil and barbarous aspects of the white South's treatment of the Negro' in the most backward states, [Mr Sprigle] used the word 'South' often and indiscriminately and 'Southerner' without qualification. . . Without getting out of step reportorially he could have shown that the Negro sharecropper shares his economic plight with the white sharecropper, that there are some white women's hands as gnarled and field-coarsened as the black hands he sighs over. . . Treating an historical, a cultural and economic complexity simply as a prejudice against a people because they were once enslaved does not seem quite fair to either the domestic or the foreign reader of a book." W. T. Hedden

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 My 29 '49 1700w

"Mr. Sprigle traveled a little too fast. Four weeks is a short time. He was well directed and well supplied with information. But his book remains, somehow, for all its basic honesty, a sort of journalistic quickie in blackface. This reviewer has the feeling, too, that Mr. Sprigle was quite understandably excited by the melodrama of his disguise. . . Mr. Sprigle's generalizations are too sweeping." R. McGill

N Y Times p24 Je 5 '49 750w

"Since the author's adventure serves as a framework for a dramatization of the race situation, this book should bring home the condition of the Negro in the South to many who would not ordinarily read sociology, much as 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' did a century ago. Mr. Sprigle's self-conscious journalistic prose is not much better than Mrs. Stowe's Victorian gush, but his effort is equally commendable."

New Yorker 25:101 My 28 '49 130w

"The greatest tribute to and guaranty of the basic accuracy of Ray Sprigle's book is the virulence of the attacks that have been made upon it by the Dixiecrats. . . May I beg of you to ignore the attacks on Mr. Sprigle by appraising the motives of his attackers? May I beseech you to read the book and learn for yourself how much remains to be done here at home to enable us as a nation to hold up our heads proudly and confidently when we set about the business of telling the rest of the world how they should practise democracy?" Walter White

+ Sat R of Lit 32:16 Je 11 '49 500w

"Just why the report of a masquerading white man should pack more of a wallop than similar testimonials by equally literate bona fide Negroes, such as Walter White and Richard Wright, is a nice little psychological problem, but it seems to be a fact. Perhaps Mr. Sprigle's reactions were more violent and consequently enabled him to pass on his sense of outrage and indignity so vividly just because he came to Negro life from the outside, lacking any part of the emotional preparation that a Negro upbringing would have given him automatically. . . Mr. Sprigle had a lot of interesting experiences and his account of them touches most phases of Negro life." W. H. H.

Springf'd Republican p4D My 29 '49 360w

Wis Lib Bul 45:104 Je '49

SPRING, MRS AGNES (WRIGHT). Cheyenne and Black Hills stage and express routes. (Am. trails ser) 418p il $7.50 Clark, A.H.

978 Cheyenne and Black Hills stage company. Wyoming—History. Black hills, South Dakota—History 49-1530

"Dealing primarily with the origin, growth, and final abandonment of the Cheyenne-Deadwood stages, this book includes also pertinent information about the life, customs, and manners of early Wyoming and Dakota pioneers who lived in the neighborhood of the stage routes or who participated in their development. . . The book contains four most useful appendices. One of these gives biographical data about all the owners and the known employees of the Cheyenne and Black Hills Stage Company, while another reproduces a brief, contemporary diary relating directly to the route of the stages. Of the remaining two, one lists and locates all the old coaches still known to be in existence, and the last describes the markers which have been erected in recent years to memorialize the route. A map is included in the book as an end-paper." U S Quarterly Bkl

Christian Century 66:593 My 11 '49 160w

"Although she writes easily and more readably by far than most investigators who tackle this sort of thing, she has done the job with the kind of exactness which will make it a source book in its field for years to come." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 8 '49 850w

"The author has gone to original sources for her material, and has had the advantage also of drawing upon the memories of early pioneers and present day old-timers. . . [It has] a fine index, a selective bibliography, and illustrations drawn from contemporary photographs and prints."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:221 Je '49 240w

SPRING, HOWARD. There is no armour. 436p $3.50 Harper

49-7710

Novel in which Edward Pentecost, R. A., presents himself and some of the people he knew "in the act of life." The scene is England during the years 1899 to 1946.

Booklist 45:225 Mr 1 '49

"Long, skilfully told, full of Cornish sunlight and Welsh humor, crowded with characters and incident, the reminiscences of Edward Pentecost, R.A., flow good-humoredly on, and it is easy to see how the sharpness and color of his anecdote might carry one's interest along. Afterwards one rebels against the flaws in characterization." D. H. M.

+ — Canadian Forum 29:67 Je '49 210w

"The mores of these pretty pasteboard cutouts are best described by that increasingly popular word, amoral. . . Some of the dialogue is bright, some of the descriptions of English life have led the blurb writer to make comparisons with Dickens. But, unfortunately, the charade is basically meaningless." Mary Sandrock

— + Cath World 169:77 Ap '49 250w

Reviewed by Edward Uzemack

Chicago Sun p8X Mr 6 '49 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '49

"A rich cast, providing good reading."

+ Kirkus 16:646 D 15 '48 190w

"Excellent portrait of a country and its people. Beautifully written, thoroughly enjoyable. Highly recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 74:313 F 15 '49 80w

"The most vital and absorbing part is the earlier record of the hero's upbringing on the outskirts of Manchester. The later part in Cornwall has plenty of incident and descriptive fluency, but the human interest runs thin." H. I'A. Fausset

— + Manchester Guardian p3 N 5 '48 70w

"Mr. Spring has sometimes been compared with Dickens, a comparison that seems to me somewhat misleading since their points of difference are many. But they do have in common an infectious interest in and liking for many kinds of people and power to communicate zest in living; from these qualities both have gained wide popularity. Both are preeminently story tellers, though in that capacity Mr. Spring has kept a lyricism uncommon among seasoned novelists. 'There Is No Armour' will surely win the enthusiasm and affection that his earlier books have enjoyed on both sides of the Atlantic." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 F 20 '49 500w

"With all his warmth and his story-telling gifts, Mr. Spring is, in the end, I think, too 'modern' for his own good. Denying on the one hand that man is the measure of his actions, he is unable to show that man is the measure of anything else." Nona Balakian

N Y Times p26 Mr 6 '49 400w

New Yorker 25:93 Mr 5 '49 160w

"The panorama is too vast, the lives of the characters (and they are very numerous) too complicated and a bit too contrived. . . However, these things aside, 'There is No Armour' is a particularly good novel. The characterization is excellent for the most part, and we are given a great number of fully realized portraits. . . [Mr Spring's] technique is noteworthy, for he has wisely avoided the straight chronological order. . . 'There is No Armour' meets the simple, unfailing test which so few novels pass in that it is clearly a good story, well told." C. W. Weinberger

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 20 '49 700w

"A little more than half of the book is superb. These are the pages recounting Ted Pentecost's childhood and his years of striving. They are vivid, swift-paced, and compelling. . . But once Ted has become established, and increasingly as the next generation usurps the center of attention, the pace slackens. Mr. Spring has fallen into the bitter-end fallacy and drags us behind him the last quarter of the way, through the Second World War, rather wearily to the finish." Edmund Fuller

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:12 Mr 12 '49 500w

Reviewed by Robert Kee

Spec 182:164 F 4 '49 270w

"Avoiding all problems save the fascinating one of personal relationships, and writing about people with a warm and genuine appreciation for their qualities and frailties, Mr. Spring wastes no time on casuistry or subtlety, but limns each of his characters in easily recognizable colors, putting a dash of almost every kind of emotion into his pages." L. S. Munn

+ Springf'd Republican p9B Mr 6 '49 360w

SPRING, HOWARD—Continued

"The book always honest, is often wise. Mr. Spring's technique is so sure that it enables him to write at considerable length without slackening the pace of the story or needing to strengthen it with sensational incidents."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p621 N 6 '48 240w

STAGGE, JONATHAN, pseud. See Webb, R. W., and Wheeler, H. C.

STALLMAN, ROBERT WOOSTER, ed. Critiques and essays in criticism, 1920-1948; representing the achievement of modern British and American critics; with a foreword by Cleanth Brooks. 571p $5 Ronald

801 Literary criticism. American literature —History and criticism. English literature—History and criticism 49-7475

"An anthology chiefly of essays on poetry and poetics, representing mainly one central tradition of modern criticism, that which derives from the pioneering work of Mr. Eliot, Dr. Leavis, and Dr. Richards." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Partial contents: The making of a poem, by Stephen Spender; Poetry: a note on ontology, by J. C. Ransom; Tension in poetry, by Allen Tate; The language of paradox, by Cleanth Brooks; Pure and impure poetry, by R. P. Warren; Shelley, by F. R. Leavis; Four quartets: a commentary, by Helen Gardner; Preliminary problems, by Yvor Winters; The mode of existence of a literary work of art, by René Wellek; Psychology and form, by Kenneth Burke; Double plots, by William Empson; Poetry and beliefs, by I. A. Richards; Poetry and belief in Thomas Hardy, by Delmore Schwartz; Tradition and the individual talent, by T. S. Eliot; The enabling act of criticism, by R. P. Blackmur; Historical criticism, by Edmund Wilson; The Americanism of Van Wyck Brooks, by F. W. Dupee. Biographical notes. A selected bibliography of modern criticism: 1920-1948.

"A big, fine book with several defects... Some material which is new to America, and several rare, fugitive essays, give proof of careful editorial judgment. Most of the selections are complete, although there are a few lamentable abridgements. The total effect is a comprehensive view of the new criticism in the Hulme-Eliot-Tate line of descent. Inadequate space is given to the psychological critics, and the historical or institutional approach is unfairly neglected. The absence of such critics as Rourke, Bodkin, Read, Caudwell, Matthiessen and Levin shows a substantial bias on Professor Stallman's part. As a group, the writers exhibit both amusing faults and great power... The reader will be particularly grateful for the fact that the essays are generally written in language which is vigorous and stimulating." G. L. Joughin

+ — N Y Times p25 My 1 '49 550w

"Full as it is of hard thinking about fundamentals, this is on the whole an impressive anthology."

Times [London] Lit Sup p203 Mr 26 '49 1350w

STANDEN, MRS NIKA. Art of cheese cookery; more than 250 recipes—tested by Florence Arfmann. 192p $1.95 Doubleday

641.673 Cookery (cheese) 49-11797

"Recipes for cheese dishes, from appetizers through desserts. Gives menus, recipes for making a few cheeses, and discusses kinds of cheese, how they are made and stored, how to select and buy them, and the uses for which each variety is suited." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 46:117 D 1 '49

"Lots of good suggestions and recipes that seem easy to use."

+ Kirkus 17:528 S 15 '49 110w

"The recipes [are] sensibly arranged and soundly worked out." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 4 '49 40w

STANDISH, ROBERT, pseud. See Gerahty, D. G.

STANISLAVSKI, CONSTANTIN, pseud. See Alekseev, K. S.

STANLEY, DAVE, pseud. See Dachs, D., ed.

STANLEY, EDWARD. The rock cried out. 311p $3 Duell

Blennerhassett, Harman—Fiction 49-4281

Historical novel in which the story of Harman Blennerhassett and his wife, who was also his niece, is retold. Beginning from the time of their elopement and marriage the author follows the course of their lives from the days of their glory in America, when they lived in splendor in the Ohio Valley, thru their part in Aaron Burr's treason. Then the course of their downfall is traced, ending with the death of Margaret Blennerhassett many years later.

Reviewed by M. W. Hess

— Cath World 169:396 Ag '49 340w

"Skillfully handled, beautifully written historical novel." Edward Uzemack

+ Chicago Sun p8X Jl 10 '49 280w

Kirkus 17:238 My 1 '49 190w

"Valuable chiefly for able presentation of historic detail." R. W. Henderson

Library J 74:892 Je 1 '49 90w

"This is Mr. Stanley's second novel and earnest of the reality of his talent. . . Portions of the present novel are as tumultuous or as taut as the heartiest sabering or the sternest tensions in the first. But the new book's quieter passages show Mr. Stanley's ability as an historical novelist to equal advantage. No one uses with more expert ease the color and incident and characteristic personalities and peculiar detail of period and place in advancing a story and unfolding the nature of its people." E. B. Davis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Je 19 '49 750w

"Occasionally the page catches fire from the very vividness of the atmosphere around his hapless heroine; occasionally the minor characters . . . threaten to assume a third dimension, to snatch the story away from the muddleheaded stars. But in the end the author's grim anxiety to get everything in place defeats his own purpose. Aaron Burr, who should have dominated the big scenes of the novel, never emerges from the mist of history—and, for the final hundred pages, the book merely skids downhill, into a staccato (and, at times, highly readable) rehash of the record." James MacBride

— + N Y Times p13 Jl 3 '49 400w

"The depiction of [the Blennerhassetts] and of Burr shows little careful shading but the author's background data is informative. He might, however, have given more space to Burr's inglorious expedition and less to the Blennerhassetts."

— + New Yorker 25:65 Jl 9 '49 150w

"Edward Stanley's attempt to tell the story of the hapless Blennerhassetts has not quite come off. For this there are several reasons. It is indeed an honest enough bit of writing and sticks pretty closely to the facts, though there are entirely too many historical whoppers. . . But these are matters easily forgiven in a novel if the story itself has vigor, pace, timing, and above all characters that are alive and three-dimensional. Unfortunately the writing is pedestrian. . . Harmon is a shadow and a wraith instead of excellent material for ironic contemplation; Margaret, upon whom the author lavished most of his care, is contradictory and unclear; while Aaron Burr is a far cry from the original." Nathan Schachner

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:21 Je 25 '49 750w

STANLEY, JAMES K. Metallurgy and magnetism; a series of three educational lectures on metallurgy and magnetism presented to members of the ASM during the thirtieth National metal congress and exposition, Philadelphia, Oct. 23-29, 1948. 156p il $4 Am. soc. for metals

669 Metallurgy. Magnetism 49-2657

"A short but informative introduction which is addressed to metallurgists rather than to physicists. The treatment assumes familiarity with metallurgical concepts, terms, and with the reading of engineering graphs. Essentially, the work is an outline which is adequate in itself for the metallurgists who want merely a general understanding of magnetism. However, key numbers directly in the text refer to the bibliography which includes 237 references to patents and periodical articles. This feature renders the book useful as a guide to the literature for those who wish to make advanced studies of special topics." N Y New Tech Bks

N Y New Tech Bks 34:40 My '49

"The treatment of magnetic theory is up to date and in the main accurate, although the reader should be on guard against such statements as that the term permeability 'only has meaning in the cgs system.' . . The purpose of the book is evidently to stimulate further research and inquiry. To this end, there is an extensive list of references, which may well constitute the chief value of the book."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 5:285 Je '49 200w

STANNARD, HAROLD MARTIN. Two constitutions; a comparative study of British and American constitutional systems. 210p $3 Van Nostrand

342.733 Great Britain—Constitutional law. U.S.—Constitutional law 49-1954

A comparative study of two constitutions: the written American constitution, and the unwritten British one. It attempts to show a unity of purpose underlying the two. Selected bibliography. Index.

"A rich, although short, comparative and historical study of a kind too seldom encountered by students. . . American students, on reading this book, will enjoy and profit from the author's wise and incisive interpretations of the American constitutional system, and meanwhile review in most readable fashion much that is worth knowing, although often neglected, concerning the origin and growth of the English political institutions so fundamental to understanding our own." J. A. Perkins

+ Am Pol Sci R 43:1299 D '49 410w

Booklist 45:348 Je 15 '49

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p11 Mr 31 '49 950w

"Mr. Stannard's book will make a valuable introduction for students on either side of the Atlantic. I cannot immediately recall another like it: certainly by none that covers so large a canvas so quickly and yet preserves a real balance in the picture it paints. This book, moreover, will be stimulating and useful to those with greater knowledge." Norman MacKenzie

+ New Statesman & Nation 38:666 D 3 '49 850w

"The book is a curiously uneven performance, in the grand manner, with passages reminiscent of both Burke and Bagehot. It imparts no fresh insights, and it best represents a popularization of familiar scholarship. . . Yet his book does have the great merit of reemphasizing obvious truths—a merit which, Mr. Justice Holmes once reminded us, is sometimes to be preferred to an exploration of the recondite." Merle Fainsod

+ — N Y Times p17 Jl 31 '49 550w

"At the time of his death, in 1947, Mr. Stannard, a distinguished historian and a member of the staff of The Times, had substantially completed this book, which has been admirably prepared for the press by Mr. John Filmer. The decision to publish his essay was wise because it contains many ideas that are interesting, a number that are original and some that are startling. It may perhaps be said that this would have been a more coherent book if the author had been less concerned with history. The four pages which are devoted to the almost forgotten Cromwellian Instrument of Government, in which an attempt was made to create a written constitution for Great Britain, are interesting, but they are in large part irrelevant because there was not a single reference to this Instrument in the debates of the Philadelphia Convention which created the American Constitution in 1787." A. L. Goodhart

+ — Spec 183:608 N 4 '49 800w

"Because the author perhaps does not write interestingly enough to captivate the imagination of the general reader, his book may unfortunately be limited to the special student of the constitutions. Yet it cannot be denied that his purpose is worthy and maybe it will seem rewarding enough to overcome a certain dullness of prose for the reader." A. L. Zinsser

Springf'd Republican p9C Ap 10 '49 210w

STAPLETON, MRS ELSIE. Spending for happiness. 287p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

647.1 Finance, Personal 49-4184

A study of budget problems by a specialist on family spending. Includes stories of specific problems and advice given in each case.

Booklist 46:92 N 15 '49

Christian Science Monitor p4 Ja 9 '50 190w

"The breakdown, percentage-wise, of approximate demands upon your income will give this a specific value for home use."

+ Kirkus 17:354 Jl 1 '49 160w

Springf'd Republican p4D S 25 '49 230w

STAPLETON, LAURENCE. Design of democracy. 301p $4 Oxford

321.8 Democracy 49-11666

"A discussion of the basis of democracy in equality, freedom, and self-government, including the process of law and the political process. Professor Stapleton (Bryn Mawr) analyzes Marxian theories and those of some orthodox political scientists. There are thoughts and suggestions on education in American universities, particularly as an agent of democratic progress." (Current Hist) Index.

"Miss Stapleton keeps herself free from dogmatism. She tests her theory in the political, economic, religious, artistic and educational aspects of the community, and believes, with some justice, that she has found a common measure available for world government and the several nations, including eventually Russia." Henry Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 D 22 '49 1050w

Current Hist 17:355 D '49 50w

"Clearly, forcefully, with simple dignity, [the author] restates the fundamental principles of democracy. . . An important, if not great book. A testament of political and social faith for thoughtful people everywhere." Harold Lancour

+ Library J 74:1319 S 15 '49 140w

"Democracy is undoubtedly the most important single possession of the American people. A goodly number of them could profit from this book. The efforts they spend in mastering its arguments will be well rewarded." August Heckscher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 Ja 22 '50 650w

STAPP, ARTHUR D. Escape on skis. 209p $2.50 Morrow
49-10316

A story of a week of adventure on Mount Rainier. Three boys on a skiing trip meet up with another boy, Fred, who is involved with counterfeiters. They befriend Fred and thru their knowledge of mountain terrain they capture the two counterfeiters. For junior and senior high school boys.

Booklist 46:38 S 15 '49

"'Escape on Skis' is a rare find—a boys' book that will win hearty approval from both youthful readers and adult critics. It is one of the outstanding books for boys to appear this year." Vernon Ives
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p10 N 13 '49 140w

"The book includes much about skiing as well as vivid descriptions of the mountain streams and passes. It is a gripping story with an undercurrent of thoughtfulness and penetration." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:546 N '49 70w

Kirkus 17:472 S 1 '49 120w

"There is a deep appreciation of the beauty of Mt. Ranier National Park, of the joy and thrill of skiing, and a well handled plot." Esther Gorey
+ Library J 74:1546 O 15 '49 100w

Reviewed by E. E. Frank
Library J 49:1920 D 15 '49 80w

Reviewed by L. S. Bechtel
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 15 '50 180w

"Though more ordinary in plot than the author's fine 'Mountain Tamer' of last year, this story is worth while on several counts; its readability, the depth of understanding shown in the boy's actions, the beauty of the background, Mount Ranier in winter, and the communication to the reader of all the joys and hazards of skiing. Louis Darling's unusually attractive frontispiece in colors sets the tone of the story." Howard Pease
+ N Y Times p38 N 13 '49 130w

"Mr. Stapp has packed his story with fast action and thrills and managed to keep it well within the bounds of probability."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 13 '49 50w

Reviewed by M. G. Davis
Sat R of Lit 32:30 N 12 '49 30w

Springf'd Republican p8C N 27 '49 70w

STARK, FREYA MADELINE. Perseus in the wind [wood engravings by Reynolds Stone]. 168p $3.75 Transatlantic 824 [49-7241]

"Personal essays on such universal themes as love, death, sorrow, old age, beauty, service, and toleration. The author travels easily from age to age and country to country evoking visions and ideas usually associated with the power of poetry." Booklist

Booklist 45:278 Ap 15 '49

"Here is a volume to which the discriminating reader may resort for true satisfaction. . . To enjoy it, one needs to bring into play all one's best understanding, all one's most important observations and deductions. True, Miss Stark's is not an easy style; but it is peculiarly rewarding to all who will advance at least halfway to meet it." Margaret Williamson
+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 13 '49 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 O '49

"Her bearing in the presence of these abstractions is irreproachable; indeed, it is frequently admirable. But it is hardly original. Love, we are assured, is a good thing, variety is the spice of life, it is no longer quite the thing for an artist to live in an ivory tower, death comes to all and we do well not to forget the fact. We could accept these reflections in the spirit with which they were offered (for Miss Stark modestly disclaims all intention of being original) were it not that she smothers the most simple statement with figurative language." P. H. Newby
New Statesman & Nation 37:17 Ja 1 '49 550w

"This is a lifetime book, a book to be underscored in many moods and through many years." Robert Hillyer
+ N Y Times p7 My 1 '49 700w

"A wide scope, covered by a woman of wide experience; a wise woman, who has opened her bundle and now proclaims her hope that 'these stray reflections may not have been written for myself only, but for all who have climbed and crossed their ridges and are standing with me upon the verge of afternoon.'" V. Sackville-West
+ Spec 181:704 N 26 '48 750w

"This is a courageous undertaking. It is perhaps even a little too courageous. There is something rather disarming in the refusal to compromise which Miss Stark shows by entitling her essays so roundly, and by her unwillingness to descend to the safer levels of 'On Eating Sweets After Lunch' or 'On Watching a Cow from a Train.' . . Much in this book would interest and please us if we picked it up by the way in a novel or a travel book, but may we not feel that if we are going to have almost unadulterated Great Thoughts for 169 pages they ought to be very great indeed? It is the same with the style. It does not quite fulfil the task demanded of it. It is readable, flexible and often charming, but it does not have that inevitability, the unquestioned rightness which fine writing should possess."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p684 D 4 '48 480w

STARKEY, MARION LENA. Devil in Massachusetts; a modern inquiry into the Salem witch trials. 310p $3.50 Knopf
133.4 Witchcraft. Salem, Massachusetts
49-10395

A record of Salem witchcraft in 1692, compiled from primary sources. The author has attempted to tell of the event as a dramatic story with psychological interpretations. Selected bibliography. Index.

"Miss Starkey, for all her intelligence and humor, and despite the exhaustive and responsible study which clearly she has made of her subject, fails to make good the promise of her preface. . . The failure, a fair guess would be, is one of a creative literary imagination equal to a paralyzing task. Still, Miss Starkey's book has its points. She has put a great deal of fact and thought into her nutshell in a readable, unadorned prose, and her material from beginning to end is steeped in fascination."
+ — Atlantic 184:87 O '49 290w

Booklist 46:27 S 15 '49

"It would be hard to find anywhere a clearer instance of human beings' seeing what they believe and then believing what they have seen than the Salem witchcraft, as told in this perceptive study. Miss Starkey's fresh and illuminating report of her research into the various contributing factors of that fateful delusion brings them vividly and understandably to the modern reader, who cannot but feel deeply with the people that move through her history." O. D. Hormel
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 S 1 '49 1200w

Reviewed by W. P. Sears
Churchman 163:18 S 1 '49 90w

"Absorbing reading and excellently handled source material."
+ Kirkus 17:346 Jl 1 '49 110w

"[The author's] scholarship is trustworthy and her annotated bibliography excellent, giving the work reference value that will last after the new-book glamor has worn off. Recommended." Shirley Barker
+ Library J 74:1091 Ag '49 100w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman
Nation 169:232 S 3 '49 1100w

Reviewed by J. R. Newman
New Repub 121:17 O 24 '49 2000w

Reviewed by Ferris Greenslet
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 S 4 '49 1800w

"How this terrible hysteria swelled and in less than a year was dead Miss Starkey tells with a passion and veracity that will hold any reader spellbound." Esther Forbes
+ N Y Times p9 Ag 21 '49 1100w

"There is a good reason, I think, for the fascination this book will hold for thousands—a reason beyond the author's admirably tempered prose and her remarkable narrative talent. The fact is that this horrifying true story holds overtones of something much closer to our own day, and those overtones ring clear and unmistakable." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 24 '49 850w

Reviewed by Russell Rhodes
Sat R of Lit 32:20 S 10 '49 850w

Springf'd Republican p8B Ag 28 '49 850w

Time 54:104 S 12 '49 1000w

STARR, CHESTER G., ed. From Salerno to the Alps; a history of the Fifth Army, 1943-1945. 529p il maps $6 Infantry journal

940.542 U.S. Army. Fifth army. World war, 1939-1945—Italy 48-10250

"A professional historian's chronological and circumstantial narrative of the Fifth Army's campaign in Italy." Foreign Affairs

Foreign Affairs 28:160 O '49 20w

Reviewed by R. D. Goldburgh
N Y Times p25 Ja 16 '49 800w

"The situation maps are excellent, and many of the photographic illustrations are striking. In general, the book is standard competent military history of World War II as the Army has produced it."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:80 Mr '49 200w

STARRETT, VINCENT. Sonnets, and other verse. 55p $2 Dierkes

811 49-7711

A volume of light satirical verse, mostly in sonnet form, and reflecting the poet's interests—in Sherlock Holmes, Lewis Carroll and rare books. At head of title there is a quotation from Lewis Carroll beginning "'Twas brillig. . ."

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun My 2 '49 50w

"Vincent Starrett is amiable, witty and informed. The poems provide us with good company and emerge at their best when read aloud." M. H. Irvine
+ N Y Times p26 Ap 3 '49 270w

"A few of the sonnets about the contemporary scene are marred by a rather labored sophistication; 'Ungentlemanly Reminder' and 'Zoological Note,' for instance, are merely Vers de Café Société; and some of the subjective lyrics are too gently conventional and nostalgic, without much real force or individuality. But these are in the minority. Mr. Starrett's genuine gift is to infuse the mock-serious with a poignant significance; to suggest with a verbal shrug or lifted eyebrow a heartstruck emotion." S. H. Hay
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:29 My 21 '49 360w

STAUFFER, DONALD ALFRED. Golden nightingale. 165p $3 Macmillan

821 Yeats, William Butler 49-9461

"This book has grown out of a series of lectures given at the Johns Hopkins University in April, 1948 in the Percy Graeme Turnbull series of memorial lectures." It is composed of "essays on some principles of poetry in the lyrics of William Butler Yeats." (Subtitle) No index.

Booklist 46:11 S 1 '49

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun Ag 15 '49 320w

"In spite of some irritating commonplace, these five essays make a considerable contribution to our understanding of Yeats's later lyrics." Horace Reynolds
+ — Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 17 '49 600w

"Although Stauffer's style is far from inspired, it is clear, cogent and rational. For any student of Yeats, or follower of his fine poetry who wishes a little light thrown on some of its obscurities, this book is essential reading."
+ Kirkus 17:246 My 1 '49 130w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 121:20 Ag 8 '49 270w

"These chapters add luster to an already glorious succession." G. F. Whicher
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je 26 '49 800w

"A model of criticism, clear, compressed and enthusiastic." Robert Hillyer
+ N Y Times p7 Je 26 '49 650w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril
San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 18 '49 100w

Reviewed by George Whalley
Yale R n s 39:167 autumn '49 220w

STAUFFER, DONALD ALFRED. Shakespeare's world of images; the development of his moral ideas. 393p $5 Norton

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Knowledge and ethics 49-48346

A study of Shakespeare's ideas of morality, as evidenced in his plays. The author, professor of English at Princeton university, shows the development of Shakespeare thru periods of despair, and into a new and more cheerful belief. Analytical index.

"Shakespeare's World of Images is not a book which will help a student to pass examinations, nor will it greatly please professional scholars, for it is concerned with spiritual values which must be individual, personal and imponderable, but how refreshing a change after half a century of studies of fact and problem, and even of the tabulation of poetic images." G. B. Harrison
+ Commonweal 51:274 D 9 '49 450w

"A scholarly addition to the vast Shakespearean literature. Recommended to Shakespeare collections in large libraries." George Freedley
+ Library J 74:1759 N 15 '49 30w

"The subject of Professor Stauffer's most important book is more clearly indicated in the secondary title than in the principal. For though the study of Shakespeare's images as experience enriches and enlarges them it is possible, Professor Stauffer is convinced, not only to trace the development of Shakespeare's moral ideas but to affirm confidently that certain ideas are basic to his reading of life." S. C. Chew
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p6 Ja 8 '50 1150w

"Sprightly and suggestive book. . . It is refreshing to be reminded that Shakespearean drama is the ripened fruit, not only of experience but of conviction. . . Mr. Stauffer is at his helpful best in stating situations, formulating issues and interrelating them as he moves more or less chronologically through the plays. This necessarily involves a good deal of paraphrase, as against a relatively small proportion of analysis. . . Mr. Stauffer handles the apparatus with a light—almost, at times, a jaunty—touch." Harry Levin
+ — N Y Times p5 O 30 '49 550w

"Mr. Stauffer is a perceptive and sensitive critic and the master of a lively style, so that much that he writes is stimulating and entertaining reading. He is perhaps at his best when defending his method and describing its difficulties and dangers. . . In spite of Mr. Stauffer's keen appreciation of the intellectual subtlety demanded by his project, he often proceeds with something less than critical refinement. . . But the principal weakness of his method Mr. Stauffer himself describes. Shakespeare, he says, 'has the supreme imaginative power not to mar the profound moral

STAUFFER, D. A.—Continued
meanings of "Othello" or "Macbeth" by reducing them to didactic tags.' Keats was often guilty of this mechanical device. . . This is the sort of betrayal of Shakespeare's art that Mr. Stauffer too often commits in the always challenging pages of his book." O. J. Campbell

+ — Sat R of Lit 33:16 Ja 28 '50 600w

Reviewed by J. W. Culver
Springf'd Republican p7D D 11 '49 230w

STAVIS, BARRIE. Home, sweet home! with il. by Baryé Phillips. 252p $2.75 Sheridan 49-7969

Humorous novel describing how an ex-GI obtained a larger home by effecting a thirteen-way apartment exchange with synchronized moving.

Booklist 45:281 Ap 15 '49

"A sore subject, recognizable to almost everybody, in heavy comedy treatment. The humor here is not for all Public Libraries."
Kirkus 17:115 Mr 1 '49 150w

Reviewed by Arthur Leonard
N Y Times p22 Je 12 '49 230w

"Put down this erring effort among the problems presented by the housing shortage. Mr. Stavis has probed the situation in what purported to be hilarious detail. The result is hectically unfunny, often tasteless, and consistently heavy-handed." C. M. Brown
— Sat R of Lit 32:29 Je 4 '49 140w

STEARNS, MARSHALL WINSLOW. Robert Henryson. 155p $2.50 Columbia univ. press
B or 92 Henryson, Robert 49-8094

"The too little known fifteenth-century Scottish poet, Robert Henryson, receives here an analysis of his reputation, his place in the culture and society of his time, and his character as it stands revealed by the internal evidence of his poetry. The author's chief interests are to show Henryson within the social framework of the fifteenth century, and to demonstrate the originality as well as the attractive quality of his views on man and society. Through its explorations of his sources, the book also contributes to an understanding of specific passages in Henryson's poems." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. Index.

"Professor M. W. Stearns in his learned monograph on Henryson says that there is much still to be done 'to clear the way for a better understanding and appreciation of the poet and of his poetry,' and his present work is an attempt in that direction. . . Professor Stearns also writes with knowledge on Henryson's understanding and use of astrology. . . It must be confessed, however, that this monograph will be of little use to uninstructed readers who wish to understand Henryson's merits as a poet. It is probably not intended for them, but for those sufficiently advanced in their knowledge of Henryson's works to be willing to follow Professor Stearns through so much scholarly investigation and discussion."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p507 Ag 5 '49 750w

"Mr. Stearns, with a rare affection and sympathy for his subject, succeeds admirably in evoking certain of the qualities, which especially in the Fables lend interest and significance to Henryson, the poet. Some of the generalizations made in this work concerning fifteenth-century Scotland need qualifications. Although the author is better informed about the European literary traditions drawn upon by Henryson than about the details of Scottish history, the study is interesting, scholarly, and relatively penetrating. It should prove valuable to students of medieval literature and, particularly, to students of the so-called Scottish Chaucerians."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 5:159 Je '49 200w

STEEGMULLER, FRANCIS (DAVID KEITH, pseud). Blue harpsichord. 218p $2.50 Dodd 49-7322

Mystery story.

"This diverting excursion into nonsense combines a set of improbabilities into a romp told with an amusement acute if repressed." James Sandoe
+ Chicago Sun p24 Ja 28 '49 240w
New Repub 120:26 Mr 21 '49 20w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ja 9 '49 180w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson
N Y Times p32 F 13 '49 100w

"Written with the right touch, fortunately, to be consistently funny."
+ New Yorker 24:87 Ja 22 '49 100w

"Good to see really literate job turning up so early in year. Fast, furious, fantastic, funny, well-characterized, and trickily plotted. Grade A."
+ Sat R of Lit 32:34 F 5 '49 40w

Reviewed by S. M. Neal
Springf'd Republican p18A Ja 30 '49 170w

STEEGMULLER, FRANCIS (DAVID KEITH, pseud). Maupassant: a lion in the path. 430p il $5 Random house
B or 92 Maupassant, Guy de 49-11109

A biography of Guy de Maupassant as man and writer. It contains four of his short stories reprinted and translated into English for the first time. They are: An old man, A surprise, The legacy, and Letter from a madman. Index.

"Mr. Steegmuller's critical biography seemed to me to have one weakness— a lack of stylistic distinction—and a great many important qualities. The author has both the tact and the candor required to deal effectively with his subject's fascinating and scandalous career, with its sexual excesses and its terrible battle against syphilis. Moreover Mr. Steegmuller is both an illuminating student of character and a literary critic with a mind of his own and an acute one."
+ — Atlantic 185:88 Ja '50 240w
Booklist 46:158 Ja 1 '50

Reviewed by Jex Martin
Chicago Sun p58 D 8 '49 450w

"A balance of the literary and the personal, this qualifies for general biographical tastes."
+ Kirkus 17:418 Ag 1 '49 210w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross
Library J 74:1199 S 1 '49 110w

"When a few years ago Professor Artine Artinian sent round his excellent Maupassant questionnaire, I was compelled to answer: I have no definite opinion about Maupassant. I have not read anything of his for well over thirty years. And I feel no inclination to pick him up again now. Well, Francis Steegmuller has sent me back to Maupassant. This is the surest test of good criticism." Albert Guérard
+ Nation 169:497 N 19 '49 750w

"Mr. Steegmuller has a fascinating story to tell and he tells it with verve, scruple, and mixture of the critical and the biographical, the ironic and the scandalous." Lewis Galantiere
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 O 9 '49 850w

"Mr. Steegmuller writes with sympathy and acuteness, though sometimes in indifferent prose. He is a sound judge of the best Maupassant stories (though I think he overrates 'Yvette'). . . He is interesting about Maupassant's circle and has read everything that may throw light on it. . . I would like to have seen in this book more comparative criticism. . . But Mr. Steegmuller has done a useful and agreeable piece of work." V. S. Pritchett
+ — N Y Times p3 O 2 '49 1300w

Reviewed by Alfred Kazin
New Yorker 25:140 N 12 '49 1300w

"Perhaps the most important contribution of this new study is its complete critical revaluation of Maupassant and his work, and the evidence Mr. Steegmuller produces to support his sounder view. At the same time the book is thoroughly readable, supplying as a by-product a vivid and convincing picture of the milieu, social and literary, in which Maupassant grew to manhood, wrote and died. It is not often that the general reader can get hold of a literary study at once so scholarly and so entertaining, and Mr. Steegmuller should find a wide audience for his book." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 3 '49 800w

"It is good to have this volume, to have so graceful and level-headed a writer as Mr. Steegmuller reassessing, redefining a fascinating figure, and so convincingly developing new perspectives upon what we already know of him." Hollis Alpert
+ Sat R of Lit 32:29 O 22 '49 1300w

"De Maupassant's own life story, as told in Francis Steegmuller's breezy and readable biography, seems itself like one of his more mordant sketches—flashy, melodramatic and highly painful at its end."
Time 54:107 O 24 '49 650w

STEEN, MARGUERITE. Twilight on the Floods. 782p $3.95 Doubleday
49-9801

A continuation of the author's The Sun is My Undoing (Book Review Digest 1941). The scene is again the English port of Bristol and the Gold Coast of Africa; the time the 1890's. The central character this time is John Flood, great grandson of Matt Flood. John is one of the few thoughtful ones of the family, and after three visits to the Gold Coast, finally loses his life in the Ashanti War.

Booklist 45:366; 393 Jl 1 '49; Jl 15 '49

"All in all, a tale full of sound and fury signifying nothing."
— Cath World 169:480 S '49 150w

"Miss Steen serves her literary Tabasco with enormous zeal; that is to say, she pours it on. In addition, with undaunted enthusiasm, she takes British colonial policy in her stride, along with economic theories, missionary work, social evolution, racial conflict, and psychotherapy. It is seldom that one sees a book so lavishly furnished with causes. Whether or not one can agree with all of the stated opinions, or bear the high seasoning, the virtuosity of the whole must be granted, the author's fervency be respected."
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 11 '49 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '49

"At times, the thread of plot is submerged in the plethora of color, and background. But for the market that revels in sweeping canvas and family sagas and novel backgrounds, this story of the 1890's will hold them."
+ — Kirkus 17:259 My 15 '49 210w

"A vast, sprawling novel of tropical richness (and rankness) which is quite likely to repeat the success of Miss Steen's novel The Sun is My Undoing, all the more so since it is a variation of the same theme—the slave trade." E. F. Walbridge
Library J 74:1026 Jl '49 100w

"With all [its] heavy load of history and politics to carry, the plot of 'Twilight on the Floods' somehow manages to stumble along—for awhile. But finally it sits down exhausted beside its burden. And in the end one must admit regretfully, almost remorsefully, that the breath of life is not in 'Twilight on the Floods.'" F. H. Bullock
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Jl 31 '49 1000w

— New Yorker 25:66 Ag 27 '49 140w

"Miss Steen is firmly in the saddle of her craft; her writing is fine, clear and precise—there is a strain of integrity that runs through from the first page to the last. If you are a lover of historical romance, this is certainly your dish, or rather your whole savory meal. And certainly you can be sure that you are getting your money's worth." Marc Rivette
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 7 '49 650w

"It may be that Miss Steen has placed too much before the reader. It is a brilliant accomplishment, but the reader is finally surfeited and stunned as if he had been gorged with an enormous dinner. It is like a man without a heart, or an elaborate canvas meticulously painted without the accents and the neglects that are the mark of true artistry." Harrison Smith
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:15 Jl 30 '49 800w

Reviewed by Stevie Smith
Spec 183:586 O 28 '49 120w

"Author Steen does not fuss too much about period accuracy: her male characters speak fluent up-to-date U.S. slang, and there is an Omo chief in the book who suffers from 'a slight guilt complex.' But, by and large, this is hot, strong stuff, and not since Elinor Glyn and Ethel M. Dell has a writer put in her thumb and pulled out the sort of plum this pie is full of (e.g., 'He had cut her open with a sword, but she was too proud to let him see the bleeding')."
— Time 54:68 Ag 1 '49 470w

Times [London] Lit Sup p661 O 14 '49 300w

Wis Lib Bul p11 D '49

STEERE, DOUGLAS VAN. Doors into life; through five devotional classics. 189p $2 Harper
242 Religious literature—Collections 48-9387

Interpretations of five classics of devotional literature: The imitation of Christ; Francis de Sales' Introduction to the devout life; The journal of John Woolman; Søren Kierkegaard's Purity of heart; The selected letters of Friedrich von Hügel. The author gives the background of each book, its message, and some reflections on its significance. Four of the chapters were originally delivered as lectures at theological seminaries.

Booklist 45:255 Ap 1 '49

"Here is solid stuff for study. There is also a variety of approaches to the great realities. If they do not all seem equally good to any one reader, he may find comfort in the words of Francis de Sales, addressed to some nuns in Paris as he was commenting on the work of certain spiritual advisers: 'I respect their method, but it is not mine.'"
+ Christian Century 66:241 F 23 '49 150w

Reviewed by J. W. Brush
Crozer Q 26:187 Ap '49 300w

"Professor Steere has become one of our leading exponents of mysticism and one of Protestantism's most helpful guides towards a more meaningful prayer life. This book will be welcomed by the ever widening circle of those who are convinced that a deep Christian experience must 'begin from within.'"
+ Kirkus 16:596 N 15 '48 130w

STEIN, AARON MARC (GEORGE A. BAGBY, HAMPTON STONE, pseuds). Coffin corner. 219p $2.25 Doubleday 49-11798

Detective story.

"Bagby's suggestion of the milieu is as deft as usual and his cast is neatly distinguished for recognition. But they sink here into a welter of talk and explanation which leans at last on fairly footling motives to make up its quota of red herring." James Sandoe
+ — Chicago Sun p67 D 16 '49 270w

"Altho repetitious to a fault, this yarn rings bells for originality in crime, clews and atmosphere, and fascinating police work."
+ — Chicago Sunday Tribune p44 D 4 '49 70w

Kirkus 17:563 O 1 '49 60w

"Not quite up to Bagby's usual standard, perhaps because it's a little too technical."
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p24 N 20 '49 120w

STEIN, A. M.—Continued

"Clinically interesting, perhaps, and happily minus Mr. Bagby's customary humorous touches."

New Yorker 25:171 N 19 '49 100w

STEIN, AARON MARC (GEORGE A. BAGBY, HAMPTON STONE, pseuds). Days of misfortune. 190p $2.25 Doubleday 49-10250

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun S 2 '49 230w

Kirkus 17:312 Je 15 '49 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 S 11 '49 150w

"Warmly written, with a nice blend of character, humor, sinister suggestions and well integrated archaeological background. . . The things that happen make this one of the liveliest Stein stories yet, particularly distinguished by the richly human handling of its many Mayan characters. Bè walley, Mr. Stein! —which you've taught me is Mayan for okay!" Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p22 Ag 28 '49 220w

"Mr. Stein handles the Yucatán setting and the Mayan people with loving care, and his solution is creditably ingenious."

+ New Yorker 25:68 S 3 '49 120w

STEIN, AARON MARC (GEORGE A. BAGBY, pseud). Drop dead. 189p $2.25 Doubleday 49-8869

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun My 20 '49 140w

+ Kirkus 17:121 Mr 1 '49 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 My 15 '49 150w

"The tenants involved are moderately interesting, the Schmitty-Holmes team is a refreshing combination and the yarn is lively." Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p31 My 8 '49 110w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p26 Je 26 '49 80w

Sat R of Lit 32:45 My 21 '49 40w

STEIN, AARON MARC (GEORGE A. BAGBY, HAMPTON STONE, pseuds). Girl with the hole in her head. 209p $2 Simon & Schuster 49-9606

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Jl 8 '49 90w

"Sensational stuff, tightly, smoothly coordinated."

+ Kirkus 17:242 My 1 '49 100w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Jl 24 '49 110w

"This one makes a fantastic modern mansion on East End Avenue so real that you automatically believe every word of what happens in it. Not that the list of Stone's virtues stops with this; he adds an admirably neat sense of plot and detection, a dry humor in his narration, and a singular compassion for both murderer and victims." Anthony Boucher

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 10 '49 180w

"Very well planned."

+ New Yorker 25:68 Jl 9 '49 120w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 24 '49 150w

"Agreeable."

+ Sat R of Lit 32:34 Jl 9 '49 40w

Springf'd Republican p7B Jl 17 '49 170w

STEIN, AARON MARC (GEORGE A. BAGBY, pseud). Second burial. 191p $2.25 Doubleday 49-7190

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Ja 21 '49 50w

Kirkus 16:582 N 1 '48 70w

"Light amusement, stuffed with local color." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ja 16 '49 130w

"A whodunit for those who like their mystery with a dash of scientific jargon—and more comedy than chill." I. A.

+ N Y Times p23 Ja 23 '49 110w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p17 F 13 '49 70w

"Pre-Columbian relics, vivid Mexican scenery, string of slayings, and absolutamente last-second solution make this tick merrily. Above average."

+ Sat R of Lit 32:32 F 12 '49 40w

STEIN, GERTRUDE. Last operas and plays; ed. and with an introd. by Carl Van Vechten. 480p $5 Rinehart

812 49-7922

Nineteen "operas and plays," written by Gertrude Stein between 1917 and 1945, and printed from manuscripts "in the vast collection of Steiniana in the Yale Museum." Contents: Yes is for a very young man; The mother of us all; Doctor Faustus lights the lights; An exercise in analysis; A circular play; Photograph; Paisieu; An historic drama in memory of Winnie Elliot; Will he come back better. Second historic drama. In the country; Third historic drama; Play I [-III]; They must. Be wedded. To their wife; A play of pounds; A manoir; Short sentences; Byron a play; Listen to me; A play called not and now; Four saints in three acts.

Booklist 45:278 Ap 15 '49

Kirkus 16:639 D 1 '48 120w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 120:18 My 16 '49 750w

"Mr. Van Vechten's invaluable introduction performs a double service. For old friends it supplies new information. For those unacquainted with Miss Stein's work, it offers an illuminating interpretation. Readers prone to skip prefaces should start this book at the very beginning." W. G. Rogers

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ap 3 '49 650w

"Let us admit once and for all, she was very funny. . . But certainly her value far exceeds that of a mere comic. Reading over this valuable and fascinating collection of her works 'for the theatre' I am struck more forcibly than ever by the depth of her experiment in words." Leonard Bernstein

+ N Y Times p4 My 22 '49 1100w

New Yorker 25:122 Ap 9 '49 120w

"A book that has been put together with scholarly and loving care, with complete seriousness, and a belief that the doing of the job was well worth while. Yet it is a safe bet at almost any odds, I think, that all but Miss Stein's most devoted admirers will condemn this collection as a scandalous waste of paper, printer's ink, and binder's cloth. And there are strong reasons for such a judgment; reasons that can, indeed, be countered only by oblique arguments." B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 32:18 Ap 2 '49 950w

STEINBERG, SAUL. Art of living. [171p] $3.50 Harper

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 49-10834

Cartoons presenting life in present-day America, as it seems to this Rumanian-born artist, who first came to the United States in 1941.

Booklist 46:119 D 1 '49

"There's brilliant craftsmanship in these adroit rationalizations of child techniques."
+ Kirkus 17:599 O 15 '49 90w

"The pen of this artist is as skillful as his eye is uncannily creative. Terse in line though lavish in communication, many of his drawings utilize the crafts of frakur and of calligraphy, as witness the beautifully bogus documents on the page which faces a tiny study of a man doodling on the top of a table." Iris Barry
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p21 N 6 '49 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 27 '49 300w

"The artist's humor is as individual as his drawing technic and this combination brings out the funny side of everything he touches." V. P.
+ Springf'd Republican p8C N 27 '49 210w

STEINER, MRS CHARLOTTE. Big laughing book; created and il. by Charlotte Steiner; comp. by Margaret G. Otto in collaboration with [the author]. [58p] $1 Grosset
49-11564

"A compilation of games, riddles, tales and poems. . . Its contents range from Lear's nonsense rhymes to such folk tales as 'The Bremen Musicians' and 'The Wind and the Sun.'" Chicago Sunday Tribune

"Some of it has ear-marks of a Binet intelligence test (match words and pictures, fill in gaps, etc.), but it should hold a child's attention for a long period of time, and who could ask for much more?" Marcia Winn
Chicago Sunday Tribune p15 N 13 '49 100w

"Here is a wonderful lot of fun for the money." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 D 11 '49 80w

"This has a leaven of slapstick and pie-throwing humor which guarantees its enthusiastic reception among the bulk of the 2 to 7 set."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 13 '49 60w

STEINER, MRS CHARLOTTE. Kiki dances [il. by the author]. [31p] $1.25 Doubleday 49-11028

Picture story book about Kiki who wanted to be many things, such as a grown-up lady or a cowboy. Finally she decided to be a dancer, and the pictures show the steps she learned.

Booklist 46:146 D 15 '49

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun p17 D 3 '49 100w

Kirkus 17:549 O 1 '49 100w

"While the illustrator has made an effort to give correct positions, the pictures lack the natural grace of little children. Recommended for picture-book age." M. F. Cox
+ — Library J 74:1762 N 15 '49 70w

San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 13 '49 40w

"A charming book." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:22 N 12 '49 40w

STEINMETZ, EULALIE MARNA, comp. See New York (city). Public library. Stories

STEPHENS, JOHN LLOYD. Incidents of travel in Central America, Chiapas, & Yucatan; ed. with an introd. & notes by Richard L. Predmore. 2v 346;401p il $10 Rutgers univ. press
917.28 Central America—Description and travel
49-9589

A new edition of a narrative of travel in Central America and Southern Mexico. "In 1839 Stephens was sent by President Van Buren on a confidential mission to Central America and Mexico requiring, in the man undertaking it, a blend of archaeological inquisitiveness, political sagacity, engineering acumen and diplomatic finesse. . . He threaded his way in and out of political complications of appalling intricacy. He observed men and manners with minute care. . . And he contrived, in the midst of bloody civil warfare, to chat nonchalantly with Central America's two most fearsome warriors, Generals Carrera and Morazán—and, moreover, to remain completely neutral on Central American political problems." (N Y Times) No index.

Booklist 46:67 O 15 '49

"Thanks are due to Van Wyck Brooks, who recently reminded us that Stephens was 'the greatest of American travel writers,' and more thanks to Mr. Predmore for his competence in preparing this latest edition." Hubert Herring
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Jl 17 '49 1050w

"All through the book Stephens' serene contempt for danger stands forth, his uncanny powers of observation shine brightly, his wit coruscates. All through it the drawings of his fellow-wanderer, the Englishman Catherwood, sharply point up the writing. All through it, Mr. Predmore, for whom editing Stephens has been obviously a labor of love, contributes terse and helpful footnotes. More than a century ago a friend of the author wrote about his 'remarkable facility for retaining vividly to the last the freshness of first impressions.' That is a good summary of John Lloyd Stephens." T. R. Ybarra
+ N Y Times p7 Jl 3 '49 750w

"Van Wyck Brooks' designation of Stephens as 'the greatest of American travel writers' is a perfect epitome. 'Incidents of Travel in Central America' belongs on a shelf with Charles Doughty's 'Arabia Deserta' and Mungo Park's 'Travels in the Interior of Africa.' Aside from being an exciting adventure story . . . it is a model of direct, unhurried prose." Hamilton Basso
+ New Yorker 25:124 N 26 '49 1150w

"The Rutgers Press and Mr. Predmore have made a valuable contribution in bringing back to life this, the best book of a great American travel-writer." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 21 '49 900w

"In bringing out this new edition of his most celebrated work, Richard L. Predmore now offers Stephens further tribute. The introduction is perhaps too brief, but it may be conveniently supplemented by Victor W. von Hagen's biography [Book Review Digest 1947]. Predmore's notes on the archeological sections of the volumes seem satisfactory. Those on political conditions are inadequate. On the whole, however, the editor has done well. Apparently he intends eventually to publish new editions of all the writings of Stephens." J. F. Rippy
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:19 Ag 27 '49 650w

"Mr. Predmore and the Rutgers University Press must be congratulated for bringing this important work once more to the attention of the reading public. The short introduction is hardly sufficient for the subject that it tackles, but anyone who seeks more information on Stephens can turn to von Hagen's 'Maya Explorer.' There are some references that Mr. Predmore could not trace down, but for the most part these are unimportant and their absence does not detract from the value of the editorial work that he has done." A. W. Bunkley
+ Yale R ns 39:357 winter '50 1200w

STERLING, STEWART, pseud. See Winchell, P.

STERN, CATHERINE. Children discover arithmetic; an introduction to structural arithmetic; foreword by Marguerite Lehr. 295p il $4.50 Harper
372.7 Arithmetic—Study and teaching
49-8067

"Children discover arithmetic only if equipped with proper tools. This book endeavors to put the number system into such concrete form that the child can see and grasp its structure. Thus can he discover in a short time the system of numbers which the human mind took centuries to develop. It also helps the child build up the ability of quick and confident oral figuring, which has become a lost art." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

STERN, CATHERINE—Continued

Booklist 45:291 My 1 '49

Kirkus 17:98 F 15 '49 120w

"The book demonstrates in considerable detail that young children 'can discover in a short time the system of numbers which the human mind took centuries to develop.' It should encourage other teachers to test and extend Dr. Stern's stimulating methods. The sooner this is done, the better, because the fear of mathematics is perhaps the chief obstacle between the average layman and an understanding of science." J. E. Pfeiffer
+ N Y Times p12 Je 5 '49 550w

School & Society 69:182 Mr 5 '49 70w

STERN, GLADYS BRONWYN (MRS G. L. HOLDSWORTH). Benefits forgot. 276p $3.50 Macmillan

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 49-11683

The fifth volume of the author's autobiography, in which she writes of the three virtues: courtesy, mental honesty, and gratitude, the last named being her favorite. The book is "in effect a paean of gratitude for life itself, devoted largely to appreciation of the constant small miracles, the innumerable little things in the rich process of living that interest Miss Stern and give her deep if transient joy." N Y Herald Tribune Bk R

"Reading it, pondering parts of it afterwards, one finds himself not only entertained by Miss Stern's originality and wit; he will find also his viewpoint widened and enriched as he roams the fields of the arts." Margaret Williamson
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 D 29 '49 300w

"I happen to delight in every facet of her personality. A new book, be it fiction, autobiography, or one of these difficult to define books she does now and again, I hail with glee. This volume has much of post-war England, a new, and yet an old, England. It has re-discoveries of ways of life, new approaches to remembered things. It has much of her enjoyment of the writing and playing of others. It gives one a heady sense of shared experience, understanding, faith. Read as random essays, or scraps of autobiography, it has its own special savor."
+ Kirkus 17:347 Jl 1 '49 170w

"Highly recommended." H. R. Forbes
+ Library J 74:1091 Ag '49 110w

"Even in the more trivial passages in 'Benefits Forgot' there are her fine finesse in the use of words, the lovely malleability of her prose, and the unfailing vividness of her zest for life. 'Benefits Forgot' is more of the fabric that one richly gifted, responsible woman has been busily weaving through the years as her garment of life." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 6 '49 650w

"The author's miracle is that of the luminous and startling word. Her reckless imagination destroys and renews itself perpetually; and, as a result, the book has its dull spots. But read as it was written, in moments of leisure, it gives an abundance of pleasure." Nancy Lenkeith
+ N Y Times p33 N 20 '49 360w

New Yorker 25:165 N 19 '49 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 27 '49 400w

"The reader must be left to discover the skill with which Miss Stern uses her memory and her books, and the fine nicety of her quotations. There are a few mistakes or misprints which should be corrected in later editions." R. E. Roberts
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:42 D 3 '49 750w

Reviewed by R. F. Henchey
Springf'd Republican p8B D 18 '49 90w

"As a tabletalker she has a potential niche that she may claim at any time by anthologizing her best sequences. And at her best Miss Stern is excellent, exuberant and companionable."
+ Times [London] Lit Sup p667 O 14 '49 500w

STERN, PHILIP VAN DOREN. Lola; a love story. 278p $2.75 Rinehart

Montez, Lola—Fiction 49-8304

A novel based on the life of Lola Montez. The narrator is the son of a Boston banker, who met Lola while they were both in California. The story of their passionate attachment of a few months' duration is told in retrospect.

Booklist 45:296 My 1 '49

"Pretty passionate stuff—if that's what you're looking for."
Kirkus 17:69 F 1 '49 100w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor
Library J 74:496 Mr 15 '49 80w

"Wherever good historical fiction is read, there will this book not be." Jonathan Kilbourn
— N Y Times p18 Ap 17 '49 230w

"The Western scenery is plausible, and so is Mr. Stern's account of the beauty's lingering effect on the hero's Puritan emotions."
New Yorker 25:101 Ap 23 '49 160w

"What we have is a short novel that presents Lola as a brave woman of liberal ideas besides being very good looking and amorous, but which leaves both the period and the principal figures too vaguely realized to be a literary achievement of any note. One suspects Lola deserves better." Herschel Brickell
— Sat R of Lit 32:35 Ap 23 '49 280w

STERN, WALTER. Package engineering handbook; rev. version. 175p $7.50 Bd. products

658.7884 Packaging

"The book's seven chapters: define What Is a Packaging Engineer; cite Examples of Package Engineering Work in three major fields; describe 22 Organizations Furthering Package Engineering Work; give descriptions of 29 Tools of Package Engineering, from adhesives to paperboard containers, to wood boxes and barrels; describe How to Write Package Specifications; present 21 Reference Tables (including transportation regulations, rates, etc.); and provide over 250 Package Engineering Reference Sources." (Management R) Bibliography.

Booklist 45:397 Jl 15 '49

"A reference work that should be a worthwhile addition to the library of anyone interested in improving packaging techniques and reducing packaging costs and losses. . . The refernces alone make the book of substantial value."
+ Management R 38:580 O '49 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 34:73 S '49

STERNBERG, FRITZ. Living with crisis; the battle against depression and war [tr. from the German by Ralph Manheim]. 184p $2.50 Day

330.9 Economic conditions. Reconstruction (1939-) 49-967

"Extension of the author's thesis in How to Stop the Russians Without War, that Western Europe must be strengthened by genuinely democratic methods if it is to compete successfully with Soviet ideology. Here he discusses briefly economic, social, and political problems of Western Europe, Russia, and the U.S. and stresses dangers to the U.S. economy unless we control our armament program. Controversial solutions are mentioned." Booklist

---

Booklist 45:236 Mr 15 '49

"The author's blueprint for not only living with but overcoming the crisis has many attractive features. It also has a number of drawbacks. Foremost among the latter is Dr. Sternberg's socialist 'reference point' which allows him to brand German capitalists as 'the weakest link in European capitalism' but does not allow him to see that German Social Democrats were the weakest link in European socialism. Despite this and other reservations, however, 'Living With Crisis' may be classified as a highly informative and thoughtful discussion of the world situation." E. S. P.
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Ap 14 '49 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 O '49

Kirkus 16:657 D 15 '48 110w

"Clear, concise analysis of world problems. . . Not a book for light reading, this is sober, statistical and analytical. Those wanting economic information though will find it lucid, sound and stimulating. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 74:308 F 15 '49 130w

"There is nothing foggy in Mr. Sternberg's thinking; he proceeds from facts to findings with the utmost simplicity and positiveness. Perhaps he does not in this little volume take in enough facts to satisfy the most exacting, though he presumably will in the much larger and more comprehensive volume he is working on. But the program he proposes has a prophetic quality which deserves the most serious consideration in view of his earlier and now realized foresight." B. J. Hovde
+ Nation 168:336 Mr 19 '49 900w

"The study of these interpenetrating situations forms a well reasoned, compact and provocative book." August Heckscher
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 My 1 '49 650w

"Anyone who cares to understand what the United States must do in order to avoid depression at home and war abroad may benefit from reading this brief, simplified but highly concentrated analysis." George Soule
+ N Y Times p13 Ap 17 '49 950w

Reviewed by Asher Brynes
Sat R of Lit 32:17 Mr 5 '49 650w

"Mr. Sternberg, in spite of his tendency to over-simplify puzzling problems, is an effective producer of crisp, almost staccato analyses of the world economic situation. . . This book is written as if the author is breathlessly racing to keep ahead of world events and to warn America of what may happen if it procrastinates too long. Mr. Sternberg's general ideas are not always as controversial as he seems to assume (witness the consummation of the North Atlantic Pact). His more detailed interpretations and summaries, while it must be conceded they are thoughtfully conceived and presented, are also far from being so new or organized that they may be expected to stir up any real arguments." Donald Derby
Springf'd Republican p5D Ap 24 '49 450w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:199 Je '49 360w

STETTINIUS, EDWARD REILLY. Roosevelt and the Russians; the Yalta conference; ed. by Walter Johnson. 367p il $4 Doubleday
940.531 Crimea conference, Yalta, Russia, 1945. Roosevelt, Franklin Delano. U.S.—Foreign relations—Russia 49-10915

"Mr. Stettinius has written this book to refute the current stories that President Roosevelt's concessions to the Russians were so great as to be responsible for our present difficulties with the Soviet Union. In a painstaking, day-by-day account which discusses in detail each decision taken at the Conference, Stettinius shows that the Russians in fact conceded more than we did, and that their failure to honor their agreements after the war is the cause of the cold war." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 46:57; 80 O 15 '49; N 1 '49

"Historical novelists in justifying their crafts often charge that history is plain dull. They could not prove their point with this book, which faithfully conveys the excitement and sense of destiny with which all those at Yalta approached their task. It is a stirring picture of what happened when the three most powerful men in the world sat down together to try to settle their differences." Emmett Dedmon
+ Chicago Sun p10X N 6 '49 750w

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
— Chicago Sunday Tribune p9 N 6 '49 600w

Reviewed by S. R. Davis
Christian Science Monitor p11 N 3 '49 1500w

"In this volume Mr. Stettinius goes so far as to characterize the Yalta Conference 'on the whole' as a 'diplomatic triumph for the United States and Great Britain.' The basis for this curious contention is that the USSR made more concessions numerically than we did. . . Can fatuousness go much further? . . Mr. Stettinius, in a final note, gets much closer to the nature of the thing than in all the preceding three hundred pages. He says that the Western nations can follow their present (cold war) policy toward the USSR because at Yalta President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill tried 'to deal with the Russian leaders in an honest and honorable manner.'" E. S. Skillin
— + Commonweal 51:136 N 4 '49 500w

"An essential book to better understanding of what lies behind the record of the deterioration of our relations with the Soviet."
+ Kirkus 17:491 S 1 '49 460w

"An important volume." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 74:1674 N 1 '49 130w

"It is sad that Mr. Stettinius should have died on the eve of publication of this book, but we can be grateful that he lived to complete what is not the least creditable of his public services. It is a work which should both help to cool the Yalta controversy and prove valuable to historians of the war." Keith Hutchison
+ Nation 169:472 N 12 '49 1000w

"Some of the grosser allegations about Yalta are well disproved. Mr. Stettinius is convinced that the deterioration in the President's health had nothing to do with it, for he was 'alert' and capable throughout. He and Churchill were not swindled in any obvious way. But if the West actually gave little, did it not get much less in return than its high hopes led it to suppose? Was the real deception not a self-deception, which failed to perceive that the negotiators had never actually reached to the issues which they supposed that they were settling? However one answers such questions, the book, brief as it is, stands as a contribution to the history of the second war of absolutely first importance." Walter Millis
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p5 N 6 '49 1450w

"In so far as he is able to do so, Mr. Stettinius has told all. . . For though Mr. Stettinius was Secretary of State, Mr. Roosevelt told him at the outset at Yalta that he would not join the military discussions, and he did not learn about all of them till later. He has had access to the official discussions and has used them. But naturally he writes best about what he knew best. For this reason his book is somewhat lopsided. . . It may not be for Mr. Stettinius to defend the military thinking of that time, but since he fails to do so, he has been unable to dispel the basic misunderstandings to which the Yalta Conference gave rise." Raymond Swing
N Y Times p7 N 6 '49 1050w

New Yorker 25:155 N 12 '49 120w

Reviewed by Gordon Pates
San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 6 '49 1300w

STETTINIUS, E. R.—Continued

"Some general readers may be disappointed not to find more personal details, more anecdotes, more lively sidelights in this book. It is not a book designed for serialization, but for history. Yet from it in the carefully quoted statements of Marshal Stalin, of Winston Churchill, and of Roosevelt, I got a clearer sense of the personalities of these great men in perhaps their greatest time than from any similar book which I have read. It seems to me a solid, sound, honest book." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 32:15 N 19 '49 800w

Springf'd Republican p8C N 13 '49 90w

"His book is a flat, deadpan report on the eight-day trading session that embittered many a champion of 'open covenants openly arrived at.' It is the most complete report yet made and should be historically important, but many a reader will refuse to let Russian skulduggery take the whole rap for the Yaltese cross."

Time 54:100 N 7 '49 600w

STEVENS, MRS FRANCES MOYER (ROSS) (CHRISTOPHER HALE, pseud). He's late this morning. 189p $2.25 Doubleday 49-8224

Detective story.

Booklist 45:337 Je 1 '49

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Ap 22 '49 30w

Kirkus 17:96 F 15 '49 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Ap 24 '49 140w

"The book sags in the middle (it would have made a better novelette), and Lieut. Bill French, though likeable as ever, earns a black mark by withholding evidence from the reader. But the warm Florida atmosphere, a new and ingenious plot trick and vivid characterization earn this a place as one of the better Hales." Anthony Boucher

+ — N Y Times p19 Ap 10 '49 150w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 8 '49 140w

Sat R of Lit 32:46 Ap 30 '49 50w

STEVENS, HENRY BAILEY. Recovery of culture [with a foreword by Gerald Heard]. 247p maps $3 Harper

901 Culture 49-7183

"Herein are interwoven strands of biology, anthropology, horticulture, philology, sociology, and religion, brought together to form what Toynbee calls the only true history—synoptic history—so says this modern-day agriculturist." (School & Society) Index.

Am Soc R 14:568 Ag '49 330w

"This is a most illuminating book. . . This is not a wholly convincing argument for the road to rediscovery of culture, peace and true religion, but he argues his point with passionate conviction himself."

+ — Kirkus 17:174 Mr 15 '49 130w

New Yorker 24:78 Ja 8 '49 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 24 '49 200w

School & Society 69:16 Ja 1 '49 30w

"As speculation, not as history, the book is bound to delight many. A generous reader can forgive the logic, skim the sometimes debateable etomologies, qualify the thesis and have a thoroughly pleasant evening." H. L. Varley

Springf'd Republican p9B Mr 6 '49 480w

"'The Recovery of Culture' is a tract, a tract of the highest character, burning with sincerity, packed with careful research, learned, gentle, quiet, yet startling." Russell Lord

+ Survey 85:400 Jl '49 500w

STEVENS, WILLIAM OLIVER. Mystery of dreams. 280p $3.50 Dodd

135.3 Dreams 49-10988

"A trustee of the American Society for Psychical Research, Dr. Stevens has selected examples of significant and prophetic dreams from the published records of the British and American societies and included some dream experiences of friends and strangers." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 46:90 N 15 '49

Reviewed by Richard Blakesley
Chicago Sunday Tribune p13 N 6 '49 300w

STEVENSON, BURTON EGBERT, ed. Home of Bible quotations. 645p $6 Harper

220.2 Bible. Whole—Selections. Quotations 49-11832

Comprehensive collection of quotations from the Bible, arranged by subject, with cross references. Detailed index, which can serve as a concordance, or subject index to the Bible.

Booklist 46:151 Ja 1 '50

Bookmark 9:55 D '49 40w

"The convenience of such a collection is obvious. To be sure, most quotations can be traced in a good concordance, if one knows what one is looking for." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 66:1516 D 21 '49 180w

Kirkus 17:458 Ag 15 '49 40w

"Excellent addition to reference material on the Bible compiled by an authority on books of verse and quotations. . . Highly recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 74:1906 D 15 '49 100w

"For any minister, here is a vital aid, for students and teachers, a wonderful guidebook. For the family it will be the solution to many a discussion on religious matters, because it assembles the entire thought to be found in the Bible on any particular subject, revealing its hidden, limitless wealth." H. E. Paine

+ Springf'd Republican p10B D 25 '49 240w

STEVENSON, DOROTHY EMILY (MRS JAMES REID PEPLOE). Vittoria Cottage. 250p $2.75 Rinehart 49-6496

"Caroline Dering was the widowed mistress of Vittoria Cottage near the village of Ashbridge. The youngish mother of three grown children, she had need of her equable disposition and vigorous imagination to cope with their squabbles, the problems of growing up, and their love affairs. . . Everybody in Ashbridge knew everybody else, so when a stranger, Robert Stepperton, came to stay at the Cock and Bull it wasn't long before Mrs. Dering met him on one of her walks. She liked him and felt sorry for him. His story—which she soon heard—is the nearest the book comes to excitement." N Y Times

Bookmark 9:30 N '49 50w

"Some tartness and spice to the story make this a pleasing and plausible English still life."

+ Kirkus 17:374 Jl 15 '49 150w

"The perplexed lending desk assistant is always delighted to have one of these quiet stories of really nice people to recommend to the patron who wishes to avoid the problems of 1984. Not great but useful." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 74:1204 S 1 '49 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p36 N 13 '49 110w

"The book is on the romantic side, spiced with touches of humor and a light-hearted nonchalance. Pleasant and diverting but not demanding." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p4 O 9 '49 290w

"This little novel, unlike the author's last, is not distinguished by any peculiar or astonishing insight or by any of the lovely descriptive passages I remember enjoying throughout the story of Mrs. Savage. It runs, like its predecessor, smoothly along, and enjoys life and happy people in much the same way; but it lacks the vitality, the vigor of characterization, the neat, sharp definition which would have made it noteworthy." N. G. Chalkin

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:416 N 19 '49 320w
Springf'd Republican p7D D 11 '49 60w

STEVENSON, DOROTHY EMILY (MRS JAMES REID PEPLOE). Young Mrs. Savage; being an account of every-day events in the lives of Mrs. Savage and her four children. 312p $2.75 Rinehart
49-7692

A young widow with four children goes to her childhood home in Scotland to spend a vacation with her old nurse. Here, surrounded by happy memories, and in the company of people she loves, the difficult war years are thrust into the background, and a new love is in the offing.

Booklist 45:218; 243 Mr 1 '49; Mr 15 '49
Kirkus 16:629 D 1 '48 120w

"Plot has a fairy tale quality, characters are likeable and the book is enjoyable, fulfilling author's promise made in the preface to write for those (and there are many) who want a book 'about children and the ordinary everyday events in the lives of pleasant people.'" M. A. Johnson
+ Library J 74:60 Ja 1 '49 80w
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 Mr 27 '49 170w

"One of the best sections of the book deals with a summer's holiday which Mrs. Savage and her brood spend in an old Scottish home. There is a dose of plot at the end—but even when it ventures into a carefully manufactured little mystery, Miss Stevenson's novel remains sentimental in the nicest sort of way." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p20 Ap 3 '49 220w

"There can be no doubt that Mrs. Stevenson has caught the experience of being very young, and of remembering it, and of the quick surging sense of well-being which accompanies the revisitation of childhood scenes. But this perceptiveness of hers is not quite enough to make her story notable. It is merely a refreshing encounter with some refreshing people. The most we can say for it is that, though essentially unimportant, it has captured a spirit of nostalgia and a sense of childhood which are almost certain to communicate themselves to any reader who has ever stopped to remember." N. G. Chalkin
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:44 My 21 '49 550w
Wis Lib Bul 45:66 Ap '49

STEVENSON, ELIZABETH. Crooked corridor; a study of Henry James. 172p $2.75 Macmillan 813 James, Henry 49-11903

"Critical analysis of James's fiction, by a librarian on the staff of the Carnegie Library of Atlanta. After a brief review of the facts of James's life, Miss Stevenson examines first the scope of his art, then his principal theme ('the collision of the individual and society'), and finally his craftsmanship as novelist." (Library J) Bibliographical note. Index.

"A book which is, I think, the best general extended commentary upon his work that has yet been made." Edward Wagenknecht
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p4 D 25 '49 450w

"The nature of the content, the too rigidly logical organization of the material, require, for understanding, a thorough background. The appeal is for students of James, college libraries, etc."
Kirkus 17:503 S 1 '49 80w

"An admirer of James, Miss Stevenson answers the usual objections to his work in a direct and sensible manner. Her study makes an effective apologia for James, in terms which the general reader should find clear and persuasive." H. W. Hart
+ Library J 74:1199 S 1 '49 100w

"Miss Stevenson generally nails her quarry with sure, firm thrusts, but here and there she resorts to a combination of slow stalking, feints, and frontal assaults that smack, so to speak, of critical opportunism. As an exercise in criticism 'The Crooked Corridor' is refreshing and perceptive; as a book about Henry James it suffers from its self-imposed disregard of what others have said about him." Milton Rugoff
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p18 N 27 '49 600w

"Competent but overworshipful. Unfortunately, her book is less a critique than an icon." Gerald Sykes
— + N Y Times p8 N 20 '49 90w
New Yorker 25:62 D 24 '49 120w

STEWART, GEORGE RIPPEY. Earth abides. 373p $3 Random house
49-11267

Another story of disaster and its aftermath by the author of Storm and Fire. This relates the experiences of Isherwood Williams, whose isolation in a mountain cabin saves him when a world-wide pestilence wipes out all but a small handful of human beings.

Booklist 46:58; 83 O 15 '49; N 1 '49
Bookmark 9:56 D '49 50w
Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
Chicago Sun p61 D 2 '49 60w

"Once again we have evidence that a philosophy of pragmatism fails to provide answers to man's quest for certainty and comfort, or fulfillment of his aspiration for spiritual good. The book remains, nevertheless, a provocative commentary on some of the most persistent dilemmas (racial, social and biological) which confront mankind. The reader may not always agree with Mr. Stewart's premises or conclusions, nor receive with favor the graphic portrayals of various epidemics and plagues; but it must be admitted that the book has more thought-challenging elements than a shelf-full of ordinary novels." M. W. Stoer
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 15 '49 600w

"Humorless and rather pedestrian, this is a disappointing novel."
— Kirkus 17:481 S 1 '49 340w

"Highly recommended." W. K. Harrison
+ Library J 74:1461 O 1 '49 80w

"A careful, well written, intensely interesting novel which should appeal to young people." M. D. Read
+ Library J 74:1921 D 15 '49 80w

"'Earth Abides' is not just a thriller. It has its lesson for the human race. It has also what one has come to expect from Mr. Stewart, a wealth of factual knowledge about subjects as varied as hydro-electric power or the habits of the louse. But above all it has the quick pulse of a good story, told by one of the best narrators of our day." J. J. Maloney
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 O 30 '49 750w

"Mr. Stewart has chosen a hero who knows more and cares more about natural processes than he knows or cares about what goes on in people's minds. Ish is confronted by a few moral and psychological problems, but these are kept on an elementary level, and Mr. Stewart is not altogether happy in dealing with them. The novel therefore lacks most of the qualities we think of as essential to fiction—except a sequence of events that carries the reader on and on. In its narrative force, as in the plausibility of its practical details, it is more than a little like 'Robinson Crusoe,' and it has the same kind of fascination." Granville Hicks
+ — N Y Times p4 O 23 '49 460w

"Mr. Stewart has achieved one of those novels, so rare in our time, that the reader wishes would never end."
+ New Yorker 25:148 N 12 '49 190w

STEWART, G. R.—Continued

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 30 '49 1600w

"Previous novels on similar themes have been little more than boy-meets-girl romances in a fantastic setting; Mr. Stewart's fictive exploration of the theme is distinctly several cuts above its predecessors; it is a novel told with explicit deliberation, an excellent eye for the right detail, and a cumulative effect of power and faith in man's destiny." August Derleth
+ Sat R of Lit 32:14 N 26 '49 650w

"If all the books about the finish of the human race were laid end to end, authors might get the idea and stop writing them. Until then, readers can only hope that once in a while somebody will write a pretty good one, as bestselling Author George R. Stewart (Storm) has done."
+ Time 54:86 O 31 '49 390w

STEWART, JEAN JOSEPHINE, and EDWARDS, ALICE LEORA. Foods: production, marketing, consumption. 2d ed 490p il maps $6.35; to schools $4.75 Prentice-Hall

641 Food. Food supply—U.S. 48-7903

New edition of a textbook first published in 1938 (Book Review Digest 1939). "The material and arrangement in this edition have been considerably revised. The scope of the contents is indicated by the first line of the preface, which defines the material as 'information basic to the selection and preparation of foods by individuals and to the feeding of families and larger groups.'" (J Home Econ) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

"In a few places the authors have shown lack of close familiarity with the subjects they discussed. . . By mentioning these points the reviewer does not wish to detract from the value of the book. They happen to be in his special field of interest. Some of the difficulty is due largely to the fact that the authors have tried to cover a large field in a book to be used by students." F. W. Tanner
Am J Pub Health 39:90 Ja '49 550w

Reviewed by M. A. Rollins
J Home Econ 41:39 Ja '49 220w

STEWART, JOHN INNES MACKINTOSH (MICHAEL INNES, pseud). Case of the journeying boy. 314p $2.75 Dodd 49-8751

Detective story.

Booklist 46:35 S 15 '49

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun My 13 '49 230w

New Repub 120:26 Je 6 '49 120w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge
+ New Statesman & Nation 38:106 Jl 23 '49 70w

"The story has everything (but love), including atoms and writing that will knock you for a goal. Too good to be true, but here it is." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ap 17 '49 280w

"Innes enthusiasts will be glad to know that his new book is one of his best, a fine suspense novel with the kind of penetrating and humorous observations on the frailty of human nature that one has come to expect of him. Indeed, the story is so well swathed in blandly tortuous Innes sentences, with their deft turns of phrase, that a reader not susceptible to the elephantine, ironic, mandarin pedantry of his style, and interested only in what happens next, may find himself daunted." Elizabeth Bullock
+ N Y Times p18 My 15 '49 180w

"Skillful and entertaining."
+ New Yorker 25:104 Ap 23 '49 100w
+ Sat R of Lit 32:43 My 7 '49 40w

"The publishers claim it as a novel of 'mystery detection, character and suspense'; perhaps it is quibbling when all these are present in plenty to complain that a little less wordiness would have deepened the mystery and heightened the suspense, without detracting from the excellent character-drawing, and that the reader is in the unusual position of knowing more or less everything before Inspector Cadover of the C.I.D.—a device which may appeal to some, but will much displease others." Dilwyn Rees
+ — Spec 183:248 Ag 19 '49 190w

STEWART, JOHN INNES MACKINTOSH (MICHAEL INNES, pseud). Character and motive in Shakespeare; some recent appraisals examined. 147p $2.25 Longmans

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Characters. Shakespeare, William—Criticism and interpretation 49-8659

A volume of essays in which the author examines and attacks some of the theories of recent Shakespearian critics, particularly Robert Bridges, Professor Schücking and Professor E. E. Stoll. Contents: Falstaff on Boars hill; Bottom's dream; Professor Schücking's fatal Cleopatra; "Steep tragic contrast"; The birth and death of Falstaff. Index.

"Mr. Stewart's Character and Motive in Shakespeare is a first-rate piece of criticism. He has chosen a skirmishing approach; through attacks on the historical or 'realist' school of critics, who would deafen us to Shakespeare with the creaking of Elizabethan stage-boards, he reaches his own conclusions about the complexities of Macbeth, Falstaff, Othello and others; and these attacks, besides being often deadly, are remarkably entertaining." G. W. Stonier
+ New Statesman & Nation 37:563 My 28 '49 1400w

"An exciting and brilliantly written book. Mr. Stewart, like the objects of his attack, is not invulnerable; but few contemporary Shakespeareans have presented their ideas with more good sense and wit." Milton Crane
+ N Y Times p34 N 20 '49 240w

"These essays, aside from their contribution to the industry of Shakespearean criticism, can be recommended to the non-technical reader, for they are themselves fresh appraisals by a bright and witty mind." Robert Halsband
+ Sat R of Lit 32:34 Je 25 '49 190w

"Shakespearian criticism is a jungle, wilderness and tropical forest. We are grateful when someone sallies forth with an axe to clear the undergrowth and fell the dead wood, and let in the day. But he must be aware of the trails already blazed, of the clearings and oases that exist. . . Mr. Stewart has not the deftness and lucidity, the detachment and compelling power, which might have been expected from a writer of detective fiction as accomplished as Michael Innes, and which he would certainly require of one of his own criminal investigators."
Times [London] Lit Sup p298 My 6 '49 650w

STEWART, RANDALL. Nathaniel Hawthorne. 279p $4 Yale univ. press

B or 92 Hawthorne, Nathaniel 48-8441

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"By allowing the facts to speak for themselves in Nathaniel Hawthorne, Randall Stewart has made some of the murkier legends about Hawthorne vaporize. . . I cannot say, however, that he has altogether solved the problem out of which the Hawthorne legend grew." William Barrett
Atlantic 183:91 Ap '49 650w

"The sole disappointing feature of Professor Stewart's book is its brevity. One wishes it had been more detailed, for no one is more fitted to write the complete and definitive biography of Hawthorne than this biographer." Manning Hawthorne
New Eng Q 22:105 Mr '49 600w

Reviewed by Bonamy Dobrée
Spec 183:84 Jl 15 '49 230w

Times [London] Lit Sup p770 N 25 '49 2600w

"Within its rather narrow limits, this careful, unassumingly written study is the nearest to a standard life of Hawthorne yet produced. . . The full use made of the English notebooks points up the sparseness of quotations from other available letters and papers, particularly in sections devoted to the early creative years. . . Documentation is almost totally lacking. The book essays little in the way of critical analysis or assessment; the attention given to the general social and intellectual background of Hawthorne is comparatively casual."
+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 5:55 Mr '49 360w

STIERI, EMANUELE. Taking your baby's picture. 125p il $1.95 Greenberg

778.925 Photography of children 49-11242

Chapters on photographing babies either indoors or outdoors. Includes a chapter on the psychology of handling babies; as well as information on choosing a camera, films, and other equipment; and how to develop pictures.

Booklist 46:93 N 15 '49

"If you are in a mood to overlook a cheap printing job and some extremely poor reproductions that eliminate much photografic detail, you can get some helpful advice on the taking of children's informal portraits from this book." Robert Cromie
Chicago Sunday Tribune p20 N 20 '49 90w

"Filled with good counsel. . . Stieri sticks to babies literally, which puts this small but useful book into a different, and in its way more valuable, class than others which concern photographing children all the way up to their teens." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 7 '49 100w

"With its charts and tables, this will be a helpful reference book for experienced snapshoters, with modest box cameras or imported Leica." H. S. N.
+ Springf'd Republican p8C N 27 '49 90w

STILES, PAULINE. Doctor Will. 343p $3 Bobbs 49-11276

Novel based on the life of a California frontier town from the late 1880's to the turn of the century. The hero is a straightforward doctor who became involved in the lives of many of his patients, all of whom stood loyally by him when he needed their support.

"The several interlocking plots are melodramatic and contrived, but have all the interest inherent in mysteries. The characters are one-dimensional." J. L. Ross
Library J 74:1461 O 1 '49 70w

"'Doctor Will' maintains a rapid pace throughout—with the hero fighting evil as well as ailments, mending souls as well as bodies, and winning out finally against a pair of unethical competitors. Pauline Stiles writes for those who want a lively black-and-white pattern of story with sentimental embroidery."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p12 O 30 '49 180w

STILL, BAYRD. Milwaukee; the history of a city. 638p il maps $6 State hist. soc. of Wis, 816 State st, Madison, Wis.

977.595 Milwaukee

"A one volume history of urban development in the American middle west from frontier days to the present industrial center as exemplified in the city of Milwaukee. Nationality backgrounds, history of commercial foundations, urban services and political issues are all considered." Wis Lib Bul

"The most comprehensive coverage of the year-by-year development of the city that has ever been written. No phase of that evolution from the appearance of the first white settlers to its graduation as an important metropolitan city has been omitted." D. W. Hoan
+ Am Hist R 55:241 O '49 200w
Current Hist 16:169 Mr '49 50w

Reviewed by Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 32:30 Je 18 '49 150w

"Recommended."
+ Wis Lib Bul 45:28 F '49

STIMSON, DOROTHY. Scientists and amateurs; a history of the Royal society. (Life of science lib) 270p il $4 Schuman

506.242 Scientists. Royal society of London 49-32

History of the world's oldest scientific institution in continuous existence, the Royal Society of London, founded by Charles II of England. Bibliography. Index.

Am Soc R 14:331 Ap '49 120w

"[Readers] will find Dr. Stimson's book accurate, informative, and absorbing, and a worthy addition to the valuable 'Life of Science' Library to which it belongs." Herbert Dingle
+ Ann Am Acad 264:161 Jl '49 320w
Booklist 45:205 F 15 '49
Chicago Sun p8X F 6 '49 50w

"Although Miss Stimson has written a very informative book, she has allowed a certain formalism to destroy what could have been as fascinating a story as any novel. For here is the making of real historical writing; exciting, humorous, colorful—some of the most colorful figures in English history are in these pages—and controversial material. But neither the events nor the men come to life as they should. By means of numerous paragraph headings, the book takes on a 'textbookish' air; a dangerous atmosphere for any reader to encounter. On the other hand, there can be no question about Miss Stimson's research and love for her subject." J. B. Kelley
+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 22 '49 600w

Reviewed by Julian Sohon
Library J 74:554 Ap 1 '49 60w

Reviewed by Walter Allen
New Statesman & Nation 37:411 Ap 23 '49 1000w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Ap 17 '49 250w

"Miss Stimson's work is a gem of lucid, careful popularization." Marshall Clagett
+ Sat R of Lit 32:28 Ap 2 '49 700w

Reviewed by B. C. Gruenberg
Survey 85:397 Jl '49 500w

"If one fault may be found, it is in historical perspective. The early history of the Society is dealt with fully, but the recent years cursorily. . . A critical eye will also notice one or two matters which a more precise proofreading would have corrected. . . But these are minor blemishes in a sympathetic, readable and well-illustrated study which may be warmly commended to students of the history of science in general and lovers of the Royal Society in particular."
+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p188 Mr 19 '49 1200w

"The book is well documented and illustrated, and the history of the Society is told with accuracy and sometimes with verve. Since it is many years since such a history has appeared, this book will fill, if not a long-felt want, then at least a long-enduring lacuna."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:222 Je '49 280w

STIRLING, BRENTS. Populace in Shakespeare. 203p $3 Columbia univ. press

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Criticism and interpretation 49-9747

"For a century Shakespeare has alternately been attacked as anti-democratic in spirit, or defended as the champion of true democracy. The author of this book explains how this interesting issue arose and endeavors to clarify it in terms, not of modern or Elizabethan political theory, but of living controversies peculiar to Shakespeare's own time." (Publisher's note) Index.

"For a reader already acquainted with Professor Stirling's magazine articles his book

STIRLING, BRENTS—Continued
adds nothing significantly new, but does provide certain significant helps in the way of added documentation and an index that lists more than mere names and places. But for the reader who does not know the articles the book shapes into an interesting whole the result of ten years spent in Renaissance studies. No clergyman will be surprised to discover added confirmation in Stirling's book of the generalization. Preachers reëcho the popular ideas of their own epochs, and preach not so often for eternity as for their own particular times." Robert Stevenson

+ Crozer Q 27:82 Ja '50 750w

"Readable as well as scholarly. . . Recommended to Shakespeare, theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 74:1328 S 15 '49 20w

"Among the differing schools of interpretation, Mr. Stirling moves judiciously. His own particular thesis, strained perhaps by a desire to make the most of the sermons and tracts he has read in the Huntington Library, stresses the parallel between Shakespeare's anti-democratic sentiments and contemporary attacks on the Puritan movement. Denunciation of the populace is such a commonplace in both contexts, however, that it should not weigh too heavily." Harry Levin

N Y Times p5 Ag 7 '49 320w

"For all his awareness of newer critical approaches, Professor Stirling uses one which actually belongs to traditional literary scholarship; his contribution in this study is rather that of synthesis and documentation. He is widely literate and frequently witty. It is pleasant to come across such a statement as this in a scholarly book: 'It would seem that Shelley's unacknowledged legislators' are lame-duck Congressmen.' "

+ Sat R of Lit 32:23 N 19 '49 190w

STIRLING, LILLA M. Jolly season; il. by Sue Felt. 204p $2 Scribner

48-11471

Story of a small boy's two Christmases—the first in New York city, the second in Ontario, and of his pet Spotty, "the only frog on record that travelled Pullman from New York to northern Ontario."

"Both story and illustrations give a lively picture of a Canadian village and the friendly people who lived there." J. D. L.

+ Horn Bk 25:40 Ja '49 80w

Kirkus 16:480 S 15 '48 60w

"This unusual vacation, filled with fun and adventure, among people who are real characters, carries with it a fresh breath from the north woods. Good pen and ink sketches by Sue Felt. Recommended for ages 10-12." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 74:67 Ja 1 '49 70w

STIRLING, MONICA. Lovers aren't company. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 248p $2.50 Little

49-8901

An intelligent Italian-American girl returning to Rome in 1944 as a civilian member of the American branch of psychological warfare is the heroine. She discovers that her beloved sister is dead, and her fourteen-year-old niece Vittoria, is almost dead with grief. The aunt and niece are happy together until the former falls in love with a Frenchman. Then Vittoria joins a youth of her own age and disappears into a black market gang. The novel closes with the first steps in the rescue of Vittoria.

Booklist 45:337 Je 1 '49

"The fresh touch here, which is also a smooth one, the contrasting charms of the three [main characters] give this a special appeal which should also be a very general one in quality feminine fiction."

+ Kirkus 17:120 Mr 1 '49 180w

"In the main, this is a rather ineffective novel. . . Author focuses plot on a weak romance, rather than developing such potential facets as displaced persons or abandoned children about which she gives hints of knowing a great deal." E. P. Nichols

Library J 74:736 My 1 '49 70w

"Miss Stirling's unrestrained delight in the sensuous opulence of life under an Italian sun rather smothers a novel of much charm and accomplishment." H. I'A. Fausset

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 F 18 '49 150w

" 'Lovers Aren't Company' makes a more than promising debut by a new writer; it does not startle by anything particularly new, but it reaffirms one's perception of the crisis of modern civilization, and it well expresses the emotional love of Europe that can animate an intelligent woman who would not for the world be anything else than an American." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 My 15 '49 850w

"The book is intentionally light. Whether or not it is too light the reader must decide for himself. The writing, in general, is meticulous and accurate. Only once or twice, in moments of heightened emotion, does Miss Stirling go beyond her own limits." W. F. Weaver

+ N Y Times p21 My 15 '49 190w

New Yorker 25:111 My 14 '49 100w

"Confused, inept, under-done novel. . . It is unfortunate, because in this scattered tale of an American woman of Italian descent and her orphaned niece, discovered after the war in Italy, there is the shadow of a real idea and the sense of much experienced emotion." M. S. Douglas

— + Sat R of Lit 32:33 Je 18 '49 360w

STOCKING, GEORGE WARD, and WATKINS, MYRON WEBSTER. Cartels or competition? the economics of international controls by business and government; with the report and recommendations of the Committee on cartels and monopoly. 516p $4 Twentieth century fund

338.883 Trusts, Industrial—International trusts. Commercial policy. Monopolies

48-7225

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

Foreign Affairs 27:331 Ja '49 50w

"Cartels or Competition? achieves by the breadth of its documentation and the sureness of its analysis an impact which cannot fail to be felt by American policy makers and by other students of the cartel question. . . If any question may be raised concerning the definitiveness of the present study, it is perhaps that the internal dynamics of cartelization, for example, the progress from lesser to higher degrees of restrictionism, might be more clearly exposed by closer examination of the different courses of development of unified managements on the one hand and combinations of separate producer interests on the other." D. W. O'Connell

+ — Pol Sci Q 64:122 Mr '49 1550w

U S Quarterly Bkl 4:306 S '48 280w

STOKES, GEORGE STEWART. Agnes Repplier, lady of letters. 274p il $3 Univ. of Pa. press

B or 92 Repplier, Agnes 49-7564

A biography of this American essayist and biographer. The author, who is a Philadelphian, has based his work on personal interviews, letters, and much research. Bibliography. Index.

"Although this biography of the American essayist and biographer complies outwardly with all of the requirements for such a study, it gives the reader the impression that the author is somewhat condescending and that he did not have sufficiently lively material with which to work. . . Since there has been no other biography of the author, librarians will probably want to buy this one."

Booklist 45:240 Mr 15 '49

"Many of her own and her books' friends are still living, while the new generation growing up in our hurried world would be the poorer for not joining their ranks. To reach this dual audience has been Dr. Stokes's task, which he carries off with the bibliographical thoroughness of a doctoral dissertation and the gossipy geniality of an afternoon tea." Katherine Brégy
Cath World 169:73 Ap '49 500w

Commonweal 49:526 Mr 1 '49 50w

"Frankly, I found this unspeakably dull—with none of the quality of Agnes Repplier's personality, but only a pedantic marshalling of the somewhat colorless facts of her surface life, a critical appraisal of her work."
— Kirkus 17:49 Ja 15 '49 40w

Nation 168:717 Je 25 '49 30w

"Her biography is an exceedingly mild Philadelphia story. It has about it that 'sound sort of dullness,' neither trivial nor stupid, that Miss Repplier found humanly attractive in the monthly magazine which printed the major part of her output. . . Dr. Stokes has enjoyed the advantage of numerous talks with Miss Repplier, beginning in 1940 and continuing until the infirmities of age put a stop to further communion. He writes as a tactful admirer, not actually unaware of his subject's crotchets and shortcomings, but inclined to dim them in a haze of devotion and local pride." G. F. Whicher
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Je 5 '49 750w

"Dealing with a consummate artist in her field about whom, as a woman, we have known too little, Mr. Stokes' biography is a labor of love. He has got from Miss Repplier's own lips in her elder years a great part of a story which begins when a little girl could not seem to learn to read, takes her to a convent and follows her through all the eight decades of a fruitful career crowned with rewarding honors. If at times the biographer seems a bit heavy-handed, would not that happen to anybody whose text is so studded with passages pointed and polished by Miss Repplier's own hand. And by way of recompense, this, in turn, gives the book almost the value of an anthology of her works." H. I. Brock
+ N Y Times p18 Mr 6 '49 700w

"Dr. Stokes is an admirer of Miss Repplier's polished and fine-cutting style, as well as of her character and personality, and his book, which contains many extracts from the essays she wrote in the sixty-odd years of her active career, should do much to restore interest in an extremely civilized and accomplished literary artist."
+ New Yorker 24:93 F 19 '49 80w

Reviewed by Anne Comfort
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 20 '49 550w

"Mr. Stokes has done all that can be done with this quiet life, which leaves on the reader an impression of culture, of charm, of surety, of liveliness of mind and spirit, of an intelligent and enlightened Catholicism." H. M. Jones
+ Sat R of Lit 32:32 Ap 30 '49 600w

STOKES, H. G. English place-names. (British heritage ser) 120p pl maps $3.75 Batsford

929.4 Names, Geographical. English language—Etymology [48-9618]

"It is the point of H. G. Stokes that the quaint names of England are not the result of methodical planning, but rather the product of colloquial word-of-mouth descriptions. Place names have been adopted because one of the town's citizens was notorious for selling stale fish; another place took its name from a resident whose failing was forgetting his trousers. So the reader will come to know the derivation of Cotton End in Bedfordshire, Christmas Pie in Surrey, and Pity Me in Durham, all of which are pictured." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 45:177 Ja 15 '49

"Mr. Stokes, for all his erudition, provides a great deal of fun with his English place-names. He writes briskly and brightly, and even at times hilariously; and, to adapt a phrase of Falstaff's, what a commodity of good names is to be bought with him!" Eric Forbes-Boyd
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 F 10 '49 450w

+ Geog R 39:347 Ap '49 180w

"American tourists whose joyous hobby is to collect incredible village names and bring them home from travels in the British Isles, will take special interest in this lively yet learned guide to their understanding. Any one who takes an interest in the meaning of words will do so. For these names are not exercises in fantasy: they were originally simple means of identification."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 Mr 13 '49 320w

"Charming volume."
+ New Yorker 24:114 D 18 '48 100w

"A pleasant study to warm up to on these cold winter evenings, especially in preparation for a trip abroad come summer."
+ Sat R of Lit 31:30 D 18 '48 110w

STOKES, WALTER RAYMOND. Modern pattern for marriage; the newer understanding of married love. 143p $2.25 Rinehart

392.5 Sex. Marriage 48-9149

A manual for young people who are preparing for marriage. The author is a Washington marriage counselor. In the book Dr Stokes discusses his qualifications for a successful marriage, and describes fully the anatomy of the sex organs. Partial contents: Premarital medical counsel; The honeymoon; Problems of early marriage; Problems of later marriage; Guiding children toward sound marriage. Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 45:131 D 15 '48

"The information here, delivered with a rather irritating gravity, is strictly basic."
Kirkus 16:468 S 1 '48 100w

Reviewed by J. F. Bender
N Y Times p23 Ja 16 '49 190w

STONE, EUGENIA. Robin Hood's arrow [being an account of Dan of the mill and his adventures with Robin Hood and the merry men of Sherwood forest] il. by Rafaello Busoni. 164p $2.50 Wilcox & Follett 48-9388

A collection of stories about Robin Hood and his men for grades four to six. The hero is young Dan o' the Mill whose older brother is a member of the Sherwood Forest band.

Kirkus 16:600 N 15 '48 90w

"The atmosphere of Sherwood Forest is well preserved and the men in Lincoln green act in character. Due to vocabulary and sentence structure difficulties, most youngsters do not find even the real Robin Hood stories easy to read, but story-tellers will prefer the original tales." M. B. Snow
Library J 74:204 F 1 '49 100w

"The book will provide an ample introduction to adventurous Robin Hood for younger readers of 8 to 12 and will be welcomed by older ones who would again seek him under the Trysting Tree." Marjorie Burger
+ N Y Times p32 F 6 '49 150w

"The authentic flavor of the green wood is captured in both text and Rafaello Busoni's pictures."
+ Wis Lib Bul 45:16 Ja '49

STONE, GEOFFREY. Melville. (Great writers of the world) 336p $4.50 Sheed

B or 92 Melville, Herman 49-48538

"Geoffrey Stone has surveyed Melville's life and work for the general reader. . . Writing as a Catholic, Mr. Stone finds the source of Melville's artistic failures and personal difficulties in 'a partly Calvinist, partly Romantic attitude of mind,' which nonetheless provided the subject matter of his greatest achievement, Moby Dick. To Mr. Stone Melville was neither the mystic nor the metaphysician that some admirers have seen in him, but an artist who struggled throughout a tormented existence to work out in terms of his own personality the Manichaean problem which obsessed him." (Commonweal) Bibliography. Index.

STONE, GEOFFREY—Continued

Reviewed by Russell MacFall
Chicago Sunday Tribune p8 D 25 '49 300w

"With sympathy and understanding Mr. Stone traces Melville's artistic and intellectual development, correlating biography and criticism in a book which makes an admirable introduction for those unfamiliar with the subject and which also offers an interpretation that specialists may find challenging." Mason Wade
+ Commonweal 51:251 D 2 '49 270w

"Mr. Stone's book on Melville is refreshing in at least one respect; it is written by a devout and instructed Catholic, and hence by a man who stands in a position of some intellectual detachment from Melville's work. . . Biographically it must be confessed that Mr. Stone's book does not hold up very well; he is not very skilful at narrative, he has failed to take advantage of some not insignificant recent 'discoveries,' and—more serious than that—he is au fond too little interested in the complex and obscure relations between a man's life and his work to give himself willingly to that kind of study." Newton Arvin
+ — Nation 169:574 D 10 '49 1000w

"Most of the facts are here, but there are puzzling omissions. . . The criticism is, in general, intelligent, especially when dealing with the more familiar novels, but it is neither original nor more than useful when discussing the lesser Melville works. . . But Mr. Stone was not allowed the freedom for discovery; it was his task to unify the findings of others. This he has done well in a very readable book, and with a discriminating admiration of Melville's greatness." H. P. Vincent
+ — N Y Times p9 N 13 '49 290w

STONE, HAMPTON, pseud. See Stein, A. M.

STONE, IRVING. Passionate journey. 337p $3 Doubleday

Noble, John—Fiction 49-10916

Fictionized biography of John Noble, American painter.

Reviewed by Duncan Robertson
— Canadian Forum 29:240 Ja '50 220w

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon
Chicago Sun p8X O 2 '49 470w
Cleveland Open Shelf p20 O '49

"It is an absorbing story, successful on the human plane, less successful when Stone attempts the spiritual interpretations, but unfailingly good reading, good entertainment. There is, as always in his fictional biographies, possibly more of fiction than rigid adherence to fact. But Stone has a rare gift for conveying a sense of fidelity to his subject."
+ — Kirkus 17:401 Ag 1 '49 200w

"The inner conflicts such a man engages in can only be guessed at, crudely reconstructed out of scattered fragments. Mr. Stone tries—tries overly hard, I think—to report them. And out of the shards that remain, rose-colored by loyalty and the lapse of time and his own determined efforts, paints for us his somewhat uneven and not too illuminating portrait-in-words." F. H. Bullock
— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p42 S 25 '49 850w

"In 'The Passionate Journey' one cannot escape the conviction that the subject was chosen for color rather than stature." C. V. Terry
— N Y Times p6 S 25 '49 360w

"From the pages of the book, John Noble arises, writhing and even, in a way, terrifying; and it is this precisely that Mr. Stone does with a fine hand. Less successful are his more placid characters such as Amelia and Frances, John Noble's early love. Also, Mr. Stone has become a skillful writer, but nevertheless there are spots in his narrative that stick out like sore thumbs because they are either not well thought out, or lack—and this hardly seems likely—genuineness." Marc Rivette
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 6 '49 650w

"The principal weakness of the book lies in the novelist's failure to make John Noble a credible person. . . A pleasant adventure for readers of this novel will be a visit to the galleries where John Noble's canvases hang." R. A. Cordell
Sat R of Lit 32:17 O 15 '49 750w

STORY (periodical). Story, the fiction of the forties; as ed. by Whit Burnett and Hallie Burnett. 620p $3.95 Dutton

Short stories—Collections 49-49094

Fifty-one short stories, all of which appeared in the magazine Story during the last ten years. Includes such well-known contributors as Caldwell, Faulkner, Molnar, and O'Flaherty. Very brief biographical notes of contributors.

Booklist 46:141 D 15 '49

Reviewed by Jack Conroy
Chicago Sun p70 N 30 '49 700w
Cleveland Open Shelf p24 D '49

"For the more serious follower of contemporary writing, rather than the more general audience of say the recent New Yorker short story collection."
Kirkus 17:520 S 15 '49 110w

"It should be useful to students of the short story, and provide superior entertainment for readers of fiction." H. W. Hart
+ Library J 74:1674 N 1 '49 100w
New Repub 122:20 Ja 23 '50 90w

"Best or not, the present collection is good reading. Faulkner adds a comic chapter to the saga of Yaknapatawpha County. Erskine Caldwell writes about the Maine coast. A new hand named John Modesto, writing his first published story, contributes a delicious bit of Italian-American comedy, refreshingly without condescension." Richard Match
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p28 D 4 '49 800w

"It would be easy to be overwhelmingly depressed about the state of fiction as exhibited in this volume, if it were not for the fact that occasionally, like raisins in a lump of dough, stories worth reading are encountered. . . Such stories as those by Faulkner, William O'Flaherty and J. D. Salinger stand out vividly in this volume; they are authentic." Shirley Jackson
N Y Times p48 N 20 '49 360w

"Regrettably, the collection, which represents the result of a worthy encouragement to beginners, is notable more for its virtues of thoughtfulness and sincerity than for its distinction."
New Yorker 25:151 D 10 '49 60w

"Of more than passing interest is the presence of several successful humor stories, a genre which, according to some critics, has ceased to exist. . . Finally, the relatively small number of stories of social protest is interesting and mildly surprising, particularly when one recalls that Story, although never committed to any declared social program, published during the Thirties more than a few left-wing writers. It is perhaps churlish and ungracious to question the senior editor's claims of 'discovering' certain writers, Truman Capote, for example." William Peden
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:17 D 17 '49 800w

STOUFFER, SAMUEL ANDREW. American soldier. See Studies in social psychology in World war II

STOUT, REX. Second confession. 245p $2.50 Viking

49-10527

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun S 16 '49 90w

Kirkus 17:375 Jl 15 '49 80w

"The big boy seems better than ever." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 S 11 '49 270w

"The surprise solution was indeed a brilliant and beautiful gimmick, but my recollection is that Ellery Queen invented it in 1933. It now appears obvious and strikes the reviewer as unfair, since this version is based on a flagrant withholding of evidence. . . Mr. Stout's anti-communism might be more novelistically effective if he gave an explanation of why his finally unmasked murderer belonged to the party, and if he showed his 'Commies' engaged in any pursuit more sinister than the support of Henry Wallace. Nero Wolfe appears as a bulwark of democracy, but in this role he might be more convincing if he did not cause the suppression of a radio commentator with whom he disagrees." Anthony Boucher

N Y Times p43 S 11 '49 270w

"The murder case that grows out of all this is cleared up in the expected fashion, but it is pieced together with a meticulousness that has been lacking in Mr. Stout's recent mysteries and that will undoubtedly delight his admirers."

+ New Yorker 25:111 S 10 '49 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p21 S 11 '49 200w

"Very good."

+ Sat R of Lit 32:38 O 15 '49 40w

Springf'd Republican p5D O 2 '49 120w

STOUT, REX. Trouble in triplicate. 218p $2.50 Viking

49-1340

Three short tales of crime in each of which Nero Wolfe and Archie are the detectives.

Booklist 45:263 Ap 1 '49

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun F 11 '49 50w

Kirkus 16:632 D 1 '48 70w

"Nero Wolfe and Archie have never been in better form. . . Exciting action, interesting characters and lively dialogue furnish an evening of solid pleasure."

+ New Repub 120:27 F 7 '49 30w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 F 27 '49 140w

"Lovely going all the way, but not the Nero Wolfe-Archie team at its best." Beatrice Sherman

+ — N Y Times p32 F 27 '49 140w

"All these misfortunes are dissected with the expertness and rather special brand of humor typical of Mr. Stout, and will undoubtedly satisfy, if not bowl over, his fans."

+ New Yorker 24:96 F 12 '49 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p28 Mr 13 '49 80w

"Very good."

+ Sat R of Lit 32:36 F 19 '49 40w

"All the novelets previously appeared in a magazine, but they are some of the best Wolfeiana available and in some respects preferable to a long Wolfe novel." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p22A F 27 '49 120w

STOVER, HERBERT E. Song of the Susquehanna. 275p $2.75 Dodd

49-2533

Peter Grove, a Pennsylvania German, tells the story of his battles with the Indians during the French and Indian war, and of his romance with a trader's niece. Some of the historical personages appearing in the novel are: Colonel Boquet, Governor Morris, Colonel Thomas Cresap, John Bartram, and Conrad Weiser.

Booklist 45:338 Je 1 '49

"Troubles with the Indians, in which some white men profited by illicit traffic in gunpowder, keep this romance of Colonial Pennsylvania at a high pitch of exciting action, but perhaps more rewarding are the glimpses of everyday existence in the trading town of Lancaster."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Ap 10 '49 130w

"One of the pleasantest surprises in the novel is Mr. Stover's charming and authentic descriptions of the Pennsylvania countryside." J. P. Quehl

+ N Y Times p21 My 15 '49 180w

"Herbert Stover is proudly Pennsylvania. Born and bred in the central section of our Keystone State, he is entrenched, enthralled, and enchanted with local lore. It is a narrow range of interest, but he manages to make the most of it." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 32:29 Je 4 '49 130w

"Familiar names and places from history give authenticity to the tale of times and places not overemphasized in current fiction. The author is a school supervisor, history teacher and lecturer in Bucknell University who knows and loves the hill country of Southern Pennsylvania where his ancestors fought in the Ranger companies he so vividly describes." Ethel Dexter

+ Springf'd Republican p5D Je 5 '49 330w

STOWE, LELAND. Target: you. 288p $3 Knopf

973.918 Totalitarianism. Political science. U.S.—Civilization 49-8409

"Mr. Stowe gives us about ten years' grace before war, but he advocates filling it with something other than military planning. In those ten years, he says, we have a chance to start construction on a 'house of World Law,' in which national sovereignties will be made subservient to an over-all sovereignty dedicated to the abolition of war. The feverish building up of an enormous national-defense system by the United States is a criminally shortsighted policy, he maintains, because in a very little time the present rate of spending on armaments will destroy our governmental structure." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 45:275 Ap 15 '49

Chicago Sun p8X My 1 '49 200w

Reviewed by DeWitt John

Christian Science Monitor p20 Je 3 '49 750w

Foreign Affairs 28:157 O '49 20w

"This is an essential book for thoughtful citizens who want to feel that every one of us has an opportunity to decide the course of world events."

+ Kirkus 17:101 F 15 '49 270w

"Worthwhile." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 74:493 Mr 15 '49 140w

Library J 74:1561 O 15 '49 30w

" 'Target: You' is a tract for the times which breathes the crusading spirit of the pamphleteer, but it is also packed with facts and marked by an admirable sense of proportion. I found it impressive, and I hope that it will receive wide and careful reading." Margaret Marshall

+ Nation 168:505 Ap 30 '49 1500w

Reviewed by R. E. Lauterbach

New Repub 120:22 Je 6 '49 400w

"Mr. Stowe writes earnestly, but tolerantly. The book would have profited from more careful editing, to eliminate some minor errors of fact and to introduce some more precise definitions of terms. There will be many who will dispute the measures which the author thinks appropriate for the middle-class adoption in the United States, as well as the extent of middle-class participation in Europe's leftist trend. But it is good—and all too rare—to find a volume which discusses future perils without stridency and this 'darkling hour' without morbidity. 'Target: You' is not a sedative, but it is sane, balanced and hopeful." H. W. Baehr

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 My 1 '49 600w

STOWE, LELAND—Continued

"At the end of the first eleven chapters the reader may wonder why he has been asked to digest all this essentially reheated historical and political porridge. Then Mr. Stowe goes into a dramatic exposition of the tenets of the United World Federalists. There is little reason to summarize these now widely publicized aims—or attempt to appraise them as here presented, since the subject has now become so highly emotionalized that a public statement that could be interpreted as in the slightest unsympathetic brings blows that bow the sturdiest head." J. W. Chase

N Y Times p16 Ap 24 '49 650w

New Yorker 25:109 Ap 30 '49 200w

"Mr. Stowe's book is a shrewd analysis, an exhortation to the ordinary citizen to come fully awake while time remains, and a profound and solemn warning." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 20 '49 950w

"The book is clearly written, popular in tone, easy to understand, and sound in thought. There are in Leland Stowe two characters—a magnificent reporter of fact and a 'liberal' thinker. He will forgive me if I dare suggest that he reexamine some of his 'liberal' beliefs." E. A. Mowrer

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:13 My 7 '49 800w

Reviewed by J. L. Davis

Survey 85:560 O '49 500w

Wis Lib Bul 45:104 Je '49

STRAIN, MRS FRANCES (BRUCE). Normal sex interests of children. 210p $2.75 Appleton

612.6 Sex. Child study 48-9946

"A factual study of the development of sex interest and activity in the average child from infancy to the beginning of maturity. Will be useful to parents, teachers, play leaders or anyone who is concerned with the care and training of children." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 45:206 F 15 '49

"Mrs Strain has produced an exceedingly helpful and useful book. . . She writes with unfaltering good taste yet with useful frankness, and her book lays any number of bugaboos by the heels through the simple device of explaining the actions of children with a calm, comprehensive sanity that bespeaks her knowledge of her subject. Young parents could read this book with benefit not only to their own peace of mind, but to the growth of their offspring." Laura Haddock

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 12 '49 270w

Reviewed by F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p12 F 27 '49 230w

Reviewed by C. C. Zimmerman

Sat R of Lit 32:11 My 7 '49 320w

"The writing is frank, purposeful, but in good taste. Recommended."

+ Wis Lib Bul 45:27 F '49

STRAKHOVSKY, LEONID IVAN. Craftsmen of the word; three poets of modern Russia: Gumilyov, Akhmatova, Mandelstam. 114p $3 Harvard univ. press

891.71 Gumilev, Nikolaĭ Stepanovich. Akhmatova, Anna. Mandel'shtam, Osip Emilyevich 49-10052

Essays on three Russian poets, leaders of the Acmeists, who flourished between 1905 and the first World war. Contents: Nicholas Gumilyov, the poet-warrior; Anna Akhmatova, poetess of tragic love; Osip Mandelstam, architect of the word. Bibliography. No index.

"These three poets are not unworthy of attention, and Akhmatova especially deserves to be better known abroad, but the treatment that they receive at the hands of Mr. Strakhovsky is not likely to help toward that end. Some notion of the book may be had from the fact that the text consists of fewer than a hundred short pages to which the author has appended nearly two hundred references. . . The author, whose English is faulty when it is not platitudinous . . . gives no sign of acquaintance with the development of Anglo-American poetry or that of modern criticism. . . The translations offered here do [the poets] signal disservice." Babette Deutsch

— N Y Times p10 Ag 28 '49 550w

"This is a very interesting book—three well documented essays." T. H. Ferril

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 18 '49 150w

"Mr. Strakhovsky presents in his critical ensemble a number of metrical, or rather quasi-metrical, translations from the three Russian poets. Unfortunately, many of these are devoid of the subtle rhythms and harmonies characteristic of the verses of these 'craftsmen of the word.' But there are a few happy exceptions for which the English reader should feel thankful. . . On the whole, Strakhovsky's book is a useful contribution to the meager English bibliography on Russian poetry which has enriched the world with many a page of incomparable beauty." Boris Brasol

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:23 S 17 '49 750w

STRAKHOVSKY, LEONID IVAN, ed. Handbook of Slavic studies. 753p $12.50 Harvard univ. press

947 Civilization, Slavic. Slavic literature 49-3015

"Voluminous work deals with Russia, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Balkans and even such small national groups as Lusatians. A great number of specialists, many native born or with actual training and experience in Slavic countries, present in 28 chapters each country's development up to and including present day, with special emphasis on politics and literature." (Library J) Chapter bibliographies. Comparative chronology. Notes on contributors. Index.

Reviewed by Andrew Lossky

Am Soc R 14:692 O '49 850w

"The material is well arranged, and the facts presented by eighteen specialists in twenty-eight chapters are informative, mostly presented with the historian's microscope and fine pencil rather than with the artist's broad brush. At the same time, the work is not without several glaring weaknesses." J. S. Roucek

+ — Ann Am Acad 264:134 Jl '49 240w

Booklist 45:374 Jl 1 '49

Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 11 '49 350w

"Altogether it is a graphic review of the Slavic world and a valuable book for today." Roy Hillbrook

+ Current Hist 16:342 Je '49 650w

"Book fills real gap. Extensive bibliographies and comparative chronology enhance reference value of work. Indispensible for all libraries with interest in Eastern Europe." H. H. Bernt

+ Library J 74:817 My 15 '49 130w

New Yorker 25:110 S 24 '49 110w

"Regarding highly the task and merit of Strakovsky's undertaking, [there are] essential gaps. A handbook of Slavic studies cannot be confined to a simple juxtaposition of historic and literary surveys of the separate Slavic peoples, but must pay special attention to the inter-Slavic problems, i.e., to the common Slavic patrimony, to the cultural interrelations of these peoples, and to the history of pan-Slavic ideology. Just these questions are almost entirely omitted in the 'Handbook.' . . In spite of reservations, the positive fact remains that we finally have a reference book which can be recommended to everyone interested in Slavic matters." Roman Jakobson

+ — Sat R of Lit 32:18 Je 11 '49 850w

STRANG, RUTH MAY. Counseling technics in college and secondary school. rev & enl ed 302p $4 Harper

371.422 Counseling. Personnel service in education 49-2873

"Miss Strang continues to work at frontiers and astonishingly continues to produce one book a year. Ten years is a long stretch in terms of accumulated experimentation and research, and the author has reworked well and fully the earlier edition of a decade ago. Adequate attention is given to rating scales, case study techniques, projective methods, and therapy." (Library J) Bibliographical references. Index of subjects.

Booklist 45:397 Jl 15 '49

"It is done with moderation and soundness. A rich bibliography is a definite asset to the book. It is unfortunate that the author, like so many others, gives undue attention and space to personnel records. Otherwise, it is highly recommended." Nathaniel Stewart
+ — Library J 74:663 Ap 15 '49 130w

School & Society 69:237 Mr 26 '49 30w

"While Dr. Strang's book is primarily a text for professional counselors and students of guidance, it should be required reading for anyone who deals with people and their problems." Alma Klaw
+ Survey 85:335 Je '49 550w

STRANGE, JOHN STEPHEN, pseud. See Tillett, D. S.

STRAUSS, LEO. On tyranny; an interpretation of Xenophon's Hiero; with a foreword by Alvin Johnson. 121p $2.25 Political science classics, box 124, Cathedral station, N.Y. 25
888.3 Xenophon 49-7201

"New breadth is given to the beginnings of this history [of political science] by Dr. Strauss's selection of the Hiero for analysis, since the political historian today usually begins with Plato and Aristotle, and indeed usually neglects those portions of their political philosophies on which light would be shed by comparison with Xenophon's. Moreover, in attempting to overcome the prevailing indifference to Xenophon as a political thinker, Dr. Strauss brings the Hiero into the contemporary political situation and into the context of modern political science. He links the failure of modern political science to recognize Xenophon's merits, to its slowness in recognizing in their true perspective the lineaments of contemporary totalitarian tyranny. And he feels that this failure can not even be justified historically by the distinctive differences of perspective between modern and pre-modern political science, since modern political science finds its own beginnings in Machiavelli's Prince, and the 'one earlier work on tyranny to which Machiavelli emphatically refers' is the Hiero, so that it 'marks the point of closest contact between pre-modern and modern political science.' " J Philos

"A book that is both interesting and very able." T. P. Jenkin
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:1304 D '49 260w

"This volume is the first in a series of analytical works intended to accompany classical works in political science. If the succeeding volumes fulfill this intention as well as this first volume, the series will broaden and enliven the study and teaching of the history of political science." R. D. Cumming
+ J Philos 46:305 My 12 '49 550w

"Strauss' essay is learned but lucid. . . Recommended for large college and public libraries." F. E. Hirsch
+ Library J 74:127 Ja 15 '49 140w

"Dr. Strauss' analysis of the 'Socratic' judgment on tyranny in the 'Hiero' is often extremely suggestive. He has done great service to those interested in political things in presenting the wisdom of the Greeks on this danger our world shares with theirs. But his analysis is also often extremely fine spun and unconvincing. His subtle interpretations will be more acceptable to other scholars if he can discipline his desire to find hidden meanings in his authors and confine himself somewhat more closely to what they actually said." J. H. Randall
+ — N Y Times p14 My 1 '49 800w

"Hiero, in Xenophon's dialogue, is not afraid of the wise but disinterested stranger Simonides and can talk to him freely as he could not talk to one of his subjects. There are unfortunately a good many forced interpretations of this kind. But there are also a great many excellent points. If read with due caution Professor Strauss's work can certainly be read with great profit. One may, however, regret that a comparison has not been drawn with modern tyranny, in which tyrants often do not indulge in sensual pleasures and always claim to be beneficent and to rule for the benefit of the people." Kurt von Fritz
+ — Pol Sci Q 64:152 Mr '49 600w

STREATFEILD, NOEL. Movie shoes; il. by Susanne Suba. 274p $2.50 Random house 49-8353

An English family, the Winters, spend a winter in Hollywood. Rachel could dance, and Tim could play the piano; but plain Jane, the middle one, could not qualify, except as a lover of animals. But it was Jane who achieved success, for she played Mary, in the film The Secret Garden. For grades five to eight.

"There are some unlikely situations, overdrawing of character and coincidence, but Jane's experiences and reactions as a child actress are truthfully handled. Not the author's best book but it may be the most popular with American children."
Booklist 45:286 Ap 15 '49

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 170:211 D '49 30w

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Jl 2 '49 110w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 25:197 My '49 90w

"This is the best of Noel Streatfeild's Shoe stories. . . Wisdom and charm are in the writing and Susanne Suba's pictures add their attractions." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 25:286 Jl '49 110w

"An interesting and well written story that is very British has the misfortune to present most of the American characters in a rather unfortunate light. Readers may overlook this in their interest in the story, but it is not however the best that the author of Ballet Shoes, etc., can do."
+ — Kirkus 17:85 F 15 '49 190w

"Peaseblossom, the English companion-Nannie, and Bella, Negro-American cook, are a bit typed in the Hollywood manner. All in all, however, the book is a worthy addition to an important series. Recommended." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 74:1037 Jl '49 70w

"Sane, well-balanced picture of the life of children in the film industry. Book is not recommended, however, because of the unfortunate handling of the colored maid." Claire Nolte
Library J 74:1037 Jl '49 100w

"The story is competently told, and the children, with all their dudgeons and vanities, are real enough. But a Presbyterian parent may hesitate before fostering, with this glossy tale, the universal Californian dream." Naomi Lewis
+ New Statesman & Nation 38:660 D 3 '49 180w

"From many angles this is the best of the popular 'shoes' books for 'middle-age' young American readers. . . One cannot commend too highly [the author's] Hollywood portrait, chiefly of the lives of child movie actors. . . Children will believe in poor Jane. . . They will enjoy all the adult characters too." L. S. Bechtel
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 17 '49 350w

"Miss Streatfeild is as understanding of the nature of an 'ordinary' child as she is of gifted youngsters. . . One of Miss Streatfeild's best stories, this will please children of 8 to 12 and their parents by its restrained handling of the movie background." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p26 Ap 10 '49 220w

New Yorker 25:178 D 3 '49 100w

"Miss Streatfeild has drawn on her first-hand knowledge of motion pictures in the making to make her story of an English family in

STREATFEILD, NOEL—Continued
Hollywood both authentic and interesting. Her skill as a writer has increased since the first of the Shoes books. This one is particularly well developed. The characters and the situations are completely convincing." R. H. V.
+ Sat R of Lit 32:40 Jl 9 '49 310w

Reviewed by Gwendolen Freeman
Spec 183:716 N 18 '49 180w

Wis Lib Bul 45:91 My '49

STREET, CECIL JOHN CHARLES (JOHN RHODE, pseud). Blackthorn house. 248p $2.50 Dodd 49-9684

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Jl 8 '49 50w

"When Mr. Rhode isn't giving out almost too generously with details of the stolen-car business in Britain, he delivers his usual smooth puzzle of death, disaster and detection for jig saw connoisseurs." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Je 26 '49 200w

"Something so contemporary as what a crasser writer would call the hot car racket strikes an oddly anachronistic note in a Priestley adventure; but even modern racketeers are helpless before the Professor's logic. The whole affair is conducted with quiet skill, and recommended to those remaining addicts who prefer barbiturates to benzedrine." A. B.
+ N Y Times p14 Jl 10 '49 180w

"Highly recommended." E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 3 '49 190w

STREET, CECIL JOHN CHARLES (JOHN RHODE, pseud). Fatal garden [Eng title: Up the garden path]. 250p $2.50 Dodd 49-11315

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun O 21 '49 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p26 O 23 '49 130w

"Mr. Rhode has rarely been so elaborately Goldbergian as in this latest book; and he has rarely got off to so slow a start. . . But once the book gets properly launched, patient readers will find a very pretty puzzle in the old tradition—marred, however, for many by a touch of that stereotyped anti-Semitism so regrettably characteristic of much English detection." A. B.
+ — N Y Times p20 O 23 '49 230w

"Mr. Rhode's best in a long time." E. D. Doyle
+ San Francisco Chronicle p32 D 4 '49 70w

Reviewed by Dilwyn Rees
Spec 183:248 Ag 19 '49 90w

STREET, CECIL JOHN CHARLES (JOHN RHODE, pseud). Shadow of an alibi. 215p $2.50 Dodd 49-7652

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun F 25 '49 320w

"Here is a Grade A puzzle. . . Fine guessing game for stand-pat jig-saw fans." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 F 20 '49 130w

N Y Times p32 F 27 '49 110w

"The details, though not the solution, are, possibly by coincidence, the same as those of a Liverpool cause célèbre—the Wallace case, in 1931. . . Mr. Rhode's contribution to the literature of the affair is, regrettably, on the dull side."
— New Yorker 24:96 F 12 '49 120w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p28 Mr 13 '49 80w

"Typical Rhodesian exercise in deduction—this time with slightly more pungency than usual—due possibly to factual basis of 'perfect crime.' "
Sat R of Lit 32:36 F 19 '49 40w

STREET, JAMES HOWELL, and CHILDERS, JAMES SAXON. Tomorrow we reap. 384p $3 Dial press 49-9319

"James Street, this time with the collaboration of James Childers, has continued his fictional study of the South with another novel about his Dabney family in their accustomed Lebanon Valley, Mississippi. Economically and socially the 1890 background is that of valley life complicated by the coming of a northern lumber company into Lebanon's secluded and self-sustaining existence, with the familiar strata of old families, poor whites, cajuns, and Negroes. Romantically the story is that of the two Dabney young men and three women." Christian Science Monitor

Booklist 45:346; 355 Je 15 '49

Reviewed by H. T. Kane
Chicago Sun Jl 13 '49 500w

"In spite of a noticeable unevenness to the style, which is often commonplace but sometimes touched with imagination, and a plot that advances spasmodically, there is something engaging about its warmth of feeling, something of larger value in its honest examination of the winds that were being sown in those years and the bitter harvest of demagoguery and tightened racial barriers."
+ — Christian Science Monitor p11 Je 16 '49 220w

"Not as sensational, perhaps, as its predecessors, but in some ways the best of the series, of which this is the last. . . A convincing story, lusty, virile, well told."
+ Kirkus 17:237 My 1 '49 400w

Reviewed by George Conrad
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Jl 31 '49 300w

"As usual in the Dabney books, there's plot enough for a dozen novels. Action, sentiment and exuberant improbabilities crowd the pages. But the richness of the material and the author's cheerful determination to keep the story moving combine to produce a diverting, if rough-hewn, historical romance." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times p18 Je 26 '49 360w

"The frank romanticism of the Dabney saga is kept within limits by the book's political and economic realism."
New Yorker 25:85 Je 25 '49 160w

"We have here about as bad a novel as it is possible to write or publish." Herschel Brickell
— Sat R of Lit 32:23 Je 25 '49 320w

"It is a more orderly and down-to-earth book than its predecessors, its characters more credible, its melodrama more restrained. But it is oddly less interesting for being more plausible, and less convincing for being closer to a recognizable environment. . . But the deeper trouble is that Author Street's view of history, like that of most contemporary historical novelists, does not produce much of dramatic interest when applied to events after the Civil War."
— + Time 53:93 Je 27 '49 430w

STREETER, EDWARD. Father of the bride; il. by Gluyas Williams. 244p $2.50 Simon & Schuster 49-8760

Novel of the experiences and emotions of a fond father who has been called upon to give his daughter away at a stylish wedding.

"This is light comedy at its best and you will enjoy it with a lively sense of identification." Edward Weeks
+ Atlantic 184:82 Jl '49 480w

Booklist 45:289; 296 My 1 '49

Bookmark 9:6 O '49 40w

Cath World 169:319 Jl '49 120w

"The fun of this book goes beyond the debatable humor of a mere spectacle of discomfiture. It touches on the irony of man, a free agent, being victimized by some of the more ridiculous folkways of the society he helps to perpetuate. Mr. Streeter, no Jonathan Swift, points out the clichés of behavior and speech in the comic spirit, not with contempt. He receives invaluable aid from the cartoonist Gluyas Williams, whose droll illuminations of the domestic saga are among his inimitable best." Rod Nordell

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 1 '49 390w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '49

"Here's something for a good laugh and absolutely perfect for relaxing in a summer hammock, if you want a short vacation from the cares of the world and if you don't mind being reminded what fools we mortals be." P. T. Hartung

+ Commonweal 50:348 Jl 15 '49 370w

Kirkus 17:89 F 15 '49 160w

Library J 74:1616 O 15 '49 40w

"If it is not as funny as some of Mr Streeter's writing it's because he sticks too close to the truth. With the month of brides just around the corner, could it be propaganda?"

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 My 22 '49 170w

"Mr Streeter's style is as felicitous as his subject-matter. One remarks a happy absence of that tempting pitfall for the writer of humor, exaggeration. His similes are never strained, and there is no superabundance of them. His dialogue is of such veracity that one can fairly hear the voices of his characters, particularly that of Kay, who speaks in a curiously emphasized lingo peculiar to the nice young thing of the Eastern seaboard. The Gluyas Williams' drawings, as ever, are a welcome addition to the book." C. O. Skinner

+ N Y Times p5 My 22 '49 1100w

New Yorker 25:114 My 21 '49 100w

" 'Father of the Bride' is worth the time of every parent of a daughter near enough to marriageable age so that such a parent can feel a wave of sympathy with Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Banks, whose daughter here is the storm-center of all the excitement. As a matter of fact, I'm not altogether sure about that statement—in the case of any set of parents that may have just been through the experience of getting a daughter safely married. It might be just too much for them to take. You see, Mr Streeter knows." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 22 '49 1300w

"Even the unwed will enjoy it. It is hard, in fact, to think of people who won't. Gluyas Williams's illustrations are so perfect an accompaniment of the text that it is quite possible that he ordered Mr Streeter to write the book." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R of Lit 32:19 My 28 '49 500w

Springf'd Republican p8C My 1 '49 110w

Time 53:106 Je 13 '49 550w

Wis Lib Bul 45:106 Je '49

STREETER, VICTOR LYLE. Fluid dynamics. 263p il $5 McGraw

532.5 Hydrodynamics 49-7078

"This book is planned to introduce the reader to the general theory of fluid flow. It is concerned primarily with the development of the general fluid equations and their reduction to specific problems. The reader is presumed to have had no mathematics beyond the elementary differential and integral calculus. Since the general treatment requires more advanced mathematics, it has been developed in each case immediately before its use is introduced. The book should be useful as a text for a second course in fluid mechanics in the senior year of college or the first year of graduate work." (Pref) Index.

"This book will be useful to the individual doing research on theoretical problems of fluid mechanics. It contains almost nothing usually used by the chemical engineer in his work in fluid flow, sedimentation, or flow through porous media and hence would not be used by him." K. A. Kobe

Chem & Eng N 27:302 Ja 31 '49 150w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 74:131 Ja 15 '49 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 33:86 N '48

STREIT, CLARENCE KIRSHMAN. Union now; a proposal for an Atlantic federal union of the free; postwar ed. with five new chapters. 324p $3 Harper

321.041 International federation. Democracy. World politics 49-759

"Mr. Streit is still . . . certain that the road to peace lies through a union of free states based on our own federal union rather than on a league of all states. To his original book he has added five chapters bringing up to date his argument for starting world government now with a nucleus of a few of the most experienced democracies." (Nation) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1939. Indexes.

"Streit's contribution, whatever its limitations, has been one of great importance, and much in his work remains extremely challenging. Despite looseness of writing in some parts, it is a volume which in many sections repays reading." L. A. Mander

+ — Am Pol Sci R 43:851 Ag '49 850w

Booklist 45:245 Mr 15 '49

Chicago Sun p8X F 6 '49 50w

Reviewed by Donovan Richardson

Christian Science Monitor p11 F 24 '49 1050w

Nation 168:219 F 19 '49 90w

"Here, evidently, is a book with a life of its own, one of the very few in any generation that rise above the influences which gave them birth to shape and to direct the future. . . The argument of the book is well known. . . The book, it must be said, moves in an atmosphere strangely and almost eerily different from reality." August Heckscher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 F 13 '49 900w

"He is a first-rate pamphleteer. He is clear, reasonable, argumentative, idealistic and, above all, possesses the supreme pamphleteer's gift of apt concreteness. Most readers will find 'Union Now' a far more persuasive book than Emery Reves' 'Anatomy of Peace.' Yet it should be clear that Mr. Streit's book is the book of an extremist, a crusader—or, to use a word generally taken as condemnation, a fanatic." Crane Brinton

N Y Times p4 Ja 23 '49 1600w

Springf'd Republican p10B F 13 '49 400w

U S Quarterly Bkl 5:234 Je '49 280w

STRINDBERG, AUGUST. Eight famous plays; tr. by Edwin Björkman and N. Erichsen; with an introd. by Alan Harris. 463p $5 Scribner

839.72 49-9734

Contents: The Link (1897); The Father (1887); Miss Julia (1888); The Stronger (1890); There are crimes and crimes (1899); Gustavus Vasa (1899); The Dance of death (1901); The Spook sonata (1907).

Reviewed by Kappo Phelan

Commonweal 50:606 S 30 '49 260w

Kirkus 17:287 Je 1 '49 110w

"The reissue of this present selection is more than a conventional tribute on a personal occasion; it is also a kind of record of his life, for in his useful introduction Alan Harris shows the close parallel between the plays and that chaotic career. The biographical elements of literature is fascinating in any event, but it is of real importance in the work of a writer with a confessed 'passion for self-revelation, carried to the pitch of exhibitionism.' " John Farrelly

+ New Repub 121:18 Jl 18 '49 1000w

STRINDBERG, AUGUST—Continued
Reviewed by Russell Rhodes
Sat R of Lit 32:18 Ag 20 '49 180w
Reviewed by D. S. Savage
Spec 182:158 F 4 '49 500w
Reviewed by Konstantin Reichaedt
Yale R n s 39:153 autumn '49 900w

STRODE, HUDSON. Sweden; model for a world. 371p il $5 Harcourt
914.85 Sweden 49-6546

"Descriptions of Sweden and its people and their way of life based on trips which the author and his wife made before and after the war. Covers aspects of various cities, provinces, and temperament and phases of public welfare, history, cooperatives, and customs that Mr. Strode considers pertinent to Sweden's modern course and which have been in some cases little publicized." (Booklist) Bibliography.

Booklist 46:2; 62 S 1 '49; O 15 '49

"All in all Professor Strode has given us a useful handbook on a country too few Americans know. He has convincingly analyzed the Swedish character, with its love of good form and good manners and its peculiar self-consciousness. He will have given many a desire to visit a countryside so diverse, so orderly, so prosperous, and yet so gracious." Neil Martin
+ Christian Science Monitor p11 N 25 '49 1400w
Commonweal 51:166 N 11 '49 130w

"Strode is inclined to go overboard in his enthusiasms, but he has a contagious quality which carries his readers along with him. . . The descriptive parts of the book bracket the less ebullent factual background chapters, and leave an impression of enthusiastic acceptance of Sweden, on almost every score."
+ Kirkus 17:452 Ag 15 '49 210w

"This is not, and is not meant to be, a profound work. But in spite of some rather lengthy descriptions of various dinners, a very readable book, in a slightly John Gunther style, on a country from which we may learn a lot. Heartily recommended." H. H. Bernt
+ Library J 74:1319 S 15 '49 130w

"The book is, of course, not an exhaustive treatise on Sweden. It has limitations. Despite some historical chapters, it deals almost exclusively with the present. It is concerned with what can be seen or with what can be understood by some one who is not sufficiently familiar with the language to feel the charm of its literature. It is fundamentally a traveler's book. But it achieves what more erudite books have failed to do: it infuses life into dry facts and gives us the feel of the country." H. M. Spitzer
+ N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p7 N 20 '49 1000w

"It seems almost ungracious to criticize a book so enthusiastic and naive as this, but it is open to criticism on two counts. In the first place too much of it reads like Social Notes From All Over. Second, the book should really be called Strode in Sweden. These faults are harmless enough, but they take space that might well have been given to more relevant subjects. It is odd, for example, that Mr. Strode—himself a university teacher—gives no attention to Sweden's ancient and distinguished universities. He gives only passing reference to the school system. Literature is disposed of in a chapter on Selma Lagerlof; scholarship as such is ignored." H. S. Commager
+ — N Y Times p33 O 16 '49 1000w
Reviewed by E. O. Tanner
+ San Francisco Chronicle p29 N 20 '49 600w

"The imagery and fidelity of Hudson Strode's account of one of the world's most civilized nations make this a book highly to be recommended to all readers. It is, indeed, a grand book." H. G. Leach
+ Sat R of Lit 32:40 N 19 '49 900w

"Mr. Strode interprets modern Sweden against her history and geography in a book distinguished first of all by readability. His unique faculty of taking his reader with him to share his every experience and reaction sustains not only his excursions, but his interviews. One senses the witching spell of Varmland, sees quite pictorially the bright costumes of Dalarna, smells the roses of Visby and for that matter all the profusion of flowers in Sweden." R. H. Andrews
+ Survey 85:625 N '49 650w

STRONG, ANNA LOUISE (MRS JOEL SHUBIN). Chinese conquer China. 275p $3 Doubleday
951.042 China. Communism—China 49-11800

"Based on her travels through the 'Liberated Areas' of Communist China in 1946 and 1947, this new book is an extended version of impressions recorded earlier in the world's ultra-left-wing press under the titles of 'Tomorrow's China' and 'Dawn in China.' She elaborates in the fattened-out version on the argument that the Chinese Communists rode to power on the crest of a genuine 'people's revolution,' without outside assistance, and that they are fundamentally 'Chinese' and not 'followers of Moscow.' " N Y Times

Booklist 46:121 D 1 '49
Reviewed by Ronald Stead
Christian Science Monitor p11 D 8 '49 650w

"All the evidence marshalled here bears witness. Bias in favor of the Chinese Communists may make some discounting of achievements and goals necessary, but the evidence is strong. And the book is challenging reading. An important contribution to our knowledge of the Far East."
+ Kirkus 17:532 S 15 '49 600w
Reviewed by J. K. Fairbank
N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p3 N 13 '49 1100w

"Her book has its shortcomings and anachronisms. Nevertheless, she has succeeded—by her enthusiasm and indefatigability—in capturing the surge of the Chinese Revolution even if she has missed its present political bent." H. R. Lieberman
+ — N Y Times p7 N 13 '49 550w
New Yorker 25:133 N 26 '49 200w
San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 27 '49 370w

"All things considered, this is a useful book to own. For anyone who admires the Chinese Communists as much as Miss Strong does, however, it ought to be obligatory not to repeat the orthographic errors. . . It is just as wrong to spell Mao Tse-tung's name 'Tze-tung' as it is to write Molotoff for Molotov, or Tluman for Truman." Edgar Snow
Sat R of Lit 32:18 N 19 '49 1250w

"Challenging reading, an important contribution to our knowledge of the Far East."
+ Wis Lib Bul p10 D '49

STROVEN, CARL, and DAY, ARTHUR GROVE, eds. Spell of the Pacific; an anthology of its literature; with an introd. by James A. Michener. 940p $6.50 Macmillan
990 Pacific ocean. Oceania 49-3091

Stories, poems, sketches, journals, and folk tales from the Pacific islands and Australasia.

Booklist 45:353 Je 15 '49
Christian Century 66:920 Ag 3 '49 380w

"Carl Stroven and A. Grove Day, both of the University of Hawaii, have accomplished their job well, presenting a book of stimulating selections—essays and poems as well as stories—embracing some of the best literature on life in Hawaii, the Polynesian Islands, New Zealand, Australia, the Philippines, Micronesia and Melanesia. Familiar names of writers on the Pacific are included, as well as lesser known ones." Roland Sawyer
+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 4 '49 240w
Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 50:325 Jl 8 '49 400w

"A collection of both excellence and enchantment."
+ Kirkus 17:104 F 15 '49 130w

"Recommended." Donald Wasson
+ Library J 74:546 Ap 1 '49 150w

Reviewed by Howard Doughty
Nation 169:43 Jl 9 '49 600w

"There must be any number of readers who will welcome a book like this which, going back of war news to the earliest written records of the Pacific, furnishes another dimension to the life of that mighty ocean, its islands and peoples."
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Jl 3 '49 1200w

"The stark selections taken from diaries, letters, notebooks and voyages from the time of Magellan to Pearl Harbor have caught the feeling and temper of those areas more graphically and, for me, more successfully than the rounded efforts of the professional writer. . . The Pacific refuses to be folded between the covers of a book." Thomas Lask
N Y Times p5 My 22 '49 650w

"The 'Spell of the Pacific,' in keeping with the best anthologies in other fields, combines the familiar with the lesser known, but the literary standard is always high, and the book as a whole gives an unrivaled portrait of the vast regions into which our youth were flung so violently during World War II." C. W. Weinberger
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 4 '49 800w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman
Sat R of Lit 32:10 S 24 '49 360w
Springf'd Republican p7C Je 12 '49 700w

STRUIK, DIRK JAN. Concise history of mathematics. 2v il ea $1.50 Dover
510.9 Mathematics—History 48-10877

"These compact volumes on the history of mathematics contain some 50 illustrations, many of which are reproductions of pages from landmarks in mathematical literature. Volume one covers the beginnings, the ancient Orient, Greece, the Orient after the decline of Greek society and beginnings in Western Europe. Volume two covers the 17th through the 19th century and in the chapter on the 19th century the author bases his expositions on persons and schools rather than on subjects. Bibliography." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 74:131 Ja 15 '49 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 33:89 N '48

"These two small volumes are rich in content, thoughtful in interpretation, and, not overly burdened with mathematical detail, will be useful to students of the history of culture. There are numerous illustrations, including drawings and forty-nine portraits, and informative bibliographies."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:122 Mr '49 240w

STRUIK, DIRK JAN. Yankee science in the making. 430p $5 Little 509 Science—History 48-8195

For descriptive note see Annual for 1948.

"The perspective is broad, especially toward Europe of the same period, and toward the present; the synthesis is often illuminating. However, overlappings of science and economics are described without any careful analysis of how the new technology changed business organization. Overlappings of science and politics too are described with the name of George Bancroft occurring only once in the index (but not appearing at all on the page referred to). . . The author modestly confesses his choice of materials was influenced by their availability and by his own tastes, and hopes this book is at least 'a first approximation to truth,' as indeed it usefully is." Carleton Mabee
+ — Am Hist R 54:617 Ap '49 850w

"An important and fascinating contribution in the field of American history that has been strikingly neglected." Jeannette Mirsky
+ Nation 168:251 F 26 '49 1200w

Reviewed by Bernard Barber
Social Forces 28:228 D '49 330w
U S Quarterly Bkl 4:497 D '48 280w

STUART, FRANK S. City of the bees. (Whittlesey house publication) 243p $3 McGraw 595.799 Bees 49-7221

The story of a year's life in a colony of wild bees. The author, who is a Scotsman now living in England, worked for seven years as a beekeeper.

Booklist 45:206 F 15 '49

Reviewed by W. F. Morse
Chicago Sun My 12 '49 290w

"In this delightfully written fantasy . . . the author has drawn upon his own experiences in keeping bees to intrigue readers with bee-lore as exciting as a radio or movie thriller, and at times almost as blood-thirsty." H. B. Nichols
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 7 '49 550w

"A poetic, to lyric account of one year of life in a wild bee colony, that follows in the Maeterlinck tradition of treating this unique insect with not only respect but with a mysticism that enlarges and emphasizes the distinctive characteristics of bee history."
Kirkus 17:21 Ja 1 '49 190w

"Readers of this absorbing and exciting account . . . will be captivated by the strange tale which the author unfolds and by the descriptive imagery of his prose. . . The book will have a wide appeal and is recommended for general purchase." J. F. Brown
+ Library J 74:309 F 15 '49 130w

"As the writer of a fantasy, Mr. Stuart has just claim to the widest latitude in his choice of events. But his book is presented as more than a work of fiction. It is presented as 'fancy that is fact,' as a book of 'scientific accuracy,' as a reliable guide to the ways and world of the bee. Page after page is devoted to straight factual exposition. And these pages contain a high assay of misinformation, misconception and transparent old wives' tales. . . A discerning reader will get no farther than the first page before beginning to suspect that Mr. Stuart may not be the most reliable of guides. Six lines from the beginning, he is describing the song of the female nightingale —when only the male sings." E. W. Teale
— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 Mr 6 '49 950w

Discussion by the author and E. W. Teale
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Ap 10 '49 800w

"There is [a] type of nature lover and observer, who does not employ it as an escape, but rather as a way to wisdom and understanding. He sees and comprehends not only the beauties and the triumphs, but also the cruelties and the pitiless destruction; and these he does not condemn, for he knows that there is no place in that system of nature for 'good' and 'bad' and the moral values of mankind. Stuart is this kind of student. All those who share with him this concept of nature-life will find 'City of the Bees' a thrilling experience." Robert O'Brien
+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ap 3 '49 750w

"In all fairness to Mr. Stuart, his story of one year in the life of a colony of wild bees repeatedly triumphs over his mellifluous style, and I confess that there were times, many of them, when I found myself completely engrossed with the elaborate social structure. . . It does seem to me that his passionate interest in his subject occasionally leads him to draw a long bow . . . and often the discipline of his observation is clouded with pathetic fallacies." John Woodburn
+ — Sat R of Lit 32:12 My 21 '49 750w

STUART, F. S.—Continued

Reviewed by Ethel Dexter

+ Springf'd Republican p18A Mr 27 '49 500w

Wis Lib Bul 45:64 Ap '49

STUART, GRAHAM HENRY. Department of State; a history of its organization, procedure, and personnel; drawings by Gloria E. Anderson. 517p il $7.50 Macmillan

353.1 U.S. State, Department of 49-11378

"This history of the Department of State is arranged chronologically. By describing events occuring during the administration of each Secretary, it shows the development of the Department from the original Committee of Secret Correspondence into the highly complex department of government it has now become. In the chapters dealing with various Secretaries of State, the administration of each is described, important policies are outlined, and personnel appointments are discussed." Library J

Christian Century 66:1298 N 2 '49 420w

Current Hist 17:353 D '49 50w

"Recommended." Donald Wasson

+ Library J 74:1319 S 15 '49 140w

"This painstaking study of the State Department by Professor Stuart, who teaches political science at Stanford University, is probably the definitive volume on the subject. It goes even a little beyond the promise of its subtitle by including a handy survey of the important policies made and carried out by the department since its creation in 1789." W. H. Waggoner

+ N Y Times p41 N 20 '49 450w

"All in all this is an interesting and informative study, but far too general to be of great value to any except students in administration, interested in the internal growth of one agency of Government."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 27 '49 320w

"The story is readable. Perhaps it does not have the charm and humor of Algernon Cecil's essay on the British Foreign Office but the facts are all here and students will welcome them." Lindsay Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 32:30 D 3 '49 700w

School & Society 70:256 O 15 '49 30w

STUART, JESSE. Thread that runs so true. 293p $3 Scribner

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 49-10581

The poet and novelist has here written his own story. He traces his career from the day when he first taught in a one-room rural school in Kentucky, thru his years in various teaching positions, to the time nearly twenty years later when he went back to the land. Teaching did not net him enough money to marry on, so he became a sheep farmer. His book stops with his wedding day.

Booklist 45:381; 46:33 Jl 15 '49; S 15 '49

Bookmark 9:81 Ja '50 50w

Canadian Forum 29:189 N '49 280w

"His joy for living illuminates each page, even those detailing the rather complicated quarrels about educational theory and practice. The writing is for the most part simple, strong and direct." Jack Conroy

+ Chicago Sun S 28 '49 270w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p11 O 6 '49 950w

"As with many success stories it is the early struggles which comprise the absorbing part. Even in eastern Kentucky it is possible for life to lose much of its color by becoming institutionalized. But most people who get started on these adventuresome anecdotes about an isolated and inbred people will find themselves drawn to follow them through to the end." E. S. Skillin

+ Commonweal 50:587 S 23 '49 460w

"A lively, sometimes gripping story of endurance and dedicated perseverance. Definitely worthwhile reading."

+ Kirkus 17:494 S 1 '49 150w

Library J 74:1559 O 15 '49 70w

"An entertaining book by a born storyteller."

+ Nation 169:333 O 1 '49 50w

"One head, one tongue, one pair of trackman's legs, or one mule or one indomitable jalopy, did much for one county; one book like 'The Thread That Runs So True' in the library of every teachers' training school, college and Board of Education in the country can do more for every county in every state. It will be in public libraries, too, when it isn't 'out' and on living-room tables when every member of the family has read it. . . 'The Thread That Runs So True' is dedicated to The Teachers of America but it is every American's book, as indigenously epic as the Paul Bunyan saga and with a hero possessed of brains as well as brawn." W. T. Hedden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 S 25 '49 1500w

"This second autobiography, though somewhat fictionized, is just as readable and entertaining as the first, 'Beyond Dark Hills,' which appeared some years ago. . . Though the author's ideas on education seem less original than his episodes, he has several things to say about education in Kentucky that deserve a wide audience. He speaks eloquently of the many injustices in educational opportunity that arise from poverty, both in the individual and the unit of government under which he lives." Harriette Arnow

+ N Y Times p27 S 25 '49 410w

New Yorker 25:124 O 22 '49 120w

"This autobiographical fragment is perhaps most notably a warm and honest testimonial to the values inherent in the teaching career, even at the minuscule salaries country teachers are paid and the multifarious other difficulties in the way. Stuart is a teacher at heart, a man who believes in education, and some of his most eloquent passages are those in which he expresses his faith in the profession in which he made his start." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 26 '49 900w

STUART, LYLE. God wears a bow tie; a novel of show business. 252p $2.50 Greenberg 49-11029

Novel about show business, specifically that part of it known as Tin Pan Alley. The chief characters are Pidgeon, who is uncrowned king of the Alley, and a cynical reporter, Larry Stark.

"Not pretty, not pretty at all, for all its intimate knowledge of the music publishing business, the big and small time chiselers and Broadway's lower crust."

Kirkus 17:480 S 1 '49 210w

"Recommended for pay circulating collections and large theatre collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 74:1759 N 15 '49 30w

N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p52 D 4 '49 80w

"Neither Pidgeon nor Larry assumes sufficient proportions, and there is Mr. Stuart's downfall. Although the novel may not be first-rate story-weaving, living characters might have pulled it through." Lewis Funke

— N Y Times p36 O 23 '49 110w

"This novel about Broadway show business is not literature, but it is extremely readable. Much of it is in the vernacular, and some of it is profane; all of it is frank. The author, who appears to know his Broadway inside out, makes us happy that we are not in the show business, and he is singularly convincing that it is altogether a shoddy and shady racket deserving exposure."

Sat R of Lit 32:34 N 26 '49 200w

STUBER, STANLEY IRVING, and CLARK, THOMAS CURTIS, eds. Treasury of the Christian faith; an encyclopedic handbook of the range and witness of Christianity; foreword by Charles Clayton Morrison. 832p $5 Assn. press

208.2 Christianity—Evidences. Religious literature 49-6956

Excerpts from the writings of clergymen and laymen, writings sectarian and non-sectarian, selected to present a non-theological, positive, creative summary of what is best in Christianity. The book has three indexes: an index of usability; index of authors and sources; and an index of topics.

Booklist 46:151 Ja 1 '50

"Stuber and Clark have exceptional qualifications for compiling such a work. Stanley Stuber's varied experience in religious work—literary, administrative and public relations—defies brief statement. Thomas Curtis Clark, primarily a poet, is also the most practiced anthologist in America or, so far as I know, anywhere else. The editors have avoided quotation from 'copyrighted books,' and have taken their selections largely from sermons, addresses, conference reports and the religious press, and also, one may suppose, from a good many books on which the copyright has expired." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 66:1106 S 21 '49 1150w

"This is a handbook, a source book, a reference book. The scope is tremendous. . . Virtually a one-volume reference tool."

+ Kirkus 17:539 O 1 '49 150w

STUDIES in social psychology in World war II; prepared and ed. under the auspices of a special committee of the Social science research council. v 1-2 613;680p ea $7.50; set $13.50 Princeton univ. press

355.1 Soldiers. Social psychology (49-2480)

"First two in a four-volume series: 'Studies in Social Psychology in World War II,' prepared and edited under the Social Science Research Council and based on data collected by the Information and Education Division, War Dept., during World War II. While problems studied are fundamentally military, findings and implications are of universal application, making this a fundamental contribution in social science. . . Represents the first attempt to deal with human behavior on a large scale." (Library J) Volume one has title: The American Soldier: Adjustment during Army Life, volume 2, The American Soldier: Combat and its Aftermath.

Reviewed by G. L. McConagha
Am Hist R 55:171 O '49 750w

Reviewed by J. W. Riley
Am Soc R 14:557 Ag '49 1550w (Review of v 1)

Reviewed by G. P. Murdock
Am Soc R 14:814 D '49 700w (Review of v2)

Reviewed by A. M. Lee
Ann Am Acad 265:173 S '49 1150w

Booklist 45:307; 329 My 15 '49; Je 1 '49

Christian Century 66:920 Ag 3 '49 280w

"Actually, nothing in this work has not been set forth in one fashion or another by Col. Ardant du Picq, French Army, prior to the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-71 in his 'Battle Studies,' the first and—in the opinion of this reviewer—still the best attempt to psychoanalyze the soldier. . . Perhaps the psychoanalyst may find something of constructive interest in this volume. The soldier will not; he must go back to du Picq." R. E. Dupuy

— Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 2 '49 600w

Current Hist 16:343 Je '49 60w

"Essential in all but medium-small collections." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 74:735 My 1 '49 100w

Nation 169:67 Jl 16 '49 50w

Reviewed by R. S. Lynd
New Repub 121:22 Ag 29 '49 4050w

"It is to be hoped that our national military establishment will continue to undertake studies and evaluations of this kind. These first two volumes are splendid, if somewhat loosely organized at points and a bit given to mathematical explanations at times. They are a monumental contribution to the science of making citizens of a free country win its wars." J. M. Gavin

+ N Y Times p3 My 29 '49 1750w

"Replete with charts, diagrams, statistics and tables, these are volumes that will undoubtedly aid other social scientists who have research projects on a somewhat less imposing scale. But, and far more important, the methods, the conclusions, and the fact that such studies were once undertaken, should prevent many of the command mistakes which harmed morale in the last war and which might have led to disaster." C. W. Weinberger

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Je 5 '49 1200w

Reviewed by N. J. Demerath
Social Forces 28:87 O '49 2200w

Reviewed by R. R. Grinker
Survey 85:446 Ag '49 1500w

STUDIES in social psychology in World war II; v3, Experiments on mass communication, by C. I. Hovland, and others; prepared and ed. under the auspices of a special committee of the Social science research council. 356p $5 Princeton univ. press

355.1 Soldiers. Social psychology (49-2480)

"Results of the studies of methods and effects of army programs, particularly films, in indoctrination and technical fields during the war." Current Hist

"A useful contribution, and the experiments in experimental design reported in it are helpful to all who are working in this field." A. M. Lee

+ Ann Am Acad 266:236 N '49 600w

Booklist 45:386 Jl 15 '49

Christian Century 66:1106 S 21 '49 250w

"To test the effects of art on human attitudes—surely here is a project to shake the sturdiest statistician. This book, which is almost entirely about movies, is the latest, most respectable, and most scientific attempt to do just that." R. D. MacCann

+ Christian Science Monitor p15 S 15 '49 900w

Current Hist 17:98 Ag '49 40w

"A factual, well-documented study." J. M. Gavin

+ N Y Times p13 Ag 7 '49 750w

SUMMERS, RICHARD ALDRICH. Vigilante. 211p $2.50 Duell

49-4671

A historical novel of California, beginning in 1856. It is the story of the sordid career of David C. Broderick, president of the California Senate, United States senator, and both a sincere patriot and a rascal. The narrator is "Lucky" Langmeade, a member of the Vigilantes, who is deputized to "get" Broderick.

"A rough and tumble picture of California politics which gives a graphic, modernly styled, account of the viciousness of the times and the people, and which provides a somewhat lush fictionalization of the facts."

+ Kirkus 17:279 Je 1 '49 200w

" 'Vigilante' is written in the tough, understated, economical style initiated by Hemingway and generally shunned by historical novelists. In fact, the occasional nineteenth century word or reference seem surprising in this otherwise twentieth century prose. . . 'Vigilante' is a lusty and interesting story—and a refreshing proof that historical novels needn't be blowsy, romantic, or 'swashbuckling.' "

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 24 '49 230w

"Excellent short novel. . . It would be invidious, perhaps, to ask if the vocabulary of 1856 included such words as 'heist,' 'dry-gulch,'

SUMMERS, R. A.—Continued
and 'shimmy,' since 'Vigilante' is a well-written, lusty yarn of a decidedly lusty era." Hoffman Birney
+ N Y Times p14 Jl 24 '49 320w

"Lucky Langmeade is about as convincing in his role as, let us say, Crosby was playing the Connecticut Yankee. The whole machinery of flat backdrop that is rolled across the stage: the Gold Coast, the newspaper editors shooting it out, the crooked Senators, the grim and righteous Vigilantes—all of it is an illusion that nobody believes in, least of all the writer. There is only one reality here, and that is Mr. Lucky Langmeade, the anachronism, the 1949 impossibly hard guy who finds in 1856 the things he has to have to exist."
Sat R of Lit 32:34 Jl 30 '49 260w

SUMMERS, ROBERT EDWARD, comp. Federal information controls in peacetime. (Reference shelf) 301p $1.50 Wilson, H.W.

351.74 Freedom of information. Official secrets. U.S.—Officials and employees 49-7903

"Federal information controls have gradually assumed the character of a Frankenstein monster in recent months. Those favoring such controls have been kept busy explaining why such controls exist, while their opponents have stirred up a storm of protest throughout the nation against the asserted violation of individual rights. This volume offers no solution; it merely presents, as clearly as present circumstances permit, the basic issues and the various implications involved." (School & Society) Bibliography.

"While several of the contributions are from the Congressional Record and reports of the Atomic Energy Commission, a majority are from newspapers and periodicals. They are well arranged and supply a stimulating discussion of the whole problem of controls and their operation." A. J. Lien
+ Am Pol Sci R 43:614 Je '49 340w
Booklist 45:282 Ap 15 '49
Current Hist 16:289 My '49 30w
School & Society 69:182 Mr 5 '49 90w

SUMNER, MRS CID RICKETTS. But the morning will come. 302p $3 Bobbs 49-8073

Story of a southern white girl, and her reactions when she discovers that her coming child will inherit Negro blood.

Booklist 45:262 Ap 1 '49
Reviewed by H. T. Kane
Chicago Sun p8X Jl 10 '49 370w

"Grace in the writing, warm appreciation of the emotional involvements, and of the relationship between background and action are impaired only by the disturbing impression that Bentley, telling her story in the first person, is viewing herself from the outside." W. K. Rugg
+ Christian Science Monitor p15 Mr 24 '49 180w

"Theme and style will make this readable woman's fare." M. E. Monroe
Library J 74:378 Mr 1 '49 130w

"This novel will be hotly resented by some readers as too radical and equally resented by others who share the New England lady's impatience with a 'slowpoky notion of letting things work out of themselves.' But its well told story, interesting in itself, offers the temperate minded, whatever their place in the controversy, a chance to understand better some of the emotions that beset white and black and cross-bred in the South and elsewhere." Mary Ross
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 Ap 3 '49 650w

"Her book is curiously unexciting, and the stock characters and contrived conclusion detract from its emotional impact." Ann Schakne
N Y Times p22 Ap 10 '49 230w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown
Sat R of Lit 32:33 Je 18 '49 130w
Wis Lib Bul 45:89 My '49

SUPER, DONALD EDWIN. Appraising vocational fitness by means of psychological tests. 727p $6 Harper

151.223 Ability—Testing 49-4773

"General introduction to the subject covering testing, diagnosis and prediction; methods of test construction, standardization and validation; administering and scoring; evaluating and reporting results. With careful examination and summary as to applicability, content, administration, scoring, norms, standardization, validation and reliability of the tests most used by schools, colleges, consultation services, business and industry. Useful appendices including list of test publishers and a bibliography." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 45:385 Jl 15 '49

"First adequate, authoritative handbook (as distinguished from bibliography) in this field. . . Essential to workers in this field. High reference value." R. E. Kingery
Library J 74:1029 Jl '49 130w

"Dr. Super's book is a milestone in the evaluation of vocational testing. . . No one who works in the field can afford to ignore this carefully written volume." M. R. Brown
+ N Y Times p16 Ag 28 '49 450w
San Francisco Chronicle p31 O 16 '49 190w
School & Society 69:424 Je 11 '49 50w
Reviewed by Alma Klaw
Survey 85:621 N '49 250w

SUSSMAN, AARON. Amateur photographer's handbook; rev. by Bruce Downes. 3d ed 399p il $3.75 Crowell

770 Photography 48-4424

"A 1925 book written by A. Frederick Collins, revised and expanded several years ago by Aaron Sussman, now appears in another revision. It is enlarged, with changes throughout the text and many new illustrations." (Booklist) Glossary. Index.

Booklist 45:227 Mr 1 '49

"Recommended." Julian Sohon
+ Library J 74:824 My 15 '49 40w

SUTER, JOHN WALLACE, and CLEAVELAND, GEORGE JULIUS. American Book of common prayer; its origin and development [pub. in commemoration of the 400th anniversary of the Book of common prayer, under the auspices of the Cathedral church of St Peter and St Paul, Washington, D.C]. 85p il $1.50 Oxford

264.039 Book of common prayer 49-3873

"This year of 1949 marks the 400th anniversary of the appearance in England of the first book of Common Prayer. Dr. Suter, the Dean of the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul, in Washington, and Canon Cleaveland, the librarian of the Cathedral, have collaborated in writing this book, which in a brief compass contains a description of the historical background of the first Prayer Book, its character and its influence, and its value for those who use it today." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) List of some noted prayer books in various libraries and seminaries. Bibliography. No index.

Reviewed by F. J. Moore
Churchman 163:17 S 15 '49 50w

"One of the most cherished possessions of every good Episcopalian is the Prayer Book. This monograph dealing with the origin and development of the American Prayer Book and giving an interpretation of its significance will be welcomed by the clergy and laity of that church and by many of other Protestant denominations who regard the Prayer Book as a treasure house of material for private and public devotions."

+ Kirkus 17:297 Je 15 '49 190w

Reviewed by W. R. Bowie
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Je 19 '49 470w

"A popular but authoritative account." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times p14 Je 19 '49 200w

SUTHERLAND, EDWIN HARDIN. White collar crime. 272p $3 Dryden

364.38 Corporations. Corporation law. Crime and criminals 49-9204

"Professor Sutherland has by now become the established authority on all questions of 'White Collar Crime.' . . While his previous papers on the subject defined the theme and set the tone, the present book, the result of twenty-five years of research, provides the variations. A full analysis is presented of the decisions made by courts and administrative commissions against an unselected sample of seventy of the largest manufacturing, mining, and mercantile corporations and fifteen of the largest public utility corporations in the United States." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

"This book, a milestone in the history of criminology, should become the starting point of a new line of research with the object, among others, of collecting corresponding evidence for other countries and of deepening our understanding of the causative factors involved, sociological and individual-psychological, to some of which the author was unable to devote more than passing attention." Hermann Mannheim
+ Ann Am Acad 266:243 N '49 460w
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 D '49

"It is a hard-hitting and informative book, even for those of us long familiar with the point of view. Restraint of trade, rebates, patents, copyrights, advertising, unfair labor practices, financial manipulations, war crimes, and more are dealt with, mostly in chapters by themselves. For those who have not read the Temporary National Economic Committee's Hearings, some exciting material awaits them in Sutherland's chapter on Restraint of Trade." L. M. Brooks
+ Social Forces 28:215 D '49 600w
Survey 85:408 Jl '49 20w

SUTTON, GEORGE PAUL. Rocket propulsion elements; an introduction to the engineering of rockets. 294p il $4.50 Wiley

629.13338 Rockets (aeronautics). Jet propulsion 49-611

"Historical outline of rocket development from earliest times to current American models. Discusses common liquid and solid rocket fuels, rocket design, lightweight turbines, rocket motor testing, rocket combustion chamber size and scope and other engineering phases of rockets." (Library J) Chapter references. Index.

Booklist 45:292 My 1 '49

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 74:202 F 1 '49 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 34:13 Ja '49

SUZUKI, DAISETZ TEITARO. Introduction to Zen Buddhism; with a foreword by C. G. Jung. 136p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

294.32 Zen (sect). Buddha and Buddhism 49-9310

An interpretation of Zen by a Japanese professor of Buddhist philosophy.

"This book is fascinating to read. Its English style is simple and clear." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 66:1543 D 28 '49 330w

"One may only suggest in a brief review something of the elusive quality of Zen. After reading the whole book, it will still not be clear. Indeed after reading the lengthy introduction provided by the famous psychologist, C. G. Jung, most readers still will not get it. But it will have been an interesting bit of reading at least." C. S. Braden
Crozer Q 26:366 O '49 1000w

SVEVO, ITALO, pseud. of ETTORE SCHMITZ. As a man grows older; tr. by Beryl De Zoete; with an introd. by Stanislaus Joyce; and an essay on Svevo by Edouard Roditi. 2d ed 245p $3 New directions

"A study of frustration and self-delusionment, in which a man of weak character, whose limited talents extended to the writing of one novel, wraps his dreams and love about a girl of the streets. Although the introspective lover adorns the girl with all the virtues of the great heroines of literatures, she inexorably draws him down to her coarse level. Written in 1898, this novel achieved some prominence in Europe in the period between the two World Wars." Library J

"Svevo's competence in the restricted field of his talent is undeniable; but the spark which would transform this meticulous scrutiny of the Triestine bourgeois mind into something of contemporary human significance is hardly to be found." Ruth Chapin
Christian Science Monitor p11 O 6 '49 420w

"This tragic theme, the story of a failure, is dealt with frequently in the contemporary Italian novel. Under Svevo's genius the tragedy is elevated to the stature of a bleak, gray epic attenuated only here and there by a faint moral irony. The translation is good. It is perhaps too correct, for it cannot convey the nervousness and dissonance that characterizes Svevo's occasionally unpolished Italian prose." Serge Hughes
Commonweal 51:128 N 4 '49 450w
Kirkus 17:439 Ag 15 '49 250w

"Recommended for large collections." A. J. Gaines
Library J 74:1462 O 1 '49 100w

Reviewed by Ernest Jones
Nation 169:648 D 31 '49 500w
New Repub 121:18 N 21 '49 230w

"The scenes of action are brilliant, freshly observed and as real as anything in Madame Bovary and a good deal better-natured. It is unforgettable when Amalia, the sister, puts Balli's cup back in the cupboard when she discovers her dream of love will not be realized. There is the long, and really gripping account of her illness. Svevo's scenes of illnesses are among the most dramatic in any literature, for they observe the struggle of the mind with the body; is not life itself an illness, and sickness one of its more highly coloured, poetic and even thrilling acts? The love scenes with Angiolina are all excellent, for the Svevo heroes discover women as if they were a new species." V. S. Pritchett
+ New Statesman & Nation 38:126 Jl 30 '49 1950w

Reviewed by Alfred Hayes
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 D 25 '49 800w

"In his introduction, Stanislaus Joyce compares Emilio with Hamlet; the comparison is not unjust, for the two may be bracketed as Prufrock and Hamlet might be. Svevo himself has been likened to everyone from Flaubert to Proust and Kafka. This long list of authors is only a tribute to his originality, to the difficulty of giving him any pat label. And the reader of this excellent translation will find that Svevo has, in common with these writers, depth and wealth, two attributes no writer ever acquired through imitation." W. F. Weaver
+ N Y Times p6 O 2 '49 430w

Reviewed by L. A. G. Strong
+ Spec 183:218 Ag 12 '49 40w

SWALLOW, ALAN. War poems. [19p] $1 Fine editions
811 48-11372

"In a small book, hardly more than 200 lines all told, Dr. Swallow, who is also a critic and publisher, gives, under eight titles, some of his feelings about the war." San Francisco Chronicle

"With a success rare in his generation, this poet has made poetry of a certain kind out of certain experiences of the war years. It is a pattern common to many, the ordinary literate man, in or out of uniform. It is poetry cast in a serviceable common idiom which twentieth century poetry has achieved at long expense. Swallow is perfectly suited to its use. His poems find their way through many denials of extravagance into one's esteem. Their prospects grow." Sherman Conrad
+ — Poetry 74:175 Je '49 750w

Reviewed by T. H. Ferril
San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 13 '49 30w

"Mr. Swallow's 'War Poems' can be dismissed at once: they deal with the war, it is true, but they are not poems. Composed with a singular infelicity of structure and tone, relentlessly commonplace in content and expression, they only occasionally manage to rise to the level of competent verse. The lapses are horrific." Dudley Fitts
— Sat R of Lit 32:40 Mr 19 '49 150w

SWAN, BRADFORD FULLER. Gregory Dexter of London and New England, 1610-1700. 115p $5 Ptg. house of Leo Hart
B or 92 Gregory, Dexter 49-2364

"[This] study deals with one of the more important and neglected of the minor figures in our colonial history. As a London printer, Gregory Dexter played a dangerous role in the religious strife of seventeenth-century England. As a settler in Providence and a close friend of Roger Williams, Mr. Dexter had a hand in many controversies that marked the early years of the Rhode Island colony. The first half of this book presents a careful study of the London printing of Dexter. The second half is really a study in local history. The author examines Dexter's American career, reveals the genuine contributions made by him to the success of Roger Williams' colony, and proves his subject has never received his just due from our historians and biographers." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by R. A. Brown
N Y Times p52 N 13 '49 150w

"This account of Dexter will interest students of American history no less than students of printing."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 5:145 Je '49 280w

SWARTZ, HARRY FELIX. Allergy: what it is and what to do about it. 210p $2.75 Rutgers univ. press
615.37 Allergia 49-1554

A practicing allergist describes allergy, its history, types, and treatments. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 45:388 Jl 15 '49
Kirkus 17:98 F 15 '49 90w

"Even though Dr. Swartz is careful to define the technical terms he uses, it is not easy for the non-scientific reader who lacks familiarity with anatomy, physiology and immunology to comprehend the complicated nature of allergy fully. In the attempt to simplify it, Dr. Swartz is, at times, somewhat dogmatic about points that are still the subject of conjecture and controversy. . . Instead of a discussion of the important part played by allergic conditions in industrial medicine, the chapter entitled, 'Industry and Allergy,' is nothing more than a long list of common materials which have been shown to cause allergies." L. J. Warshaw
N Y Times p5 Je 12 '49 380w

"Dr. Swartz covers the subject freshly and from its most up-to-date aspects. . . [The book] is written with a minimum of gobbledygook and a maximum of common sense. Altogether, I can't imagine an allergy sufferer not profiting by an intelligent reading of 'Allergy,' and though I can't speak for the doctors, I'd hazard a guess that 9 out of 10 of them would be happy to have their patients read and digest what Dr. Swartz has to say. It's quite possible, in fact, that this book may do a great many allergic people a great deal of good entirely on its own." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 F 19 '49 550w

"One of the chief virtues of Dr. Swartz's new book is the emphasis it places on the fact that the isolation of special fields of science is only superficial and that the boundaries between are unreal. . . A second notable merit of the volume is that it includes a reasonable discussion of the patterns of personality. . . On the debit side, however, is the at times dogmatic position on the immunologic and therapeutic matters where, perhaps, definiteness had better not be employed at this time because of lack of evidence. . . Somewhat one-sided is Dr. Swartz's selection of names for mention as those who have made important contributions to allergy. Such important pioneers as Ratner, Rackemann, Peshkin, Urbach, Black, and Wittich are never referred to in his pages. In general, however, the book will be acceptable to those who wish to have a detailed, though at times, non-critical treatment of the difficult subject of allergy from the present-day point of view." H. A. Abramson, M.D.
Sat R of Lit 32:55 My 14 '49 650w
Wis Lib Bul 45:85 My '49

SWAYNE, SAMUEL F., and SWAYNE, ZOA. Great-grandfather in the honey tree; il. by [the authors]. 53p $2 Viking 49-11494

A tall tale of how great-grandfather went out to net some geese and came home with a barrel of honey, a bear, a fish, a partridge, a deer, seven wild turkeys, as well as the net of geese. For ages 5-12.

Booklist 46:86 N 1 '49

Reviewed by Agatha Shea
+ Chicago Sunday Tribune p22 D 4 '49 40w

"This is said to be a tall tale handed down from the authors' grandfather, and it is genuinely a wonderful one."
+ Commonweal 51:190 N 18 '49 60w

"A good story to read aloud or tell to boys and girls of all ages, who like tall tales." J. D. L.
+ Horn Bk 25:411 S '49 80w

"A tall tale that children will adore and adults find delightful nonsense."
+ Kirkus 17:465 S 1 '49 100w

"A tall tale of a fabulous hunting trip, in the best tradition of robust, American humor." A. G. Zebker
+ Library J 74:1531 O 15 '49 40w

Reviewed by S. J. Johnson
Library J 75:51 Ja 1 '50 60w

"The odd black and white pictures are not very good, but perhaps are an attempt at a sort of purposeful early Americana. They will not hinder the boisterous gales of laughter that will follow any telling or reading of this unique tale." L. S. Bechtel
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Bk R p10 N 20 '49 240w

"How great-grandfather took advantage of each succeeding misadventure to bring home a most extraordinary bounty is built up into a rollicking yarn. It is too bad that the authors weren't as deft illustrators as they are story-tellers, but this yarn is best read aloud, anyhow, to 7-year-olds and up." E. L. B.
+ N Y Times p24 N 13 '49 110w

"A very tall yarn, told and illustrated in a prim and meticulous style, for the picture-book age and up."
+ New Yorker 25:173 D 3 '49 80w

"This is one children's book which all parents will be delighted to read aloud without persuasion."
+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 13 '49 140w

"This book absolutely crackles with action and humor. It leaves a grown-up breathless with laughter and envy. It will probably be immensely popular among the children." M. G. Davis
+ Sat R of Lit 32:20 N 12 '49 250w

"Good for reading aloud to the picture book age."
+ Wis Lib Bul p10 N '49

SWEEZY, PAUL MARLOR. Socialism. (Economics handbooks ser) 276p $3.50 McGraw 335 Socialism 49-8182

A study of socialism as a form of society and a political movement. Bibliography. Index.

"Although disagreeing with Mr. Sweezy both on fundamentals and on details of interpretation, the reviewer regards this as an extremely useful book—useful to the student as a socialist's introduction to Marxism, useful to the teacher as an example of how a highly trained economist can restate and defend Marxism without the usual slogans and clichés." J. D. Lewis
+ — Am Pol Sci R 43:1061 O '49 750w
Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '49

